In this year's British civil list of pensions appears the name of that grand old man of music, Mr. Francesco Berger, who, at the age of ninety-six, gives music lessons every Wednesday to pupils at the Guildhall School of Music, London, for he has been senior professor for forty years. Mr. Berger, who knew Charles Dickens, is described in the Daily Mail as physically and mentally a phenomenon. "Why should I stop working?" he asks. "I have my life in front of me, and I am far healthier than many modern young men. I have been at my music now for ninety years—I started when I was six—and I intend to go on with it."—English War Cry.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N. MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

Alcohol From the Standpoint of Modern Scientific Medicine

By Arthur Dean Bevan, M. D.*

From an Address Delivered at the State Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois

Viewed from the standpoint of modern scientific medicine, alcohol belongs to the group of narcotics which consist of alcohol, ether, chloroform, chloral and similar drugs such as sulphonal and veronal. The general action of all the members of this narcotic group are very much the same. They produce a first stage of excitement and if the dose is large, complete unconsciousness which may, if the dose is sufficiently large, terminate in death. A fatal dose varies from a pint to a quart of alcohol consumed within a few hours.

Direct Injurious Action on the Brain

All of these narcotics have a special affinity for fatty tissues and the nervous system and are carried, after being absorbed in the body, by the blood to the brain where the nerve cells are rich in fatty substances, called lipoids. Alcohol produces a direct injurious effect upon the brain.

Effect on Nervous System

The action of alcohol on the nervous system differs a good deal in different individuals. In smaller amounts it produces a feeling of greater confidence in the mental and physical powers of the individual who may become boisterous and loquacious; self-control is lost and the will-power is weakened. The individual may seem to be unusually clever for a time and then the speech becomes difficult, the gait unsteady, and this may be followed by nausea and vomiting. Large doses of alcohol may produce very deep sleep which may pass into such complete unconsciousness as to resemble the conditions of ether or chloroform anesthesia, and this condition may last for hours, and eventually result in death.

Carefully planned experiments show that regiments of troops can march farther and are in better condition after severe exercise without alcohol than those that are supplied with alcohol. In doing intellectual work it has been found that the receptive and intellectual powers are weakened by very small quantities of alcohol. This has been tested out with people setting up type and with people adding up columns of figures, and in a variety of ways.

Effect on Digestion

The effects of alcohol on the digestion have been extensively studied. Its continued use in considerable quantities produces chronic irritation of the stomach, a gastric catarrh, with resulting nausea and vomiting. It has often been claimed that alcohol is of value as a food. It is true that a small amount of alcohol can be burned up in the body just as starches, fats and sugars can be burned up. The amount that can be safely used as a food, however, is very limited, as even in comparatively small amounts alcohol has a definite deleterious effect upon the nervous system.

Continued use of alcohol produces fatty degeneration of the heart and other tissues. It produces arterio-sclerosis of the blood vessels and cirrhosis of the liver. For many years alcohol was prescribed in cases where individuals were suffering from different forms of infection. Modern scientific medicine has shown that alcohol does not assist the body in resisting infections, but that it makes the individual much more susceptible to infections. This is particularly true in pneumonia, where careful observation has shown that the individual who drinks even moderately becomes much easier the victim of pneumonia than the man who does not drink at all.

As a Therapeutic Agent

Alcohol has little place in modern scientific medicine as a therapeutic agent. At the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago, where we take care of more than twelve thousand patients a year, we have not prescribed through the drug room of the hospital a single bottle of alcoholic liquor since the passage of the prohibition amendment, and this is not due to any regulation against the use of alcohol. Any one of the attending medical men has the privilege of using alcohol if he sees fit in the handling of his cases. It is due to the fact that there is little or no logical or scientific reason for the internal administration of alcohol in the modern treatment of disease. On the other hand, the external use has increased very markedly. We use hundreds of gallons of denatured alcohol which costs, without the internal revenue tax, from 40c to 53c a gallon, in alcohol rubs for patients, in making tincture of green soap which is very extensively employed in cleansing wounds and preparing fields of operation, and we use seventy per cent of denatured alcohol as the best method of sterilizing fields of operation, the hands of the surgeon, the assistants and nurses, in attempting to secure an aseptic field. The exposure for ninety seconds of any germs which produce supuration to a seventy per cent solution of alcohol produces death of all these germs.

The Abuse of Prescription Whiskey

Alcohol is no longer used by scientific physicians in acute inflammatory diseases, such as pneumonia and gripe. It is not only not beneficial but definitely harmful in such conditions. It is no longer used in

(Continued on page 15)

Washington Summer Bible School

We have just completed a three weeks Summer Bible School at the Washington, D. C. Brethren church. On Sunday evening, July 17th, the commencement exercises were held at the regular church hour. It was a joyous occasion when between 70 and 80 happy boys and girls demonstrated the worth of the Summer Bible School. Many pronounced it the most successful School of this kind that we have yet had.

During the three weeks of the session a total of 95 boys and girls between the ages of 4 and 14 were enrolled. There was an average attendance each day of 72½. Thirty-eight of the enrolled scholars never missed a day during the session.

A keen interest in the school was maintained throughout. This is shown by the fact that the average attendance last week was slightly larger than the first week. We feel that this interest is very gratifying, in view of the fact that the making of handicraft was not resorted to. Everything that was done had some relationship to the study of the Word of God, thus proving to the contrary what some assert, that you cannot interest children with the Bible.

There were 12 teachers and helpers in the school who gave of their time and talent in a most sacrificial manner. In the short period of three weeks they were able to teach these young hearts much of the Word of God. The plan of salvation was learned by all except the tiniest tots. Many beautiful songs and exercises were learned.

One attractive feature of the Session for the children was a noon-day trip and picnic. It was called the "Mystery Trip", for none of the children knew where they were to be taken until they arrived at the place, which was one of the City's beautiful parks. Two big busses were provided for the outing and a delightful time was enjoyed by all. The children sang their Bible school songs as they rode down the main avenue of the city.

View of the Daily Vacation Bible School at Washington, D. C.

*Head of Surgical Department, Rush Medical College, Chicago, Illinois.

We are thoroughly persuaded that Summer Bible school work is decidedly worth while, and affords a real opportunity for evangelistic work among children. Many of the scholars of our school, who have not been attending Sunday school anywhere, are already coming to ours and we hope to find access to many hearts and homes through this effort.

To Mrs. Minnie Harrison, who was the efficient superintendent of the school, should go much of the credit for its success.

HOMER A. KENT, Pastor.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

GIFTS FOR BUILDING THE TABERNACLE

(Lesson for August 28)

Lesson Text: Ex. 35:20-29; Golden Text: Prov. 3:9

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Gifts for the Tabernacle. Ex. 35:20-29

As we read these verses we are impressed with the fact that the gifts came from men and women of all stations in life. The rulers brought precious stones: those with plenty also gave costly gifts; but the poorest, even those who possessed only a small piece of suitable wood, or a quantity of goat's hair, brought such as they had and gave it for the Tabernacle. And we cannot suppose that the gifts of the rulers were more esteemed than the gifts of the lowliest. It was true of them as Jesus once said of another: "She hath done what she could." May this be the heart's desire of every one of us!

TUESDAY

Willing Offerings. Ex. 35:4-19

"Whoever is of a willing heart"—how like the New Testament rule. "Not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." This spirit should be true of all our gifts for God's work, not merely of our money. Paul declared that the necessity of preaching the gospel was laid upon him, and added, "If I do this thing willingly, I have a reward." Too many of us serve as did Ezekiel. (Ezek. 3:14): "And I went in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit." Let all our offerings be willing offerings, that we lose not the reward of service.

WEDNESDAY

Consecrated Workers. Ex. 35:30-35

These two men were chosen for their important tasks not because of any sort of favoritism on the part of God, but because they themselves were willing to listen to God, and learn of him. God filled them with his Spirit, and taught them to teach others.

After all, is not that one quality of Willingness to learn almost the whole of consecration? Certainly the result was that they were able to teach and to lead others in the work. Let us pray that more Christians may truly and fully consecrate themselves to the work of God's house.

THURSDAY

Generous Offerings. Ex. 36:7

What a picture in contrast with the "hard times" of today! Assuredly the church members have suffered from these trying times, but perhaps if our hearts stirred us up as did the hearts of these men of old, there would be more offerings for the house of God than ever before. The secret of the whole matter lies in the heart. Let us first of all be sure that we give our hearts to the Lord, like the Macedonian Christians (2 Cor. 8:5).

FRIDAY

Gifts Without Cost. 1 Chron. 21:18-24

The gifts which the Israelites brought were not "offerings without cost." No doubt many of them were cherished possessions, and there was little chance of ever replacing them. There are few stories that illustrate so well the spirit that should be every Christian's, as the story of the pagan woman who, when asked as to the cost of a temple that was being built, replied: "We do not count the cost when building for our god; no gift is too costly." As Christians we have much more reason for loving gifts and service than any pagan; may our consecration not be less! God's gift for us was not an offering without cost!

SATURDAY

An Offering of Righteousness. Mal. 3:1-6

All must be purged before they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. How much better to have him purge us now, by his grace, and to live unto him in loving fellowship each day, than to await his coming in judgment and wrath! Let us invite him now to refine the dross from our lives, and let us pray, with the Psalmist: "Cleanse thou me from secret faults"

SUNDAY

Love for God's House. Ps. 84:1-12

There is no comment that we can make for this day's reading that is so forceful as the scripture passage itself. There may be phrases here and there whose meaning is not readily apparent; we would not lead you to suppose that these will not well repay close study at another time; but for today, just pass over the obscure phrases and take from each remaining phrase all that a careful, Spirit-guided reading will give. When you have done this, you cannot help exclaiming with the Psalmist: "O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee!"

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer
F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	C. O. WHITMER, 217 E. Dubell Ave., South Bend, Ind.	2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio

Spiritual Coins and Counterfeits

By C. D. Whitmer

XV.—"Revival vs. Religious Boom"

"We are having a great revival in our church," said an earnest Christian to a friend whom he chanced to meet on the cars. "The meetings are crowded every night. Scores come forward at each altar service. We are to have twenty-five additions to the church next Sabbath, and a great many more will doubtless follow in the near future. It is a glorious work!" "Yes," replied the friend, "that is very good so far as it goes. But how about the church itself? Is there any real awakening of new spiritual life among the members? Is the church being lifted to a higher plane of religious activity and thought and aspiration?"

"Why, yes, the laymen and women are very active in the meeting, and they work outside to get persons to attend. Not only old stand-bys, but a good many members who have been rather indifferent for years have enlisted heartily in the present work. They labor with the enquirers, they pray and bear testimony in the meetings, and they go out upon the streets and seek for the wanderers."

"I suppose there is a great increase of missionary interest among young people. The offerings for benevolent work are enlarged. There is a marked change in the home and business and social life of the older Christian. They are ready and eager to accept higher ideals and more exalted standards. There is a new consecration of persons and of substance to the work of God's kingdom at large."

"What, you haven't thought of these things? The revival is manifesting itself chiefly in the effort to bring young people out on the side of Christ? Then it is not a revival at all. It is only a religious boom. Your church has been cold and dead for years; and it was evident that unless something was done the doors would soon close. So the managers have done just what business men do when trade is at a low ebb. They have brought about a boom in the chief end of which is to add new members to the church, and so to fill its depleted treasury. That is why you estimate the success of the work by the number of persons about to unite with the church. And that is the common measure in modern revivals."

Evangelism is one thing; a revival is quite another thing. Revivals often result in an evangelism that brings great numbers of sinners to Christ, and a great many undecided ones to positive and outspoken allegiance. But the two things are entirely distinct. We have much evangelism without any revival; and that is one reason why evangelistic effort is so often fruitless. A revival means an awakening of new religious life among Christians. And when a Christian prays for a revival his first desire should be for fresh consecration and a new work of grace in himself.

The church should be more eager for an increase of Christliness among those already within its circle than for mere additions to its membership.

That preacher truly appreciated the meaning of a revival who said: "Would that God would send us a revival even if it blew my church into flinders"! A genuine and universal revival of spiritual religion in this land would probably blow many a church into flinders, but it would also mean an influx of new life in the kingdom of God. It is comparatively easy to arouse a church to great activity for the purpose of adding to its own strength and glory. But to bring a church to such a spiritual state that it would willingly sacrifice its very existence for the advantage of the kingdom is not so easy. Yet that only is a true revival that aims at the salvation of men and the sanctification of disciples and the building up of the kingdom of heaven without so much as a thought of adding members to "our church."

South Bend, Indiana.

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SERVICE FOR PROMOTING THE QUIET HOUR

By Rev. Franklin J. Hinkamp

Superintendent of the Department of Evangelism and Quiet Hour of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union

Song Service. Fifteen minutes of carefully prepared, worshipful singing to create an atmosphere and an awareness for the suggestions of the meeting. Suggested hymns: "O, worship the King," "This is my Father's world," "Open my eyes," "My faith looks up to thee," "Living for Jesus," "O for a closer walk with God," "Take time to be holy," "I would be true."

Statement of the Theme of the Meeting: To consider the Quiet Hour, its purpose, place, and value in the life of Christian youth.

Scripture Lesson. May be read responsively or by one person who knows how to read Scripture well. (Suggested selections: Psalm 5 Psalm 15, or portions of Psalm 119.)

Prayer, by the leader or another previously chosen. Suggested theme of prayer: The privilege of prayer, when we know God's love for us as revealed by Jesus Christ.

Hymn. Suggested selections: "Sweet hour of prayer," "My faith looks up to thee," "Purer yet and purer."

Presentation of Theme for Discussion. Stress these items: The Quiet Hour, its purpose, place, and value in the life of Christian youth.

1. The Quiet Hour. What it is; its origin, spread, present international emphasis. Read and explain the Quiet Hour covenant.

2. Purpose. Definite time and plan for development of personal devotional life. Importance of being united with multitudes of like-minded Christian youth. Building of a vital Christian character; living ourselves into the spirit of Jesus our Master.

3. Place. When and how much time and thought should be utilized, for best results?

4. Values. Apart from spiritual value are these: opportunity to build a personal philosophy of life, time for evaluation of our life's driving motives. Spiritual values; time to clarify our faith, time for spiritual culture. "Give God a chance to speak to you."

5. Christian youth. After all, we are not merely youth; we are Christian youth. What does this seem to mean as to our habits, practices, and ambitions?

Discussion

1. Is a Quiet Hour necessary? 2. Is there need, more today than previously, for a "quiet time"? 3. What is the relationship between the Quiet Hour and the Christian life? 4. What values do you think might come from observance of a definite quiet time in the lives of most young people? 5. Would observance of the Quiet Hour make church and the Christian life generally seem less or more vital and real, and why? 6. If we do not observe the Quiet Hour, is there a definite loss of something worth while in the development of character?

Close the meeting with sentence prayers, "to give opportunity for decisions to be formulated and pledged to God." The leader presents Quiet-Hour enrollment cards to all who desire them.

Closing hymn. "More love to Thee, O Christ" or "I am thine, O Lord."

Benediction, in unison.—C. E. World.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

MISSIONS

God So Loved

A Word to Evangelists and Missionaries

By D. T. Hume

As you go about this world in your Gospel ministry and as you come in contact with all the desolation and grief wrought by sin, as your heart wells up in pity for the halt, the maimed, the blind, and the simple, as you are crushed by the thought of the heathen sitting in the awful darkness far beyond the Gospel's farthest outpost—do not let Satan hint to you that God is less solicitous regarding the need of the world than you are. You, without doubt, tread many a weary mile to bring the light of life to such benighted folk, you endure fatigue, hunger, discouragement if by any means you may save some. You labour in prayer for these desolate ones. But do not let Satan suggest (as he is sure to do), that God is any whit behind you in this work. As a matter of fact God the Holy Spirit is speaking to men far beyond the church's most advanced frontier. Daily he is revealing to them their sin as God sees it, as well as God's creation—glory as shown in nature, which glory their crooked hearts and wayward eyes have so long refused to dwell upon. He is preparing this one and that one to receive the Gospel message. He obeys joyfully that yearning cry of the Father:

"Go, O my Spirit, go, stand by the gate, Go, watch by its portals both early and late,
Lest some precious soul

Not far from the goal
Should wander away into darkness and hate,
And miss it forever,
The pearly gate."

And not only so. In his own mysterious ways he conveys the message of the Cross and causes it to be accepted by many, some of them perhaps neighbors of yours whom you have never thought of as Christians, quiet people who do not make any show of their religion, who cannot express themselves very well but who have accepted Christ in childlike simplicity. There is the fruit of the Spirit in their lives, seen by the eye of the Husbandman who "waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and the latter rain" (James 5:7—far more patience than you have, and far more insight.

And then Satan tells you that God is hard, that God has marked out certain ones for eternal punishment and will not be satisfied till he has exacted the pound of flesh. Tell him that he is mistaken. Tell him that "God would have all men to be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth" (1 Tim. 2:4), that God has given man the power of choice, and that the only way man can be lost is by choosing the evil. If anyone is lost it will not be God's fault.

Tell Satan that he had better take another look at Calvary if he wants to know the extent and degree of God's love to mankind. There God gave his best, yes, all that he had. There the world beholds the astonishing and unique sight of the Beloved of God, the Heir of all things, nailed to a tree by the hands of his creatures.

Perhaps it is not an astonishing story to you. That is because you have heard it so often. But it is astonishing. The heathen, hearing it for the first time, very often is thunderstruck.

Yes, if you want a rebuke for Satan's suggestion that you are more anxious to see men saved than God is; here it is in the cross, the nails, the blood-stained spear, the anguished cry wrung from the lips of the Holy One, "My God! My God! Why hast thou forsaken Me—" On earth's birthday, out of the chaotic darkness, the light emerged at the Creator's behest. And out of the darkness and bitterness of Calvary emerged the sweet assurance that God had not forgotten sinful and broken man but that he loved him still with an everlasting love.—The Evangelical Christian.

"THIS MAN RECEIVETH SINNERS"

"Come unto me, all ye . . ."

By Dora Greenwell

Come, hearts that are blighted and broken and bruised; come, spirits benighted, rejected, refused; come, look on your Saviour! Behold him, he stands with a wound in his heart, and a world in his hands.

Come now, ye transgressors through force and through fraud; come, now, ye oppressors, and look on your Lord. Oh! come, ye deceivers. Oh! come, ye deceived; come, slave, and come, tyrant; come, grieving and grieved.

Come, men who are mighty to curse and revile; come, women whose lips have forgotten how to smile; come, bond-slaves, come, sin-slaves, come, drunkards, come, thieves; come hither to Jesus; 'tis such he receives.

Come, outcast, abandoned, of devils the prey; come now unto one who is stranger than they; come dwellers in darkness; come, neighbors of Hell, where man dare not enter, the Spirit can dwell.

And fear not, though legion should still be their name, deeds nameless, deeds shameless, that bring you to shame. Oh! fear not, poor sinners, let this be your fear—to miss the kind Savior, who waits for you here.

For all your distresses, excesses, and need, his love and his pity unceasingly plead; your deepest demerit his Blood can efface; come, sinners, inherit the treasure of grace!

Yea, if there be any who bear a dark stain on brow and on bosom, the blood-mark of Cain, 'tis Abel who loves you, 'tis Abel who pleads; for the brother who slew him he now intercedes.

Come, kneeling before him, adore him, and grow more pure than the sunbeams, more white than the snow; he chose you, come, choose him your Savior, who died; fear only to lose him, fear nothing beside! —The War Cry.

twelve members for the five month period. We praise the Lord for his continued answer to prayer, and rejoice that these gains have come through the channels of the regular worship services, supported by prayerful personal work on the part of members, and a faithful witnessing to the Truth, led, as we believe, by the Holy Spirit.

The church school attendance has shown encouraging increase, as have also the morning and evening worship services. Of course, this church is not without its problems, but we are hopeful that recent progress indicates the beginning of a perennial revival in this church, which has weathered many struggles in the third of a century of its history.

Reports submitted at the recent quarterly business meeting showed the various organizations of the church to be solvent, and thanks to the stewardship, foresight and ability of Sister Anna Clays, who left this church a substantial bequest, the church has thus far been able to meet its financial obligations, by supplementing the gifts of the members with the funds received from her.

Just now, the church is ready for a week of Bible Conferences with Rev. Chas. W. Mayes, of California, as the leader. This will be the first effort of this church to conduct such a meeting, and we are hopeful there will be encouraging news to report from it, as well as from the regular activities of the Church.

REV. W. S. CRICK, Pastor.

LA VERNE, CALIFORNIA

Another quarterly business meeting has come and gone, reminding us that it is again time to report to the Evangelist. In fact, we were officially requested to send on parts of our pastor's report in an article, at this time. It may be of interest to some too, to know that our pastor, Rev. A. L. Lynn, has accepted the unanimous call to serve this church for another year.

These gleanings from his report will indicate to the brotherhood his efficiency and earnestness as a pastor. He was agreeably surprised, in summing up his three and one-half years with us, to find that, in our small city so well church, God had so signally honored prayerful efforts, in granting this goodly increase in membership.

Baptised—112. Received by letter—39. Total—151.

Lost by death and letter—34. Gain for the period—117.

Brother Lynn claims that this victory is due to the fine spirit of cooperation on the part of the membership of the church, energized by the power of the Holy Spirit. There have been no large ingatherings but just faithful preaching, teaching and witnessing which has resulted in frequent confessions. Each departmental report showed an earnest zeal for the Lord's work and to the three prayer meetings held each week, we give a good deal of the credit.

Mother's Day, Children's Day, and Father's Day were all suitably observed in the morning services. Twelve babies were consecrated to the Lord following the Children's Day program. A 4 weeks Daily Vacation Bible School, sponsored by the four Sunday schools of the city, was largely attended by our younger scholars. A neat, weekly church bulletin is now being enjoyed at the services, through the generosity of the moderator, T. J. Steves.

Social comradeship is kept up in the various groups through many pleasant enterprises. Eighty were present at the Men's

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

FINAL WHITE GIFT REPORT

Previously reported (Evangelist of Feb. 27, 1932) .....	$1,960.39
C. L. Anspach .....	5.00
Center Chapel .....	3.12
Lanark, Ill. ....	65.00
Denver, Ind. ....	2.00
Dallas Center, Iowa .....	21.01
Long Beach, Cal. ....	25.00
Mansfield, Ohio .....	6.55
Beaver City, Neb. ....	15.00
Pittsburgh, Pa. ....	27.06
Los Angeles, First Church .....	42.05
McKee, Pa. ....	.85
Sterling, Ohio .....	8.00
Anonymous .....	5.10
Total .....	$2,186.13

If the treasurer has failed to acknowledge any gifts through this column or individually by mail please call his attention to the error at once. Many of our churches failed to send a single penny to support the National Work of our Association. We trust this was due to the "Depression" and not to lack of interest or sympathy. We hope every church will resolve now to make some sort of a report this coming year.

M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer.
Ashland, Ohio.

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

It will be a matter of regret to all the friends of the College to learn of the death of Mr. P. A. Myers, who was for a long time a trustee from Ashland City. He had given freely in all the financial campaigns for the College and was always friendly and interested.

By the time this is read, the summer session will be over. The total enrollment for the term was finally 223. The Faculty all feel well satisfied with the nature of the work done.

Dr. Charles Anspach and family have been spending a few days in Ashland.

Dr. M. G. Caldwell, professor of Sociology, has an article in the current number of Criminology and Criminal Law. It has been widely quoted in the Associated Press dispatches.

Dr. W. S. Bell, endowment secretary for the College, recently visited the College on official business.

During the vacation of the pastor of the local church, the pulpit has been ably filled by Drs. Miller, Baer and Monroe.

Many have been attending the services being conducted at our Fair Haven church by Rev. L. S. Bauman, where the interest is good and the attendance large.

Some students from California are already here for the fall semester.

It is with more than ordinary satisfaction that I record the fact that our Professor R. R. Haun recently returned from the University of Chicago, where he successfully passed his final examinations for the Doctor of Philosophy degree, taken in Physics. Dr. Haun has been with the College for some ten years or more, having had leave of absence twice for this work. He has been dean of men for the past several years, which position he fills exceptionally well. The College congratulates Dr. Haun on this recent achievement.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

BEAVER CITY, NEBRASKA

Owing to crop failures and other financial reverses our people here at Beaver City could not see their way clear to retain Brother Blood as pastor for the coming year.

We sincerely regret this move for we have found him a live-wire, going beyond our expectations in his good work.

He is tireless in his efforts for the promotion of all lines of good work in the church and community.

Too much cannot be said of his efforts to promote Bible study in his congregation.

The church here has made progress during his pastorate and that we have not forged ahead more is certainly no fault of his.

We would have no one think Brother Blood is leaving this field because of failure on his part. This is far from the situation. We are sorry that we are seemingly unable to retain him because of financial conditions at this place.

MRS. C. D. MILLER, Secretary.

FREMONT, OHIO

Since the last report from Fremont, Ohio, appeared in these columns, March 5th, of this year, six have been added to the church by letter and there have been nine baptized, six of whom have been fellowshipped in this congregation. This makes a net gain of Night picnic recently when the ladies were special guests. The high school age boys' class made and served ice cream to all. Many of the groups have regular monthly socials "to save". The Sunday school meets next Thursday in a beautiful mountain park for its annual picnic.

Our membership attended largely the 22nd annual inspirational Bible Conference, held in July in the First Brethren church at Long Beach, and were greatly refreshed thereby. During this time the pastors exchanged pulpits on Sundays. Those preaching at La Verne were: Rev. A. B. Cover, Rev. W. A. Ogden, Rev. A. D. Cashman, and Rev. John Lienhard. Dr. Florence N. Gribble was brought from Sunnyside, Washington to this conference to deliver three of her wonderful missionary addresses. La Verne was fortunate in securing her for another address before her departure for the East. A large group of church folks sang "God Be With You" to her as she boarded the train at Pomona last Wednesday evening.

May our gracious Lord bless each one of you who read this report, and use you mightily in your particular portion of his vineyard! And may he grant to each one of us a deeper concern for the lost in heathen lands, from whence the last of his own are to be gathered before his Bride is completed for his glorious appearing!

MRS. HARRY GOOD, Correspondent.

WILL AMERICA SURRENDER?

The Christian Advocate quotes the opinion ventured by "a wise man who is a confirmed Dry," as follows: "The law will be changed. The Wets will win. The saloon will come back. This country will be so disgustingly and intolerably Wet that the next generation will go Dry and stay Dry!"

If one accepts as in any sense conclusive the action of the Chicago conventions, made up largely of politicians of both sexes who adopted platforms dictated by a small coterie of leaders, then indeed we seem to be shut up to the gloomy view expressed above. True, that judgment ends on a note of final and glorious triumph, but it visions an intermediate state horrible to contemplate, something like the proverb quoted by St. Peter, "The dog turns back to his own vomit, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." God only knows how many lives of loved ones will be blasted in the holocaust if "the saloon comes back" and this country again becomes "disgustingly and intolerably Wet." Must such a terrible price again be paid in order to convince the next generation to go Dry and stay Dry?

As to the Republican platform, few seem able or willing to agree on its exact meaning, and there is a disposition to wait for the candidate to speak in no uncertain terms upon it. The Democratic platform appears to be absolutely hopeless. So able a commentator as Senator Carter Glass is quoted as calling it a "bar-room plank." Worst of all, opposition to the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act is made a test of party fealty. The candidate accepts this wholeheartedly and declares boldly that the 18th Amendment is doomed. It would be the worst sort of folly to minimize the seriousness of the situation. Those who favor our present laws must get together, study the situation carefully and prayerfully, and decide upon a unified and aggressive plan of action. No time is to be lost.

Meantime, we do not hesitate to express the conviction that the Christian Century has stated the case fairly and conservatively when it says:

"It is perhaps unwise to venture a prediction. But we have long felt that when once the issue is joined under a fair and responsible formula, the promoters of the present Wet hysteria will stand amazed at the undreamed of resources upon which the Drys will draw, in Church, and home and school, and factory, to keep the nation from slipping back a single step in this the most significant effort at voluntary social self-control which history has ever known."—Reformed Church Messenger.

DON'T STOP JOHN'S PAPER

Don't stop John's Paper, editor,
For he could not live without;
Surely he will want to know
All the activities round about
Throughout the church from East to West,
From North and South as well,
From Japanese and Chinese shores,
And the land of William Tell;
What's new way down in Bambur-land,
As well as up Northeast,
The news from Red Bird's changing day
And Europe's topmost crest.

Why, man alive, he'd miss the vision
Of his beloved church,
With teeming millions deep in need,
And leave them in the lurch;
He could not see beyond the borders
Of his own local perch.
He'd narrow down and shrivel up without the inspiration
That comes from reading every week your grand old publication.

Now there are many other reasons
Why John's paper shouldn't stop,
But I know I need not give them,
And the subject we will drop.
From now on, Mr. Editor, whenever a man writes in,
And tells you to stop his paper, you should at once begin
To pray for that dear brother and inquire as to the "Why,"
For his pathway will be rocky and things will go awry,
If this friendly weekly visitor ceases coming to his door,
We're fearful he will lag behind and we'll hear of him no more.

—E. S. Hengst in the Evangelical Messenger.

THE REALLY POOR

[An editorial in the Jackson (Miss.)
Daily News, Fred Sullins, Editor.]

"Wherefore do you spend your money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." (Isa. 55:2).

In these days of depression we hear much about poor people, and an hour rarely passes that we are not confronted with some form of poverty or hear some story of distress.

But who are the really poor people of this earth?

Not those who are merely poor in money, for the greatest of earth knew not riches—Socrates, Wagner, Rousseau, Poe, Lincoln, and a myriad of others throughout the centuries. Longfellow sold his most immortal poem for $25 and was glad to get it. Jesus of Nazareth was poorest of all, for he had not where to lay his head.

The really poor are those lacking in mental resources. It is the form of poverty that grinds, deadens, kills.

When poverty comes, the poor in mental resources have no wells of inner happiness from which to draw. When their money is gone, they have no inner riches.

When they drop from their station in life through some misfortune, they know no human beings to turn to.

When they are bereaved, they have no tides of faith to support them.

They are poor in self-mastery, and their environment overcomes them.

They are poor in discipline, and their own selves fall upon them and devour them.

They are poor in enthusiasms, and when their one little interest is gone, they have no other.

They are poor in friends, and to their calamity is added loneliness.

They are poor in passion, and to a love-hungry world they have nothing to offer.

They are poor in thoughts, and do not have as much as two ideas to rub against each other.

They are poor in work, having never found their task, without which no soul can be happy.

They are poor in time, having smothered creative leisure with the clutter of unimportant things.

They are poor in beauty, having never learned to behold beauty in true perspective.

They are the whetted ones of earth. They stand with their shivering souls looking in through the window at the warmth of life.

It is hell to be poor in all that makes life rich, true, strong, wholesome, and beautiful.

Yea, verily, the poverty-stricken of this earth are not the people who have merely lost their money.

AN EDITOR'S AFFLICTION

The Book of Job is hardly more eloquent than Dr. John van Schaick, Jr., Editor of The Christian Leader, contemplating what his brother editors have come to know as his annual attack of poison ivy. Sufferers from this beautiful, but insidious, vine may find some consolation in the words of this distinguished victim. In the course of a brilliant article on Rifts in the Lute, in the Leader for July 2, Dr. van Schaick says:

"There is a vine with alternate glossy green leaves, each having three leaflets which in autumn turn a beautiful dark red. It is called rhus toxicodendron, or poison ivy. It makes more bad music for me than anything else in the country. Most human beings have natural immunity to it, but if once they break down that immunity they are susceptible forever after. I was forty-five before I broke mine down by trying to pull out vines which had poisoned children. Since then I have learned a lot. When I get a bad attack of poison ivy, the most irritating thing that can be said to me is, 'I should think you would know the leaves.' Know them? I'd know them if they were festooned around the gates of heaven or draped around the great white throne, and I'd go elsewhere. I do not go to poison ivy. It comes to me. It is a hellish thing that hides in grass where wild strawberries grow. It conceals itself under woodbine or wild clematis. It lurks among the wild raspberries. It comes to me on the coat of the neighbor's dog. It seats itself on my shoelaces or the bottoms of my trousers. There is only one sure prevention for me, and that is scrubbing with coarse soap on my return from every trip into the thickets, and I have about decided to wear rubber boots so that my shoes and my clothing cannot touch it. The damage is done by an oil or resin, and if that can be washed off no harm will follow. If it cannot be washed off, then of ten thousand remedies I prefer to smite the first blisters with a solution of ferric chloride and alcohol. For two weeks, poison ivy has been cavorting between the fingers of my writing hand, and this article is the first thing done with my own hand since I got better. If my adjectives seem too lurid, those who are subject to poison ivy themselves not only will forgive me for what I have said, but will cheer me on to greater heights or depths."—Congregationalist.

THEY CAN IF THEY WILL

They can if they will.

They will if they must.

America must make it plain to them that they must.

These are the words of a prominent, public-spirited business man of San Francisco. We do not know his ecclesiastical connections. They were uttered in a meeting of forty or fifty representative business and professional men, with a sprinkling of military and naval officers, who were considering the relation of the United States to Russia. In the discussion that came up Russia's attempt to solve the problem of feeding and clothing and housing its people was under consideration. Whether its method was to succeed, they did not know. With the communism in Russia's plan, the group was not in the slightest sympathy. But it realized that the situation at the present time facing the United States is extremely serious. Eight million people are out of work. The entire group of the people in the United States who can work gainfully is less than 50,000,000. One-sixth of these then are unable to secure employment. The farmer has crops that he cannot sell; the merchant has stock that he cannot sell; the orchardist has fruit that he cannot sell; the banks have money that they cannot lend. The industrial system has come to an impasse. The problem of producing from our abundant resources, by the means at our disposal, an adequate supply of all that every man needs, is the outstanding problem. The methods we have used in the past have not solved it.

It was in this connection, that the gentleman, speaking of our great captains of industry, said, "They can solve this problem if they will. They will solve this problem if they must." It is for every American citizen, for the members of the Christian church who are interested in folks as folks, in making life better for every person, for every patriot, to bring such pressure on the captains of industry that they will feel that they must furnish a solution for this great problem.—Pacific Christian Advocate.

What, indeed, does not the word cheerfulness imply? It means a contented spirit; it means a pure heart; it means a kind, loving disposition; it means humility and charity; it means a generous appreciation of others and a modest opinion of self.—Thackeray.

AS I GO ON MY WAY

By Strickland Gillian

My life shall touch a dozen lives before this day is done—

Leave countless marks for good or ill ere sets this evening's sun.

Shall fair or foul its imprint prove, on those my life shall hail?

Shall benison my impress be, or shall a blight prevail?

When to the last great reckoning the lives I meet must go,

Shall this wee, fleeting touch of mine have added joy or woe?

Shall He who looks their records o'er— of name and time and place—

Say: "Here a blessed influence came," or, "Here is evil's trace"?

From out each point of contact of my life with other lives,

Flows ever that which helps the one who for the summit strives.

The troubled souls encountered does it sweeten with its touch,

Or does it more embitter those embittered overmuch?

Does love through every handclasp flow in sympathy's caress?

Do those that I have greeted know a newborn hopefulness?

Are tolerance and charity the keynote of my song

As I go plodding onward with earth's eager, anxious throng?

My life must touch a million lives in some way, ere I go

From this dear world of struggle to the land I do not know.

So this the wish I always wish, the prayer I ever pray:

Let my life help the other lives it touches by the way!

It is n t strange that the religion that is soothed all Sabbath day should sleep all the week.—Ram's Horn.

Art thou a beggar at God's door be sure thou gettest a great bowl, for as thy bowl is, so will be thy mess. According to thy faith, saith he, be it unto thee.—John Bunyan.

HOME EDUCATION

(Continued from page 2)

in the home, now and always. He should have a share in caring for the baby, a share in enjoying it, a share in disciplining it and a share in its affections that is equal to the mother's share. Naturally the father will be absent much, and busy providing for his little family, but equality in affection will do much to hold the family together.

Who has not seen fussy, overanxious young mothers who would not allow the father to touch the child because he had been out in the busy world and might bring contagion of some sort? Who has not seen young mothers angry if the father corrected the children? No man wants to be a nurse girl, a tyrant, or an outsider in his own home, but if he has a child he does want to function as a father.

Of course the temptation is strong to consider the first baby so important that the father hardly gets a word or smile after the little boy or girl arrives, but that is bad for the baby, for the father and also for the mother. Baby is very important and with regard to physical needs comes first in the home, but the home is for all and not simply for the baby.

So not only should the baby be encouraged to say that he belongs to Papa and Mama, putting Papa first, but the mother's actions and conversation should show the child that Papa is a very important person in their little world. To take advantage of the fact that Mother sacrifices more and does more for the baby than anyone else is weak and foolish. Every good mother wants the best for her family, and the best includes equality in the home, consideration for all and a life for the children that embraces the loving care and attention and discipline of both parents. To say, as some young parents do in the presence of the girl or boy, "This is my child and I never want you to punish him," is to pave the way for unhappiness, lawlessness and perhaps the disruption of the family.

If both Mother and Father teach by voice and action that the other is entitled to equal consideration and love and obedience, the moral standard of family living is unconsciously raised. Personal adjustments under such conditions can be made more harmoniously and wisely, and the happiness of the home is proportionately increased.—Reformed Church Messenger.

ALCOHOL FROM THE STANDPOINT OF MODERN SCIENTIFIC MEDICINE

(Continued from page 11)

septic conditions. Its only use, outside of its external use, in modern scientific medicine is found in cases of individuals who are chronic users of alcohol and who are brought to the hospital suffering from some accident or some disease in which a moderate amount of alcohol is continued for a time in order to prevent the development of delirium tremens. In regard to the habitual use of alcohol by healthy persons all authorities agree that it is a luxury, that it is unnecessary for the growth and maintenance of the body and that it neither promotes greater healthfulness, nor in any way retards the onset of disease.

Bad Effects of Abuse of Alcohol

The bad effects of the abuse of alcohol can be seen in hospitals, prisons, and asylums of all counties, especially those where the population is addicted to spirits. A large percentage of crime is admittedly done under the influence of alcohol. Alcohol is responsible for a large part of the poverty and misery of the lower classes of the population. Many of the admissions to lunatic asylums are due to alcohol. It would not be an exaggeration to say that drink has done more injury to mankind than has been done by such great plagues as cancer and tuberculosis combined. It is responsible for a large portion of the venereal diseases that occur. The facts which I have presented above are not merely my impressions, they are taken from the textbooks of the best authorities on pharmacology, the science of the action of drugs.

Need for Prohibition

In view of these scientific facts, if a nation could by legislation eliminate the curse of drink, with its resulting misery and death, legislation to that effect should be passed over night and rigidly enforced. Fortunately in this country such legislation has been passed. It has been fairly well enforced; not as effectively as it can be enforced in the future, but it has been sufficiently well enforced to have made a wonderful improvement in the health and well-being of our people as a whole. In some states it has been much more effectively enforced than in others.

Reduction in Beer Consumption

There has been a great diminution in the amount of alcohol consumed by the people of this country since the passage of prohibition. The consumption of beer has been almost entirely eliminated. Accurate statistics properly accumulated would show probably that less than five or possibly less than three per cent of the amount of beer is consumed in the United States than was consumed in the old pre-war days. The total amount of alcohol consumed in drink is probably less than ten per cent of the amount that was consumed in the pre-war days.

The childish chatter of many individuals who are opposed to prohibition that there is more liquor in the country today than ever before can easily be shown to be untrue. The arguments of those who are opposed to prohibition that everybody is drinking and that everybody is making beer and moonshine can easily be controverted by a careful analysis of the facts. The opposition to prohibition has become with some men a fixed idea, an obsession which makes it impossible for them to treat the problem fairly or intelligently.

A Great Success

Taking into consideration the fact that drink has been an almost universal and immemorial habit of the human race, the results secured by prohibition in this country in the last nine years must be accepted as a great success for this movement.

In wiping out a great curse like drink, or like slavery, it is to be expected that such an effort would meet with serious opposition and that success can be secured only after years of effort. This was true of slavery and it will be true of drink.

Fortunately for the United States the prohibition amendment is now a part of our Constitution. It cannot be repealed except by the conjoint action of at least thirty-six states. No legislation by Congress can so modify the definition of intoxicating liquors as to permit the manufacture, sale and transportation of liquors that are in fact intoxicating.

The question as to whether a liquor is intoxicating or not is not a matter of scientific opinion at all, but is a matter of common knowledge and common sense. It is a matter of common knowledge that man could get drunk on the old beer that was manufactured before prohibition which contained from 3 to 4 per cent alcohol, and it is a matter of common sense that if a man can get drunk on such beer he can get drunk on beer containing 2.75% of alcohol by drinking a few more glasses or a few more bottles.

Must Be Continued

We are therefore in a position where our experiment with prohibition must be continued for a number of years. The experiment should be continued in a logical, orderly, scientific way. The Eighteenth Amendment should be thoroughly enforced in all parts of the country by the federal, state and municipal governments. If this is done, the Eighteenth Amendment will accomplish more for the purpose of obtaining definite health of the people of this country than any legislation ever passed.

The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of our Constitution and should be made as effective as possible. Every man knows and every woman knows, whether they drink or not, that they are better off, and that the boys and girls of this country are better off without drink.

OUR LITTLE READERS

ALICE AND ANNIE MAE

Alice Preston had come with her father and mother to visit the land where the cotton grows. Alice lived in a city and she had never seen cotton-pickers before. As they drove out past the cotton fields three little black faces peeped out from among the plants. All around them were white balls of cotton. The cotton looked snow-white in the sunshine. The black faces belonged to Annie Mae and her two brothers, Sam and Joe. They were busy helping their father and mother pick the cotton, and there were many other fathers and mothers and children helping, too. They were all hard at work filling baskets full of cotton so that people could have cotton to use. Joe and Sam and Annie Mae were having a good time with all the rest. As they worked they sang in low, sweet voices a song the old colored "mammies" love to sing:

"Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming fo' to carry me home.
Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming fo' to carry me home.
I looked over Jordan, and what did I see
Coming fo' to carry me home?
A band of angels coming after me,
Coming fo' to carry me home."

As Alice and her father and mother drove up, little Annie Mae was piling up the cotton in her basket. She saw them driving down the road, and came running out to meet them. As she came to the side of the carriage Mr. Preston said, "You are happy, picking cotton, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Annie Mae, shyly.
"And we are glad," said Mr. Preston, "to have your cotton in the North."
"What do you all do with y'er cotton?" asked Annie Mae.

"We make it into clothes to wear and bed covering to keep us warm," said Alice's father.

"I would like to pick some cotton," said Alice.

So her father asked Annie Mae to show her how to pull the cotton out of the stiff pods. It was not nearly as easy as Alice had thought it would be. The pods scratched her fingers. After she had pulled the cotton out of a great many pods she peeked into a high basket they had given her.

"Oh, what a little bit!" she exclaimed.
"It hardly covers the bottom of the basket and I thought I had it almost full."

Annie Mae was working near by. "La, miss," she said, "it takes hours and hours to fill one of them big baskets."

Just then Annie Mae's mother came near. After talking a little with the visitors she asked them to come up to her cabin home just opposite the cotton field. There they saw two little rooms, with no carpet on the floor, and only newspapers pinned up to cover the board walls. Little Annie Mae was happy as the visitors rode away she was looking at some pictures they had left behind. And the other children had some, too.

Alice waved her hand to the little cotton-pickers as far as she could see. Then she looked down at the bunch of cotton bolls which Annie Mae's mother had given her to carry home.

"Now, father," she said, as they rode along, "let's count how many things cotton is good for." And so they did.

"Bed comforters, like the new ones mother made," said father.

"Cotton in our ears or our teeth when they hurt," was the first thing Alice thought of.

"Thread for sewing," said her mother.
"Cloth for sheets and pillow cases," said father, still thinking of his comfortable bed.

"Dresses," said Alice, "and curtains and lots of things of that sort."

"Cotton-pickers do help us, don't they, father?" said Alice later, after she had found how many, many things there are for which we need cotton.

When their journey was over and Alice was at home again, her mother sang to her this verse about the cotton-pickers:

"Sing ho! for the planters who planted the cotton,

Sing ho! for the sunny fields where it did grow.

Sing ho! for the workers who gathered the treasure

From all the big buds as they burst with its snow!"

"Oh, mother!" said Alice, "I wish Annie Mae could have this song. Can't we send it to her?" So mother wrote the verse on a card and sent it from Alice to Annie Mae Priors.—From "Helper Picture Stories," by Frederica Beard.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LAST MINUTE NOTICE

Brother Claude Studebaker, pastor of our church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, has just written to the secretary of the Home Mission Board that the Pittsburgh Christian Endeavor Society has taken up an offering for the National Conference offering to be taken on the last Sunday of Conference.

He suggests that because the delegates are personally pretty well spent out by the time the last Sunday of Conference comes that this would be a wise and timely suggestion for all organizations to do. Let each church, or Christian Endeavor, or Sunday school send their delegate to Conference with their offering for Home Missions on the last day.

If every church sent its delegates with $5.00 for this offering, it would be a godsend to our work and no church would miss it. Let each leader start the movement quickly in each church. The time is short.

R. PAUL MILLER.

THE GARFIELD

Open for the Brethren Conference at Reduced Rates

MRS. C. VAN NUYS, Manager, Winona Lake

THE HEIGHTS

ABOVE STUDEBAKER SPRINGS
Winona Lake, Indiana
Depression Rates for the Brethren Conference. Rates on application
M. E. ROSS Manager

VOL. LIV
Number 34

August 27
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

JESUS THE GREAT EVANGELIST

Who kindles the heart with love for the Lord and sympathy for the unsaved.
Enlightens it with a vision of the Christian's opportunity and the world's need, and Charges it with a sense of individual responsibility and divine compulsion,
And sends it forth equipped with the wisdom of his Spirit and the power of his Presence.

Satan in the Role of a New Messiah

An Editorial, in the "Standard Bible Teacher"

We are not disposed to enter into any political controversy or to espouse the cause of any political party. But a great moral issue has been raised which no Christian can afford to overlook. Shall the lawless liquor traffic be clothed with a garment of white and allowed to pose as an angel of light? Shall it be granted the status of legality? Shall the dishonest and dishonorable propaganda of the wet interests deceive even those of the household of faith?

Can we believe in the fundamental sincerity of the wets when they pose as moral champions for overcoming the so-called evils of prohibition while espousing the virtues of a trade that it seems only the moronic or the depraved or the criminal could approve in view of its past history? How much law did the wet interests ever obey? How much will they ever obey?

Be not deceived by the rationalizing of those who are slaves to desire, or who would grow rich by preying on such human weakness! Be not led astray by the clever "reasons" or "arguments" devised to "put something over on the American people!" Do not let Satan deceive you into believing that he is the modern savior of the race with his legalized whisky and gin and his institution known as the saloon which will inevitably return (though like a hypocrite under a new name or in a new guise), in spite of the promises of the former champions of the saloon and its devastated life, that the saloon will not be tolerated in the future under their righteous and redeeming wet regime!

What is this? A new Messiah? Behold what he has done in the past before you trust him in the future, or even hearken to his base promises and receiving assurances! What is his plea? To save young people from debauchery and rid the nation of racketeering? When has he ever done anything but carried on a racket in despoiling human lives and in preying on the young people for profit? A new Messiah? Nay, Satan in a new, clever role, who poses as a righteous reformer. Shall Christians welcome him with open arms, or should they hold faithfully to the only One who can give life and righteousness, and before whose power all the hosts of evil must eventually be vanquished? Let each Christian answer this question for himself at the ballot box in November. Let none fail in this duty!

Did the Eighteenth Amendment cause youth and women to learn to drink? Who gave them the drink? The liquor interests who want a legal status in order that they can give them more drink and do it without getting into difficulties with the law! Do wet propagandists want to enlarge the devastating operations of bootleggers by taking their place in the social order? Is it because they wish to get "in on the profits" that they would legalize and expand the industry? Trust not their stated "reasons"! Understand their actual "motives"! Tear off their mask of pretense and behold them as they are!

Some men would be willing to sell their soul for drink, others for the right to make money through the manufacture and sale of drink, others for public office! In view of the circumstances of the present hour, let us forget superficial party loyalties and vote dry—for dry Congressmen, for dry Senators, for dry State representatives—for men who have not been stampeded by the wet interests and upon whose intelligent and moral judgments we can safely rely. In this way was the prohibition reform brought into being—and in this way can the law be retained and made to function. Let us compel our public servants to realize that the forces of righteousness demand as much consideration from them as the forces of desire and of debauchery and of the despoilation of human lives!

Church Paper Changes

Changes in the field of religious journalism come so rapidly that long-time friends disappear overnight or are transformed into something entirely different. They that were, are not; and they that are, are not what they were.

The most sweeping changes have come in the Methodist Episcopal Church. After having previously witnessed the disappearance of many Methodist weeklies, we are now compelled to note with sorrow the demise of the following Advocates: The Northwestern (Chicago), Pittsburgh (Pittsburgh), the Pacific (Portland, Oregon), and the Southern (Athens, Tennessee). Now we have but one, The Christian Advocate—a National Weekly, but published in four editions dated New York, Cincinnati, Kansas City and San Francisco. The four editions contain a certain amount of material common to all, while each places emphasis upon news of its more immediate environment. It looks as if so great a Church needed many more weeklies, but economy demanded some change.

But Methodists are not alone in being forced to make changes. The Christian Endeavor World has left the weekly field and become a monthly, as did The Christian Herald about a year ago. Many of us recall the powerful and uplifting influence of two great independent religious weeklies—The Outlook, edited by Lyman Abbott, and The Independent, by William Hayes Ward. A few years ago they were consolidated; now the resulting publication is in the hands of a receiver. The most influential Catholic weekly, The Commonwealth, scholarly, fair and charitable in all of its utterances, has had to issue an appeal for thousands of dollars if its existence is to be maintained. Two Boston Church papers, The Christian Leader (Universalist) and The Christian Register (Unitarian), are being published only every other week during the summer because of what the latter describes as "necessary economy." The editor of The Leader frankly reports that "our normal deficit of $8,000 has been jumped to $20,000."

So goes the story throughout the country. Faithful men and women are doing their best to render what so many deem to be an essential service for the Church and the Kingdom through the publication of Church weeklies, but it becomes increasingly evident that such an essential service cannot be continued indefinitely without greater cooperation on the part of ministers and church members.—The Presbyterian Advance.

SLOTH IN THE PULPIT

A reference to "sloth in the pulpit," made a short time ago by a denominational committee, furnished the New York Sun a text from which it preached a sermon to preachers, and here are some bits of the comment and counsel it contained:

"Some churches, it is asserted, pay less attention to the spiritual qualities of a prospective pastor than to his worldly qualifications for getting results and making a good appearance.

"Others complain, in the words of one layman, that 'Not a new thought has been presented in that pulpit in twenty years.'

"There are ministers who cease to study as soon as they have accumulated stocks of sermons they can use over and over again as they drift about from place to place. Of these it is said that they find themselves sorely puzzled to understand why hearers have tired of their homilies, to discover themselves among those who are driven to 'burden their friends with complaints and excuses—often plausible, but not often honest—and with requests for assistance in securing new charges.'

"There are weak churches and strong churches, weak preachers and strong preachers today, as there were in many previous ages.

"This nevertheless is a restless age, and an impatient one.

"There never was a time when laziness was in greater disesteem.

"Moreover, the pastor who today undertakes to lead a flock must be prepared to meet severe tests of a kind often spared to his predecessors in other centuries.

"The printing press and radio have brought to him greater mental competition, as they have given to his hearers better measuring wands with which to ascertain for themselves how he ranks intellectually and culturally. He needs courage, an alert mind, sound judgment, sure moral and spiritual insight, if he intends to go into the pulpit Sabbath after Sabbath and invite the comparisons his congregation is bound to make."—The Biblical Review.

When you find yourself overpowered, as it were, by melancholy, the best way is to go out and do something kind to somebody or other.—Keble.

IN THIS NUMBER

Thoughts for Labor Day—Editor, . . .	3
Carrion-Minded People and How Made—Editor, . . .	3
Editorial Review, . . .	4
Moderator's Address—W. I. Duker, . . .	5
Studies in the Book of Revelation—R. I. Humbert, . . .	7
Significant News and Views, . . .	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, . . .	9
The Need of the Church Today—C. L. Goodall, . . .	10
Report of the National S. S. Association—M. P. Puterbaugh, . . .	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, . . .	11
Scriptural Coins and Counterfeits—C. D. Whitmer, . . .	11
Improving the Societies Music—Harold Etling, . . .	12
Jungle Notes—Mrs. Orville Jobson, . . .	12
The Call—Nancy Shank, . . .	12
News from the Field, . . .	13, 14
Our Little Readers, . . .	15
The Tie that Binds, . . .	15
In the Shadow, . . .	15

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Thoughts for Labor Day

Labor Day is a time set apart for the honor of all honest toil. It is well that we have this day, for we thereby put the badge of respect and approval on all labor. Labor is not an enemy to man, as some are wont to think, but a friend. It is a friend that is rather hard to find just now, as many are seeking it in vain, but we trust times will be normal before so long when all may have work who want it. But let us have respect for labor, for it is a divine bestowment, a blessing vouchsafed by Almighty God upon all the sons of men. Some people have the mistaken notion that we are doomed to hard work because of the sin of Adam and Eve, but not so. Before sin ever entered into their lives, Adam was put into the garden of Eden and instructed "to dress it and to keep it." That meant work. He was also instructed to "subdue" the earth and the creatures dwelling therein, and that, too, meant work. No, work did not come about through sin; its conditions and results were affected by sin, but work itself is a divine characteristic and is necessary to the very nature of things.

Very much is made of labor in the Bible. The people it tells about are working people, and they are commended by the fruits and sacrifices of their labor. Jesus himself was a laborer; he grew up in a workingman's home and was known to his neighbors as a carpenter. Moreover, Jesus declared, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." Again he expressed the necessity of activity on his part when he said, "We must work the works of him that sent me while it is yet day: the night cometh, when no man can work." And he said, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you"—to work. It would seem that there will be very little place in heaven for the lazy, indolent fellow, for Christianity places such high premium upon labor.

Work brings great profit to the worker. It brings progress. It takes one forward to bigger achievements and larger realizations and greater enrichment of personality. A man never withers up, nor dries of dry-rot, so long as he continues ambitious and active, so long as he responds to the urge to go forward. But let him become listless and indifferent, and cease to work or no longer put heart into his work, and he will begin to deteriorate. When men begin to lose out, they have already begun to fall out with work. An aeroplane will not go down as long as it goes on; neither will a man fall out of the race of life as long as he goes industrially forward, but will increase in strength and accomplishments.

The man who gives himself earnestly to his work is gripped by his work, so that he cannot and would not get away from it. It calls him and fascinates him; like a magnet it draws him and holds him to it. He becomes absorbed in it so that he cannot get away, his work cannot spare him. As some one has said, "There is a splendid inevitableness about hard work." When the enemies to the rebuilding of the fallen walls of Jerusalem tried to persuade Nehemiah to give up his work and come down, he replied, "I am doing a great work so that (not, I don't want to come down, but) I can not come down." His work had so laid hold on him that he could not free himself from the urge of its necessity. "He was master of his work, but his work at the same time was master of him, and held him by a compulsion that was no less complete because it was delightful."

Work makes men partners and comrades, and it helps wonderfully for them to realize it. It makes us feel a peculiar warmth for the Lord Jesus to know that in his humanity he worked hard, toiled long and became wearied, even as we are compelled to do. Jesus was a partner with us in work and it makes us glad to feel that he understands our tasks, as truly he does. For he was schooled in work in the carpenter shop, and when the time came for him to go about teaching and healing, he did not cease to work, but only gave himself to a higher kind of work. And that should remind us that our comrades in work are not only they who toil with the hands, but also they who toil with the brain. The teacher shares a fellowship of work with the farmer, the doctor with the road builder and the preacher with the mechanic. They not only share the spirit of toil, but they are all partners in work. No one can work unto himself alone any more than he can live unto himself. The different kinds of workers are dependent one upon the other. The garbage collector and the sewage disposal scientist are in league with the health director and the nurse. The farmer harvesting his grain is in partnership with the miller and the baker. The carpenter and the tool maker are comrades of the lumberman and the miner. While the social workers, the teachers and the ministers, if they all be true workmen, are workers together and with God.

All workers should respect the rights of their fellow-workers, of whatever position or class. "Look not every man on his own things but every man also upon the things of others." That is the Christian principle of concern for others, which ought to apply in all relations of life. Whether one's work is in the professions or in the trades, whether he is at the head of a great factory or a humble workman in its employ, he is obligated to give consideration to the rights of others. The employer has a right to receive honest work and loyalty from the man whom he employs, and the workman who will not give that, should resign and give place to someone who will. On the other hand, the man who works in the shop has a right to expect of the man who works in the office as manager or owner fair wages and considerate treatment. "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his labor," says Paul, and then he goes on to say, "For we are laborers together with God." There is a vital truth in that statement aside from its spiritual intent. The laborer and the manager are fellow workmen; the employer and the employee are both human brothers, created alike in the image of God. They ought to regard each other, therefore, with mutual respect and consideration and each should have concern for the other's welfare. And the obligation is all the greater on the part of him who is the stronger, or has the greater power. His duty is to look to the other fellow's welfare before his own material gain. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., expressed the proper attitude and the right view when he said: "Men are rapidly coming to see that human life is of infinitely greater value than material wealth; that the health, happiness and well being of the individual, however humble, is not to be sacrificed to the selfish aggrandizement of the more fortunate and the more powerful." Human considerations are everywhere and always to be placed above material values. If that principle were universally recognized, and the spirit of good will and the Golden Rule were applied in all industrial relations, there would be no trouble between capital and labor. But they are not, and there is much trouble, not only between these two forces, but also between them and the public, and all because so little of the real Christian spirit and teaching find outlet and demonstration in the lives of professing Christian people.

Carrion-minded People and How Made

The public is being razed severely in some quarters for its taste for lurid, unwholesome, breath-taking scenes, and we are not altogether convinced that it is undeserving. One religious paper, The Lutheran, unmercifully flays it, calling it "Carrion Minded," likening it to certain animals that feed on what is dead. "Among quadrupeds," it says, "there is a family whose sense of smell has been specialized until it enables them to identify and follow the odor of carrion. They single out the stench of decaying flesh amongst the composite smells that meet their nostrils as they roam at night over plains and forests. They are not hunters and killers of their own food; their nourishment depends on the deeds of other animals. When excited, they fill the air with a far-reaching, identifying sound: it is the caricature of mirth and victory, the mad laughter of a ghoul."

Then this editor remarks what we will readily agree, that to characterize public sentiment these days as "carrion-minded" is not a pleasant comment, but he asks, "Who will say it is unjustified?" And we are not ready to take issue with him, for the details seem to come all too nearly to justifying the characterization. What a list: "Accidents, crimes, illegalities, infidelities and lusts,—acts that have the stink of corruption rather than the odor of virtue,—are what a great multitude of people seem to prefer as food for their minds. At least the press, the stage and the publishers claim that goodness is uninteresting and wickedness rewards recording. Why else should the 'mysteries' of the underworld be the theme of feature stories, films, magazine articles and best selling books? How else can we account for the mental appetites of a people distinguished by the amount of reading sold to them that deals with unsavory deeds?"

Is it true? Is the American public taste of that kind? Observing the movies and noting that crime and sex scenes are most largely patronized; looking at the news stands and seeing that magazines featuring pictures of actresses and dancers and "true stories" are most widely purchased; scanning the metropolitan newspaper and discovering the thrilling reports of crime, illicit love and dare-devility are the ones that make first page, we cannot help acknowledging that the public certainly has a nose for things sordid.

But what is the reason for this unwholesome moral taste? How has it developed? Is it merely that we have not the courage to turn aside from such stuff, or that we are deliberately and purposefully "carrion-minded?" Our exchange thinks so. He says: "The hyena is a coward. Can a generation that delights in descriptions of iniquity, that holds its breath at the make-believe representations of gangsters and law-breakers, that set up 'behaviorism' as a philosophy of morals to condone infidelity and sensuousness,—can such a generation claim to be courageous? Must we be cornered by stern necessity and the wrath of outraged decency in order to be cured of carrion-mindedness? The answer lies in the attitude we take toward paying for the stories of crime, lust and lawlessness. There is no hope for a people with an incurable lust for the stench of moral degeneracy. Until we refuse mental contacts with the impure and the corrupting, we will be fed in quantities to our willingness to make it profitable."

But there is another side to us. People are being and have been made carrion-minded by being fed this unwholesome stuff. The beginning is made with the children. By advertisements on billboards, in magazines newspapers and in the movies, the minds of children and youth are poisoned with suggestions of indecencies, immoralities and crime. How can young people be encouraged to take proper care of the body when by every means under the sun they are being induced to smoke cigarettes? How can we expect them to grow up with a sense of public honesty when state governments are legalizing gambling and taxing it for the education

(Continued on page 8)

EDITORIAL REVIEW

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK. This is the second issue to be dropped this year, which is according to custom. Fifty issues make a volume.

We have a good letter from Brother E. E. Lichty of Carleton, Nebraska, expressing appreciation of the recently published address of Brother A. D. Cashman, and loyalty to Brethren teachings and institutions. We are glad to have the privilege of publishing a letter giving expression to such a wholesome and loyal spirit, and wish to thank him for speaking so graciously of the worth of The Evangelist.

Brother Leslie Lindower writes of his work at Accident, Maryland, which place he has been serving during the last three summers, as an extra obligation taken on in addition to his regular charges at Terra Alta and Grafton, West Virginia. At the last service which was a communion service, four new members were received by the laying on of hands, and during the length of his pastorate seventeen additions had been received by baptism.

We are pleased to be privileged to publish the splendid address by the retiring moderator, Brother W. I. Duker, and it is worth the time it will take you to read it. We dare say there will be those who will feel that here is another moderator's address worth the price of the paper for a year, as a correspondent in this issue remarks.

Brother Freeman Ankrum, pastor of our church at Flora, Indiana, reports a number of items of interest relating to his work. The Sunday school has been maintaining an unusually good attendance, having gone beyond past records of recent years. All services are well attended and the departments are going strong. Our church and the Church of the Brethren at that place have been fraternizing on Sunday evenings, to the pleasure and profit of both church groups.

Brother W. I. Duker informs us that he has changed his residence from Elkhart to Goshen, Indiana, where he will resume his former role of principal of Goshen high school. He will be followed at Elkhart by Brother H. F. Stuckman, who will be followed at Goshen by Brother S. M. Whetstone, who will be followed at Waterloo, Iowa by Brother E. M. Riddle, who will be followed at Warsaw by Brother L. E. Lindower—but there the line of our information comes to an end. We have not learned who is to succeed Brother Lindower at the Terra Alta—Grafton charge in West Virginia, if indeed his successor has been determined.

A circular letter sent out by Brother Willis E. Ronk, secretary-treasurer of the National Ministerial Association, to the members of that organization, carries the information of the death of Elder John A. Miller of Summit Mills, Pennsylvania. He passed to his heavenly reward on July 18th at the ripe old age of 91 years. Brother Miller, we are informed, was ordained to the ministry in the old church before the division and was one of the first to preach for the Brethren church. He was founder of the Summit Mills church and has been a most zealous supporter of foreign missions. Thus another veteran of the Cross has passed, and we sympathize with his remaining relatives in his passing, but the memory of such a noble soul will doubtless be an inspiration to all who knew him, and heaven will be made dearer by his going.

The annual financial statement of the Foreign Missionary Society has been printed and distributed to its members from the office of the treasurer, Dr. Louis S. Bauman, Long Beach, California. It shows a total of all funds received for the year closing July 1, 1932 to amount to $38,305.23. This is a drop of $9,347.49 from last year's total of $47,652.72, which was the peak of all annual offerings. While there is regret that such a slump in foreign mission offerings should have been necessary, yet we are of the opinion that gratitude should be expressed that the churches gave so sacrificially as they did under the stress of the most aggravated financial depression of this generation. The Spirit of God has moved strongly on the hearts of our people to have kept them up to that point of giving, and the Foreign Board should feel complimented over the interest thus maintained.

One good brother wants to know why we do not "cater to good, first-class advertising to help cut down expenses and lower the subscription price." We are glad for the question and thank our brother for his interest, and also for his loyalty in renewing his subscription at the regular rate. But to answer we must say frankly that a paper of the circulation such as The Evangelist had in its most prosperous days when money was plenty and Honor Roll enthusiasm ran high could not possibly command the interest of "good, first-class" advertisers. Moreover, we know of no church paper that is able alone to secure such advertisements. The national advertisers will not bother with magazines of such small circulation as most church papers have. They are looking for circulations that run into hundreds of thousands and millions, and there are no denominational papers that run anywhere near such figures. It is not that good advertisers do not value church papers as advertising mediums, for they do; and if the host of such papers could be brought to adopt certain magazine standards in mechanical make-up, they might together secure desirable advertising, for which each paper would be paid pro rata according to its circulation. But under present circumstances very little profit could be made through advertising, even if there were no objections to advertisements in our church paper, as our brother thinks there would not be. We happen to have met with some, however.

Moderator's Address

By W. I. Duker

(At the Forty-Fourth General Conference, Held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 22-28, 1932)

Some tasks come to us and we in turn accept them with full hearts and a ready mind. At times we are very desirous of saying many things and when opportunity is given, we accept gladly and proceed to say these same things. Then again, we find that necessity drives and we are forced by the circumstances about us to discuss certain phases of work which we would greatly prefer to have others perform. So we approach the report which custom demands of a retiring moderator. We hasten to add that it is not lack of interest that causes us to be reluctant in presenting this address. Our hearts are full of love and interest with respect to the different phases of work with which our beloved Church has to do, during the coming year. We shall watch every step she takes with sympathetic understanding. We shall be delighted to assist in any humble way which may come to us. But to occupy the position of retiring moderator and make recommendations and to offer suggestions and to criticize the dangers before us; this task really is not to our liking.

Surely the very first thing that should occupy our minds and hearts is a sense of thanksgiving for the abundant mercies and blessings from the Almighty Father of us all, for his care and constant remembrances during the year that is just passed. This has been a trying year for the Church as well as for us as individuals. Possibly no year in the past has been so trying as has the year that this Conference brings to a close. All of the difficulties that have come to the business world, disturbing and destroying, have likewise come to the church. The very nature of the work of the church is such as to associate its success to a large extent, with the prosperity and lack of same, of the country in which the church is found. This being true, our sense of thanksgiving for the abundant care of the Heavenly Father should cause us to burst forth in a hymn of praise that should cause all residents of Winona to come running to see what Holy Ghost baptism was in progress at the auditorium.

When we consider the depreciation in bank stock, in real estate and personal property, when we recognize the let down in all social and fraternal organizations, when we consider how discouraged and depressed all individuals are today; then we turn to our churches and our hearts are made glad to realize that here we find a different atmosphere. God is good to his Children! Certainly, there is a noticeable let up in our material growth with respect to buildings and equipment, in present material expansion. But with respect to spiritual growth and salvation of souls there has been, we believe, a pronounced increase. People have had time to "Find God." Other years our people have been too busy to give time to spiritual things. Now they have time to consider things of real value. So the year just passed has been a good year for the churches! Have you found it so, Brethren?

Our approach to this conference, to the tasks and duties enjoined upon us, surely must be a bit different than in years passed. With the entire world changed, our approach must necessarily change. Our problems are the same but the world has changed. Its outstanding sins are the same for there is no sense of change or progression in the devil's tactics. He is the most old-fashioned of all. However, we have new problems and new opportunities. Will we be able to appreciate this situation and take advantage of our opportunities?

Rev. W. I. Duker

It shall not be our purpose in this report to make recommendations and ask for definite action by this conference upon any question. Our conference has a definite organization by means of its many boards, it should take action upon its vital questions by means of a proper delegated body from our various churches. There is no need of complicating our mechanism by assuming delegated wisdom on the part of the moderator. We have no desire to take advantage of the fact that in an election we were chosen to act as chairman of our conference for a year and to now assume that we are to determine the action and guide the deliberation of the conference now in session. Our suggestions to be offered and our recommendations submitted shall all be in the nature of a bit of sermonizing and exhortation and we know that our people are well trained in their ability to react to the same without seriously changing their viewpoint or being stirred into aggressive action.

NEED OF INTELLIGENT REPRESENTATIVE ACTION

This leads us into our first bit of serious observation relative to our tasks before us. We have work to do as a conference. This work should be done intelligently as it relates to the body as a whole. Delegates should take seriously their delegated representative authority. Final action should be the result of an intelligent understanding on their part and a representative body with respect to number of delegates in conference. We have observed in the past that a fairly representative body is in attendance and ready to vote at the election and organization of the conference but at no time after this is the voting body again intact. When the various boards come before the conference with their recommendations, budgets and reports, the number of delegates is tremendously depleted. This is just when they should be present. We will give one case in point. This is only suggestive. It has no other purpose. Last year when your Sunday School board came before the conference with its recommendations and suggestions in which they desired to serve the church as a whole, not one-fourth of the delegate body were in attendance. We suppose that they thought that in their organization of the conference they had discharged their entire duty and were now free to come and go at their pleasure. But brethren, in our organization we only were preparing to discharge our duty. Our real discharge of duty is found in the consideration of the work and deliberation of the tasks and aims of our various boards and committees. We are suggesting that as our many splendid boards and committees are making their reports and asking for the support of their budgets this year we shall have a representative group of delegates in their seats ready to give complete understanding and support to the work at hand.

DIGNIFY AND EXALT CONFERENCE

Then, too, we would be most happy to suggest that in every way possible, we ought to dignify and exalt our Conference as a representative group of delegated Brethren. Brethren are delegated to think over and through the various perplexing problems with which our churches have to do. Then when we as a conference have arrived at some action relative to these same problems, each individual in his respective local church and the local church as a unit should take seriously these same attitudes and recommendations. We are not suggesting that we should again, as in the distant past, attempt to make the Conference action inviolate, but we are urging that more respect and attention be given in our local churches to Conference action. To bring to the present conference in a more definite way what we have in mind we offer the following observations. The conference meets and its several boards convene in their respective groups. Each plans for the department of church work delegated to its respective board. All boards make their reports and are accepted by the conference with or without changes. Now the local churches look over this action (many evidently failing to do so) and determine just what part of said action they desire to accept. Some are quite desirous of accepting the action of some boards and give their time and attention whole heartedly to the same, utterly ignoring the action of other departments of conference work. They make explanation of their action by saying that "We are a mission church" or that "We are a Sunday school Church." Until any individual local church has made an honest effort to secure the quota passed by general conference in every department of its church's activity all effort to secure an overbudgeting of other activities should not be allowed. Surely this suggestion tending to a unified effort of all church activities applies to district work as well as to our National programme. Just as we are a Whole Bible church we ought to likewise be a "United effort church" with respect to our accepted tasks. This leads us into one more observation which lies in this same field of thinking. There was a time when we were afraid of conference action and made our local congregation the determining factor in all lines of effort. This has been continued until we have great difficulty in establishing and maintaining a "Mother" church with any certain continuity of effort, or well defined plan of procedure. Our extreme congregational attitudes prevents uniformity of doctrinal aims and allows brethren unsound in the "faith" to not only expound their dangerous doctrines but to actually carry them into practice. All this may now be done while a general conference stands helplessly by and is unable to either stop the practice or seriously discourage the same. We are urging greater respect for general and district conference action and individually would be most happy if this action were made a matter of mandatory observance. We hasten to note however that we are not brave or foolish enough to make this as a recommendation. We most sincerely urge that we be not unmindful of the tenets of faith held by our fathers in the early days of our beloved fraternity, and that we strive to maintain those doctrines which in the past have made us a "Peculiar people unto the Lord."

STRESS DISTINCTIVE DOCTRINES

This leads us to say further in this relation that we must not be unmindful that our only excuse for a separate existence as a denomination lies in those doctrines which are peculiar to us as a people. If these doctrines are cast aside or entirely disregarded then we will have constant difficulty in persuading those gloriously saved in the Lord to establish a home within our borders. Our only hope in a growing future lies in our Brethren doctrines. We are speaking now of our future as a Brethren church. We therefore believe we could well afford to lay greater stress on our distinct doctrines and practices giving them larger place in our preaching and teaching endeavoring to make the ordinances of God's house rich in meaning and more vital in life to our people. Form may easily become formal and signs insignificant. We cannot be said to have a Whole Gospel unless our form are full of the Gospel. We must guard against their becoming empty and meaningless, and seek to keep them heavily freighted with the life-giving and life-enriching truth that the Lord Jesus imparted to them.

It is surely not the time nor place to enter into a certain definite discussion of these doctrines which have been precious to Brethren peoples since the days of their early organization. We have no desire to mention certain doctrines and principles and indicate in this manner the exclusion of other equally essential doctrines. What we may have to say at this time must not be taken as a resume of those doctrines which go to make up the sum total as an expression of our faith. With the open Bible as our guide this manner of procedure would not be in keeping with our expressed position relative to the same.

PEACE AND WAR

However, surely our present day problems, problems which threaten the peace and safety not only of our beloved church but rather of our nation as well, should come in for a certain definite expression of position. The world will always be at war. War between nations must necessarily prevail as long as the Prince of Peace is not allowed to rule in the hearts and lives of those who dominate the world's activities. We need never hope for the time when war shall be no more until the Prince of Peace shall come. However, the line between the church and world must be more plainly marked. We are constantly confusing these two forces. Questions such as, "Is the World Growing Better?" indicates that terrible confusion in the minds of the people. We attempt to throw these two contending forces into one body and then are wondering as to the outcome. They cannot be united and man's puny efforts to do so would be laughable were they not so tragic.

If you are "one of the World" then you can with safety urge and favor war. You may argue it as the only solution for the world's national difficulties. War is the only solution known by the adversary of the souls of men. He must lead his people into battle with carnal weapons, he has no other method to settle the strife between his forces.

But the church! That is entirely another matter. It has no relation to one strife just referred to. You cannot discuss the problems of the world and then in the same breath talk about the Church. They are so far removed that no contact nor approach will be found in common. Whatever conclusions are found in the one must at once be discarded when you regard the other. There can be but one position for the Child of Christ. It is easily found in the words of the Master. No ability as a student of the Book is required to ascertain Christ's position and our required acceptance. When Peter, all aglow with righteous fervor, cut off the ear of the one who came to assist in taking Jesus, the answer came from the lips of Jesus and should never need a single additional word to make plain. Why argue about a matter as evident as our relation as a church to the matter of War? May we again go on record as a people but above all, do more than just "go on record." May we continue to teach our position as a people until this needless perplexing problem will be no more within our borders as a church. May there be no more "Ear cutting" among Brethren peoples! Yes, peace will come to this poor old sin-racked world. Yes, at last every house will be a house of prayer. But, my brother, first we must see him in the clouds and then find him here to rule, with Satan bound in the pit.

PROHIBITION—18TH AMENDMENT

Rather recently we were embarrassed and chagrined as we listened to men who had gathered at Chicago for the purpose of planning platforms and securing men to lead America out of its present unfortunate dilemma. Our greatest men were presumed to have gathered there. All have recognized the tremendous need of some kind of adjustment that will allow hungry people to be fed in a land of plenty. Food is rotting on the farm and cannot be marketed for want of any adequate price. Children are hungry in our cities and cannot be fed for want of these same foods. Surely some wise mind is needed to lead us out of the wilderness! When these same "wise men" met at Chicago, there seemed to be but one thought in the minds of many. This thought was "beer." As we listened day after day we were again made conscious that the child of God had no place or possibility of service in a convention such as had gathered there. We haven't a word to say relative to the convention referred to, as a place when men of the world meet and attempt to plan their programs. It was altogether in keeping with the "Wisdom of the World." But for the church to take a definite hand in such a program is, we believe, altogether unseemly. What then is our place and duty in the struggle before us? Have we a part and a task? We surely have. Temperance is one of our first and outstanding tenets of faith. But we must approach the problem through our relation to the church. And the church was not organized to go into politics. When will we Christians learn that our most potent power will be found and exercised when we individually, practice and talk temperance. Today many so-called Christians are ready propagandists for the "wets." We carry around their ideas and vote with them at the polls. When all Christians stand for absolute temperance for themselves and likewise for others under their influence the "powers that be" will soon be conscious that we cannot be swayed and controlled by their conniving. Certainly we are to be pitied when we are confused by their arguments and led to serve them in their purposes. We are well aware that conditions today are not as they should be. We have no defense for the lax law observance of our present time. Whether it is the result of the 18th amendment or not, we have little concern. What we have always stood for as a church is definite law enforcement. If this were done, all of our troubles would disappear and prosperity would again return. Brethren, let us not be duped by those who may wish to use us as pawns in their game for greed. Let us remember that "We be Brethren" and that Christ taught respect for law. When we are led far afield in our thinking then it is that we become confused in our purposes.

"BE YE SEPARATE"

Here is a well recognized position but one in which great difficulty has been found in its observance. We feel quite sure that when our fathers found this principle and attempted to observe the same, that error crept in and did harm to the principle of separation. Then when many of us recognized the error that had been practiced in an attempt at observance, we cast the thought of separation entirely aside. The Word still stands! We must be a "separate" people or we are not his. We may differ as to the application of this principle but if we differ as to the truth of same, then tremendous harm will have come to us as a Church. After all, is not our separation found in the use of a standard for measuring our actions and thoughts? We must not think, act or be moved as is the world. Our standard is not the same. In England the metre is the standard measure for length. In America we use the yard. Were we to use the metre for measurement while still holding the "yard" standard there would be a constant discrepancy in our findings. Our "separateness" must be found in the standard by which we measure our conduct. We seemingly, have interchanged the two measuring sticks until we have largely lost any definite sense of positive findings. What I

(Continued on page 16)

Studies in the Book of Revelation

By R. I. Humbert

Study Number Five

In our former study we saw Christ in the midst of the candlesticks and holding seven stars in his hand. The candlesticks represent the churches and evidently the stars represent the pastors. If this is true, what a picture we have. Christ walks in the midst of his churches but the pastors have a relation to him that the other members do not have. They are the jewels of his right hand. He holds them as a man holds that which is his highest treasure. These messages are directly to the pastors. They partake directly of Christ's authority and are responsible to him directly. A church with all power in the hands of the members is wrong for the pastor is its chief guardian, watchman and undershepherd.

The pastor is to hear for the church and is responsible to Christ himself. It is no uncommon thing in our day for a few people to tire of their pastor and begin to pick faults but Christ addressed these pastors as if the whole estate of the church was bound up in them and they alone are responsible. If a pastor keeps himself in his true sphere, to hear him is to hear Christ and no power on earth can disturb this relationship without insurrection to God.

The Pastor's Authority

"Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourself; for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy and not with grief; for that is unprofitable for you" (Heb. 13:17). That is, if the pastor is faithful and some member is disobedient, that member will be a loser in the day of rewards.

Where light is needed there must be darkness, and truly the only light this dark old world has is what it receives through the candlesticks (church) and the stars (pastors). The churches are light holders while the pastors are light givers.

The Terrible Glory

Some people trust in their own good works to make themselves acceptable with God but here we see that even the beloved disciple could not keep his poise in the presence of him whose dwelling is in "a light which no man can approach unto" (1 Tim. 6:16).

The human form robed in garments of honor and dignity, walking majestically in the midst of the golden candlesticks; his snow white hair reflecting the very purity of heaven; his eyes ablaze with divine intelligence; his feet aglow with the splendor of molten brass; the words of his mouth like a sharp sword, carrying their own execution with them; his right hand lit with starry jewels; the whole scene as glorious as the noon-day sun, undid John's strength and he fell as one dead.

Words of Comfort

But! Listen! What is that? Ah, it is the word of comfort again, "Fear Not." Others will cringe and cry out in terror when they behold this glory but to his own, it is "Fear Not." For they will be presented before the presence of that glory with exceeding joy" (Jude 24).

The church is to be sifted; saints are to be crowned; thrones are to be set; seals are to be broken; the anti-christ is to overrun the earth; peace is to be taken from humanity; famine and pestilence are to take their fearful toll of human life; trumpets are to be blown; heaven and earth are to be affected; the bottomless pit is to be opened; the hoards of hell are to overrun the earth; vials of God's wrath are to be poured out upon a blaspheming humanity; waters will turn to blood; the fowls will be gathered to the great supper of God Almighty and gorge themselves with the flesh of kings and mighty men, rich men and poor men, bondmen and free; terrible things are just ahead but, Fear Not little flock, Fear Not. I have conquered your enemy, Death, and am alive for evermore "and have the keys of hell (hades) and of death."

Death a Conquered Foe

Before the cross, the righteous dead went to the Paradise side of hades (the abode of the dead) and were kept captives until Christ, through his death, overcame Satan and snatching the keys he unlocked the Paradise side of hades, preached deliverance to the captives and ascended leading them (the righteous dead) with him to the third heaven. (Heb. 2:14; Luke 4:18; Eph. 4:8; 2 Cor. 12).

The gates of Hades will not prevail (or close upon) a Christian for our Lord has the keys. A Christian is absent from the body and immediately present with the Lord.

Martinsburg, Pennsylvania.

---

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

---

NO STRADDLING

The Gospel Messenger carries the following item:

There is no straddling of the issue, much less a wet plank, in the rules which the Blue Motor Coach Lines publish for the information of passengers. In part, No. 10 reads as follows: "For the benefit of its passengers the company reserves the right to refuse or terminate conveyance to anyone whose conduct is improper or obnoxious through the use of profane language or intoxicants."

We need political parties and enforcement officers with that kind of courage. And we believe they would find it profitable, too. More people are decent than otherwise.

THE BIBLE IN SPAIN

From the Quarterly Review of the New York Bible Society we take an interesting item concerning demand for Bibles in Spain:

The following article was recently handed to us by the American representative of a large Bible publishing house in Scotland:

"Since the Spanish Republic declared for religious freedom, Spaniards have taken to reading the Bible (says Reuter's Madrid Correspondent).

"So many packets of Bibles now reach Madrid from Britain that the small handcart in which they were carried from the local station to the offices of the Bible Society has had to be replaced by a motor-van. The figures of 190,544 Bibles and New Testaments sold in 1931 as compared with 130,554 sold in 1930, clearly show the considerable increase in sales.

"Two of Spain's present Cabinet Ministers, it seems, were educated in Protestant schools, and the Republican Government is more favorable toward spreading the use of the Bible.

"Learning that the film 'Ben-Hur' was being shown in Mollet, a colporteur rushed to the village with a big stock of Bibles and took his stand outside the door of the local cinema. Everyone of his copies was sold."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

THE POPULATION OF THE WORLD

Though there are yet vast stretches of land entirely unoccupied, the population of the world is steadily gaining, which indicates that some time the inhabitants will jostle each other very badly. The Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C., from a study of the statistics, supplied by 103 countries, finds that approximately 2,000,000,000 people live on the earth now. That gives thirty-nine and two-tenths persons for every square mile of land surface. It might also indicate that the race is not as old as some historians believe. Does it not also suggest that the question of how to get enough to eat will sometime become acute? Perhaps after all that questions of what to eat, how and how much are bigger than most scientific themes. It is indicated that this world census compilation is the first actual one of the kind ever undertaken.—The Christian Evangelist.

A GROWING INTEREST IN PREACHING

One of the best signs of the times is a growing interest in preaching. This is seen in several ways. One is the unfavorable criticism upon preachers. A prominent man in the East said, "Preachers talk too much." The prominent citizen of course felt the prick of the barbed arrow under his skin. Many today are saying the preacher ought to refrain from preaching politics. That, of course, is only "seasonal interest" as the railroad people say. It comes about every four years at presidential elections and from politicians or their friends who feel that throwing the light on their party doctrines would be embarrassing. Another good sign is that the preachers themselves are taking their pulpits more seriously. When that really comes to pass fully we can look out for a great fire in the pulpit. They tell us also that attendance at church is increasing and that attention is better, both of which are signs of the things of the gospel. These are great signs, shining like the morning star. The better the preaching the better the people.—The Christian Evangelist.

WAR AND GREED AS CAUSES OF DEPRESSION

"Child of war and greed"—this was the designation of the depression by Prof. Clair Wilcox, Swarthmore economist. "If the war is responsible for initiating the depression, America's international economic policy has been chiefly responsible for its duration and intensity," he declared. "If we would offer to reduce our arms, cancel the debts owed us, and reduce our tariffs, we could easily persuade the other major powers to cut tariffs and armaments and abolish reparations. For every dollar of debt that we insist on getting (and don't), we are losing $100 a year."

Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver, Harvard economist, ridiculed those who argue that we might end the depression by legalizing beer. "They do not point to England, Germany, Austria, or any other beer-using country as an illustration of the prosperity which beer is supposed to bring. They do not show how people can buy more beer without buying fewer things, or how it will help other industries to have the people's spending money diverted to the drink trade."—The Christian Century.

Carriion-minded People and How Made

(Continued from page 4)

of school children? How can we expect children to grow up pure and strong when evil suggestions are being daily offered through the movies, the dance and improper pictures and magazines and newspaper recitals. In a thousand ways the young lives growing into manhood and womanhood are being made carriion-minded by the miserably ill-suggestive and outright vicious materials that we are forcing upon plastic brains. No, movies and magazines are not merely satisfying the carriion-mindedness of people, they are making people with that kind of tastes. No tastes are so uncontrollable and willing to pay so high a price to be satisfied as the vicious; the creation of that kind of public taste is profitable to the interests that feed them.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Ecclesiastes

The book of Ecclesiastes is one of the strangest books of the entire Hebrew Bible. To the casual reader it seems a bundle of absolute contradictions, but to the spiritual man it is only a rehearsal of the collective experiences of the natural man's life. It is not surprising to witness men like Voltaire and Volney embracing its counsels, or even to learn that Schopenhauer and Thomas Hardy, two chief pessimists of all the pessimists, found delightful reading within its pages. It is a book of pessimism—the product of natural thinking, natural feelings, and natural living.

The Author

The writer has certain convictions concerning the writer of this book. He could not have been the robust and vigorous David, nor his wife, for neither of them had nervous prostration brought on by being labeled geniuses in their youth; neither of them had time to dissipate enough to have jaded sensibilities or even melancholic dispositions, a condition which rendered them unable to ask foolish questions of themselves. But Solomon, their son, is a strong applicant for the authorship of the book. The author had to be a wise man who investigated everything "under the sun" and endeavored to seek happiness and satisfaction in the world without God. This Solomon did and the book seems to be an autobiography of his experiences during the period in which he neglected the God "above the sun."

Jesus on one occasion said: "Whoso drinketh of this water shall thirst again." This book is one grand and extended comment on the foregoing words of the Savior. The woman to whom the immortal sentence was spoken tried less husbands than Solomon did wives, and both found little happiness in life. It was only when she saw the Perfect Man that the fountains of her spirit were opened and her soul was refreshed.

What Is Revealed

A cursory examination of the contents of Ecclesiastes reveals that the words "under the sun" occur nearly thirty times; "vanity" occurs thirty-seven times; "upon the earth" occurs seven times; "under the heaven" occurs three times; nearly forty times does the Spirit of God name the earth and the things pertaining to it, and only in the last chapter does the author get "above the sun."

Obviously, life viewed apart from God is the real secret of the book. It is thus an insoluble problem. It is a mighty experiment that is found to result in direful disaster. Note that the "Preacher" "Assembler" or "Debater" tries science and wisdom and philosophy and pleasure and materialism and fatalism and deism and religion minus God and wealth and morality. All these do not make him happy. He concludes, "All is vanity." Verily! The world apart from God cannot meet man's need.

Scientific Facts

Dr. A. T. Panson, a contemporary Bible teacher with Dwight L. Moody, finds things of scientific interest in this book: "There is a danger" he warns "in pressing the words in the Bible into a positive announcement of scientific fact, so marvellous are some of these correspondencies. But it is certainly a curious fact that Solomon should use language entirely consistent with discoveries as evaporation and storm currents (1:6, 7). Some have boldly said that Redfield's theory of storms is here explicitly stated. Without taking such ground, we ask, who taught Solomon to use terms that readily accommodate facts that the movements of the winds which seem to be so lawless and uncertain are ruled by laws as positive as those which rule the growth of the plant; and that by evaporation, the waters that fall on the earth are continually rising again, so that the sea never overflows!"

Continuing the interesting expositor writes: "12:6 is a poetic description of death. How that the 'silver cord' describes the spinal marrow, the 'golden bowl' the basin which holds the brain, the "pitcher" the lungs, and the "wheel" the heart. Without claiming that Solomon was inspired to foretell the circulation of the blood, twenty-six centuries before Harvey announced it, is it not remarkable that the language he uses exactly suits the fact—a wheel pumping up through one pipe to discharge through another?"

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Solomon. Chap. 1:1.
2. When and Where Written. Around 1000 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Addressed. To Israel.
4. Object or Purpose. To show the futility of seeking happiness and satisfaction outside of God on the earth.
5. Authenticity. It is supposed that Solomon wrote the book of Ecclesiastes in his old age.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

Theme: "All is Vanity" or "The Vanity of Materialism."

1. The Theme Stated. 1:1-3.
2. The Theme Developed. 1:4-3:22.
3. The Theme Elaborated. 4:1-10:20.
4. The Theme Concluded. 11:1-12:14.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

To Martin Luther we owe the sub-title of this book, namely, "The Preacher." This to the mind of the writer is a misleading rendition. Dr. Plumptre has argued at great length in favor of another translation of the Hebrew word Kohleth and allows it to signify "The Debater." This view permits us to believe that we do not have essentially a sermon here, a mere teaching, but rather a discussion. A general proposition is stated in the beginning of the argument and is fortified with proof colossal. Then he gives a corrective for his expostulations, and concludes that life lived under God is not mere emptiness, nothingness, vanity, or vapor.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK.

1. Key Words. Vanity, Under the Sun, etc.
2. Key Verses. 2:11; 3:1-8; 5:1; 10:1; 11:1; 12:1, 13, 14.
3. Key Chapters. 12 and 11.
4. Key Ideas. Life's key is an enthroned God. Life's unhappiness consists in a dethroned Jehovah.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The book of Ecclesiastes is a revelation of and yet a warning against the life lived in a purely natural way. "It is the mirror of man under the sun held up by the Wisest of men, and its last and best Conclusion is still that of the natural man," so Dr. W. J. Erdman avers. It contains admonitions against the Epicurean and mud philosophies of the centuries:

"What is man

If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more."

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Christ is not seen directly in Ecclesiastes. Absolute New Testament quotations from this writing are not to be found and the allusions are of rather doubtful application. When we compare chapter two with Romans seven, however, we see nothing but failure in the human "I" or ego. In Solomon's writing it is used thirty-six times. When the little "I" of human experience is submerged and glorified in the big "I" of God and Christ, (both in the Old and New Testaments), then we begin to understand something of the abject wretchedness of the materialists and pessimists. Read Romans eight where Paul looks at Christ. Then note the change. The little self is lost in the Greater Self, and "no condemnation" exists, and we become "more than conquerors" in him. Christ is "greater than Solomon."

VII. THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

1. Where man ends God begins.
2. "The just shall live by faith." "By the deeds of the law shall flesh be justified in the sight of God."
3. The natural men of all ages count the Gospel "foolishness": Assyrians, Persians, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, Europeans, Americans, etc.
4. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart,
And lean not upon thine own understanding.
In all thy ways acknowledge him,
And he shall direct thy paths."

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Need of the Church Today

By the Rev. Charles L. Goodell, D. D., New York

If one were sailing leisurely over a smooth sea, resting at his ease in a cushioned deck chair on the deck of the Corsair, or amid the elegance of any other multi-millionaire's yacht, and some ocean steamer should come along and the Captain cry frantically, "Dive into the sea and we will pick you up!" one would probably answer, "Thank you, but I am very comfortable where I am, and see no reason to risk life or limb or clothes in such an episode." If, on the other hand, you had been drifting for days clinging to a slippery mast, famished and thirsty, likely to drop at any moment into the buffeting sea, you would use every power of your feeble breath to claim attention of the passing ship that you might yet be saved.

If, as some tell us, the sense of sin as well as the fact of it, has disappeared, and sin itself is only righteousness in the making; that good men are not as good as they think they are, and the bad men are not as bad as they might be, there seems little reason why one should concern himself about him of whom it was said, "His name shall be called Jesus for he shall save his people from their sins."

Were the old affirmations which were thundered from the pulpits in our boyhood false alarms? We do not hear as much as we once did from our preachers concerning the dread reality of sin. Indeed Matthew Arnold years ago took Emerson to task because he paid little attention to that great fact in human life, which, by whatever name you call it, is the mightiest thing in moving human life and effort. But if the pulpit has ceased to dwell upon sin, its place has been taken by other agencies which one would think might be less seriously concerned. Scientists have been showing us that sin is an ancient heritage which must be fought by tooth and nail. One so-called "modernist" has affirmed that "novelists have written no great novel that does not swirl around some central sin." And now the psychologists dig down into the unremembered thoughts of men to bring into the light the origins of our spiritual miseries in frustrated and suppressed desire.

We do not need artificially to conjure up a sense of sin. All we need is to open our eyes to facts. Since sin is the most ubiquitous thing in the universe and has lost none of its power or venom since Cain saw it crouching like a wild beast at his door; since Oedipus and Samson realized the ruin it wrought, and since the last man who sinned against "the nature of things," which is another name for God, cried out, "Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death," it would rather look as though the biggest thing with which the Church should concern itself would be the eradication of this terrific catastrophe and the salvation of those who are its victims.

Men are not satisfied with platitudes. Cold theologies are not enough. Jesus said,

"The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." And it is for that Spirit and Life that people are waiting.

In his latest book, "Pathways to Certainty," Professor William Adams Brown has a chapter on "The Christian Way of Dealing with Sin." He says, "By its success in dealing with evil every religion must in the last analysis be judged. The great religions have been religions of redemption. It is in the cross that Christians of every age have found the ground of their brightest hope, for in the cross they have seen God dealing with evil and overcoming it."

The Evangel of Christ

The Evangel of the Son of God has long been proclaimed to the world. It is the Good News of salvation from sin and, as good news, it is as true now as it ever was. It is a comfort to know that amid all human mutations there are great abiding facts and experiences which never change. Over against a religion that some men strive night and day to bring "up-to-date," there is another Religion that is changeless as its Author, Who is "the same yesterday, today and forever." The same power that conquered sin in Caesar's time conquers it now. The evangelism of Jesus Christ that bears fruit in changed lives. Those persistent convictions which have recurred from age to age mark its evangel as a vital experience.

We need to realize that the word Evangelism connotes something more than an emotional experience. Home training, Christian education—all that help make character—are a part of evangelism.

We talk about "applied religion." The first thing is to have some religion that can be applied. It is the changed heart that makes the changed life. It is the life from above which transforms the life which is "of the earth earthy," and makes it something divine and mighty for good. This is the message which must go forth from the pulpit. There are many things which ministers are discussing today which are interesting from a speculative standpoint but there is nothing at the end of them. The preacher marches up the hill and then marches down again, but there is no victory. There is no thrilling sense of spiritual triumph. There is no awakening of such impulses as moved out from the day of Pentecost until the whole world felt their power and Rome itself gave way before a force which she did not understand and which she could not overthrow.

We have been talking about truth but in academic fashion. The only kind of truth that amounts to anything is truth which lays hold upon the soul. That is something more than a speculation. It is a certainty and the world today is seeking religious certainty. When the man who knows most does the least, every sensible man says that, if necessary, he would better know less and do more. Because we have not made truth evangelistic, because life is not struck through and dripping with spiritual power, we are lamenting the dearth of conversions in America, the paucity of both numerical and spiritual results. What is true in America is true around the world. It is only where the missionary accent is thrilling with the same power that the first missionaries knew that dark continents are enlightened and darkened souls behold him Who is the Light of the world. When it comes to mystic speculation, the religionists of the East are more than our match. In the midst of fears and questionings which fairly stagger the world, shall we fail to bring forth that blessed evangel of light and life which Jesus said would meet every human need and overthrow evils which had smitten the world for ages with a blasting force?

The Message of the Pulpit

We must recast the message of the pulpit, and recast the life of the churches, if we are to lead our generation up to God. In the last few months I have seen a score of churches whose cost was in the aggregate more than a million dollars each. What is the value of ecclesiastical architecture if there is within it no Shekinah, if the fires upon those altars have gone out and men stand shivering in doubt and fear, whereas, by humbler altars, their fathers glowed with warmth in the triumphs of faith? When marble stands in the way of men, the marble must go. When form has become powerless, forms must go to the scrap heap.

We pass across England, we see the ruin of a stately cathedral. Its towers are crumbling, its roof has fallen in, its walls are mossgrown, and its rose window is emptied of beauty and color. Near by is a humble chapel. Its structure breaks all the laws of architecture and, as a building, it ministers to aesthetic mortification instead of satisfaction, but on its homely altars spiritual fires are ablaze; humble men and women on their knees catch there a new inspiration and from thence they go out to face the cares and denials and sorrows of life and to conquer them through a wisdom

(Continued on page 14)

REPORT OF THE TREASURER OF THE NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH FOR THE YEAR ENDING JULY 31, 1932

On hand August 1, 1931:

A. B. and Sav. Co. ....	$ 85.42
A. B. and L. Co. ....	4,977.37
Notes .....	600.00

Receipts:

White Gifts .....	$2 186.13
Interest .....	244.46
Other receipts .....	80.50

Total .....

Expenditures:

Seminary of Ashland College ...	$2,250.00
Foreign Board Educational Project .....	300.00
Shipshewana Y. P. Camp Conf. ....	161.65
S. S. Ass'n. Promotional work. ....	138.58
International Council (2 years) ..	200.00
Secretarial work .....	96.35
Printing .....	134.50
Books .....	82.10
Office Supplies and Miscellaneous ..	23.99

Total .....

Balance on Hand July 31, 1932:

A. B. & L. Co. ....	$4,101.80
A. B. & S. Co. ....	84.21

Notes .....	600.00
	$4,786.71
Total .....	$8,173.88
Resources August 1, 1931:
On Deposit .....	$5,062.79
Notes .....	600.00
Total .....	$5,662.79
Resources August 1, 1932:
On Deposit .....	$4,186.71
Notes .....	600.00
Total .....	$4,786.71
Net Loss for Year .....	$ 876.08
	Respectfully submitted,
	MILTON P. PUTERBAUGH,
	Treasurer.

I have examined the accounts as they appear on this statement and in my opinion they reflect the true financial condition of the Association. Signed.

R. A. HAZEN.

Date, August 18, 1932.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

ISRAEL JOURNEYING TOWARD CANAAN

Lesson Text: Num. 10:11-13, 29-36; Golden Text: Num. 10:29

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Israel Journeying Toward Canaan. Num. 10:11-13, 29-36

It would be well if we could always remember that we, like the Israelites, are but pilgrims passing through this land to another and better land which has been promised to us. On our journey we will meet many like Hobab, to whom we can offer the greatest of all blessings, and we should not fail to do this. If, as in the case of Hobab, the offered blessing does not win them, we should challenge them to service and perhaps they will then accompany us. Let us pray for wisdom that we may so present God's message to others that they must come with us, to be blessed themselves and to be a blessing to us and to others.

TUESDAY

Israel Divinely Led. Neh. 9:9-15

The Levites, in this eloquent prayer of praise, referred to the way in which God had so evidently led his people through the wilderness. They had but to follow where the pillar of cloud and of fire led the way. When God leads we need fear no obstacles; he led them through the Red Sea! How earnestly we should pray that God will make known his will unto us (John 7:17), and that he will give us grace and courage to follow whithersoever he leads, however impossible the way may seem!

WEDNESDAY

Israel and God's Providence. Deut. 11:1-7
Many things had "happened" to the Israelites as they journeyed on to Canaan. These verses refer to just a few of those "happenings," but state positively that they were "acts of the Lord." Many of the happenings in our own lives make us pause from time to time, and wonder; but too often we fail to see in them the very hand of God. We should be more sensitive to the providence of the God who notes even the sparrow's fall, more grateful to him for the loving care with which he watches over us every day of our lives. Should he withdraw his care for a single day, what might not "happen!"

THURSDAY

Israel Warned. Deut. 8:11-20

What an exact picture these verses present of the happenings in the earth today! Up to the days of '29, when prosperity was everywhere and even the charwomen were making fortunes in Wall Street; when we had eaten and were full; when our silver and gold and all that we had were multiplied, we had not yet entirely forgotten him who gave the power to get wealth. But when we forgot him whose hand holdeth all things, and trusted in the multiplicity of things, disaster befell. Even yet, our country might find grace if she would return unto the "God We Trust." Let us pray that she may learn from the fate of other nations and heed God's warning.

FRIDAY

Israel's Savior. Isa. 63:7-14

We do not read the many beautiful passages of Isaiah nearly as often as we should. There are few passages more filled with encouragement and promise than verses 7 to 9. He was indeed a mighty Savior to them, and best of all, he saves today, and will be as mighty a Savior to us! But let us not forget that he may also become an enemy even to those he has saved. May we in no way rebel against so wonderful a Savior!

SATURDAY

God's Hand in History. Deut. 32:7-12

Volumes might be written on such a subject. It was God who, in the beginning set the bounds of the various peoples and nations (v. 8); it was God who continued to rule over his world; who led Israel from the wilderness into the promised land and dispossessed other nations that he might find a home for them. It was not favoritism that led God to do such things, but rather righteous judgment and reward. God's hand may be seen large in the history of nations today, and we look for the soon coming of the Lord to set things right in a world that has so largely forgotten him. What a "blessed hope!"

SUNDAY

God Our Protector. Ps. 34:1-8

This psalm of David might well have been a hymn of praise by the Israelites for all the mighty deeds and gracious blessings that God had bestowed upon them on their journey through the wilderness. It might as appropriately be our own song of thanksgiving. We sometimes say we do not how to pray; we might well learn from such passages as this. The Lord has delivered us; let us exalt his name together!

E. M. RIDOLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuSable Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	--

Spiritual Coins and Counterfeits

By C. D. Whitmer

XVI—"Sanctity vs. Sanctimony"

"He was the holiest man I ever knew. Why, I never saw him laugh in my life." So said a Christian minister once regarding a friend who had passed away. "Holy because he never laughed!" What a notion. More likely he had a guilty conscience. There is nothing in this world that will take the laugh out of a man like conscious sin, and there is nothing like genuine holiness to put the laugh into a man. True, he may not wear a perpetual hyena-grin, but his face will continually glow with heavenly joy.

Yet there are not a few Christians who gauge a man's spiritual condition wholly by the length of his face, and who think dyspeptics the only fit subjects for canonization. Where do they get this idea? Not from the Bible surely. Every picture of sainthood in the whole Bible gives the lie to such a theory.

Take a typical Old Testament saint—David for example. Anything melancholy or dyspeptic about him? Never, except when he fell into sin. Watch him on that most profoundly religious occasion when the Ark of the Covenant is being brought up to its permanent home in Jerusalem. See him as he leads the great procession, dancing and prancing while he sings those words of praise, joy, the inspiring motive of his act.

Happy as a boy just out of school. That was joy, overflowing, irrepressible. It was genuine sanctity. Sanctimonious Michal peeps through the shutters of her chamber window and is shocked. But God was not shocked.

Read the Psalms, those fountains of spiritual helpfulness. They are dreadfully unconventional in their tone and make up. David shouts, "Praise the Lord!" as often as a Methodist in a camp meeting. There is nothing sanctimonious in the entire book. Yet it has been the inspiration of truest Sainthood for many centuries.

Now turn to the New Testament and look at St. Paul. You couldn't picture him with a long face if you tried. The man who could write that epistle to the Philippians from amid the trials of a Roman prison, saying, "Rejoice in the Lord," half a dozen times in every chapter, must have been a pretty jubilant sort of a saint. He must have had a face that would have been attractive even to a wide awake boy.

No, No; sanctity does not imply a long face and a solemn demeanor. That is Sanctimony. True sainthood is just as appropriate to the exuberant vitality of youth as to the quieter habits of age. It reveals itself more often in smiles and laughter, than in sighs and tears. It enriches human joy no less than it tempers human sorrow.

Sanctimony is a thin gilding that covers base metal. Sanctity is the pure gold of the heavenly kingdom, and the counterfeit is always struggling to usurp the place of the true. When sanctity dances and sings before the Lord, sanctimony prepares a curtain lecture in its chamber. When sanctity shouts "Hosanna!" to the world's Redeemer, sanctimony, horror stricken, cries "Master, rebuke the disciples!" And he who is the embodiment of perfect Sanctity replies: "If these should hold their peace, the very stones would cry out."

IMPROVING THE SOCIETY'S MUSIC

By Harold Etling, Music Superintendent of the Ohio Christian Endeavor Union

Goal: A song-leader in every Christian Endeavor Society

It has been said that prayer is the very essence of worship. Young people's leaders must often begin where parents should have started twelve or thirteen years before, namely to help young people to understand that they live in a friendly world, that the heart of God is most wonderfully kind, and that the deep desires of the soul may be confidently expressed to him with whom the young may have a joyful fellowship. Prayer will thus come to mean listening and watching for God as much as it means speaking to him. Many Christians of the young people's groups are embarrassed when asked to pray in public, and so we are suggesting that perhaps some of this embarrassment could be overcome with prayer hymns.

Many of our greatest hymns are fervent prayers. So, too, with great musical compositions. A committee of young people (the music committee), with some music student as adviser, might undertake a study of the hymns contained in the hymnal, listing those which have outstanding prayer values such as joyful praise, deep penitence, quiet waiting before God.

A second committee may study the words of the hymns in a standard hymnal, selecting those that may be used instead of extemporaneous prayers. Such classifications as the following could probably be made: Gratitude loyalty to Jesus, penitence, concern for social justice. Let us consider "O Master, let me walk with thee." What formal prayers excels the worth of this beautiful hymn? When such use is to be made of hymns, the leader in a very few carefully chosen words should secure the prayerful interest of the group. As a variation the hymn may be read in unison instead of being sung. Vocal solos, duets, and quartettes are sometimes effective in inducing personal prayer.

Too often the music in a Christian Endeavor meeting does not have enough consideration by the music committee. The members of this committee should either suggest the type of music desired or name specifically the composition wanted. Do not just say, "Will you play something or sing something Sunday night?" If you ask some one to take part in your program of music, tell him the subject of your evening's discussion.

We are suggesting as another prayer hymn one written by the beloved Fanny J. Crosby. Get your hymn book and read the words of "Pass me not." The story is told of an earnest Christian pastor with anxiety for a young man of his congregation that was causing much disturbance in the class of young men. Meeting him one day, the pastor urged the young man to attend a Christian Endeavor meeting and give himself for Christ and the church. The young man promised, and, true to his promise, several weeks later came to a meeting. During the meeting he asked that this beautiful hymn, "Pass me not," be sung. At the conclusion of the singing he stood up and told the story of his conversion. One evening, as the boat on which he was working passed another boat, he heard a group singing, "While on others thou art calling, do not pass me by." He wondered what would happen if the Lord should pass him by. Then and there he knelt in prayer, and dedicated his life to our Master.

Let us use this as a prayer hymn in our meetings for one month, and urge every one to learn it.—C. E. World.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Jungle Tales

By Mrs. Orville D. Jobson

(Seventh of a series of African Folk Stories collected by Mrs. Orville D. Jobson, missionary to French Equatorial Africa, and published in The Evangelist at intervals for the special benefit of our young readers.—EDITOR.)

A certain little bat was out flying one day and he came to a place where birds were busy at work. "O little bat, come help us work," they called to him.

"And why should I work with you?" asked the bat. "I am not a bird, look at my teeth. I am a rat." And he went on his way. Presently he came to a place where there were rats busy at work. "O little bat, come help us work," they called to him.

"And why should I work with you?" asked the bat. "Am I a rat? Look at my wings. Do you not see me flying? Indeed I am not a rat. I am a bird and he went on his way.

Another day he went out flying and found the birds busily eating. He was hungry and he cried, "O little birds, let me come and eat with you." "Oho!" twittered the birds, "are you a bird? No indeed, look at your teeth; you are a rat. Go therefore and eat where the rats are eating." So he left the birds and went to find the rats.

"O little rats," he cried, "I am hungry. Let me come and eat with you." "No indeed," cried the rats. "You are not a rat. Look at your wings! You are a bird, you can not eat with us."

So the bat went on his way pondering over this lesson.

* * * *

Once upon a time the tortoise built himself a village. But the hippo came and destroyed it. Again the tortoise built a village but this time the elephant came and destroyed it. He tried again and rebuilt the village but the hippo came again and destroyed it. Then said the tortoise, "This is too much! I am sick and tired of building!"

So he took a large wire cable and went to find the hippo in his home on the river. "Hello, Mr. Hippo," he said, "I have come to invite you to a pulling test. You will pull one end of this cable and I will pull the other and we will see who is the stronger."

"All right," said the hippo, "I agree. We will have the contest early tomorrow morning."

Then the tortoise went to the town of the elephant and said, "Mr. Elephant you have made me enough trouble and I am tired of rebuilding my town. Let us have a contest. You pull on one end of the cable and I will pull on the other and we will see who is the stronger."

"Agreed," said the elephant, "we will meet tomorrow morning early."

At dawn the next day the tortoise went to the hippo and said, "Now friend hippo, tie this cable tight around your body. Then I will go down the river and when you feel me pulling a little then you begin to pull with all your might, and we will see who will pull the harder."

Then the tortoise went and hid in the bank at a place half way between the elephant and hippo, and started to pull gently in both directions. The hippo felt the cable grow tight. "So the tortoise is beginning to pull," he exclaimed, and he snorted and puffed and pulled with all his might. At the other end of the cable the elephant felt the tug, and said, "So the tortoise is beginning to pull," and he began to bellow and trumpet and pull with all his might.

"I never dreamed the tortoise was so strong," sputtered the hippo; while at the other end the elephant was gasping, "Who ever would have thought that the tortoise was so strong!" And all the while the tortoise was peeping from his hiding place between the two, watching the cable strain and twist.

The fight went on. The morning wore away, and when the day was done both the hippo and the elephant were dead from sheer exhaustion, and the tortoise ran away and built his town.

The Call

By Nancy Shank, in Christian Monitor

A consideration of "the call" presents five questions: What is a call? Why have a call? Who are called? When? How?

What Is a Call?

A call is a summons, a bidding, a divine prompting to special service or duty. Calls in general, issue from all avenues of activity—from the country, church, school and home,—soliciting workers for various kinds of service. The call that comes to our minds just now, issues from God, bidding his own "Go;" it re-echoes from the heathen, summoning "come."

We think of a call as being distinguished from an impression. Impressions are numerous, they come and go, they may be from below as well as from above. Every impression from above has upon it the Divine stamp, meaning that all God-given impressions are Scriptural, right, providential, and reasonable. Hence, the impression that comes to the heart needs to be carefully analyzed and its source determined. If from God it will grip the heart and refuse to be cast off or laid aside; it will settle into a deep conviction, a persistent consciousness of God's will for us personally.

A call, therefore, is a vision of the need of souls, with a definite assurance that God bids me go to their rescue. Which is an honor, so the poet says,

"O matchless honor all unsought,
High privilege surpassing thought,
That thou shouldst call me, Lord to be Linked in work—fellowship with thee."

Why Have a Call?

The condition of souls in heathen lands requires it. The poet again expresses the thought;

"They are waiting in their sadness,
They are helpless in their pain,
For the idols they have fashioned Cannot answer them again;
They are begging for a teacher,
Their old customs laid aside,
Is it nothing to you, Christian
That the doors are open wide?"

Some one has said that Gen. 1:2 well describes the spiritual condition of the heathen—"And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep"—for they surely are in spiritual darkness. Many of them have no knowledge of the Savior, they cannot realize the Father's love, they live and die in their sins.

Does anyone still ask why God sends his ambassadors to represent him in many places, or why we say conditions in heathen lands require a call? There is yet another reason for a call—This comes from the standpoint of the workers themselves, the nature of the tests met in all places, but especially those of the foreign land, makes a definite call from God a necessity. There are difficulties of almost every kind, there are manifold hindrances from Satan, and therefore a positive assurance of being in our divinely appointed place is necessary,—for it is then that the soul may rest in him, knowing the Father is allowing only what is best.

As a full and settled experience of salvation is needful to the one who would resist the doubts of the enemy just so is this settled conviction of God's call necessary to one who would stand firm in the hour of reverses, of disappointments, of sickness, or loss of loved ones: it becomes the steady influence which keeps one in the path of duty.

Who Are Called?

Whom does the Lord send forth? One glance at those who have been called shows us the class of laborers that are of the most service to the Master in his vineyard. David was called from tending the sheep. Elijah was plowing when Elijah cast his mantle upon him; Peter and Andrew were fishing.

God calls the active into his service. Each has his own sphere of action that needs undivided attention. There are many who have more concern about what others should do, as Peter after he had received his commission, "Lord, and what shall this man do," in reference to John. Even so temptation lurks in the path that curiosity travels. Jesus knows human nature; how ready one is to evade responsibility because of what others may or may not do, and how easily one becomes dissatisfied with one's own task by envying the opportunity of others. Therefore the stern reply of the Master "What is that to thee." There is a sense in which it is good advice to mind one's own affairs. Let us never look with envious eyes upon the call of others, or try to put the responsibility of our own on someone else. "Oh, may it all my powers engage to do my Master's will!"

God calls individuals having usable talents, then works through them to accomplish his purpose. He not only calls from all phases of work but also for all phases, using those he calls according to their gifts.

If, however, one who realizes that God's call is upon his heart, can recognize no special talent in his life, he should not listen to the devil's suggestion that he will be of no use in the Master's vineyard for God sees the end from the beginning and he knows how he can use the instrument he has set aside for himself.

When

The When of God's call is closely connected with the Who and is about as varied. It takes but a brief search into this question to reveal the fact that his call has been received at many different periods of life. Truly our God moves in mysterious ways in calling his children into his service.

In our recent studies of Jeremiah we remember that God ordained him a prophet even before his birth. Samuel was definitely called when but a child. Paul was called when on the road to Damascus. These and many other such examples might be given to show that God marvelously calls his workers. But how about now?

When are we called? Our God is never limited in the time of a call. As in olden times, so it is now, there is a great difference in the time of calls received. He may speak when in secret communion with him, he may speak when about one's or

(Continued on page 14)

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Carleton, Nebraska.

Dear Brother Baer:

I have just finished reading the Evangelist under date of August 13th. I have often felt that one issue was well worth the price of a year's subscription. Brother Cashman's address, on "Standards of Progress for the Brethren Church" just at this time and under present conditions of our church makes me feel that it is worth still more to me. I am glad it was ordered published and wish it could be got into pamphlet form.

It is no trouble to tune in and listen to a very able speaker of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and I have also observed what some of our preachers are doing along that line, and the progress that is being made by those churches for Brethrenism. I fail to see how we can have any real progress by being silent on that unique Gospel truth that is the very foundation of all progress that has been made in the past two centuries of the Brethren Church. When we fail to teach and to live those ordinances progress stops.

We should join hands with the Church of the Brethren whenever distance will permit. Doctrinal sermons are what both branches of the Brethren church need most of all. If our ordinances mean nothing in the plan of salvation, we should know it. If they do, we should never be placed in a position where it would not be expedient to preach or teach them.

As long as we retain teachers in our Sunday school who do not attend our communion services because they or members of their family do not believe in feet washing, and they tell you so, there is something wrong or lacking somewhere.

I was baptized fifty years ago. Since then by the loyalty of a host of friends we have seen our College, Publishing House, the Home made what they are. The success of these depends on our continued loyalty to Brethren principles. Are we going to lose our identity, or are we with Brother Cashman going to stand uncompromisingly on a verbally inspired Bible? Many churches have become weak and are struggling because they have wavered at this point.

E. E. LICHTY.

FLORA, INDIANA

Among some things that the average pastor seems to neglect is that of making regular reports to the Evangelist. We feel that it is time to give in part some account of the activities in this field. Since the last report the study of the Dispensations has been concluded. The Bible study class has been temporarily discontinued during the summer months. Mrs. Cecil Hendrix has been elected patroness of the Sisterhood girls to take the place of Mrs. Carl Flora, who resigned. The work is going along very well. The Quads, the young people's organization, is still active after more than a year since their organization. A special Mother's Day program was observed with profit to all who came. Not to be outdone, Father's Day was also observed later in the Sunday school. The Communion service showed an increase in attendance over the communion service of a year ago. We were asked by the American Legion to give the Memorial Address at the local cemetery, which we did without violating any Tunker principles. Thirty-five from this Sunday school and congregation attended the Northern Indiana Young People's Conference at Peru. Miss Esther Roskusi our Sunday School Superintendent, was elected Secretary. The regular Children's Day service was held with a splendid audience, as is usually customary for a service of this kind. The second Sunday in August has been set apart in the Sunday school for special recognition to the youth and is known as "Youths' Day." August and September, have been designated as Loyalty Months. The second quarter in Sunday school this year was a record breaker over a number of years. This present quarter, even though it is in the period in which the Summer slump is supposed to appear, bids fair to surpass the past one. The attendance this summer I am told is the best it has been over a period of time. The church attendance has also been good, and we have not sacrificed a single service this summer. Every church in Flora has dispensed with their night services with the exception of the Church of the Brethren and the First Brethren. Our folks went there a recent Sunday night and I brought the message to a large congregation. They were our guests the past Sunday night and their pastor, Rev. R. O. Shank, brought the message to a large audience. The harmony between the churches is commendable.

We are now looking forward to National Conference, though it seems we are too close for many to attend. Plans are now being made to entertain the Indiana State conference here the first week in October. Starting the tenth of the same month, Brother R. Paul Miller will be with us in an evangelistic campaign. The prospects are good for a splendid meeting. About the only matter that seems to be slow and the cause of considerable discussion is the matter of finances. We are handicapped considerably but are hopeful of the future. We are interested in the various reports from the different sections of the brotherhood. FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

ACCIDENT, MARYLAND

The undersigned held his last service with the good brethren at this place on Saturday evening, August 13. It was a communion service with forty-three surrounding the tables. At the beginning of this service four new members which had been baptized the same afternoon were received into the church.

This is a country church which does not receive pastoral attention except when the Terra Alta—Grafton, West Virginia, undershepherd can give them some extra time. It seemed the Lord's leading that each summer I should hold services of some kind for them, although never on a Sunday. Most of them were held Saturday evenings, and there was faithful attendance. This seemed to be an excellent opportunity to preach the Word.

Although this was what would be called "extra work", yet there were seventeen confessions of Christ, all becoming members of the church, during my three summers with them. This number is higher than the same for my two regular charges. We praise the Lord for this evidence of blessing, and ask your prayers for this group of Christians, and especially the new, "babes in Christ."

Yours in Christ,
L. E. LINDOWER.

THE CALL

(Continued from page 13)

dinary work. When God's call comes to a soul, that is his time and is the best time. It surely is a sad and serious condition, when one who knows God has called, refuses to respond or attempts to conceal the call.

As for a definite time when God will call an individual, it can no more be given than a definite manner of his work of grace in the heart. But that his vineyard requires workers we know assuredly. Happy then may we be, if our lives exemplify the statement concerning Abraham, "When he was called, he obeyed."

How

How is a call given, or received? This again reveals a variety of ways. Some have very distinct manifestations, God making evident his will in a vision, by voice, or in some other supernatural manner. Others receive their call more quietly and naturally. Because of the fact that an individual has had no wondrous manifestations does not prove he has had no call. However, we may rest assured, knowing that God does deal definitely with his children. No one need move out uncertainly, nor step before the Lord.

In considering therefore, the manner in which a call is given we must recognize that God's ways are above man's and that his dealings are divine. We know that he who gives peace and joy to the seeking soul, will also manifest his plan for that life in his own good time and way. Then how the call is given is almost lost sight of in the intense desire to be obedient to the heavenly vision.

Now we are made to think of the perplexities of the call.—The devil will hinder God's work wherever and whenever possible. God allows testings for the proving of his child. One of these perplexities is a closed door—closed because of health, financial circumstances, parents or friends. Another is a dimmed vision of God's call. These may confuse some who have been definitely called, and cause them to question "Have I a call?" Therefore it is well to keep clear before God, and move forward as he directs. Then when the way seems closed we may rest in knowing that God is all-powerful and that he will execute his purpose in spite of what seems to us insurmountable difficulties.

What more can be said then, but that every Christian has a call and carries an obligation to all non-Christians, which must be met,—by some in sympathy, love and prayer, others in the giving of their means, others by giving of their time. All are much needed both in the home and foreign fields.

Is our answer to the call "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" "Here am I, send me?" (Isa. 6:8).

Truly the poet must have experienced "the call" in order to express it as she has in the following,—

"As I pondered there came to me

A voice as from above;

It said to go—go out and serve

With spirit, faith and love.

A vision came—the sheep astray,

Hungry, athirst, and cold;

I hastened quick to bring them in

Unto the shepherd's fold.

I'm glad, so glad I listened

To that still voice so small;

Like those of old it leads me forth

To sound a victory call.

Yes, now I'll show his strength and power

And face new things to do.

Hark! listen close and you can hear

It's calling now for you."

Markham, Ontario.

GOOD AND PLEASANT

As the crowds walked together from many homes toward Jerusalem, they chanted this song, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." We confess to a longing for a cordial and confident unity with fellow-Christians. The older we grow, the more we dislike and shrink from a discord and disagreement with people. Like others, we have our prejudices, our likes and dislikes, which are usually without substantial basis. One instance taught us a lesson. For some reason we had a strange repulsion toward a certain person. We just could not abide him. We would have found it difficult to furnish a ground for our attitude which, we think, was reciprocated. Circumstances brought us to sit side by side at the same table for a considerable time. The result was that, in our heart, and we believe in his, an affectionate regard supplanted the spirit of animosity. Our pre-judgment was all wrong. Much divergence and contention are due to ignorance. This is particularly true in the church. Time and again we have had ill-feeling changed when we came to know a person more fully. It is impossible, indeed, to know everybody personally, but by the grace of Christ we may control our decision until we know more.

Ambition plays havoc with unity. "In honor preferring one another" is not practiced much by Christians, especially if they rise above the common level. A long time ago an elderly man of God who knew the church pretty well told us that he was amazed at the jealousy and bitterness between Christians of ability and real faith. If one does not seek the highest room for himself, he does seek it intensely for his "side." Most of us like honor and place and power, but really it is very fleeting and often brings more trouble than comfort. We doubt if any high seat in the church is worth making an enemy or hurting another to obtain.

Two cannot walk together comfortably unless they be agreed on some points. Some of us have decided views as to Christian doctrine and government. Others have different views, quite contrary to ours. This has the root of disunity, and if the difference be great enough, there will be a conflict. But even so, we can usually contend for a principle, and not cherish bitterness toward a person. In these days, when Christianity seems to have lost its power over vast numbers of people and stupendous forces are trying to blot out Christian belief and practice, it does appear to us that we must maintain unity in so far as it is possible. Find the points of agreement, and hold firmly to them, and let the world know the things upon which we are agreed.

Too often unity is broken by sharp practice and even false sayings or doings on one side or the other. Two persons perfectly fair with each other will come to agreement in spite of some divergence of view. We think this has always been the great cause of dissension among Christians. Most of us can get on with a perfectly honest person. Sometimes we are not fully conscious of our dissembling. How good and pleasant it is for us to cast out all that is unfair and untrue, and thereby find unity in integrity. There is such a thing as unity in diversity, but it is not possible, if one party is unduly ambitious or promotes that which maketh a lie.—The Presbyterian.

THE NEED OF THE CHURCH TODAY

(Continued from page 11)

and power greater than their own. The aesthetic may minister to the sense of beauty, but it ministers to the soul's development only when it is the shrine and mouthpiece of spiritual consecration.

Perhaps there was never a time when the ministry of America had a broader training in human wisdom. It is familiar with history, philosophy and theology; but our schools of the prophets must be the center of a spiritual devotion if they are to make mighty the messages of human wisdom. Our ministers must be something other than "pickers-up of philosophic trifles," or expert promoters and organizers and money getters. Is it not time for the prophetic note which only can unfold the glorious evangel?

Long ago an earnest prophet cried, "Woe is me for I am undone, because I am a man of unclean lips, and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts." When the prophet had seen that vision something was sure to happen. It was then that there came a touch of a live coal from off the altar and the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" It would mean the bringing in of a new day if from every manse and from every pulpit the cry of a new devotion should thrill the lips of every pastor—"Here am I, send me." It is such a commitment on the part of the ministry and laity that will bring us the glorious evangel which the Church so needs today.—The Missionary Review of the World.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE LAW OF THE MEADS AND THE PERSIANS

By Margaret T. Applegarth

*"A Persian fable says: One day
A wanderer found a piece of clay
So redolent of sweet perfume
Its odor scented all the room.
'What art thou was the quick demand,
Art thou some gem from Samarcand?
Or spikenard rare in rich disguise?
Or other costly merchandise?'
'Nay, I am but a piece of clay!'
'Then whence this wondrous sweetness, pray?'
'Friend, this the secret I disclose—
I have been dwelling with a rose!'"*

—Selected.

Now, of course, you are raising your eyebrows and smiling in a superior fashion: "It should be spelled Medes!" you are saying to yourself.

But those Medes lived long, long ago, in the dim distant past and these Meads live today in a very real present. There is Doctor Mead and Mrs. Mead; and Junior Mead. Especially Junior Mead. Because he turned out to be quite a hero, to his own surprise. It happened like this:

On a day like any other day Junior went into the courtyard of their home in Persia to play with the little Persian playmate who came every morning with a polite little bow, all because he felt the tremendous honor of having been selected from all the other boys in the town to spend four hours with the only white boy (in the whole world, as far as he knew! Certainly, he had never seen any other).

But although Junior waited for a long while patiently, and for an even longer while impatiently, no "Jar of Milk and Honey" appeared. (For that, if you please, was what the playmate's name meant in English!)

All this time there was the gate, Junior had watched it so eagerly that he went over to stand beside it. And when no small brown boy came through it, the first thing anyone knew one small white boy had darted outside that forbidden gate, hurrying secretly down two narrow lanes between dark houses, until he reached a certain doorway. It was like a dream to enter it and to call excitedly: "Jar of Milk and Honey, where are you?"

"Here!" came a strange weak voice. "Here," in bed! And presently Junior's eyes nearly popped out of his head as he saw the very strange sight of that brown head lying on seven loaves of flat bread.

"Is it a game?" asked Junior, laughing. "No, it's a medicine," sighed Jar of Milk and Honey.

"Medicine?" Junior repeated, and then, indeed, he looked severely at his playmate. And the playmate looked ashamed. "What kind of medicine do you call that? It's certainly not the Mead kind!"

"No, it's the Persian kind," sighed Jar of Milk and Honey. "You see, my mother says I have been bewitched. All on account of the sacred tree. I pulled off a branch of it to make a camel from it. How was I to remember it was a sacred tree, and that nobody dares to touch it? So when I became sick my mother said crossly that it was evil spirits, of course. She went right over and laid a sacrifice of meat in a little bowl in front of the tree. She tied calico on it, too—gay red calico, very jolly. All to put the spirits in a good humor. But, oh, what a pain they have given me. Here!" And he clapped his hand in a certain spot. "So I have slept on these seven loaves of bread in order that the evil spirits may enter the bread, then she will throw it out for the dogs to eat."

Junior looked at Jar of Milk and Honey severely. "What else have you done?"

"Well, she got a piece of paper with a verse from the sacred Koran written on it, and I had to chew it up and swallow it."

"Dear me!" said Junior solemnly. "I'd like to know what good it has done you to play with me day after day after day, you being the patient while I was the doctor. Didn't you realize I was doing everything right? Being a real Doctor Mead, just as my father is? Don't you think it would be fun if we kept on playing that I was doctor now?"

"I ache too much," sighed Jar of Milk and Honey feebly. "I ache terribly. I just couldn't play!"

"That settles it," said Junior firmly, "I'll go home and get a bottle, and I'll do the playing. You keep right on feeling as sick as you want to!" So he went back through the two lanes to his own gate; tipped indoors, found the familiar bottles for stomach aches and hurried back to his groaning patient.

"Now," said Junior, cheerfully "at last I have someone real to practice on! Put out your tongue and take this medicine, my boy!"

"Go away!" cried the patient, rudely, with a feeble kick.

The young Doctor Mead was delighted. "You're being a regular patient, hooray! Come on, put out your tongue—" And he forced the medicine between the poor parched lips. Then he produced his own thermometer. "Mercy on us!" he exclaimed. "You've got a regular temperature, too. I'll try a cold water compress on your head."

And the fact of the matter is, that by the time he reported the case to his father he had done all the things a real doctor would have done, so that even the mother of Jar of Milk and Honey admitted this new treatment was far superior to seven loaves of bread. Which accounts for her giving up this law of the Persians in order to substitute from that time on the law of the Meads for all the family aches.—The Baptist.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

WAGAMAN-BENSHOFF—Sunday afternoon, August 14, 1932, at the home of the bride, Waynesboro, Pa., occurred the marriage of Robert M. Wagaman and Edna L. Benshoff. The single ring ceremony was used and was performed by the undersigned in the presence of members of the immediate families.

Mr. Wagaman is a graduate of Shippensburg State Teachers' College, and has for the last few years been an instructor in the public schools of Franklin Co., Pa. The bride, since her attendance at high school and business colleges, has been with Letter Brothers, a local department store. These talented young people are very active in the work of the local church. Each is a teacher in the Sunday school, and for the last two years the groom has been director of the church choir.

After a two weeks' trip through neighboring states, this happy couple will reside in Waynesboro. They have the prayers and best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy wedded life. W. C. BENSHOFF.

IN THE SHADOW

LINDOWER—Pearl Schrantz Lindower was born March 23, 1881, and passed out of this life June 7, 1932, aged 51 months, 11 days.

She was married to Frank B. Lindower on January 21, 1903. To this union were born three children: Dr. Leslie of Terra Alta, West Virginia, Vera and Ralph of the home, all of which, together with the husband remain to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and mother. Besides these of the immediate family, there remain to mourn their loss, the mother, Mrs. John Schrantz, two sisters, Mrs. J. A. Lebeau and Mrs. Ray Oberlin, all of North Canton, Ohio; two brothers, Grover Schrantz, Riverside, Calif., and Cland Schrantz, Akron, Ohio; one grandchild, John Lindower, and many other relatives and friends. The deceased spent her entire life in Stark County, Ohio. Mrs. Lindower had been a member of the First Brethren church of Canton, Ohio for more than eleven years, having been administered by Rev. Fred Vanator. Mrs. Lindower was the first to make a public confession in the ministry of Rev. Vanator. During all the time she was a member of the Canton, Ohio church she was faithful to her church duties, many times working beyond her strength. She had been a member of the Lord. She will be much missed in the church work and it is hoped that some one will volunteer to take up the work she laid down.

Funeral services were conducted from the home by the undersigned, Mrs. Lindower's pastor for the past three years, J. C. BEAL.

DAVIS—Mrs. Elizabeth Davis was born near Napoleon, Ohio, January 25, 1854, and died at the Brethren Home at Florida, July 24, 1932, aged 77 years, 7 months and 6 days. Her maiden name was DeLong. She is survived by two brothers, one daughter and seven grandchildren. She came to the Home from Huron, Ohio, where she was a member of the First Brethren church there. She had been an inmate of the home for several years. Services at the Home by the writer and burial in Maple Lawn cemetery. FREEMAN ANKNUM.

NEHER—John Adam Neher was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, October 19, 1845. He was the son of Henry and Catherine Neher and came to Indiana at the age of ten years. He died at his home in Cambria, August 11, 1932, aged 86 years, 9 months and 22 days. He was united in marriage to Susanna Hufford who, now an almost helpless invalid, survives his passing, with two children—A. J. Neher and Mrs. Earl Disinger, both of Cambria. Of these there are three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held in the Cambria Brethren church before a large audience. Burial was in Pleasant View Cemetery. He had been a member of the Cambria Brethren church for many years. Services by the writer. FREEMAN ANKNUM.

HARTER—Ida Catherine Harter, daughter of William and Delilah Huffer Miller, was born in Augusta County, Virginia, June 22, 1874, and died at this life at the St. Elizabeth Hospital, Lafayette, following a major operation. She was aged 58 years, 1 month and 22 days. At the age of six months she came with her parents to Indiana, living in the part of the state until her death. December 12, 1894 she was united in marriage to Frank Harter who preceded her in death May 22, 1926. To this union were born five children, two sons dying in infancy. Those surviving are Ruth Wise of Pryorville, Willis near Brimingham, and Edith Robertson of Florida. Besides these three are one brother, Charles Miller of Burlington and three grandchildren. She has been a member of the First Brethren church of Florida for over twenty years. She was faithful in attending its services when health permitted. Her last public service was a church service a few days before her death. Services were held in the First Brethren church before a large audience. The services were in charge of her pastor, the writer, assisted by her former pastor, Rev. Frank Coleman. Burial in Maple Lawn Cemetery. FREEMAN ANKNUM.

Moderator's Address

(Continued from page 7)

put on my body will not make me a separate person but what I put in my heart will surely control my actions. Then my body will be entirely under control. We have no desire at this time to attempt any discussion of this matter, save to make plain our position as to a constant stand upon this vital question.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE

Here again we approach an extremely difficult matter. A matter made difficult through the "hardness of your hearts." Our social order of today, when we consider that social structure composed of Christians and non-Christians, is shot through and through with a certain positive disregard for the sanctity of the marriage vow. "If it doesn't seem to work, throw it away. Make no serious attempt to maintain and perpetuate the vows made before God and man." So we seem to be saying today. Now, Brethren, again may I say: We have no position to offer to the world relative to this matter. Our Conference and our local churches are not suggesting a plan of procedure for the conduct of the world. They have their standards. They would never accept the one given by the church, were the church to offer the same. But what position does the church hold on this matter? Has the Book spoken? Did Christ express himself upon this subject? The answer to all of these inquiries are so evident that there need be no further discussion. The Lord hath Spoken! Why not follow his commands? Yet ye choose committees, and then new committees and still often in our continued contemplation of this subject we are "all at sea." Let the world have her position, let her judges and "other wise" men make their declarations and plan their attitudes. But we be Brethren! When we have forgotten this Home-foundation rock, then will we be forgotten by the Christ whom we were presumed to serve. Some one has said, "Yes, but this matter is not as simple as you may think it to be. Some terrible difficult situations arise which cannot be so easily set aside." Our answer can only be, "Yes, we realize these terrible situations. We know of what you speak. But these situations arise when our sons and daughters choose wives and husbands outside the church!" When homes have been thus established and trouble comes, then again we have that double standard of measurement of which we have been speaking. Surely when one attempts to settle marital difficulties one with one standard and the other with another standard, only positive difficulty lies ahead. But here the trouble lies not in the attempted solution but rather in the unfortunate alliance between the contracting parties. We should give more thought to the rail at the top of the cliff than to the hospital at its foot.

MORE AGGRESSIVE IN EVANGELISM

We have been an evangelistic people and God has blessed our efforts. Would it be possible for us to be still more zealous along that line? I do not presume to say how it should be done, but if we could somehow launch a new and more aggressive movement of evangelism, one that would reach not only every congregation but every member of our faith, and would fire us all afresh with holy zeal for the more rapid promulgation of the Gospel and the winning of men in larger numbers to the saving grace of God and the building of them up in our most holy faith,—if that could be done, I am sure God would honor our effort and we should be more worthy of the high commission that is ours.

A WARNING

Would you bear with me while I make use of this opportunity to give a warning that many of you, I am sure, have recognized the need of in these times? It is a warning to the churches against the temptation to sacrifice preaching in the interest of economy. I know that economizing must needs be done, but let us be wise in our economizing. We had better enter upon a program of sacrificing, to be entered into by both pastor and people, than to close our pulpits for the purpose of saving money. Moreover, let our sacrificing make its largest demands on our personal programs rather than on the program of the church. It is neither wise nor consistent to begin our enforced economy by cutting down on our support to the church and Kingdom interests. Such action proceeds on the assumption that the affairs of God are subordinate or incidental and that the interests of self should be regarded as life's major concern. From a purely business standpoint, it is stupid to decide to remain without a pastor for a time to save money. Dissipation and disintegration will set in and the church will soon find that it has lost more, even in a financial way, than it has saved.

As we come to a realization of the time element in this report we are made to recall the utter foolishness in an attempt to cover the field of our activity or to outline in any adequate way, our positions on all questions which have a "Thus Saith the Lord" background. It is not our purpose nor your desire that we should do so. However, it has seemed good to us that in this rather "key-note" speech of the conference, that some outstanding questions should come in for some consideration. We are led to believe that if we may take a united stand upon a few of our outstanding Brethren positions, we shall see more clearly to continue this united stand on matters which may be ours to determine when "led by the Spirit." May we continue in the deliberations of this FORTY-FOURTH GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCHES not so much in the spirit of "History-Making," but rather in the spirit of faithfulness to our accepted positions upon Bible questions, which questions have made us a "peculiar people." May we not start blazing new paths but rather may we follow those paths over which others have passed in safety and accord. New paths are splendid for non-essentials but when we have to do with our immortal souls and the continuity of our church as a denomination, may we tread lightly and regard most sacredly our well established positions.

May we close our address by again requesting that further consideration and more careful study of matters referred to in same be found not in a special committee created for this purpose, but rather in our already well established boards and committees. Our Brethren are thinking and planning for the church's future as a denomination. Safe hands are handling our many problems. We have no desire to add to the machinery or to make more difficult this work. If we have awakened in our minds, attitudes and reactions relative to our necessary positions, then we have accomplished the task we had placed before us.

The future of the church is in the hands of God. Our denomination, as such, has been given over to us as we continue to work with him. May we all pray for continued guidance and then may we also pray for hearts willing to follow that same guidance and our conference will reflect honor to us as a people and glory to our Savior, Jesus Christ the Son of God.

Goshen, Indiana.

VOL. LIV
Number 35

September 10
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Inspiration and Service must go hand in hand

---

CONFERENCE REPORT
NUMBER

---

BOTH MOUNTAIN AND PLAIN

The dreamer takes to the mountains. There he beholds the land of promise. There he claims to see reality face to face. Something of the radiance of his countenance may be communicated to us. Moses received the law on Sinai's Mount, and the chosen people were guided by it for a thousand years. There the prophet harkened to the voice of God that he might communicate a message to his fellows. Deprive us of the mountain experience, and we lose our inspiration.

But we do not live in the mountains. We dream our dreams and see our visions there. To live, we come down to the plains. Here we build our homes and carry on the business of daily life. The poet gets his inspiration on the mountain top, but comes down to the level to share with his fellows the glory of his vision. The prophet receives his code of laws there, but descends that he may translate the same in terms of social needs. Jesus was transfigured in the mountain, but he came down to the plain to minister to a sick lad. To stay upon the mountains is to become visionary and to leave the people to their own idolatrous tendencies. To remain aloft is to fail to hear the still, sad music of humanity.

Murdock Mackinnon in "The Chorus of Life."

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THE General Conference

This issue of the Evangelist will doubtless carry considerable in the way of material and comment concerning our recent Conference. Therefore, I shall confine my remarks to a personal testimony. The Brethren Church is not a perfect organization of members and ministers. We need constantly to examine ourselves and our ways in the clear and holy light of the Word of God; we need always to take heed lest we fall into the snare of self-confidence. But the late Conference was, to me, a testimony to the fact that, with all our imperfection, the Brethren Church in the main is doctrinally and spiritually sound. For this we should be thankful and remember that it is only by the Grace of God that we are what we are. As to the future:—

1. Let us continue to hold fast the Faith once for all delivered and refuse to surrender a single one of its Blessed Truths, but let us beware of being satisfied with a mere cold, lifeless and unspiritual orthodoxy.

2. Let us continue to strive for a practical and efficient organization of all our work, but let us guard against falling into dictatorial and political methods.

3. Let us have the freest possible discussion in matters which are debatable, but let us not descend to name-calling and that caustic criticism which destroys instead of building up.

4. Let us continue to uphold the very highest standards of faith and life for our ministry; let us be uncompromising in our demand for personal integrity and holiness; but let us shun the awful evil of gossip-mongering and character-assassination.

5. Let us seek to respect the rights of individual conscience, but let us not forget that the Church, unless apostate, is the very Body of Christ through which he speaks and acts, the final source of authority upon earth in its own affairs. (Matt. 18:17)

6. Let us support and respect these to whom the Church has delegated the high responsibility of elective office; but if they prove unworthy, let the Church without wavering supplant them by others who are worthy, the Church to decide who is or is not worthy.

7. Let us continue to urge upon our young men the need for the best possible educational preparation for the Church's ministers; but let us not forget that no accumulation of academic degrees can cover unholy living, or ever quench the folly of fools.

THE Mosaics of St. Sophia

When the Moslem Turks captured the great Church of Saint Sophia in 1453, and turned it into a mosque, they covered all the beautiful mosaics with whitewash and paint. Whatever may be his short-comings, the Moslem is a fanatical opponent of idolatry. Therefore, no image of any sort is permitted in his place of worship. Now a group of experts are at work uncovering these long hidden mosaics. Over the imperial door through which only the ancient emperor could enter, an exquisite mosaic of Christ has been uncovered. He is seated on a golden throne with an open book in his hands on which may be read the words: "I AM THE LIGHT AND PEACE OF THE WORLD." At his feet is the figure of an emperor.

It would be quite wonderful to see this uncovered mosaic. Perhaps none of those who read these lines will have the opportunity. But it will be ten thousand times more wonderful to see the Lord Himself unveiled at his Coming to bring Light and peace to the world. And every eye shall see him. The mosaic of Saint Sophia is prophetic.

ANOTHER Indictment of the Theater

Not long ago an English clergyman, rector in the established church, was tried and found guilty of immoral conduct with a number of young women. Because of wide publicity given to the church trial, the rector acquired international notoriety. A London theater is capitalizing this notoriety by giving the unfrocked rector a place on its program.

Two things will occur to you: First, the theater will stop at nothing in its pursuit of commercial success. Second, the theater is able to do this because the people who attend it will pay for this sort of thing.

Thoughtful people will reflect, however that the immoral rector is perhaps no worse than others who stand behind the footlights. The theater is not interested in morals. It requires but one thing of its employees, that is, to attract and amuse the crowd.

Are you one of the crowd?

THE End of Civilization

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War and one of the most intelligent men of the day, says: "If the white race ever permits itself to wage another world war with the improvements that have come to the weapons of war since the last one, the continuance of that most priceless possession of modern man, civilization, is at an end."

The late Marshall Foch said, "The next war will be a world war in the fullest sense of the word, and moreover it can not longer be isolated. Almost all countries will take part in it, and not only men but women and children will fight too. Poison gas bombs will spread deadly fumes which will penetrate any mask and produce death in a few minutes. Phosphorous bombs, impossible to extinguish, will burn the flesh to the bone within half a minute. Hundreds of tanks, each one able to shoot a thousand deadly bullets a minute, machine guns like automatic rifles, which in the hands of a million men, will shoot 100,000,000 bullets in a minute, will also be raging, and the heavens above will be darkened by a thousand airplanes pouring a rain of horror on the earth. Behind the lines, cities and villages will crumble in ruins under the destructive fire of the latest artillery. In the next war there will be no such things as front and rear. The whole nation will find itself on the firing line."

Impossible, you say. Then remember that the above utterances came from two of the soberest and greatest men of modern times. The one assembled the greatest national war-machine in the history of the world, and the other was given supreme command of the mightiest allied army ever directed by one head. But if you do not credit the opinions, then read the book of Revelation chapters four to nineteen, and you will know certainly what is ahead for a world which has rejected the Christ of God.

THE Theology of Antichrist

Godet, great Biblical teacher, says that the Antichrist's theological system will have three main points: First, there is no personal God without and above the universe. Second, man is himself his own god the god of this world. Third, I. (the Man of Sin) am the representative of humanity in worshipping no humanity worships itself.

The first two positions have appeared and are being well established in the world, with all the tremendous sanction of an anti-christian educational philosophy. The third and last will crown the godless system when the personal Antichrist appears to press his awful claims. "And all the world shall worship him, whose names are not written in the Book of Life."

THE Factor of Savagery

Grantland Rice, noted writer in the world of sports, makes a startling statement about football as played today. He says: "Football is only a game, but when two well-coached teams meet, the determining factor is savagery. The coach who can work his team to white heat and keep it there wins ball games."

Unfortunately, every man who has ever played under the modern coaching system as it exists in the important schools of the country, knows that Rice speaks the truth.

Your likes and dislikes show what you are. If they do not show you as you ought to be, they can and should be changed.

Good measure, a little more than the law demands, is the rule of friendly living, and it always wins more than it costs.

IN THIS NUMBER

Comments on Our Semi-Centennial Conference—Editor, .....	3
The Moderator's View of Conference —W. C. Benshoff, .....	5
The Spirit of Conference—J. L. Bowman, .....	5
1932 Conference Impressions—Freeman Ankrum, .....	5
Impressions of the 1932 National Conference—Florence N. Gribble, .....	6
Impressions of the Semi-Centennial Conference—H. A. Kent, .....	7
A Conference that Was Better—W. R. Deeter, .....	7
Three Outstanding Notes—Frank Gehman, .....	7
A Few Conference Impressions—G. C. Carpenter, .....	8
Brotherly Love Manifested—H. M. Oberholtzer, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
A Program of Evangelism—W. E. Biederwolf, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson 'T. C. Lyon, .....	11
Minutes of the Semi-Centennial Conference—J. L. Gingrich, .....	12-16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Comments on Our Semi-Centennial Conference

It was a good conference. In some respects it was unusual. The nature of the program was unusual because of its semi-centenary character; the content and high quality of the lectures and sermons were unusual; and also the spirit of the conference seemed brotherly and devotional beyond the average. Satisfaction was expressed at almost every turn. This does not mean that everybody was satisfied with everything that was done, or gave consent to everything that was said, or that there were no points at which improvements might have been registered. That would have been permission beyond reason to expect. But it does mean that people were well pleased and felt repaid for coming, and that, taken as a whole, it was a most successful conference. It is with a desire to carry as much of the conference spirit and achievement back to the homes of the Evangelist family that we are devoting this paper almost entirely to conference reports and appreciations. If pastors and other church leaders who attended conference will try as faithfully to take back to their people the many good things they received at Winona, the brotherhood will be greatly benefited thereby.

CONFERENCE ORGANIZATION

Everybody back home is interested in learning who's who in the conference organization, just as at the conference everybody was interested in determining who would be who. The most interesting and widely-attended business session, as has been the case in other years, was the Tuesday morning session when conference was organized, and officers elected. There was no "cut and dried" program for organization, and no electioneering, that we could observe. It was anybody's chance, who was thought to merit the honor and to be capable of the job. And there were a plenty of persons placed in nomination, particularly for the first two offices—that of moderator and vice moderator. Of course all could not be elected in the same year, so the delegates decided upon a very modest and unassuming, but highly worthy minister, both by reason of years of service and capability, for the moderatorship. He is Rev. William C. Benschoff, pastor of the Brethren church of Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, who showed himself a presiding officer of efficiency and becoming dignity. For vice moderator another modest but capable pastor was chosen, a man who has given himself to thorough training for his ministry and who is now the pastor of the First church of South Bend, Indiana, Rev. Robert F. Porte. He was a faithful assistant to Brother Benschoff. The secretaryship of General Conference is a position that calls for real work, as well as responsibility, and the delegates were quite willing to continue in that position the man who has served them so faithfully for a number of years, Rev. Joseph L. Gingrich, pastor of the Third church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. It was due to the industry of Brother Gingrich that the Minutes were made available for publication in this issue of the Evangelist. For assistant secretary, one of our younger ministers, capable and well-trained, was selected in the person of Rev. Leslie E. Lindower, the new pastor of the church at Warsaw, Indiana. For conference treasurer one of our responsible and devoted laymen was chosen; he is Brother Ira C. Wilcox, one of the pillars of the church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. For statistician, a position that we imagine is about the least appreciated and most patience-trying of the General Conference officers, Rev. George E. Cone, tried and proven in the work, was continued. Brother Cone has been pastor for seven years of the church at Milledgeville, Illinois. For the responsible committee on committees, the three men elected were Dr. Charles L. Anspach, talented layman and dean of Michigan state teachers' college at Ypsilanti, Michigan, Rev. L. G. Wood, devoted home missionary and pastor of the mission church at Fort Scott, Kansas, and Rev. G. W. Rench, D.D., veteran pastor and church builder, and present pastor of the church at New Paris, Indiana.

THE ATTENDANCE AT CONFERENCE

The attendance was not quite up to normal, but it was good considering conditions. The people of our churches have never been quite so hard pressed financially as they are now, but the attendance was by no means the lowest, the official delegates numbering only fifteen less than last year's count. At the business session on Saturday morning 282 delegates were reported. Last year's total was 297; in 1930 it was 261; in 1929, 291; in 1928, the Ashland College Golden Jubilee conference, the attendance was 317; previous to that it had not reached the 300 mark since the close of the Bicentenary Movement. It might be of interest to know that we have had an average attendance of 289 over a period of sixteen years beginning with 1917, the first year of the Four Year Program when conference attendance took a jump of 32 above any previous record, reaching the figure of 271.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE LATE GENERAL CONFERENCE

Inasmuch as our Heavenly Father has blessed the work of our church, so that there has been no retrenchment on our mission fields during the past year and that in the midst of economic depression our work as a whole has gone steadily forward,

Be it resolved:

(1) That we pledge and consecrate ourselves anew to our God-entrusted mission of heralding to the world, The Whole Gospel of the Son of God and the Whole Bible as the Word of God.

(2) That we express our appreciation to our Conference officers, Boards, Committees and all who have had a part in making this one of our outstanding conferences.

(3) That we appreciate the courtesies extended to us by the Winona Lake assembly and extend to them our thanks for this annual privilege.

(4) That this National Conference expresses its faith, confidence and appreciation to the various National Boards of the Church, including the College and Seminary, The Publishing House, the Foreign and Home Missionary Societies and all auxiliary organizations.

(5) That we appeal to our churches throughout the brotherhood in this time of economic chaos and political bewilderment, to make the Kingdom of God first consideration, that there may be no retrenchment on our mission fields, in evangelism, or local church programs.

(6) That in view of the political attitude toward the Eighteenth Amendment, we do protest against the modification of the Volstead Act, or repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

(7) That we more emphatically stress and teach the Word of God on the subject of marriage and divorce and protest against the growing divorce evil that is fast wrecking our homes and nation.

(8) That we again declare ourselves as opposed to war in the settling of national disputes, and that war in its every form is contrary to the teachings of Jesus Christ.

(9) That we welcome the day when there can be closer cooperation of the Dunkard fraternity of churches, that we stand ready to fellowship with those not only of the Dunkard fraternity, but all who take the Bible as God's inspired Message to man and stand true to the claims and teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Committee

Signed W. S. BELL, Chairman,
A. B. COVER,
JAMES COOK.

GROWTH IN CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

The report of the statistician is always of interest, particularly that portion indicating the growth or decline in membership. Brother Cone reported a total of 2,479 new members added during the year, which speaks well for the evangelistic efforts of our churches, but this success is considerably counteracted by the rather serious loss of 919, leaving a net gain of 1,560. It is unfortunate that 160 active churches should be compelled to report over nine hundred members lost during the year. Perhaps we could afford to guard more carefully our losses and thus conserve our gains. But at that, our percentage gain for the year is 5.33, which is considerably above the gains of the other churches of the United States. And if we should take into account merely the membership gains, those added during the year, and ignore the losses, as seems to be the case with the figures offered by Dr. George L. Kiefer in the June number of the Christian Herald, our gain percentage would be 8.8. It may be of interest to recall that the Herald's annual statistics, which show the unusual gain for all churches in the United States for 1931 of 433,656 new members thirteen years of age or over, show the Dunker group of churches to have gained 7.25, the largest gain of any religious body of 100,000 or over, save the "Assemblies of God", for which the percentage gain is placed at 12.93. The next largest gain below the Dunkers is 4.22 for the Adventists. Next below them are the Mennonites with a percentage gain of 2.12; then the Lutherans, with 1.64 gain and then the Baptists with 1.56. It seems fair to conclude from Dr. Kiefer's statistics that the rate of the growth of churches is dependent primarily upon two things,—namely, the closeness of their adherence to the Word of God and the zeal with which they proclaim their message. On the first point Brethren peoples stand in the front rank, though some may excel us in certain types of zeal. Let us bear this in mind that God will prosper us in proportion as we honor his Word. God has called us to stand for his revealed Truth in such a time as this, and never were men more ready to receive the Truth than now, when they are being disillusioned as to the dependability and worth of things material.

THE HOME MISSION CHALLENGE

Our church has been growing steadily more missionary in spirit year by year, and in this year of depression the demonstration of its missionary zeal has been all the more marked by reason of the sacrifices under which the people gave. The total amount of our gifts either to the Home or Foreign work did not reach the level of last year, but there are many evidences that it represented greater real sacrifices. The total of all receipts for the National Home Mission work of our church amounted to $15,935.11, while that of last year reached the amount of $17,306.20, the current year's decline being just $1,371.09. Due to wise management on the part of the Board and the willing sacrifices of the devoted mission pastors no retrenchment was necessary in the work, and these same men stand ready to make still greater sacrifices during the coming year, and that fact is a challenge to still more heroic giving on the part of the membership of our churches. And good fruitage has been gathered from these mission pastorates. The general secretary, Brother R. Paul Miller, stated to Conference in his report: "All our growing churches under our Board have registered gains. An actual increase of three hundred and four members has come to us this year." So we are getting profitable returns on our investments, returns of the kind we anticipated when we made the investments—the salvation and building up of lost souls in Christ Jesus. And what should still further inspire us,—some of these churches are struggling manfully under heavy building debts, and by prayer and sacrifice, they are going to meet these obligations and through the splendid plants and strong churches that will eventually be made secure, the brotherhood will be greatly strengthened. As indicative of the determined faith that characterizes these courageous pastors, one is quoted as having said, "I will not let the church close so long as I have two hands to work to keep it going." Such a spirit is bound to be contagious and to spread among the members of these churches, and if it can be met with the same spirit on the part of the brotherhood, who can tell what God will do for us in the homeland this coming year?

MAKING DISCIPLES OF ALL NATIONS

We have not stopped with evangelizing Jerusalem and Judea, but have gone into the uttermost parts of the world and are making disciples of all nations. The Foreign Mission task has gripped the hearts of our people as nothing else has and God has moved them to give generously of life and of substance to carry the Gospel to distant parts. Not until this year of unparalleled depression was there any let up in our Foreign Mission advance. The gifts for this purpose shrank from the peak amount of $47,652.72 in 1931 to $38,805.23 this year. Nothing is so convincing of the severity of the depression among our people as this slump of $9,347.49 in Foreign Mission gifts. But because this work lays so heavily on the hearts of our people, there is strong hope that the Foreign Board will not be compelled to take any backward steps, but rather that still greater sacrifices will be made to hold the present lines of advance. We will not fail to be encouraged by the fact that already the membership of our church on foreign soil has reached the number of 1,829, according to the statistician's report, and that there is being trained a native leadership that will so greatly increase the impact of our forces on the powers of sin and darkness as to give promise of a much greater harvest of souls. We must stand by the gains thus achieved, and not fail to realize on the promise of the future through the lack of any sacrifice that we might have made.

Both mission fields were represented at General Conference, the South American in the person of Rev. Percy L. Yett and the African in the person of Dr. Florence N. Gribble. And both were full of eagerness to get back to their fields of labor. The case of Dr. Gribble was especially appealing and challenging. In the midst of her anxiety to return to disease-ridden, superstition-bound Africa, where her medical skill is so much needed both by missionaries and by natives, but where tropical fevers have repeatedly made such inroads on her health, she was unable to pass favorably a medical examination. Being a physician, she well understood the physical weakness of her own heart, and how inadvisable, from a purely human standpoint, for her to make the venture. Would she go, and run the risk? Nay, she would not "run a risk", but she would go; there is no risk with God. She felt she could not do else than go. A divine compulsion was upon her. But who would send her? It is a grave responsibility to send a missionary to a foreign field, in the face of an adverse medical examination. The Foreign Board know full well their responsibility and exercise the greatest care. They could not, therefore, send her. But, in view of her deep desire to go, and the great need of the missionaries there of just such service as she alone is able to render, and in view of the further fact that she was willing and offered to assume full responsibility for whatever might happen, they had concluded, after much prayer, that they might consent to her going, if those for whom they act were also willing. What would the entire Foreign Missionary Society say? All those present were given an opportunity to express their mind by ballot. Who could say "No" to such an entreaty? Who could deny her the privilege of doing

(Continued on page 8)

Brother Floyd Sibert, Masontown, Pennsylvania, informs us that he will be at liberty to do some evangelistic work during the year. Those interested should write him at the above address.

We are informed that Brother Frank Gehman, recently pastor at Krypton, Kentucky, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the mission church at Osceola, Indiana.

A program of a Sunday School Institute came to hand as we were going to press. We can now only announce date and place: Mount Pleasant, Pa., Sept. 15th. Shall be glad for a report of it.

As the rays of the sun bring beauty of color and vigor of life to foliage and flower, so the shining of the love of God into the hearts of men imparts to them all the loveliness of virtue and the joy of vitality of which the soul is capable.

A PRAYER REQUEST FOR THIS WEEK—

The Brethren at Jones' Mill church in Pennsylvania, request prayer for a revival which will begin October 19, with the pastor, Brother William Gray, doing the preaching.

Pray for a safe journey for Sister Florence N. Gribble, who sails September 14th to resume missionary work in Africa.

The Moderator's View of Conference

By W. C. Benshoff

REV. C. W. BENSHOFF
The New Moderator of General Conference

The 1932 conference of the Brethren Church will be remembered as one of the best in the history of the denomination. Not the largest in attendance but significant in its point of emphasis and actual accomplishment. A great program had been prepared. The speakers without exception gave their best. There was unanimity of thought. Not a false note was sounded. It is a question if any conference of the Brethren Church ever listened to a series of sermons and addresses, the thought of which is more closely related to the things for which we stand. After fifty years the Brethren Church reaffirms her position as a whole Gospel Church. Nor was the effort lost. The truth was well received, accepted with unanimous approval. The Brethren Church has placed herself on record before the world in no uncertain terms.

This was a busy conference. It seems to the writer that he has never seen at this gathering so many people working at the task. The various auxiliaries, boards, committees, etc., spent many hours, forgetful of time. Work was done willingly, none refusing. Nor did this conference work aimlessly, but definitely, constructively led of the Holy Spirit. To the extent that the church at large catches the spirit of aggressiveness, and conforms to the divine purpose will the Brethren church go forward.

At this conference was manifested the true Christian spirit. The spirit of brotherly love was shown. Men were tested, and they gave evidence of being filled with the Spirit. A most significant thing was accomplished, the influence of which will be far-reaching.

This was a conference of Christian fellowship. There was the fellowship of praise and worship. Most earnestly did brethren lead us to the throne of grace through prayers. The worship of song under the direction of Dr. Chas. A. Bame was soul-inspiring and prepared the audience for the message to follow. There was the fellowship of social intercourse. Brethren people like to visit. The conference affords an opportunity to renew acquaintances and cultivate new ones. And what is more fruitful of good than the fellowship of the saints! "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

The Spirit of the Conference of 1932

By J. L. Bowman

Much has been said and written of the spirit of '76 and of '61. Whether the writers and speakers always understood well their subject is not a matter for discussion in this brief paper. I feel that the members of the conference of 1932 understand and appreciate full well the fine spirit that characterized the conference of '32. In point of attendance, I have seen it as large or larger, though the conference was very well attended. The music was good. The addresses were of a high order, not a poor address delivered. Skill and ability were marked in the preparation and delivery. The constructive work of this conference spoke well for those who planned and executed the programme. In my judgment the very climax of the conference was reached in the beautiful spirit that marked the conference from its beginning to its close. Without this spirit the other fine features would have failed, in part at least.

Some one has said, "The spirit is the highest form of matter in which we act." If this be true then the conference of 1932 acted on a very high plane. Would it be too much to say, on the highest plane possible? Some of the most difficult problems that ever faced us as a people were before us for solution and I am rejoiced to say that they were settled in the most Christlike spirit. Again and again we saw the exemplification of the statement of the Psalmist when he said, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for Brethren to dwell together in unity."

This fine spirit was due to the fact that all over the brotherhood were groups of Brethren people praying for the leading and guiding of the Holy Spirit in all our deliberations. Brethren, your prayers were more than answered. Some of these problems would have been incapable of solution if we had trusted to man's wisdom. There were problems real and difficult in mission work and in other matters that in the years to come will read like modern acts of the apostles. In years to come when we look back on this famous conference, we will be glad that we suffered the spirit to perform his office work in this conference. Generations unborn will rise and call us blessed and say they builded better than they knew. It will all be due to the fact that we allowed the spirit to soften our hearts and shape our policies and control our wills and to see good in everybody, even though they differ with us. May we always exercise that brotherly love and forbearance that ought to characterize God's children.

Linwood, Maryland.

1932 Conference Impressions

By Freeman Ankrum

Since Conference is now over, and as we are some distance away from it, perhaps it may loom up clearer. A person who is obliged to sit upon one of the several boards is somewhat handicapped when it comes to attending sessions. Perhaps any opinion expressed would be somewhat general. One thing that impressed me was that there was no sign of surrender among the men in a very difficult time. Conditions are not good in a number of the congregations but there is a grim determination to win out. While there were a variety of messages a listener was privileged to take his choice, which many did. Some splendid messages full of fire and optimism were given. The place of the Brethren Church in this present age was clearly pointed out. The trials that had been passed through and some that were brought to a successful culmination at Conference seemed to have the beneficial effect of binding the leaders together. The spirit of fellowship that prevailed in the Conference was so marked that a friend who attended, though a member of another denomination, remarked that he had "never seen such a fine spirit in any Conference of his own church." Surely a Conference that enthruses an outsider who may happen to visit it ought to cause those who constitute its personnel to appreciate it the more.

Flora, Indiana.

Impressions of the 1932 National Conference

By Florence Newberry Gribble, M.D.

Our editor has kindly asked me to write my impressions of our conference. There are many elements which enter into the complex impressions left upon one's mind by a National Conference. Perhaps the most outstanding of these is the renewal of friendship. Faces of friends long known and loved pass as in a panorama before the vision of the missionary who is privileged, as a rule, to renew these friendships but once in a period of years. Sometimes in meeting these faces at Winona Lake, familiar as they are, we have had difficulty in immediately recalling the names which should be equally familiar. But, it is not because in any sense we have forgotten you, or your prayers, or your gifts, or your intercession, or your labor of love. The sad part has come in the parting, and in the sure knowledge that these friendships thus renewed must so soon be severed, so far as earthly presence is concerned. But, yet, even here there has been joy in the assurance that we shall certainly meet again.

Another vivid impression which this National Conference has left with me, is that of fellowship. Fellowship is sweet indeed, while it remains unbroken. The sadness of broken fellowship wherever it has crept into our brotherhood, has been experienced, during the years that are past, but it seems to me that at this Conference the clouds have been dissipated, misunderstandings have been clarified, love has been deepened, and fellowship cemented. Together, we have been able to say

"Friendship with Jesus, Fellowship Divine,
Oh, what Blessed Sweet Communion
Jesus is a Friend of Mine."

To a missionary who is called to leave home, friends, and loved ones, and to go to the uttermost parts of the earth for the gospel's sake, there comes a sense of deep desire that our church and our brotherhood might have a deepened vision of the need of those who have not yet heard. If the term "Foreign Missions" seems in any sense to oppose that other term, equally dear to us, "Home Missions", this is not the fulfillment of our desire. Our desire is simply this, that as a brotherhood, we might arise with renewed interest, increased zeal, and deepened determination to share the knowledge of the Son of God with those who know him not. It matters not to us where they may be located geographically. To this end we rejoice in all those Conference addresses, which touched upon the sharing of the knowledge of redemption with those not only yet unredeemed, but in ignorance of the Redeemer.

The slogan of the Conference "The Foundation of God Standeth Sure" was happily developed along the line of that sure and extensive building which includes the heathen also. All of the Bible studies, all of the historical messages, all of the memorial services, all of the doctrinal sermons pointed as truly as the missionary addresses themselves to that glorious consummation when the church shall have been completed, when the last members shall have been called out from heathen lands, when our Lord shall have come to claim his bride, and we shall be forever with him.

This is as it should be. As we look back over fifty years, we may say that the Brethren Church has builded well, but we may also say that we have not yet discharged our missionary responsibility. We have not yet claimed that full vision of the future which should be ours. We have not yet done our part in the evangelization of the world.

All of the adjunct societies, whether the Women's Missionary Society, the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, or the various ministerial and board meetings, gave emphasis to this one paramount idea, extensive building upon our sure foundation.

To me this Conference will always be an outstanding one, because of the circumstances surrounding the continuance of my missionary service. To the conference members who were present on Saturday morning, August 27th during the Foreign Missionary hour, we must needs express our tender appreciation of their vote of willingness to return to the foreign field one whose career is evidently so nearly spent. That we might finish our course with joy and that, if it be the Lord's will, we might finish it upon the mission field, has long been our prayer. And so, we go forth again, sustained we believe by an increased volume of prayer, which we doubt not will be abundantly answered by him who is exceedingly able.

To the members of the Foreign Board, we would express at this time our hearty gratitude for an unvarying kindness and courtesy in every dealing. It has been a pleasure to share in some of the sessions of the meetings with the Foreign Board. It has been a joy to discuss problems with those so deeply interested, and so vitally connected with the work. We believe that the Conference of 1932 has been a red-letter Conference for Missions. We believe that the heathen will benefit by the results of the deliberations of the Boards and of Conference. We believe that volunteers in waiting will be speedily prepared, and when prepared as speedily thrust forth to meet the dire need of dark Africa and neglected South America, as well as the needs of our so-called Home Mission fields.

We believe the funds will be increasingly forthcoming to send out these candidates, in order that no worthy candidate may ever in the history of the Brethren Church be detained at home for lack of funds to finance his or her going forth.

We believe that men, young men among the pastors and laymen as well, have at this Conference caught a vision of the necessity of placing their lives in the place of greatest need.

We believe that there are many among our white haired fathers and mothers, as well as among our younger people, who will, because of the direct and indirect influences of the 1932 Conference, be enrolled as intercessors, holding before God in the arms of prayer those who in heathen lands are constantly falling over the precipice of ignorance into the abyss of despair.

Just as the name Moravian has long stood for the preaching of the Gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth, so may the name Brethren, through the direct and indirect influences of this truly great Conference, become synonymous with the passion to share the Gospel to those in ignorance, whether near or far.

DR. FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE who is to sail on Sept. 14th to begin her fourth term of service as medical missionary to French Equatorial Africa.

For, in these last days, we must run fast if we would bring back our Lord, fast indeed, not delaying because of the flood of depression, not stayed by the tide of human affections, though both the flood and the tide well nigh overwhelm us, as we cry with Peter, "Lord save, or I perish", not resting in any sense upon that which we may have accomplished in the past, we must run fast if we would bring back our Lord again.

And we must run far, far away in the depths of heathen ignorance, or into the utmost recesses of the darkness of remote and unevangelized districts of our own land, far away from building upon another man's foundation, far away from all incentives of competition, human interest, or pride; far away from all that would withhold us and our message from those in heathen darkness, we must speed, cost what it will.

And so we close this little article and our impressions of the 1932 Conference. It is indeed a tribute but it cannot be a eulogy. Not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth, and therefore, as we run fast and far, we must run looking forward, not backward, upward not downward, looking unto Jesus who has so certainly been the author of our faith, looking unto Jesus who desires to be the finisher thereof.

Therefore, we will not stand, we will run. We will not gaze, nay not even into Heaven. We will look unto Jesus, and more extensively than ever before, we will occupy till he comes.

Dearborn, Michigan.

Impressions of the Semi-Centenary Conference

By Homer A. Kent

Now that the Semi-centenary Conference is history, we can look back upon it and appraise its values for the Brethren Church.

First, through the carefully prepared messages on the history of the Church we have been able to come to a better appreciation of the Church today. It is a happy fact that these presentations will be preserved in a special edition of the Brethren Annual. Our denomination needs such permanent records.

Second, through the detailed study of the distinctive doctrines of our church, we have been able to see anew the reason for our existence as a separate denomination. Should we not make more of these doctrines in these latter years than some of us have been doing?

Third, through the masterful treatments of a number of the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith, we were enabled to appreciate anew the true nature of Christianity and the life it offers. Such doctrines cannot be emphasized too strongly in our Church or in any church. A review of them was much in keeping with our Semi-centennial celebration.

Fourth, it was a source of great interest and encouragement to have had at this Conference a review of all the mission interests of our church. This phase of our work has had a noble history. The extent of the growth of our Foreign Mission work in less than a quarter of a century gives us assurance that the blessing of God has been upon it and that success lies in the future. The present program of the Home Mission Board presents a worth while challenge. This Conference has taught us again the import of the Great Commission.

Fifth, this Semi-centenary Conference leaves us with the impression that the ministry of our church is true to the faith once for all delivered unto the saints, and that there is a sincere desire, by a more careful examination of candidates, a better preparation through training of the ministry, and a more earnest endeavor in the separate fields of service, to raise the standard of our ministry to a higher level.

Finally, after this review which we have had of our church, of the things for which it stands, and of the fidelity of its ministry through the years to the truth of God's Word, we have been made to wonder why we have not made and are not making more advances in his Name. Should we not be shamed by our seeming lethargy? May God fill us with a holy enthusiasm for his cause. May he give us clear vision for where there is no vision the people perish.

Washington, D. C.

A Conference that Was Better

By W. R. Deeter

For eighteen years we have been making annual journeys to beautiful Winona Lake, and the good we have attained cannot be put down on paper, for those blessed associations and the hearing of those spiritual messages have moulded into life those higher qualities that cannot be purchased with the material things of life. Conferences are all GOOD, but some are BETTER. The years come and go, and the Annual Conferences come and go, and the late one had its outstanding features.

The attendance was commendable, notwithstanding the notion entertained by many that the depression would hinder, more or less. No doubt it did. But, above all the negative hindrances, there was a positive assumption that the work of the Lord required attention. So, our people gathered from far and near, making up a noble band of workers and co-laborers together with God.

The messages from various speakers were commendable, helpful and spiritual. One brother who had driven in 125 miles on Wednesday, and had heard one message said it was worth all his time and effort to get there, even if he should not stay for any more. When it comes to delivering strictly Biblical messages on public platforms, the Brethren ministry stands second to none.

The association and fellowship was as good and sweet as any in our history. Of course, there were problems to be solved. In the Name of him who doeth all things well, they were all handled and solved to his glory and for the mutual helpfulness to all. With such fairness, who could go away and not feel the spirit of good will so graciously manifested one toward another?

The influence was up to the standard. We dare say that the larger percent of all in attendance were able to go back home helped and inspired to greater usefulness and blessedness, for which we praise his Name.

Carleton, Nebraska.

Three Outstanding Notes

By Frank Gehman

One could have hardly attended National Conference without having been aware of certain outstanding notes. Of these I should like to call attention to three. Firstly, the clarity of emphasis upon the truths of the Word. Secondly, the note of reality and practicality in living. Thirdly, the deep spiritual fellowship evidenced.

There was no uncertainty of belief in the theological notes sounded from the platform. Even if divergences of private opinion may possibly have been present, the hearer was left in no doubt as to the basis of man's only means of salvation. It is worse than useless to tell men that they are lost if there is no means of salvation to be made known to them. By the Word of God we know man is lost if without Christ. By that same Word, both written and personal, we know that there is a way of salvation through the faith of the believer in the finished work of our Lord. Our ministry would be one of Stygian hue were we to stop with the essential truth of the lost condition of the natural man, but—thanks be to God—there is another chapter, and that is the chapter of salvation in Jesus Christ, the Revealer of God and the Redeemer of the faithful. Then, too, we have given us the necessary things for our growth in the grace and admonition of the Lord. All these truths so dear to the Child of God graced the platform of National Conference.

If pure doctrine be necessary to eternal life, pure living is an essential proof of the purity of our doctrine. To separate life from doctrine is to display the earthly unwisdom of worldly desires, while to witness to pure doctrine with a pure life is to manifest the unearthly wisdom of heavenly pleasures. It is true that in many respects we have become a church of dominant theological beliefs. Likewise, our sister church has long been one standing forcibly for separatedness from the world. Let us combine their emphasis of separation from the world with our clarity of Biblical doctrine and there will be abundant reason under heaven, not only for our continuation as a church, but also for our special blessing as a profitable ministry under God. Did I not many times hear an implied, and sometimes direct plea for a workable and effective consistency of life and doctrine?

Even those who have attended many more annual conferences than have I will probably agree that there have been few occasions when good Christian fellowship flowed so freely. Brethren, the hand of the Lord is upon us and that to our own good if we abide in him. Nor scarce could we wish for a removal of that hand when such rich blessings be in store for them that love to do his bidding. But he knows what is best. Fellowship free, vast, generous, Christian,—an imperfect earnest of that to come when between Christians there shall be no more the heartache of misunderstanding. The experiences of the hard year—hard in many ways, blessed in others—have helped to soften us. Henceforth may there be less professionalism, more brotherhood. Perhaps we have not, as yet, realized our capacities for brotherhood. By and through and because of the overflowing grace of God, this conference helped to teach us the abundant mercies of God and the earnest longing of our Christian brethren to do what is right.

No life, no ministry, no instrument is a failure which sets forth the glories of the Righteous Father. In the light of this truth the conference just passed dare not be deemed a failure.

A Few Conference Impressions

By Dr. G. C. Carpenter

1. How strong the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love! It is our firm conviction that never was that tie stronger than now. For this we ought to praise God from whom all blessings flow, for it assures united effort and cooperation in the Lord's work. It bespeaks united prayers and that means answered prayers which mean progress and success in the service of the King. It was evident throughout the conference that a common desire prevailed on the part of both the laity and the ministry to please not self but the Lord Jesus Christ. May that beautiful Christian spirit prevail through the year in all the churches.

2. The high tone of the sermons and addresses given during the week! Surely it would have been profitable if all who remained at home could have been with us and have received the inspiration and the renewal of convictions and courage and hope. It is likely that many of the messages will be printed and all who can should read them prayerfully and meditate thereon. The souls of those present were enriched thereby and "Only those who are rich can enrich others." May we all be rich!

3. The evidence that the missionary spirit is increasing in our churches! Surely the church that lacks the passion for world-wide evangelization lacks a vital element that is essential in order to be a real Christian Church. Otherwise the church becomes no more than a lodge or club. If any preacher lacks that world-wide passion the laity who are on fire for souls ought to convert the preacher. And vice versa. Home Mission workers are encouraged and look forward to a good year. Dr. Chas. Anspach accepted the presidency of the Home Board, Rev. H. F. Stuckman, the former president, having insisted on being relieved. The Foreign Board is counting on the whole church to sacrifice in order that no workers need be recalled. The spirit of Dr. Florence Gribble is an inspiration to all. Though afflicted in body she chooses to return to the field trusting all to the Great Physician. May it be his will to touch her body with healing power and to give her many more years of service in that needy field. May our whole church realize more than ever that the continued progress of foreign missions is dependent upon the continued progress of home missions. May all look forward to a sacrificial offering for home work at Thanksgiving time!

Smithville, Ohio.

Brotherly Love Manifested

By H. M. Oberholtzer

Our General Conference, recently held in Winona Lake, Indiana, was particularly notable because of the brotherly love, peace and harmony manifested, indicating the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. Some had come to the conference with almost fear and trembling, but their fears were turned to joy. There was a reason. For weeks and months many had definitely and earnestly prayed that God would undertake for us and help us to know and do his will. His answer was clear. His power was manifest. Serious misunderstandings were cleared and difficulties were surmounted. How wonderfully God works when we surrender to his will. Fervently we sang God's praise. Urgently the speakers pleaded his cause. All the addresses and sermons were of a high order. Loyalty to God, to his Word and to the church was the strong note. Love was the tie that bound all together. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together (and work and worship together) in unity."

Sidney, Indiana.

Comments on Our Semi-Centennial Conference

(Continued from page 4)

what she felt God wanted her to do, even though it means danger and possibly death to undertake it? Well, no one did. It would have been a difficult thing to refuse, in the presence of such consecration, to give consent to what seemed to be the Lord's leading. So the membership of the Society, or nearly all the members present, voted "willing." And, if the Lord is willing indeed, this noble woman of God will sail on September 14th, taking her life in her own hands, as the world would say, and returning to Africa. But that is not how she goes; she will go in the Lord's keeping. That is the true missionary's spirit. What a challenge to indifferent church members! What an appeal for the support of Foreign Missions! What a rebuke to selfishness and self-seeking! It is from God.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

The Song of Solomon

This is one of the most misunderstood books of the Bible. It to the opponent of the Christian religion, is a sordid love tale hardly worthy to be printed; it, to the lover of the truth of the Bible, is a rare gem of spirituality and an oasis of wondrous beauty. Whereas the saint finds spiritual communion of the highest sort in perusing its pages, the sinner only sees in it something equivalent to the latest filth and indecency of the sex novel.

Why is the Book Misunderstood?

1. It is an allegory, but not limited to allegorical interpretation.
2. It is a poem, not prose, bearing a hidden message.
3. It is a parable, concealing precious truth from the uninitiated, but revealing it to the instructed.
4. It is a song, not one among many, but essentially one of superlative force.
5. It is a drama, but lacks the orderly and logical movement which the Western mind requires; however, to the Oriental it is eminently satisfactory, decent, and chaste.
6. It is a pastoral, simple and appealing, but the smell of the fields and the enticements of the city are strangely linked together.
7. It is all these in combination and in unity of message. Its message has been variously summarized under three main interpretations, namely,

- (1) The Liturgical Interpretation: A True Oriental Love Story.
- (2) The Allegorical Interpretation: A Story of Jehovah and his People.
- (3) The Typical view: Solomon and his Bride are Types of Christ and his Church.

Which is the true interpretation? To the mind of the writer it is impossible to accept the conclusions of any one group of interpreters; all three have elements of truth in them; none completely exhausts the truth and each contains difficulties. It must be remembered, too, that each view has been modified at various times and has been subjected to all sorts of controversy and misinterpretation.

Dr. G. Campbell Morgan approaches the true key to the interpretation of this Song when he observes:

"The songs should be treated thus, first as simple and yet sublime songs of human affection. When they are thus understood, reverently the thoughts may be lifted into the higher value of setting forth the joys of the communion between the spirit of man and the Spirit of God, and ultimately between the Church and Christ."

Jewish and Christian Opinion

The Jews sang this Song on the eighth day of the Passover feast. To them it had great significance, pointing of course to the Passover Lamb of the first century. They reckoned it to be a veritable holy of holies and compared "Proverbs to the outer court of the Temple, Ecclesiastes to the Holy Place, and the Song of Solomon to the Holiest of all."

Dr. Schaff writes: "The Song of Solomon presents the Hebrew ideal of pure bridal and conjugal love in a series of monologues and dialogues by different persons: a lover, King Solomon, a maiden named Shulamith, and a chorus of virgins, daughters of Jerusalem. The poem is full of the fragrance of spring, the beauty of flowers, and the loveliness of love." Then, it might be added, it rises into the sphere of the spiritual where love is the ruling motive and Christ is the lovely Bridegroom.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Solomon.
2. When and Where Written. Around 1000 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Addressed. To Israel.
4. Why Written? To give a spiritual interpretation to human love.
5. Authenticity. Accepted from the earliest times by the Jews as a canonical book.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK (Dr. Ginsburg)

1. The Shulamite Separated to the King's Court. 1:1-11.
2. The Shulamite and Her Beloved Together. 1:12-2:7.
3. The Shulamite and Her Beloved Apart. 2:8-3:5.
4. The Shulamite and Her Beloved Together. 3:6-5:1.
5. The Shulamite and Her Beloved Apart. 5:2-8:4.
6. The Shulamite Restored to Her Beloved and Home. 8:5-14.

III. THE THEME OF THE BOOK

Love is the theme of the Song of Solomon. Note the following interesting excerpts and the truth they convey concerning the stages and progress of love:

1. "My Beloved is mine, and I am his." (2:16).
(1) Possession and Pleasure.
2. "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine." (6:3).
(2) Ownership and Relationship.
3. "I am my Beloved's, and his desire is toward me." (7:10).
(3) Perfect Assurance and Perfect Satisfaction.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Love. Beloved.
2. Key Verses. 8:6; 6:3.
3. Key Chapters. 2 and 8.
4. Key Ideas. Human Love and Religious Experience.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The Song of Solomon shows forth the value of true love among humans and then between God and Man as that love is evinced in Christ and his Church. Love is a precious thing, not to be trifled with, or spoiled, or damaged by misconduct. It is part and parcel of the Divine and not mere animal emotion. It is a spiritual and not a "natural" thing. Christianity only knows what love is; heathenism fails to comprehend. Hence the monogamous Christian and the polygamous heathen are birds of a different feather.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

1. Christ is the Beloved Bridegroom and the Church is his Bride.
2. Israel is the earthly wife of Jehovah (Hosea) and the Church is the heavenly bride of the Son of God. Though loved by the Shepherd-King-Prophet, yet Israel has refused his love. Some day she will receive him as "The Lily of the Valley" and "The Bright and Morning Star." Then he will be "the chiefest of ten thousand" to her soul.

VII. THE TEACHING OF THE BOOK (Moorehead)

"The teaching of the Song we hold is the following:

1. The bridegroom is the Messiah, the Redeemer.
2. The bride, his people.
3. The daughters of Jerusalem, are the friends of both. Jno. 3:29.
4. The Song describes the love which exists between them. The fountain of all love for Christ is his love to us. To know his love is to love him in return. 1 Jno. 4:19.
5. The time when the Song has its fulfillment is always. But it is believed that it will have a peculiar accomplishment in that day when the Jews are again restored to God's favor and fellowship—and for the second time the marriage bond is ratified and sealed, never again to be violated. Hos. 1:2; Rom. 11:26-29.
6. Traits of Christ's love. It is unconditional, chap. 1:2-6; comp. Rom. 5:8. Irresistible, 2:8; comp. 1 John 4:10. Intense, 2:9, 10; comp. John 14:1-3. Sheltering and protective, 2:14, 15; comp. Ps. 91:106. Exactness, 5:2; comp. Eph. 5:1, 2. Jealous, 5:6; comp. Rev. 3:20.
7. Traits of a believer's love. It is self-depreciating, 1:5. Eager for communion, 2:1-7. Sometimes interrupted, 3:1. Sorrowful, 5:6, 7. Intermittent, 5:1, 2. Self-sacrificing, 3:2, 3.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

A Program of Evangelism

By Dr. W. E. Biederwolf

The winning of men and women to Jesus Christ is quite the biggest business in the world. We will have no dispute about this. If it were given heaven to do angels would vie with archangels in hurrying earthward to undertake it. But this is not an angel's job. It has been given to you and to me, this high privilege, this great honor, this great responsibility. If we should fail, so far as we know God has no other plan. He is depending upon us.

As I think of this subject I find three words slipping into my mind with a minimum of mental effort. The words are (1) Problem, (2) Purpose, (3) Program.

I. Problem. The church is face to face with a new and trying situation. Of this every thoughtful preacher and honestly observant individual is profoundly convinced.

Crime of every sort stalks among us with impudent, defying air. We have about one murder for every hour of the day and night.

Social immorality flourishes like a green bay tree and marriage to an alarming extent has become a mere passing indulgence. Freudianism, Psycho-analysis, Free-love and sexual looseness is general have found place in the University curriculum until the stench of it smells to heaven.

Worldliness has bored its way like a putrefying abscess into the very vitals of the Church.

The University has become a slaughter-house of faith. There is no use to wink at the results of Professor James H. Leuba's questionnaire. He took 1,000 names out of a book of 5,500 scientists, most of them teachers in our schools, and addressed them personally, and over half of them doubted or denied the existence of a personal God. He wrote to 1,000 students in nine different colleges and his answers prove that an alarming proportion of them after entering college "gradually abandon the cardinal Christian beliefs."

These institutions are full of textbooks that ridicule the Christian belief. Think of a book like Parmelee's "Criminology" urged by a college professor upon the immature minds of our student youth! On page 109 he says, "It would be difficult to find a more anti-social and immoral religious doctrine than the Christian doctrine of the forgiveness of sins."

Do you remember what Clarence Darrow said when he was defending young Leopold, the brilliant student and dastardly murderer of the Franks boy? He said, "If this boy is to blame, where did he get it? Your honor, it is hardly fair to hang a nineteen-year-old boy for the philosophy that was taught in the university. It does not meet my ideas of justice and fairness to visit upon his head the philosophy that has been taught by university men for twenty-five years."

Is it any wonder in the face of all this that we find ourselves thinking that the church will need a special baptism of wisdom, and a devotion deeper, it may be, than we have ever known before, if she is to meet the crisis now before her and turn it to account for the glory of God?

II. Purpose. I am not an adept with the French language. I have quite enough difficulties with my own. I can perhaps make out as well as the American who had a smashing wreck with his automobile in Paris, and when the French policeman asked him, "Parlez vous Français?" he said, "No, Chevrolet coupe!" But anyway, the French have an expression that is spelled this way: "Raison d'être." It means the reason of a thing, why it exists. Evangelism is the "raison d'être" of the church. It is just as much the business of the church to win men and women to Christ as it is the business of an automobile factory to turn out automobiles.

Some one has said, "Evangelize or fossilize." The church must increase numerically or cease to exist.

It is right to point to our magnificent temples of worship that lift their spires above the city's noise and strife; it is all right to point to the cross-crowned spires of village and country road; it is all right to point with pride to our renowned preachers and confess to an intelligence and equipment such as the church of no other age has ever known; it is all right to meet in our mammoth conventions and assemblies and congratulate ourselves on our increasing influence in other respects; but we must not forget the plain, blunt truth that all this may be true and yet if the church does not increase numerically she will dwindle and die.

I know that the needs of the church are almost myriad, and I know that so multifarious are the demands made upon her that if she were that dragon fly with 1,000 eyes she could not see them all, and if she were Briareus with his huddled arms she could not reach them all. But at the same time there is serious danger lest in trying to grapple with these the church forget the one supreme thing she has been called to do, and in the successful doing of which the ultimate solution of all these other things must come if it ever comes at all.

I do not wish nor have I any desire to underestimate the duty of the church to social conditions and civic problems, nor do I forget her tremendous task in the edifying of the saints, but we must first have the saints to be edified, and after all is said, the first and fundamental duty of the church is evangelistic—the winning of the individual to Christ.

III. Program. The program is to be found of course, in evangelism—in an evangelistic ministry. But let us not think that such a ministry is to be expected only from the pulpit.

There are three kinds of evangelism about which we are hearing much in these days, and their importance cannot be overemphasized.

1. Personal, or Individual Evangelism.

This is really the normal sort. Not every Christian can become a great preacher and preach to a great congregation, but every Christian can become a personal worker, an individual evangelist, and perform a mighty ministry for Christ if his heart is set on doing it.

Henry Ward Beecher once said, "The longer I live the more confidence I have in those sermons where one man is the minister and one man is the congregation."

If every Protestant preacher in our land would win just one soul a month to Christ there would be brought into the church in one year 1,792,644 souls. Instead of this all the ministers and all the 27,000,000 church-members are doing this blessed service for but a little more than 500,000 souls each year. Oh, if only the Spirit of God could stir us to a sense of our responsibility, and touch us anew with the endowment of his mighty power, and send us out to the task which the church must either accomplish or leave to God's unfailing sufficiency to accomplish in some other way! And yet we find ourselves wondering if God has any other plan for the doing of this work.

2. Parental, or Domestic Evangelism. What this nation needs to learn is that the battle for its redemption, if it is ever deemed, must be pushed across the threshold of the American home.

You might as well expect flowers to grow under the snows of the Klondike as to expect a holy character to grow in the midst of the environment found in the average American home today. And this is true to a large extent of many of our so-called Christian homes.

An earnest-faced young man in Paris, Illinois, said to a friend of mine, "Neither my father nor my mother nor my sister have ever said one word to me about God, or about Christ, or about my soul's need of a Saviour." And the father was an elder in the church, the mother a teacher, and the sister the superintendent of the primary department in the Sunday School!

3. Parish, or Visitation Evangelism. This is personal evangelism organized, a going in groups of two throughout the community with the express purpose of leading others to Christ and into church-membership. It has been much praised and as much criticized. Its chief danger lies in bringing people into church-membership who have never really been converted. Sad examples of this are not wanting.

We would not disparage an effort of this kind, but it is exceedingly difficult to avoid the danger just mentioned. Say what you will, the average church-member is not fitted to lead others to Jesus Christ.

But if people who themselves really know Christ, who are properly trained to do this work, and who have a passion for the unsaved, can be found to undertake it, how truly wonderful the results of such a campaign would be!

It is timely just here to call attention to the main purpose of this article. That purpose is to stress the importance of two other forms of evangelistic endeavor, such as have been mentioned, find their real inspiration and their real promise of any large degree of success.

There can be little hope for much worthwhile effort about evangelistic lines apart from the preached Word of the living God. Nothing can ever take the place of this, and any attempt at substitution here will prove a dangerous experiment. This is the method ordained of God, and God pity the church in so far as she belittles or neglects it, for here is the main source of all inspiration and spiritual passion for the holy task that is hers by divine commission.

1. The first of these is Pastoral Evangelism. This I consider the most important of all, and this too is the greatest need of the times. Paul told Timothy to "stir up the gift" that was within him. And there is more latent evangelistic ability in most ministers than doubtless they have even thought.

When Paul said, "Do the work of an evangelist," he was writing to a pastor. And he was not recommending to him that he leave his pulpit for the more public sort of evangelism it has been the writer's glorious privilege for so many years to enjoy. What Paul meant was that Timothy should stand at the head of his church and see to it that every phase of its varied activity was made a ministry of evangelism for the winning of men to Christ.

And what the church needs today, needs sadly, needs more than anything else, is, as the now glorified Dr. A. C. Dixon once put it, "pastors who have an evangelistic conscience, preach evangelistic sermons, pursue evangelistic methods, and magnify evangelistic experiences."

2. The second and other form is Professional, or Vocational Evangelism. What mighty spiritual awakenings have been witnessed in other days through this kind of evangelism!

Recent years have witnessed a sag in this particular form of evangelistic work. It is of easy explanation. Every indication points to a revival of interest in it. The church simply cannot thrive without it. The office of the evangelist is by divine appointment and the church will neglect it at her peril.

This kind of evangelism has always been more or less crude, although not a little of it has been remarkably sane and thorough and efficient, and with all that might be said adversely it is still true that it has brought to the church, as any candid investigator will cheerfully admit, a goodly proportion of her numerical increase across the years that have gone.

There is absolutely no excuse for the unreasonable prejudice of some pastors who will work to death a hundred good women at all sorts of questionable entertainments to raise enough money to buy a pipe-organ to the accompaniment of which a godless choir will sing heathen music in an unknown tongue and call that worship, but will not allow a man to stand in their pulpit who is notably successful for winning men and women to Christ, because, forsooth, he is an evangelist.

The value of this work cannot be over-estimated. It is simply tremendous. If I had a child of my own I would want that it should always love its Father in heaven more than its earthly parents; I would want that no sin should ever stain its life, but could I, in view of what human nature has become, reasonably hope for such a thing? And when by the grace of God the regenerating and transforming work of the Holy Spirit was to take place in that child's life I would earnestly pray that he, or any other one dear to me, might experience that change in the midst of a mighty spiritual revival when the church and the whole community was at an intense spiritual heat, and when out of a broken and a contrite heart, with deep and conscious guilt oppressed, he would come crying,

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that Thy blood was shed for me;
O Lamb of God, I come, I come."

For then I know that God could stamp the image of Christ upon his soul in such a way that it never could be effaced.

Brethren, pastors and evangelists, the hour is struck. Let us give ourselves together to the mighty task before us. Let us covet, each one for himself, any gift that will make us wise in winning souls, and let us thank God for that gift in every other man's experience, and thus as we go out into the field the harvest shall come when he that soweth and he that reapeth shall rejoice together and the Lord will come and rain righteousness upon us.

Above all let us not forget that methods are secondary; results are primary.

A young minister said to an evangelist one night at the close of a successful meeting:

"I was glad to see souls saved tonight, but I don't just like the way you ask them to rise and come forward."

"I don't either," replied the evangelist, "how do you do it?"

"Well," said the young minister, "I—I—don't do it at all."

"Well, then," said the evangelist, "I like the way I do it better than the way you do it."

Taken from: The King's Business.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE REPORTS OF THE SPIES

(Lesson for Sept. 18)

Lesson Text: Num. 13:1-3, 25-33; Golden Text, Ps. 27:1

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Report of the Spies. Num. 13:25-33

On the one side the weak knees and faint hearts of men trusting in their own strength, and on the other side the courage, faith, and hope of those who put their trust in a God of power and might. What a difference in the two reports! But this is no ancient story; it is repeated many times in the experience of every congregation. There are always those who would hold back when the men of vision, yea, when God himself, urge that we go forward. May God help us ever to rightly divide in such matters and, with patience and charity, to follow his leading into the good land which he has promised.

TUESDAY

Distrust and Confidence. Num. 14:1-10

The distrust of the people was, in its last analysis, a distrust of God. Would a righteous God have led them forth from Egypt in such marvelous ways, promising them a good land for an inheritance, only to bring them to the borders of that land and there leave them to a hopeless struggle for a worthless land? What a beautiful contrast is the plea of Caleb and Joshua: However strong the enemy, we need not fear, for the Lord is with us! And God honored their report with the glory of his presence. The same God has promised to seal our testimony with his presence if only we will go up into the land he has prepared for us. (Matt. 28:19, 20). Let us have courage to say, "If Jesus goes with me I'll go anywhere!"

WEDNESDAY

The Courage of Faith. Josh. 1:1-9.

Countless thousands have given their lives as martyrs of the Cross, firm in the belief that they were doing the will of God, and that God was with them and blessing their effort. Many of these were simple souls, backward and retiring by nature; without the assurance of God's presence they would never have had the courage to face such suffering. Today we have not yet resisted unto blood, but the end seems rapidly heading up, and already there are many situations arising which call for courage. Let us read v. 9 and go forth with all the courage of faith. And let us not forget to praise him for his blessed assurance.

THURSDAY

The Strength of Faith. John 14:6-12

Caleb's physical strength was remarkable, but it was less remarkable than the strength of faith that led him to pick such a task for himself at his time of life. He might well have pleaded for a better inheritance, one requiring less arduous fighting. How much is summed up in those simple phrases of v. 14: "Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb.... because that he wholly followed the Lord God of Israel." Let us pray that we and all his professed followers may WHOLLY follow our God, and so shall we win the promised inheritance for ourselves, and glory for our God.

FRIDAY

The Grounds of Faith. Ps. 91:1-16

The grounds of faith are in Christ Jesus. Apart from him we have no hope or confidence, but we can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us. However great and discouraging the task, or however dangerous the mission, we find in him our refuge and fortress. How blessed to dwell under the shadow of the Almighty and be ever conscious of his mighty strength rising up above our own weakness! Let us praise him for the precious faith he has given us.

SATURDAY

"If God Be For Us." Rom. 8:31-39.

God has already showed himself so strong in behalf of his people that we cannot understand how they could hold back in fear when he would have led them on. Caleb used almost these same words in urging the people forward. But we have tasted far more of the grace of God than Israel ever knew, and it is even stronger for us to say: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" O God, increase our faith in thy gracious and constant goodness to us all!

SUNDAY

God's Gracious Care. Ps. 95:1-11

"He is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand." Is not this a wonderful picture of God's gracious care? Let us not harden our hearts against such a loving God, but let us sing unto the Lord, for he is a great God!

Minutes of the Semi-Centennial Conference

MINUTES OF THE FORTY-FOURTH GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

The Forty-Fourth General Conference of the Brethren church which is the Semi-Centennial Celebration of the Brethren church, convened on Monday evening, August 22, 1932, at Winona Lake, Indiana. Moderator W. I. Duker officially declared the conference in session. The Conference music director, Chas. A. Bame, was presented who announced the opening song, "How Firm a Foundation." After a spirited song service the invocation of God's guidance upon the Conference was offered by Chas. A. Bame.

The period devoted to Bible exposition was occupied by Dr. J. C. Beal, who led in a study of the Book of Philippians. Conference joined in singing, "Savior More Than Life to Me." Miss Dorcas Bame in a pleasing manner sang a solo which was enjoyed by every one. The Vice Moderator, S. M. Whetstone, preached the evening sermon upon the subject, "The Supremacy of God's Word." Benediction was pronounced by A. V. Kimmell.

Tuesday Morning

The morning session opened with the singing of "Work for the Night Is Coming." The devotions were conducted by H. E. Eppley, who read the twelfth chapter of Romans and offering prayer. The initial report of the Credential Committee revealed the presence of 59 ministerial and 84 lay credentials totaling 143 delegates. This report was duly adopted. A motion prevailed that the chair appoint one member to the Committee on Rules and Organization. N. V. Leatherman was appointed.

Conference moved that the secretary be asked to cast the deciding ballot and thus elect all officers where only one name appears on the ballot. The result of the election is as follows: Moderator, W. C. Ben-shoff; Vice Moderator, Robert Porte; Secretary, J. L. Gingrich; Assistant Secretary, L. E. Lindower; Treasurer, Ira C. Wilcox; Statistician, Geo. Cone.

Committee on Committees: C. L. Anspach, L. G. Wood, G. W. Rench. The newly elected officers were officially presented and introduced to Conference.

The new Conference Executive Committee was next elected: Ohio, Dr. E. E. Jacobs, W. S. Crick; Southern California, Alva J. McClain; Northern California, J. Wesley Platt; Northwest, Willis Belcher; Southeast, Homer Kent, E. L. Miller; Illiokota, A. R. Staley; Midwest, L. G. Wood; Indiana, R. F. Porte, G. L. Maus; Pennsylvania, C. H. Ashman, W. E. Ronk.

Business session closed by singing, "Holy Ghost with Light Divine." Freeman Ankrum led the Conference to the Throne of Grace in prayer.

The first Bible lecture of the Conference was brought by R. F. Porte on one of the distinctive doctrinal themes, "Baptism and Confirmation."

Tuesday Afternoon

The afternoon session convened by singing, "My Jesus I Love Thee." Devotions were conducted by R. D. Barnard, who read Philippians 2:1-10 and offering of prayer. Conference united in singing "Till the Whole World Knows." A most interesting address was read by S. C. Henderson, entitled, "Brethren History From Germantown to the Pacific Ocean." Very appropriately Conference sang "Onward Christian Soldiers."

The second address of the afternoon was delivered by R. D. Barnard stressing, "The Importance of Successful Home Missions in the Present Crisis of the Brethren Church." The benediction was pronounced by R. D. Barnard.

Tuesday Evening

Song service for the hour was opened by singing "Marching On to Zion." Invocation of God's guidance was asked by J. L. Bowman.

J. C. Beal brought his second Bible exposition of the Book of Philippians. The California Male Quartette rendered two soul stirring vocal selections which prepared the hearts for the second Bible lecture, "The Doctrine of God" by Alva J. McClain. The benediction for the day's work was asked by Alva J. McClain.

Wednesday Morning

Session properly convened by singing "Tis So Sweet to Trust in Jesus." God's guidance upon the evening session was petitioned by Bertram King. The second report of the Credential Committee revealed the presence of 77 ministerial and 152 lay credentials or a total of 229 delegates. Above report was adopted by proper vote. The minutes of the previous business session were read and approved.

The Committee on Committees submitted their report to Conference which was adopted and is as follows:

Report of Committee on Committees

Rules and Organization: J. Allen Miller, Chairman, C. A. Stewart, C. D. Whitmer. Sunday School Nominating Committee: Homer Kent, chairman, A. E. Whitted, Loren T. Black. C. E. Nominating Committee: H. E. Eppley, chairman, Frank Coleman, M. L. Sands. Finance Committee: Ira Wilcox, Chairman, Fred Franks, Clark White. Committee on Moderator's Address: Chas. A. Bame, Chairman, H. F. Stuckman, C. C. Grisso. Committee on Conference Membership: Robert Porte, Chairman, L. V. King, Grant McDonald, H. M. Oberholtzer, Delbert Flora. Committee on Resolutions: W. S. Bell, Chairman, A. B. Cover, Jas. Cook. Committee on Inter-Church Relations: Willis E. Ronk, Chairman, Martin Shively, G. C. Carpenter, S. M. Whetstone, Jos. Gingrich. Committee on Spiritual State of Churches: J. C. Beal, (Ohio) Chairman; Chas. W. Mayers (So. Cal.); E. L. Miller, (Southeastern); Claud Studebaker (Pennsylvania); Freeman Ankrum (Indiana); H. H. Rowsey (Mid-West); Miles Taber (Illiokota); Harold Fry (Northwest); J. Wesley Platt (Northern California); R. Paul Miller, Member at large. Committee on Boys' Work: Geo. H. Jones, Chairman, Paul Bauman, Wm. Steffler, R. R. Haun, Russell Barnard.

Board of Benevolence: F. C. Vanator, Chairman, G. L. Maus, Frank Roscoe. Committee on Education: E. E. Jacobs, Chairman, J. Raymond Schutz, R. A. Hazen. Committee on Church Organization and Administration: Alva J. McClain, Chairman, Chas. H. Ashman, Kenneth Monroe, A. V. Kimmell, L. S. Bauman.

Respectfully submitted,

G. W. RENCH,

L. G. WOOD,

C. L. ANSPACH, Chairman.

The following reports were read before Conference and adopted to be spread upon the minutes:

Report of the Committee on Brethren's Home-Benevolent Board Merger

In the matter of merging the two boards representing the interests of the Brethren Home and Benevolences the committee, composed of eleven members, appointed at the General Conference of 1931, wishes to make the following report:

1. During the past year the committee has been in correspondence relative to the advisability of such a merger, with the result, after having heard from every member of the committee, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that the time for such a merger was not opportune.

2. A number of recommendations have been made relative to the administration of the Benevolent interests, but none of such a nature that a common ground for merging could be found.

3. Therefore the committee asks for an extension of time until the Conference of 1933, in order that they may study further the problems relative to such action.

F. C. VANATOR.

(Editor's Note—National Sunday School financial report appeared in a previous issue of the Evangelist and is not here reproduced, but it will appear in the "Annual" in proper place.)

Motion prevailed that the moderator appoint a Fraternal Greetings Committee to convey Christian greetings to the Eel River Christian Conference in session. Brethren Wm. Beachler, Alva J. McClain and R. F. Porte were appointed in this capacity.

Conference emerged into the succeeding period which was devoted to Benevolence and the Brethren Home interests by singing, "The Solid Rock." J. Allen Miller presided over this period. Upon the recommendation of the Brethren Home Board, Conference reelected Brethren Ephraim Culp and Martin Shively as members of said Board. A financial report of the work of the Brethren Home was read and approved as follows:

Financial Report of the Brethren Publishing Company for the Fiscal Year Ending July 31, 1932

Gross Sales and Income
Bank Balance, Aug. 1, 1931 .....	$ 544.76
The Brethren Evangelist .....	3,710.84
Commission Goods .....	1,823.00
Job Work .....	7,881.42
Loans Secured .....	3,100.00
Miscellaneous .....	305.20
Publication Day Offering .....	391.22
Rents .....	1,105.10
Sunday School Literature .....	10,402.11
Tracts .....	31.95
Total .....	$29,295.60

Resources

Current and Fixed Assets
Bank Balance .....	334.20
Buildings and Grounds .....	45,000.00
Accounts Receivable .....	2,746.57
Paper Stock .....	880.00
Engravings and Electros .....	550.00
Furniture and Fixtures .....	650.00
Machinery and Equipment .....	17,250.00
Tracts .....	325.00
Stamps and Petty Cash .....	3.13
Total .....	$67,738.90

Liabilities

Building Debt .....	$ 9,500.00
Current Notes Payable .....	1,200.00
Accounts Payable .....	1,442.82
Tract Fund .....	200.00
Total .....	$12,342.82
Total Resources .....	$67,738.90
Total Liabilities .....	12,342.82

Net Resources .....$55,396.08

Year's Expenditures

Advertising .....	$ 42.03
Book Binding .....	144.61
Building Upkeep .....	67.40
Commission Goods .....	1,206.67
Current Supplies .....	38.25
Engravings .....	80.54
Equipment .....	80.40
Freight & Truck .....	179.91
Interest .....	657.02
Insurance .....	295.38
Ink .....	54.32
Incinerator .....	239.73
Labor .....	16,245.77
Light, Heat and Power .....	1,070.18
Miscellaneous .....	249.03
Paper Stock .....	2,589.46
Postage .....	722.30
Refunds .....	6.50
Repairs .....	268.56
Repaid Loans .....	3,300.00
Stencils, etc. ....	20.24
Stories .....	348.53
Taxes .....	388.40
Telephone Rent .....	59.60
Type Metal .....	10.22
Water Rent .....	108.76

Total .....$28,481.81
Bank Balance .....$ 334.20

.....$28,816.01
Bank Balance, Aug. 1, 1931 ...$ 544.76
Cash Received During Year ...$28,271.25

Total .....$28,816.01
We have this day checked the above report with the books of The Brethren Publishing Company, and find it correct according to the record of the year's business.

Signed,
ANDREW MILLER, Accountant,
J. L. HAMILTON.
R. R. TEETER, Business Manager.

Annual Report of the Finances of the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church 1931-32

That this has been the most trying year our Mission work has ever experienced, hardly needs to be stated. We have experienced a reduction in our income of nearly twenty per cent. We have been faced with the most difficult problems in administration possible. In the midst of reorganizing our work to meet the tremendous needs of our denominational situation in America, nearly every conceivable difficulty and hindrance have arisen to prevent progress.

But our Board can truly say with Paul, "None of these things move us." We are not discouraged, but believe that these things have rather turned out to the furtherance of the gospel.

All our growing churches under our Board have registered gains. An actual net increase of three hundred and four members has come to us this year. The local expenses of each church have been kept paid so that there is less than $100 in bills in all of them together. This means that sacrifice and good management have prevailed. There has not been one pastor to complain at conditions. Courage, faith, and cheerfulness prevail among our workers, and none feel the pinch of depression more than they. In fact, they have always "enjoyed" depression. One of our pastors wrote characteristically, "I will not let the church close so long as I have two hands to work to keep it going."

The work is great, the burdens are heavy, but "there is no depression in God" so we are going on, believing there are blessings from God for those who are faithful and true. We want to thank all who have prayed for us and the work this year, and

ELDER MARLIN RETRACTS STATEMENTS

and Apologizes Before National Ministerial Association of the Brethren Church in Open Session at Winona Lake, Indiana

"After hearing the testimony, I have been convinced that in my attempt to arouse the Brotherhood and promote the work of the Lord Jesus Christ I have been wrong in my method, too vigorous and outspoken in my language, and have in too many instances made insinuations and false statements based on, and provoked by much misinformation from many of my brethren, and have called my brethren by unchristian names.

"Furthermore, I am sorry for and greatly regret the injury done to the cause of Ashland College, Ashland Seminary, the Home Mission Board of the Brethren Church, the Foreign Mission Board, the work of the 1931 Conference, and church leaders in general.

"I now frankly, humbly and sincerely repent, retract and ask forgiveness for all offenses and promise to make the policy of the Postscript conservative, promoting harmony and peace in the Brotherhood, so far as the Postscript may deal with it.

"I do hereby promise to give full publicity to this statement through the pages of the Postscript.

"(Signed) H. C. MARLIN."

After Brother Marlin's apology had been unanimously accepted by the association of ministers, the following statement assuring him of their forgiveness was also unanimously adopted:

"It is understood and agreed by all members of the National Ministerial Association of the Brethren Church who have been offended by articles and terms used in the Postscript up to and including issue of August 15, 1932, that full and free forgiveness be extended Elder H. C. Marlin for all offenses made, following his apology and promise not to further offend in such manner, and we recommend such an attitude to all men and organizations of the Brethren Church."

Taking account of another factor of the situation the following resolution was presented: "Resolved: that it is the feeling of this Association that the action of the person or persons who have written unsigned defamatory articles for publication in the Postscript, or who have furnished untrue reports, be utterly condemned by this Association as both cowardly and malicious; and that if identified these persons shall be dealt with by this Association, as far as possible."

A motion to adopt the resolution carried without opposition.

for the sacrifices back of all the gifts to the work. May his abundant grace sustain every partaker.

The following are the points to which financial aid has been given by the Missionary Board of the Brethren church, during the year 1931-1932.

Location	W. M. S.	Home Bd.
Phila., Pa. (3rd) .....	$ 100.00	$ 200.00
Winchester, Va. ....		133.00
Roanoke, Va. ....	200.00	413.50
Grafton, W. Va. ....		300.00
Ellet, O. ....	200.00	100.00
Muncie, Ind. ....		200.00
Osceola, Ind. ....		215.00
Peru, Ind. ....	250.00	400.00
Ft. Wayne, Ind. ....	400.00	800.00
Ft. Scott, Kans. ....	400.00	690.00
Spokane, Wash. ....	100.00	*1014.70
Huntington, Ind. ....		439.73
Krypton, Ky. (C. E.)..		2575.57
Lost Creek, Ky. ....		371.95
Uniontown, Pa. ....	100.00

Totals .....$1,750.00 $7,853.45
C. E. ....$123.00

* This amount is greater than appropriation allowed. The need of paying off over $1,000.00 local bills made necessary this aid. The extra advance is being refunded to the Board at the rate of $10.00 per week.

Treasurer's Report

August 1, 1931-August 1, 1932
General Fund

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1931 ...$ 319.77
Received during the year ..... 15,912.86

.....$16,232.63
Disbursements during year .....14,607.92

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1932 ..$ 1,624.71
Church Erection Fund

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1931 ...$ 360.05
Received during year ..... 22.25

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1932 ...$ 382.30
Muncie, Indiana, Building Fund

Properly in the fund .....$ 1,593.95
Transferred Gen. Fund, 1929 .... 1,500.00

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1932 ...$ 93.95
Wheeler Estate Fund

Properly in the fund .....$ 2,465.68
Temporary transfer

General Fund, 1930 ..... 2,000.00

.....$ 465.68
Invested in Building & Loan ...$ 465.68

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1932 ...$ .00
Annuity Fund

Annuities received .....$ 7,000.00
Loaned to Osceola Mission .... 2,500.00

.....$ 4,500.00
Transferred to Gen. Fund on decrease of Annuitant .....$ 500.00

.....$ 4,000.00
Temporary Transfer Gen. Fund ..$ 2,500.00

.....$ 1,500.00
Interest accrued .....$ 88.42

.....$ 1,588.42
Invested in Building & Loan ...$ 1,588.42

......00
Interest received during year ...$ 96.47
Transferred from Gen. Fund ...$ 393.93

.....$ 490.40
Interest paid out during year ....$ 490.40

Balance on hand Aug. 1, 1932 ... $ .00

Total bal. on hand Aug. 1, 1932 $ 2,100.96

Certificate of Auditing Committee

I hereby certify, that I have audited the books of the Missionary Board of the Brethren Church for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1932, and in my opinion, the foregoing statements of receipts and disbursements are correct statements for the period mentioned.

E. W. BAUMGARTNER,

Cashier, Bank of Berne, Berne, Indiana.

Gifts Designated for Kentucky Work

Receipts

National C. E. .... $ 123.00
Tuition and clothing room receipts, Krypton ..... 407.86
Gifts designated for Kentucky ... 348.13
Additional from General Fund ... 2,191.53
Total ..... $ 3,070.52

Disbursements

Lyda Carter ..... $ 495.00
Frank Gehman ..... 1,000.00
Mrs. Elizabeth Bates ..... 229.32
Bertha Banks ..... 332.50
Current Expenses, Krypton ..... 420.00
Notes pd. on property, Krypton ... 221.75
Riverside Institute, ins., etc. .... 371.95
Total—disbursed ..... $ 3,070.52

Operating Expenses

Stationery and Printing ..... $ 10.67
3,000 Fin. reports, 1931 ..... 71.50

Total stationery and printing ... $ 82.17
Postage ..... $ 84.00
Office Rent ..... 123.10
Office Secretary ..... 1170.00
Secretary-Treasurer ..... 619.92

Total Operating Expenses ... $ 2079.19

Literature

Brethren Witness magazine—1 yr., total including cuts, etc. .... $ 1,054.47
Thanksgiving Offering Propaganda, Kansas ..... 281.08
Total ..... $ 1,335.55

Field Work

Field work (Secretary) ..... $ 442.00
Traveling Expenses ..... 177.50
Total ..... 619.50
Offerings received by Sec. .... $ 142.00

Total ..... $ 477.50

Miscellaneous

Insurance ..... $ 39.96
Board Meeting, Winona, 1931 ... 156.00
Frank Gehman, Conf. exp. .... 25.00
Executive Committee meeting ... 18.10
C. C. Grisso, Revival, Ft.
Scott, Kansas ..... 50.00
Sundry expenses, such as office supplies, taxes on Kans. lots, telephone and telegrams, typewriter repairs, etc. .... 197.05
Total ..... $ 486.11

Report Showing Gain or Loss in Offerings According to Districts

	1930	1931	1931	1932
State
Ohio	$1915.92	$2194.98	$ 279.06
Indiana	2035.45	1786.63	248.92
Pennsylvania	2885.53	5199.72	(inc. Am.)
			234.19
Southeastern	1697.90	1269.10	428.80
Illiokota	938.68	623.39	315.29
Mid-West	605.96	413.15	192.81

	No. California	171.10	104.27	66.83
So. California	3275.75	1230.59	2045.16
Northwestern	271.78	261.65	10.13

Totals *$13799.07 **$13083.38 715.69

† Increase. ‡ Decrease.

*$1500.00 in Annuities is included in this total.

**$3000.00 in Annuities is included in this total.

Receipts from Other Sources

	National W. M. S.	$1250.00	$1750.00
National C. E. So.	400.00	123.00
An. Conf. offering	572.58	509.00
Int. received	147.50	177.06
Field work		142.00
Sundry unclassified
receipts	138.05	150.67

Total ..... $3508.12 $2851.73
Grand Total ..... $17306.20 $15935.11

The Leading Churches

Fiscal year offerings, 1931-1932

1. Dayton, O.	$626.33
2. Washington, D. C.	367.59
3. 1st, Philadelphia, Pa.	385.00
4. Hagerstown, Md.	337.84
5. 3rd, Philadelphia, Pa.	332.57
6. 1st, Long Beach, Calif.	317.00
7. Berne, Ind.	287.62
8. 2nd, Los Angeles, Cal.	285.40
9. Waterloo, Iowa	242.49
10. First, Johnstown, Pa.	227.50

R. PAUL MILLER, Sec.-Treas.

Treasurer's Report of the Brethren Home

For the fiscal year—August 1, 1931 to July 31, 1932.

Receipts

Balance in General Treasury, Aug.
1, 1931 ..... $ 40.52
Rent on Coin Property ..... 18.84
Miss Lauderbaugh ..... 800.00
Balance on Bond ..... 115.80
Mrs. White ..... 62.50
Bank Dividend ..... 106.34
Byman Estate ..... 1,232.16
Henry Rinehart ..... 1,000.00
Henry Rinehart—Gift ..... 500.00
From Churches ..... 651.85
Rent and Sold Off Farm ..... 671.86
From Individuals ..... 70.40

Total Receipts—General Treasury $5,270.27

Disbursements

John T. Briggs, Superintendent ... $ 616.30
Cyrus Meyer, Superintendent ... 466.64
Making New Rooms ..... 416.65
Insurance ..... 126.38
Annuities ..... 1,930.00
Lafayette Loan Bank ..... 562.88
Help for Matron ..... 200.00
Tax on Nebraska Farm ..... 95.32
Paid on Coin Property ..... 147.50
Brooder Stove and Chicks ..... 32.05
Roy Good, gas ..... 50.00
John Briggs, for Hay ..... 47.00
Northcutt Bros., for Ice ..... 45.00
Voorhees Lumber Co., for lumber and glass ..... 42.24
Ashbaugh & McCorkle, for feed ... 38.33
John Oaks, for coal ..... 65.44
Telephone and Lights ..... 118.38
Two Hogs ..... 16.00
Labor on Pearson farm ..... 62.50
Incidentals ..... 121.41

Total Disbursements—General
Treasury ..... $5,245.02

Matron's Financial Report

Money received ..... $591.95

Paid Out ..... 591.95

Balance in Treasury ..... $ .00

Recapitulation

Money Received—
By General Treasurer ..... $5 270.27
By Matron ..... 591.95

Total—All sources ..... $5,862.22

Disbursements—
By General Treasurer ..... $5,245.02
By Matron ..... 591.95

Total—All Sources ..... $5,836.97

Cash Balance on Hand July

31, 1932 ..... $ 25.25
Amount in General Treasury ..... $25.25
Amount in Matron's Hands ..... $ .00
Outstanding Indebtedness July 31, 1932
Budrow Hardware Company ..... $ 54.34
Flora Sawmill Co. ..... 12.00
Roy Good, gas and oil ..... 125.23
John Oaks, for Coal ..... 429.50
Dr. Brubaker, medical service .... 190.00
Unpaid Annuities ..... 75.75
Cyrus Meyer, Superintendent ..... 116.66
Mrs. C. A. Hendrix—Matron help ... 50.00
Mrs. Jennie Hendrix—Matron help ... 50.00
Funeral expenses ..... 267.50

Total Indebtedness ..... $1,370.98

Estimated Value of Brethren Home

Farm Land ..... $30,000.00
Main Buildings ..... 35,000.00
Furniture and Bedding ..... 2,000.00
Other Improvements ..... 1,500.00
Coin Property ..... 5,000.00
Rinehart Property ..... 5,000.00
Rinehart Farm, 120 acres ..... 9,000.00

Total ..... $87,500.00

Estimated Value of Stock, Grain and Coal

Horses ..... $ 225.00
Cows ..... 175.00
Farm Implements ..... 120.00
Hogs ..... 120.00
Oats, Corn and Hay ..... 200.00
Auto ..... 50.00
Poultry ..... 100.00
Coal ..... 100.00

Total ..... $1,090.00

For information as to Admission, Gifts, Bequests, Annuity Bonds or any matter pertaining to the Home write the Superintendent or any of the officers of the Board.

Send all money, gifts or donations for the Home to the Treasurer or the Superintendent.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY RINEHART, Treas., Flora, Ind.

Martin Shively presented a brief summary of the origin and history of the project. A. V. Kimmell stressed the financial need of the Home. Fred Vanator presided over the time given to the Benevolence cause and referred to the dire need of greater cooperation in a financial way by the churches. A report of this work was rendered and received and follows:

Financial Report of Superannuated Ministers' Fund of the Brethren Church

September 1, 1931 to August 5, 1932

and

September 1 1931 to August 5, 1932

Indiana and Michigan

	1930-31	1931-32
Southern Ind., S. S. Assn.	$ 29.00
Brethren Church, Tiosa	4.00	2.80
Bethel Br. Ch., Berne	25.00	65.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Goshen	31.16	7.25

Corinth Br. Ch., Twelve Mile	11.50	2.50
Br. Ch., Flora	11.34	17.15
Br. Ch., College Corner	9.51
Fr. Br. Ch., Muncie	15.00	15.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Elkhart	50.00	40.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Ardmore	5.00	5.00
Br. Ch., Mexico	20.00	10.00
Fr. Br. Ch., South Bend	10.15	14.30
Br. S. S., New Paris	25.00	46.01
Br. Ch., Roann	18.05	20.10
Br. Ch., Denver		2.42
Fr. Br. Ch., No. Manchester	70.00	73.40
Br. Ch., Oakville	7.85	8.25
Br. Ch., County Line, Lakeville		6.10
Br. S. S., Burlington	12.40	10.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Warsaw	5.75
Fr. Br. Ch., Peru	8.25	10.80
Br. Ch., (Loree) Bunker Hill		15.79
Br. Ch., Roanoke	2.35	4.50
Br. Ch., (Campbell Lk. Odessa, Mich.	11.85	14.75
Br. Ch. (Center Chapel) Peru	5.70
Fr. Br. Ch., Nappanee	19.76	29.19
Br. Ch., Teegarden		5.15
W. M. S., Ind. Dist. Con.		50.00
Br. Ch., North Liberty		6.85
Total	$379.62	$511.31

Ohio
Fr. Br. Ch., Canton	$ 25.00	$ 25.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Bryan	5.00	28.11
Fr. Br. Ch., Ashland	40.00	76.20
Fr. Br. Ch., Fremont	5.50	16.42
Fr. Br. Ch., Dayton	59.30	116.19
Br. Ch., (Fairview) Washington C. H.		35.00
Br. Ch., Louisville	25.25	25.25
Br. Ch., New Lebanon	12.00	22.10
Br. Ch., Gretna Bellefontaine		7.63
Br. Ch., Glenford		2.00
W. M. S., Ashland		5.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Dayton, (add.)		101.65
Br. Ch., (Clayton) Brookville	2.75	4.00
Br. Ch., (Smithville-Sterling)	18.36	8.13
Fr. Br. Ch., Dayton (Ret. Ck.)		116.19
Br. Ch., West Alexandria	8.50
Fair Haven Ch., West Salem	9.42	6.55
Br. Ch., Pleasant Hill	4.70
W. M. S., Wooster	10.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Mansfield	5.00
Total	$216.26	$595.42

Pennsylvania
Pennsylvania Dist Conf.	$	$200.00
Br. Ch., Martinsburg	21.25	21.95
Fr. Br. Ch., Berlin	16.25	39.40
Fr. Br. Ch., Conemaugh	29.38	41.13
Fr. Br. Ch., Pittsburg	90.00	88.86
Fr. Br. Ch., Meyersdale	40.00	125.00
Br. Ch., (Ragstown) Saxton		2.50
W. M. S. Penna Dist. Con.		25.00
Br. Ch., McKee	10.50	22.90
Third Br. Ch., Johnstown	12.50	20.88
Fr. Br. Ch., Philadelphia	150.00	131.00
W. M. S., Berlin		10.00
W. M. S. Summitt Mills		5.00
Br. Ch., Vandegrift	7.02	4.79
Fr. Br. Ch., Waynesboro	32.00	29.85
Fr. Br. Ch., Uniontown	22.23	30.00
Fr. Br. S. S., Johnstown	5.00	25.00
Br. Ch., Sergeantsville, N. J.	12.50
Br. Ch., Calvary, N. J.	1.00
Highland S. S., Marianna	3.60
Br. Ch., Allentown	11.00
Br. Ch., Lista	5.70
Br. Ch., Masontown	10.00
Jr. Dept., Pittsburg	5.00
Total	$545.28	$823.26

Illioikota
Fr. Br. Ch., Waterloo, Ia.	$ 24.80	$ 73.34
Br. Ch., Millidgeville, Ill.	32.19	37.93
Modern Marys Class Lan. Ill		9.70

W. M. S., Hudson, Ia.	5.00
W. M. S., Waterloo. Ia.	5.00
Br. Ch., N. E. Ia.	2.40	2.18
Fr. Br. Ch., Lanark, Ill.	15.75	10.00
Total	$93.24	$143.15
Mid-West
Fr. Br. Ch., Morrill, Kans.	$ 8.41	$ 8.41
Br. S. S., Carleton, Nebr.	4.13
W. M. S., Carleton, Nebr.	2.50	5.00
Fr. Br. Ch., Portis, Kans.	38.85	23.86
Br. Ch., Carleton, Nebr.	9.31	2.55
Fr. Br. Ch., Falls City, Nebr.	24.58	77.65
Br. S. S., McLouth, Kans.	3.00
Br. Ch., Mulvane, Kans.	1.96
Br. Ch., Hamlin, Kans.	11.67
Total	$101.22	$121.60

California and Washington
Fr. Ch., Los Angeles, Cal.	$ 23.50	$ 12.75
Fr. Br. Ch., Whittier, Cal.	50.00	69.84
Fr. Br. Ch., Laverne, Calif.	17.00	14.25
Fr. Br. Ch., So. Gate, Cal.	14.00	15.00
Women's Bible Class, Lav. Cal	5.00
Br. Ch., Lathrop, Cal.	4.75
Fr. Ch., Long Beach, Cal.	100.00	100.00
2nd. Ch., Long Beach, Cal.	5.00
Fr. Ch., Sunnyside, Wash.	13.00
2nd. Ch., Long Beach, Cal.	5.00
Total	$235.00	$221.59

Maryland-Virginia
Fr Br. Ch., Wash. D. C.	$ 23.00	$ 32.50
Fr. Br. S. S. Wash. D. C.	32.88	79.14
Fr. Br. Ch., Roanoke, Va.		5.00
B Ch. St. Jas. Fairplay, Md.	5.00	3.25
Br. Ch., Terra Alta, W. Va.		4.00
Br. Ch., (Lib) Quicksberge, V.		2.06
Br. Ch., (Lib) Quicksburg, V.		2.06
Br. Ch., (Trin) Pelton, Va.		2.05
Fr. Br. Ch., Hagerstown, Md.	30.31	16.10
Br. Miss. Soc. Oakhill, W. V.		3.54
Total	$120.69	$147.64

Personal Gifts
	1931-32
Mrs A. B. Cover, Los Angeles, Calif.	$ 5.00
J. N. Harrell, Flora, Ind	1.00
Mrs. F. E. Clapper, Canton, Ohio	5.00
Mrs. O. A. Horn, Cleveland, Ohio	1.00
Mrs. Susan Cochran, Wash. C. H. O.	1.00
Mr & Mrs. C. Himmler, Wash. C. H.	2.00
Robert Himmler, Wash. C. H. O.	1.00
Rev. L. G. Wood, Fort Scott, Kans.	2.00
Mrs. Ema J. Devore, Aurelia, Ia.	5.00
Miss Estella Myers, Williamsburg, Ia.	10.00
Mrs. Harriet Kimmel, Falls City, Nebr.	25.00
Seltha Dawson, Marion, Ind.	5.00
John Zuschnitt, Clarksville, Mich.	2.00
Mrs. Orpha Beekley and Eugene, Ashland, O.	3.00
Miss Carrie M. Stoffer, Lost Creek, Ky.	1.00
Mrs. Etta Studebaker, Mulberry Grove, Ill.	1.00
Mrs. C. M. Beachy, Wichita, Kans.	15.00
Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Taber and Rose, Long Beach	5.00
Mary A. Snyder, Ranger, Texas	1.00
D. B. Clum, Parsons, Kansas	10.00
Mr and Mrs. W. W. Heltnan, Oakland, Cal.	20.00
M Alice Ward, Long Beach, Cal.	5.00
Jessie Eyman Estate	492.86
Mrs. H. S. Enslow, Ottawa, Kansas	.40
Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Shank, Hagerstown, Md.	3.00
M. J. S. C. Spickerman, Maryville, Mo.	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mast, Howe, Ind.	1.00
Mrs. Chas. Himmiller,

Washington C. H., Ohio	1.00
Mrs. E. G. Goode, Harrisonburg, Va.	1.00
Nell Zetty, Phoenix, Arizona	2.50
Scott Michael, Slippery Rock, Pa	1.00
Rev. J. W. Beer, Nickerson, Kans.	1.00
Donor Unknown, North Liberty, Ind.	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Merritt, Roann, Ind.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Anspach, Ypsilanti, Mich.	5.00
Seltha Dason, Marion, Ind.	5.00
Rev. and Mrs. L. G. Wood
Fort Scott, Kansas.	1.00
Total	$647.76

General Summary
No. of Chs., S. S. & Soc. Cont.	86
No. of individuals cont.	37
Ch. making largest off. in Ind., North Manchester	$ 73.40
Ch. making largest off. in Ohio Dayton	$ 217.84
Ch. making largest off. in Pennsylvania, Fr. Ch. of Philadelphia	$ 131.00
Ch. making largest off. in Illioikota Dist., Waterloo, Ia.	$ 73.34
Ch. making largest off in Mid-West Dist., Falls City, Nebr.	$ 77.65
Ch. making largest off. in Calif. & Wash., First Ch., Long Beach	$ 100.00
Ch. Making largest off. in Maryland-Virg. Dist., Fr. Br. Ch. & S. S., Wash. D. C.	$ 111.14
Largest indiv. cont. Jessie Eyman estate	$ 492.86
Total Amt contributed	$3211.73
Tax on writing checks	.02

Total amt paid to Frank Roscoe, Treas., Respectfully Submitted, G. L. MAUS, Sec'y.

Superannuated Fund Treasurer's Report For Conference year beginning September 1, 1931

Balance on hand	$ 169.42
Received of G. L. Maus	$3095.52
Total	$3264.94
Disbursements:
Rev. C. E. Glenn	$ 300.00
Rev. J. E. Shope	300.00
Rev. Samuel Keihl	300.00
Rev. B. H. Flora	500.00
Florence N. Kimmel	300.00
Mrs. Orpha Beekley	150.00
Mrs. Sarah Keim	150.00
Mrs. J. F. Koontz	150.00
Mrs. W. C. Teeter	150.00
Mrs. Ethel Harley	150.00
Mrs. S. W. Wilt	150.00
Mrs. Mary Spanogle	150.00
Mrs. P. J. Brown	60.90
Eugene Beekley	60.00
Printing, postage, bonds	24.55

Total	$2392.55
Recapitulation:
Receipts	$3264.94
Disbursements	2392.55

Balance $ 372.39
FRANK ROSCOE, Treas.

Conference joined in singing, "I Shall See the King" and was lead in prayer by E. A. Duker. Edward Coburn sang very pleasingly, "To Do Thy Will." Dr. L. S. Bauman presented his Bible lecture on the "Ordinance of Feet Washing." The closing prayer was offered by Dr. L. S. Bauman.
Wednesday Afternoon
The song "The Solid Rock" was sung as Conference reassembled for the program of the afternoon. Devotions were conducted by Delbert Flora who read 1 John, 1:8-10; Psalm 2, and offered prayer. "Onward Christian Soldiers" was enthusiastically sung. Fraternal greetings were extended from the El River Christian Brethren. This committee included Judge O. W. Whitelock and C. C. Ryan. The latter did the speaking.

Charles A. Bame read an address on the history of printing in the Brethren church. A short business session was called. The Brethren Publishing Co. requested the election of Loren T. Black to membership of their board which was granted. Benediction was pronounced by C. D. Whitmer.

Wednesday Evening

Evening session of conference convened in the usual manner by a spirited song service. The prayer was offered by Jas. C. Cook. In the absence of the scheduled speaker, the program was devoted to missionary nature. Song, "Till the Whole World Knows". Once again Conference enjoyed hearing the California Male Quartette sing. An offering was received which amounted to $45.51. Miss Iva Bauman pleased the Conference by singing "The Ninety and Nine." Dr. Florence Gribble, missionary on furlough from Africa, presented a very interesting message relative to their general work. The address was followed by a solo, "Forget Him, I'll Never Forget Him," by Edwin Colburn. The closing prayer was made by C. H. Ashman.

Thursday Morning—Business

Business session was opened by singing, "I Love to Tell the Story." Floyd Sibert offered the morning prayer. An additional report of the Credential Committee reveals a total presence of 82 ministerial and 179 lay, or 261 credentials in all. Above report was properly accepted. The minutes of the previous business session were read and approved. The financial report of Ashland College was submitted and adopted. It follows:

Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio

Following will be found the Bursar's report of the fiscal year 1931-32.

In the main the figures are satisfactory, notwithstanding the financial stress of this period. Our investments show no decline and the general income is satisfactory.

The enrollment is the largest in the history of the College, the past summer sessions being particularly well attended, and the outlook for the coming year is good.

Following are points to be remembered about the College:

Courses in the Arts and Sciences, Education, Music, and a Seminary in connection.

Ashland College is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Also a member of the Ohio College Association and the Ohio Athletic Conference.

Flourishing Resident Saturday Courses. Total enrollment for the year well over 750 individual students.

Opening of Fall Semester, Tuesday, September 13, 1932.

The expense of attending Ashland College is less than for other schools of similar facilities and recognition.

EDWIN E. JACOBS, President.

Statement of Income and Expense, Year Ending July 31, 1932

Income
Income from General Endowment Fund (Net) .....$17,823.73

Tuition and fees ..... 63,073.07
Book Store (Net) ..... 769.53
Gifts:
National Sunday School Assn. ....$2,000.00
Womans' Missionary Society .... 2,450.00
Education Board ..... 6,847.11
Bequest ..... 196.84
Miscellaneous ..... 718.25

Total Gifts ..... 12,212.20
Other Sources:
Board—Dormitory .....$ 5,048.23
Commissions ..... 398.15
Diplomas ..... 567.70
Piano Rentals ..... 22.00
Room Rentals ..... 2,541.50
Miscellaneous ..... 79.05

Total Income from other sources ..... 8,656.63

Total Income from all sources ..$102,535.16

Expense

Salaries—Administration and Instruction .....$63,231.50
Library Service ..... 2,444.10
Fuel, Light and Water ..... 3,713.32
Student Activities ..... 1,690.53
Postage and Advertising ..... 1,128.58
Dormitory Labor ..... 3,623.00
College Labor ..... 2,911.10
College Expense ..... 2,795.79
Dormitory Expense ..... 1,820.86
Janitor ..... 1,883.60
Collegian ..... 785.36
Insurance, Taxes and Interest.... 1,934.19
Scholarships ..... 1,533.75
Annual (Pine Whispers) ..... 829.33
College Associations ..... 180.00
Seminary House ..... 1,423.08
Miscellaneous ..... 696.60

Total Expense .....92,624.69

Net Income for the year .....$ 9,910.57

The apparent profit is entirely absorbed in the two items of Increased valuation, and Accounts Receivable.

Balance Sheet July 31, 1932

Assets

Current Assets:
Cash:
On Hand .....$ 306.01
In Banks ..... 4,020.55
Due from Endowment Fund.... 763.93

Total Cash .....$ 5,090.49
Accounts Receivable ..... 7,318.90
Notes Receivable ..... 47.25

Total Current Assets .....$ 12,456.64
Fixed Assets:
Buildings and Grounds .....$450,647.01
College Equipment ..... 12,938.88
Dormitory Equipment ..... 10,995.33
Library Equipment ..... 19,374.06
Laboratory Equipment ..... 23,743.02
Domestic Science Equipment .. 594.59
Pianos ..... 1,745.00
Typewriters ..... 702.75

Total Fixed Assets ..... 520,740.64

Total Assets .....$533,197.28

Liabilities and Capital

Current Liabilities:
Notes Payable .....$ 22,101.37
Accounts Payable ..... 1,396.86

Total Current Liabilities .....$ 23,498.23

Capital:
1931 Capital ..... 449,788.58
1932 Net Profit ..... 9,910.57

Total Capital ..... 509,699.15

Total Liabilities and Capital ..$533,197.28
Balance Sheet, Permanent Endowment

July 31, 1932.

Assets

Cash:
In Banks .....$ 450.32
Due from Operating Account .. 1,049.39

Total Cash ..... 1,499.71
Notes Receivable ..... 45,858.21
Investments ..... 364,211.90

Total Assets .....$411,569.82

Liabilities and Capital

Accounts Payable .....$ 763.93
Scholarship ..... 1,000.00
Annuities ..... 51,831.00
Permanent Endowment ..... 357,974.89

Total Liabilities and Capital ..$411,569.82

MARTIN SHIVELY, Bursar.

R. A. HAZEN, Auditor.

(To be continued)

JOS. L. GINGRICH, Sec'y.

"FANATICS AND EXTREMISTS"

One of the most interesting phases of the present supreme effort of the wets to undermine confidence in the Eighteenth Amendment, is to be found in the cartooning of those who stand for prohibition and the word pictures painted of so-called "extreme dries" who are represented as bigoted, prejudiced, narrow, intolerant and unyielding fanatics who have no speaking acquaintance with reason and common sense.

A vast amount of space in the wet metropolitan press is devoted to what is intended for consumption as "sanity" which insists that "sound judgment" and "common sense" should rule in the matter of liquor control and that the people and the government should not be influenced by that type of impractical idealism which is represented as being characteristic of leaders of temperance, prohibition and social service organizations, and for that matter, of government officials who believe in prohibition, and of prohibition enforcement officers.

This "fanaticism" of the dries when stripped of its wet rhetorical decorations, appears to consist in the preposterous effort of these extremists to preserve, defend and protect an article of the Constitution of the United States.

What an interesting theory is thus being promulgated and emphasized by the most unprecedented propaganda in the history of the republic, that citizens and government officials who dare lift their voices or register their convictions in an effort to preserve the Constitution or any part thereof, are thereby necessarily extremists, fanatics, and impractical idealists; while sanity, common sense and patriotic devotion belong only to those who by ridicule, by defiance of government and law, or by insidious suggestion, attempt to persuade the people that any part of the established charter of the government is in substance a mere "scrap of paper."

ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON.

Faith is a noble thing; it soars high; it can read love in God's heart even when his face appears to frown.—James Renwick.

VOL. LIV
Number 36

September 17
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

"A Prayer for the Village Church" and for All Churches as they build through the New Church year

(Which the Lord pitched, and not man.—Heb. 8:2)

Board upon board the little church is building, Far down the street we hear the hammers ring.

Lord, let the work go forward sweetly, kindly,
Marred by no envies, no discordant thing.

Lift Thou Thy hands above each room in blessing;

Hallow these floors to weary, wayward feet.
As sunshine through the panes, let truth illumine

All those who gather, make their coming sweet.

Bless him who comes, the bread and wine dividing;

In hungry souls let fears and doubtings cease;

Faith, hope and love, take here their gracious dwelling,

Till this shall be in truth a House of Peace.

Humble and small, yet fair and pure and comely,

Fit for Thy presence—part of Thy great plan,

So all who gather here shall know it surely
Is the Lord's pitching, not the work of man.

Bertha Gerneaux Woods In The Congregationalist.

That Retiring Disposition

A Contributed Editorial in "The Congregationalist"

(The Editor of our esteemed contemporary publication introduces his splendid article thus—"Editor's Note: The following article was not offered for the editorial columns, but its importance and the strength and clearness of its statement, suggest its use here. Though, for obvious reasons, anonymous, its author is well known to the Editor and to our fellowship. He has accurately described his situation at the time of his retirement." Then the "Congregationalist" editor invites discussion of the matter and proposes to have something to say himself in his next week's issue. Among our own people, too, there might be some desire to express opinion. It is welcome.—Editor.)

To the minister who is thinking of retiring from the active work of the pastorate I have a single word of serious advice to offer: Don't. I would give the same advice to the man in another profession or in business, but just at present I am concerned only with those who are in my own calling. Before going on, however, there is one exception to be noted, whether for the minister or the man engaged in any other occupation. If there is something else that you want to do, something making a stronger appeal or seeming to be worth while, then to retire from your present calling, if you can do it honorably and without shirking a responsibility, may be advisable. In such a case you would still have occupation for your time and abilities, something to live for. But to retire without further aim in life, with the notion that your work is done and that it is time now to rest, that is a mistake, and one that can rarely be retrieved.

I know, for I did it. No matter why I did it, only to say that it was not necessary. In sound health and full physical vigor, so far as I am aware, with mental powers unimpaired, I retired. At first there was an exhilarating sense of freedom: I could do what I wanted to do, and there was no compelling urge to the thousand and one things that I did not want to do, and which had fretted me more or less for forty years of active service. But I soon began to miss my accustomed bonds. The reality of freedom was not all that imagination had pictured it. The things I had thought I wanted to do had lost their alluring charm. There came days when I had the feeling that I was "all dressed up with nowhere to go."

And yet I have been more fortunate than most retired men, for the years of retirement have not been empty nor idle. In at least one of those years I preached more times than in any other year of my life. I have traveled widely, both in our own land and abroad, and in no instance for mere pleasure, but in the course of some service to the churches. I always wanted to travel—when I couldn't do it; when I could do it I found it irksome and longed for the settled service, where I could "stay put." When the opportunity came to exercise a ministry at large, I wanted my own church and my own people. The joy of the ministry is in the settled pastorate. Which is to say, I suppose, that the happiness of every man is found in his own job.

So I say to the minister thinking of retiring, Don't. It is not necessary—or it ought not to be. The man who has put his life into the church has some vested rights, which once were recognized, and should be again. If waning powers or the weight of years forbid the full service, call in younger men to take the burden partially from your shoulders, and stay where you belong, doing what you are able to do. I say, stay where you belong. One of the hardships of the ministry is that upon retiring the minister must go away from his parish and his friends. That may not always be necessary but always it is advisable, and for reasons which need no telling. In these rolling-stone days of the church the minister has become something of a respectable vagabond at best. He is constantly reminded that "Here we have no continuing city." This is a bitter thing for the man of advanced years when old friendships are precious and new ones difficult to form. The retired minister does not belong anywhere.

Nor is he needed anywhere. That is the final bitterness of it. The satisfactions of life are not in getting what you want or doing as you please—not for the minister, anyway. They are rather in the feeling that you are needed, and therefore important; in doing what is demanded of you because you can do it better than anybody else. Unemployment on any terms is repugnant; it seems to imply that one is a part of the redundant population, if not even a cumber of the ground. It is not important that he should go anywhere; only that he shall keep out of other people's way. The situation is not one to be coveted.

And don't think that you have earned your rest, for you haven't. What you have earned is the ability to do some things better than you ever did them before—it is to be hoped you have won that much out of the experience of the years. The proper reward of service is continued employment or, perhaps, a better job.

To retire is to go out to meet death halfway. If death is repugnant and long life desirable, that is a foolish thing to do.

So I say to ministers and to all men. Don't retire. Keep the assurance, or the illusion, that you are important to God and the world as long as you can. Continue to belong somewhere. And, in conclusion read with attention, and pointed application to yourself Tennyson's Ulysses, sometimes called the greatest poem of the nineteenth century.

The Sunday School Editor and Conference

The Sunday School Editor had a fine time at Conference even though he was very busy. He was glad for some new contacts with folks who use the literature which he tries to make Brethren and keep breathing the Brethren spirit.

He was made glad many times with the encouragements that came to him and were voluntarily offered him. He is glad to say that with every major piece of the several issues, we are still ahead of former issues. Modestly he says that, because if we can increase in times when most publications are fighting for their existence or losing, it shows an appreciation by those who are using the literature that ought to argue for others to do the same thing. The Brethren Teacher took a slump in the last quarter. It is the most Brethren of all our publications—therefore—what is the conclusion? I leave you to draw it. All others show gains save the Primary Bible Stories. Yet the Brethren teacher helps teach these lessons. Despite that fact, several have told me that they discontinued other Teacher Helps since the Brethren Teacher fills the bill so well, isn't that funny? Well, my conclusion is that we must use Brethren Literature. No other will make Brethren. If that does not, it can not be done. Brethren, be serious! If ours is not good enough, go after the editor and tell him how to make it.

CHARLES A. BAME.

THE ANSWER TO MATERIALISM

In a time when the missionary enterprise is undergoing a fire of criticism and its friends are as eager to accommodate as its enemies, we say without qualification that, however important these matters may be, we need to remember again that "the world is our parish," that "there is none other Name under heaven among men whereby we must be saved." The only power adequate to the hard, high mountains of human sin and need, in a big world suddenly compacted into a single neighborhood, is the Gospel of peace.

Most of all when science philosophy, and even theology are alike so uncertain about the nature and person of God as to raise questions about his existence, we need, untroubled, to lift our heads, look into the faces of the wisest, most skeptical, and most scornful of mankind, and confidently remember how Jesus said, "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him."

Criticism, materialism, humanism, behaviorism, secularism, nationalism—there is only one answer, the answer of the New Testament. We say it simply, but say it straight and strongly, the answer is a life, the life hid with Christ in God.—The Editor—The Missionary Voice.

IN THIS NUMBER

A Time for Penitence and Prayer—Editor, .....	3
The Kind of Rally Day to Have—Editor, .....	3
What the Political Parties Say on Prohibition—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
The Battle for Bread—C. H. Ashman, .....	5
My Impression of National Conference—J. S. Cook, .....	6
The Brethren Semi-Centennial Conference—L. E. Lindower, .....	6
Injurious Effects of Alcohol—H. H. Smith, .....	7
Bible Reading in the Public Schools—W. W. Howlitt, .....	7
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
The Mystery and Romance of Israel—M. I. Reich, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	10
Brethren Young People at Conference—E. M. Riddle, .....	11
A Reminiscence of a Furlough—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Foster, .....	12
News from the Field, .....	13-15
Our Readers' Views, .....	15
Our Little Readers, .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

A Time for Penitence and Prayer

The most fundamental need of our time is a revival of real religion. Leaders in many walks of life are becoming conscious of it. Outstanding business leaders are feeling and voicing it. Leaders in the affairs of state are recognizing it. Leaders in great moral reform movements are seeing and urging the necessity of it. But most of all do leaders of the church understand the importance of such a revival and earnestly are they appealing to their fellow Christians to cooperate in a serious effort to bring it about. They know better than any other group of people that the distress, suffering and hardship of this old world are due to godlessness and sin, and that there is no way out except through him who declared himself to be "the way, the truth, and the life." Men must repent and turn to God, and acknowledge him as both Lord and Savior. The members of the church must themselves first of all fall upon their knees in penitence, confessing their all-too-prevalent indifference, worldliness and carnality, and, having gotten right with God, must pray earnestly and persistently that men far and wide will turn to God and will walk in his ways. That is the first step—penitence and prayer on the part of professedly Christian people. And Christian people of every name are being challenged to do that very thing.

Officials of many churches have united in calling upon their people to make the week October 2 to 8 a time for special penitence and prayer to Almighty God, with the hope that it will be the beginning of a great movement of repentance and turning to God and to prayer. The Presbyterian General Assembly for 1932 originated the proposal that the churches observe "a special period of penitence and prayer", and many other churches recognized the worth of the proposal and entered into it. The plan adopted was drafted by Dr. Lewis S. Mudge, stated clerk of the General Assembly; Dr. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church of America, and Dr. Charles E. Schaeffer, secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the Reformed Church in the U. S. A. Representatives of twenty-six denominations have cooperated in an appeal and agreed to the following program, by means of which they hope to secure the spirit of fellowship in united intercession. It is suggested that pastors and people shall search their hearts and conduct, and by personal dedication and public services appointed to meet the need of the hour, discover for themselves and bring to the attention of all people the way to peace and power. The daily topics suggested are: October 2, "The Examined Life"; 3, "Penitence"; 4, "Confession"; 5, "God's Sovereignty"; 6, "Prayer"; 7, "Consecration"; 8, "Discipleship." These topics might be made the themes for meditation and prayer in individual or family devotions, and in public services. In many churches it might be practicable to have an entire week of public prayer services, while in others the various themes might of necessity be considered and united prayer offered to those ends in a fewer number of public services. But whether in home worship circles or in public meetings, our people could well afford to be urged to give themselves to penitence and prayer. And the following paragraphs, from the united appeal of these representative church leaders, can well be made the basis of our challenge to our people for humbly and penitently seeking God for cleansing and power:

We address you on urgent business. The Church and the nation face a grave and serious situation. There is on every hand physical and mental suffering. This condition has long continued and no one can point the way of escape. Our best men are powerless before the devastating effects of commercial distrust and moral confusion. While we long for the return of prosperity, we pray rather for the correction of those causes of distress without which prosperity may prove to be other than a blessing.

In many areas within the Church there is urgent desire for a religious awakening. On every hand thoughtful Christians feel that the root of our trouble is moral and spiritual. All laws are moral laws and, while we cannot trace their working, of one thing we are sure, that out of the past has come the present. We reap what we sow.

We have worshiped at the shrines of false gods—the false god of mammon, money, things; the false god of power, production, bigness; the false god of nationalism, individualism, social injustice; the false god of pleasure, amusement, disregard for things sacred; the false god of success, high living, careless thinking; the false god of magic, reaping where we had not sowed, profiting where we had not toiled.

The Church dares not stand aside and whisper peace either to itself or to the nation when there is no peace. Only a national turning to God in repentance and moral restitution, seeking his divine forgiveness, will restore the spiritual health of our people. We have looked for signs of repentance and the fruits thereof. We have not seen them. On every hand there is a demand for prosperity but little evident desire to return to the ways of faith and prayer. The times are giving us moral discipline. God waits on man's response. No social or political revival can come out of spiritual destitution, and no national awakening can arise out of religious indifference. The only adequate way is the way of Christ and the cross.

The Kind of Rally Day to Have

There are Rally Days and Rally Days, and practically every church has one kind or another. Some Rally Days are mere occasions for the launching of special programs, and, no criticism on it, there are some churches that may need nothing more than that. They maintain a good spiritual state continually and do not need a time of special reviving and rallying of forces. For such Rally Day can almost be said to be an end in itself.

Other Rally Days are times for calling together scattered forces from vacation season and setting them to work again, much as school children are summoned from their summer play and started in for another period of study and mental development. And there are churches that need just that, and little more. Their people get considerably scattered during the hot weather months; the "summer slump" is a very real problem or malady (however one may view it), and there is much need of having a time for calling members together and into activity again. Happy is that church that needs nothing more than merely a time of mustering, or re-assembling of forces after a summer's vacation, to bring about a resumption of real spiritual activity and loyalty.

But other Rally Days are times of reviving and renewal of spiritual life. Members have become spiritually ill, and prayer and effort are used to bring about a restoring of spiritual health. Members have gotten out of touch with God and in some manner they must be brought again into a vital relation with him. Other members have grown weary, or indolent, or discouraged or indifferent, and something must be done to re-energize, or revive, or encourage them and to re-enlist them with zeal in the service of Christ and the church. When a church is depleted in spirituality and in power, when it is lacking in a sense of responsibility and the spirit of aggressiveness, then there is nothing more heartening than one day to be able to say of it, It is rallying, showing signs of improvement, growing stronger. For such a church Rally Day is not an end, but a beginning; not so much a particular time as a new state or condition of life, a state of convalescence, or recuperation. It is a time when the church is being renewed with vitality and recharged with power. That kind of a Rally Day is cause for encouragement and rejoicing. And more churches are in need of that kind than any other.

What the Political Parties Say on Prohibition

No real believer in Prohibition is satisfied with what either of the major political parties has pledged itself to do. However, they have not both said the same thing. One has lamely yielded to the "wet" propaganda to the extent that it thought was necessary to political success and has offered to re-submit Prohibition to a vote of the people along with a constructive substitute, while the other has, influenced by the same desire for political success, set itself avowedly to destroy Prohibition, with no promise of a substitute. Following the suggestion of The Presbyterian Advance, we are placing the two planks in parallel columns to enable our readers to see exactly how they compare. It is worth while to observe that the Republican platform, in addition to promising a constructive substitute and enforcement of the law, says nothing about modifying the Volstead Act or the licensing of beer and other alcoholic beverages, while the Democratic platform, in addition to favoring outright repeal of Prohibition, and immediate modification to legalize manufacture and sale of beer and other alcoholic beverages, makes no promise to enforce the present Prohibition law.

Democratic

"We favor the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

"To effect such repeal, we demand that the Congress immediately propose a constitutional amendment to purely representative conventions in the states, called to act solely on that proposal."

"We urge the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively prevent the return of the saloon and bring the liquor traffic into the open under complete supervision and control by the states."

"Pending repeal, we favor the immediate modification of the Volstead Act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue."

Republican

"We do not favor a resubmission limited to the issue of retention or repeal."

"We believe that the people should have an opportunity to pass upon a proposed amendment the provisions of which, while retaining in the Federal Government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the evils inherent in the liquor traffic—"

"Shall allow states to deal with the problem as their citizens may determine, but subject always to the power of the Federal Government to protect those states where prohibition may exist and safeguard our citizens everywhere from the return of the saloon and attendant abuses."

"The duty of the President of the United States and of the officers of the law is clear. The law must be enforced as they find it enacted by the people. To these courses of action we pledge our nominees. . . . Nullification by non-observance by individuals or state action threatens the stability of government."

lications at Conference time, but more important as evidence of general appreciation of his work is the increased use of the lesson quarterlies. The Evangelist has stoutly insisted all along, and now does, that Brethren people can find no better literature for Brethren Sunday schools than that made by our own Publishing House. It is good; it is safe; it is Brethren. That is what you want to make good Brethren church members, and no other literature will do that.

Brother E. L. Miller, of Maurertown, Virginia, recently assisted the pastor and people of Mathias, West Virginia, in a revival meeting of two weeks resulting in "several additions" to the church. The meetings closed with a well-attended and deeply spiritual communion service, according to the report of Brother Arthur Snider, who also remarks about the high appreciation of the evangelist's services and of the helpfulness of two of his daughters.

Brother E. M. Riddle, president of the Brethren Christian Endeavor Union, writes of the activities of the young people at General Conference. Our youth groups were much in evidence, and they contributed not a little to the sum total of Conference zeal and optimism. Brother Riddle has just gotten located in Waterloo, Iowa, as pastor of the Brethren church of that city. He says he is pleased with the outlook, but will report later.

Our correspondent from Roanoke, Virginia, writes that the Lord's work at that place is moving forward under the efficient and highly appreciated leadership of Brother and Sister Herman Koontz. This little group of zealous souls is faced with a great challenge, that of meeting a $1,100 payment on their new church by the 20th of this month. They have already given nobly, and they are looking forward to meeting this obligation with sacrifice and faith in God that he will provide. They invite not only gifts from friends over the brotherhood, but also the purchase of some bonds, by which means those who may have money to invest may do so profitably and also help the church. Here is an opportunity both to help the Lord's work and to make a safe investment.

We are glad to reproduce this week a statement concerning the long and highly successful teaching record of Prof. G. W. Brumbaugh on the occasion of his retirement from public school service in the city of Dayton, Ohio. Forty-eight years is a long time to be privileged to instruct and to mould young life. What influence the faithful teacher must have wrought in that period on those under his care, and how fully also must the powers and qualities of his own life have been drawn out and developed in that time. Brother Brumbaugh is honored not merely because of his long and valued service in the field of education, but also because of his long and faithful service in the Dayton church, from which service he is not retiring. He has been for many years active in the work of the Ohio district and is a past moderator of its conference. And those who are regular attendants at National Conference will know that he is not an unfamiliar figure there. The Evangelist delights to honor him for the long and excellent service he has rendered the church and youth.

We have an interesting letter this week from Brother and Sister J. H. Foster, missionaries to French Equatorial Africa, recounting their pleasant experiences while on furlough in the States. They reached Kribi, West Africa, July 10th, when they were compelled to remain under quarantine for at least ten days because their boat had stopped at a port where there was smallpox. From there they wrote July 20th, expecting to leave the next day for Ubangui-Chari. It certainly must be a joy almost beyond parallel to be a returned missionary, with a blessed experience of light-bearing to tell about and with heart overflowing with zeal and love for the Lord Jesus, going about making and renewing friendships and binding men's hearts and prayers up with the work in which one is engaged. But if it is so, it is also a great source of blessing to meet returned missionaries, to hear the burning messages of their hearts and to be subjected to the contagion of their religious zeal and faith. Why should not such devotion more commonly characterize the Christians of the homeland? May God give us more of the missionary spirit in the home churches, and particularly on the part of their leadership.

PRAYER REQUEST FOR THIS WEEK—

Brother R. A. Foster writes: "We covet the continual prayer of our people that we may be very useful during this term of service."

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

Prof. M. A. Stuckey went East this week to take part in two Sunday school institutes, one at Mount Pleasant, Pennsylvania on the 15th and another at Philadelphia, First church, on the 16th.

Our little readers will enjoy Mrs. Jobson's story this week which answers according to African legend the question, "Why the lizard moves his head up and down." Would you trust Anansi, after what he did?

Brother G. E. Drushal's mother, Mrs. Mary Drushal, 87, resident of West Salem, Ohio, passed away on September 10th at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rose Leiby, from whose home the funeral was held. We extend sincerest sympathy to Brother Drushal on behalf of the Evangelist family in his sorrow.

A postcard from Brother John F. Locke, pastor of the churches at Mount Olive and Harrisonburg, Virginia, tells us that Dr. W. S. Bell recently appeared in his pulpit at the Mount Olive church and "brought a message most timely and helpful." He further says, "Our people were very happy to have him as he is always a most welcome visitor in our midst."

A good sister from Huntington, Indiana, writes a letter in "Our Readers' Views" department, urging the importance of winning souls as the first duty of the Christian. Indeed, that is putting first things first. We welcome other readers to write briefly their views in a constructive, helpful manner. That department is yours to use more often, if you wish it.

Dr. Charles A. Bame has a word to say in this issue about Sunday school lesson publications, of which he is the able editor. He received numerous personal expressions of appreciation of his pub-

The Battle for Bread

Or Present Unemployment in the Light of the Holy Scriptures

By Rev. C. H. Ashman

(A sermon preached by Rev. Charles H. Ashman and requested for publication by members of the congregation)

The unemployment situation is most serious. A plague is sweeping over the world. An economic blizzard is raging over the earth. We are fast coming to the point, —not just of poverty and destitution, but of famine of a peculiar type. There always have been and always will be "men out of work." The "poor we have always with us." But today there prevails a peculiar type of famine. The God-ordained law of life is, "man must earn his bread by the sweat of his brow." Paul's command was "he who will not work, shall not eat." These two laws of life ought to be executed. Unemployment is therefore the first step to famine. Attention has been called to the fact that none but the most wealthy of nations and that in a very high state of civilization can keep masses of unemployed fed and even they cannot do it over an extended period without a collapse of the social order. Today, unemployment is most acute in three of the most highly civilized and industrialized nations of the world, namely, England, Germany, and the United States.

Rev. C. H. Ashman,
Pastor First Church of Johnstown, Pa.

Various explanations have been advanced to explain the present situation. Some claim that overpopulation is at fault. They claim that the density of population makes for both food scarcity and unemployment. They use this as an argument for their doctrine of birth control with which they are deceiving many Christians who are scattering their damnable literature of murder. It may be that there shall arise a situation that will fulfill 1 Timothy 4:3—"Forbidding to marry." But this does not explain the present situation. Others maintain that the machine age is at fault. The machine, the iron-man, is fast displacing the human man. The battle has been raging for half a century and the iron-man has won. He is supreme and is here to stay. He ought to prove a blessing instead of a curse. But, he is not an adequate explanation of present day conditions. The fact is, no human explanation of unemployment is satisfactory. Humanly, the causes defy analysis and are enshrouded in mystery. "Men's hearts are failing them for fear of looking after those things which are coming to pass upon the earth." We must look to the Word of God for an explanation.

In Zechariah 8:10, it is foretold, "For before these days, there was no hire for man, nor for beast." The Prophet is foretelling a time of great blessing for Israel which will come during the Kingdom reign of our Lord. But, before those days, there will come a period in which beast and man will be idle. "No hire." No work,—unemployment. The horse and man are idle today. The iron-man does their work.

Jesus foretold "famines and pestilences" in Matthew 24:7. He is answering the questions concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, the end of the age, and the signs of his Coming. He was foretelling the course and end of the present age. He foretells conditions as they prevail today.

In Revelation 6:5-6, there appears a black horse, whose rider holds a pair of balances. A measure of wheat is to be sold for a penny and three measures of barley for a penny. One quart of wheat for 24 cents or $7.68 per bushel. Three quarts of barley for 24 cents or $2.50 per bushel. The black horse follows the red. Red stands for war and black stands for famine. Now,—following the World War, there was unprecedented prosperity. Strange,—for usually there is famine. But the famine is on the way and is even at hand. It has been delayed, but it is coming. This Scripture will meet its complete fulfillment during the Tribulation period, but may have a partial fulfillment now. Note,—the "oil and the wine" are to be spared. The luxuries of life are excluded in this famine. Today,—the luxuries of life are largely excluded from the excessive taxes. Present day taxes hit the poor man and largely spare the rich.

The Bible foretells a time when they will ration out the foodstuffs. Leviticus 26:26 tells, "When I have broken the staff of your bread, 10 women shall bake bread in one oven (community kitchens as in Russia) and they shall deliver you again your bread by weight (so much per in communism as during the Bonus Army sojourn in our city) and ye shall eat and not be satisfied." Primarily this has its application to Israel, but the principle prevails under similar conditions at other times. Someone has said, "The mass of humanity today is composed of men, women, and children, who can just about ward off hunger, cold, and nakedness."

The experiences of Jesus will aid us in understanding these conditions today in the "Battle for Bread." Jesus was plunged into starvation after his baptism. He was driven into the wilderness as many today are being driven with no choice as to where they live, what they eat, etc. He was tempted differently than were Adam and Eve. They were tempted with luscious fruit when they were full. Our Lord was tempted to turn stones into bread after a 40 days' fast. He could have done so, but he did not, to teach us a lesson of life which the world has ignored. "Driven into a foodless desert, in a treeless waste where his carpenter's tools were worthless; among wild beasts where money did not circulate and had no purchasing power; he was tempted to create his own food and thus declare his independence of God." Then he declares, "Man doth not live by bread alone, but by everything that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." He evidently quoted from Deuteronomy 7:3. God has taken the Chosen People out of wealthy Egypt, isolated them from food supplies, sent them into the desert sands, made them face unemployment and famine to teach them dependence upon him. "He suffered thee to hunger and fed thee with manna, that he might make thee to know that man doth not live by bread alone, but by everything that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." 2,000,000 souls were cared for by God under these conditions. He fed them by means and from sources so unaccountable that they said of the food, "Manna, what is it?" The only guarantee of its continuance from day to day was the Word of the Lord. Might it be that God is permitting the present conditions to come to pass to teach us the same lesson?

The hour has come when we need to PRAY IN <sup>1</sup> that part of the OUR FATHER that we pray so thoughtlessly, "give us this day our daily bread." Since man is to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, that prayer should be for employment. We need to learn dependence upon God. God feeds the ravens and is able to feed his prophets by means of ravens. "The young lions seek their meat from God", Psalms 54:21. It is said of George Muller that over 5,000 times he went to bed with no bread for himself and the orphans under him. Asked if he slept, he answered, "Every time." That was dependence on God and God never failed him.

The hour is here to meet the challenge God issues in 2 Chronicles 7:14—"If my people which are called by my name shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins and heal their land." Is the proud heart of man humbled by the Battle for Bread? Is he turning to God in prayer? Has church attendance increased during the depression? Are we seeking the face of the Lord? Are we turning from our wicked ways? There is a report that the governmental authorities have been solicited time and time again to issue a call for a day of fasting and prayer in America. They have refused on the ground that it would unnecessarily alarm the people. It would be poor psychology. They mean, it would be poor politics. Thus America goes on leading the world in divorce, drugs, crime, and murder. God is denied, the Bible is ignored, the church repudiated.

There are certain choices facing us today. It is either Panic or Prayer. It is the Church or Communism. It is Faith or Famine. Thomas Edison, blind for years as to spiritual verities, seems to have come to his senses before passing into eternity. I am not talking about his salvation, but his senses. He was visited by Roger Babson at Ft. Meyer Laboratory. Babson asked him, "What great radical new invention will come next?" He answered, "Babson, I do not pose as a preacher, but there is a God. He will not let us advance much further materially until we catch up spiritually. A great fundamental fact of science is that all forces must be kept in balance. When anybody or force goes off on a tangent, there is a smash." The smash has come! Are we catching up spiritually?

The Church today faces her supreme opportunity for years. God help us to see it! God can forgive us for even talking about "curtailing church activities." This is an hour when we ought to increase our zeal and service. Conditions will not change until hearts are changed. Let us repent, get right with God,—then God will "heal our land."

Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

My Impression of National Conference

By James S. Cook

This forty-fourth annual conference of the Brethren Church that has just closed will go down in history as one of the outstanding conferences in many ways.

This being the semi-centennial year of our church the program was planned to stress the doctrines and ordinances as set forth in the New Testament, and for which the Brethren Church stands.

These special addresses were of a very high order and in thus honoring the Word, they are certain to strengthen the cause for which they were given. The "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints" was Scripturally followed through the conference.

The reports at this conference were most encouraging. Despite the long continued depression our foreign mission work has gone forward, only now showing a shrinkage of funds. While many of the larger denominations are decreasing in membership, ours is steadily increasing.

The number of delegates present at this conference was another encouraging factor. No doubt the sacrifice on the part of most of its delegates and their churches added much to the true Christian spirit that prevailed in the sessions of this conference.

I doubt if any group of ministers more fully manifested the spirit of Christ, than did the ministers of the Brethren Church, as they dealt with some major problems within their body. Thus mutually the body was drawn closer together.

It seems to the writer that this conference, with its present human limitations did all we could ask, and perhaps surpassed much of our faith as it cleared away the mist and charted our course for this coming year.

Portis, Kansas.

The Brethren Semi-Centennial Conference

By L. E. Lindower

Each year at National Conference it is the feeling of those present that we have had a better conference than we have ever had before. Each year also, we ask ourselves, "Can we possibly have a better conference next year?" So it was the case in 1931. But again we must say that the conference of 1932 is the best yet. The semi-centennial occasion was one of the reasons. It means a lot to belong with a group of Christians who for fifty years have preached and taught the Bible as the Word of God, AND WHICH TODAY IS MORE THAN EVER IN ITS HISTORY HOLDING TO THAT DIVINE TRUTH AND WORK.

In speaking of the conference to one of our young people who had been present at a similar gathering of another denomination, the criticism was made that the speakers of this gathering did not use the Scriptures to bolster up and prove their statements. THAT CRITICISM REPRESENTS THE CHIEF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE BRETHREN CHURCH AND OTHER DENOMINATIONS IN GENERAL. Every speaker on the conference program expressed themselves as staunch supporters of the two key doctrines of the Bible as the inspired Word of God, and of Christ as the virgin-born Son of God. The Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church is supporting missionaries and mission stations which are preaching salvation by grace through the shed blood of Christ. The Home Mission board is supporting pastors and churches which are doing the same, and in which the young people of the Brethren Church are helping, through the Christian Endeavor Society. The National Sunday school board is encouraging in every way to have the Bible taught in its Sunday schools and to have more Christian people with a thorough preparation to teach it. The spiritual state of the churches is being emphasized and will be emphasized more and more. Statistics show a greater addition to the church than formerly, through confession of Jesus Christ as Savior. THE BRETHREN CHURCH, WITH ITS MESSAGE FROM THE WORD OF GOD IS GOING FOR-

WARD, AND WILL NOT GO BACKWARD AS LONG AS IT DOES NOT CHANGE ITS MESSAGE.

The criticism has been made that those who emphasize the orthodox doctrines of the Bible do not properly emphasize Christian living. This conference demonstrated the fruit of the Spirit in Christian character under special testing. Under the test of injured personal reputation and pride the spirit of kindness and forgiveness reigned supreme on the part of all concerned. There was also evident a great friendship and fellowship among those present, which is claimed by the residents of Winona Lake themselves, to be a particularly Brethren characteristic.

Such statements are not meant to puff us up with pride but to cause us to give thanks unto the Lord for his blessing and leading to this end. These conditions only prepare us the more to carry out his Great Commission of Good News to every man. This is his work, and may we be yielded to him as instruments of righteousness in his hands.

Injurious Effects of Alcohol

By Rev. H. H. Smith

If prohibition is to win out in the face of the insidious propaganda of the liquor interests and the wets, we must teach the youth of today the disastrous effects of alcoholic liquor as a beverage. Those who lived in the days of the open saloon have a sorrowful recollection of the physical and mental wrecks caused by John Barleycorn. And some of J. B.'s victims of the old days are with us yet. Many of the liquor addicts of today were patrons of the saloon and acquired the habit under the license system. That is one of the great evils of the liquor habit, its far-reaching effects. Several years ago McClure's magazine published a remarkable article entitled, "The Story of an Alcohol Slave as Told by Himself." This victim of the drink habit made the following confession: "During thirty years as a hard drinker he spent $17,000 for liquor; influenced twenty of his friends to drink, five of whom became slaves like himself; was discharged from twenty-four jobs in nineteen years; was once imprisoned for drunkenness, and he estimated the total cost of his slavery to alcohol at $60,000." And this is the traffic some would promote under the plea of personal liberty.

The old theory that liquor promotes physical efficiency has been long exploded, but there are some who still labor under the old delusion. Military leaders do not call for alcohol stimulants for their soldiers, and athletes put themselves on a total abstinence pledge, when they enlist for the games. An eminent surgeon of the British army, observing the soldiers after a very severe test of forced marches, said: "The first who dropped out were not the tall men, nor the short men, nor the big men, nor the little men, but the drinkers. And they dropped out as clearly, as if they had been labeled with a big letter on their backs."

Scientific tests have shown that the use of alcohol retards the intellectual processes, and that brain workers are better off without liquor. Theodore Roosevelt was right, when he said, that there is not a single thought in a hoghead of beer. Where is the man who would claim that liquor has been the making of his career? But neither tongue nor pen can tell of the bright minds that have been wrecked by rum. Several years ago, Dr. Lorenz, an eminent Austrian surgeon, visited this country and attended a banquet given in his honor. Many of the guests drank liquor, as it was passed around the table, but the principal guest pushed his wine aside and asked the waiter to bring him a cup of tea. When someone asked if he was a teetotaler, he replied: "I cannot say that I am a temperance agitator, but I am a surgeon. My success depends upon my brain being clear, my muscles firm and nerves steady. No man can take alcoholic liquor without blunting these physical powers, which I must keep on edge. As a surgeon I must not drink."

John Barleycorn is the world's greatest outlaw, for not a single word can be uttered in his behalf.

Bible Reading in the Public Schools

By Rev. Walter M. Howlett

Secretary Department of Religious Education of the Greater New York Federation of Churches

Not only in the United States but in the whole world, wherever there is a democratic system of public education, the matter of Bible reading in the public schools is a live question. In Canada, the matter is fairly well settled. The Canadians have worked out a system which gives Religious Education standing room in the educational experience of the child. In England there is continual discussion. In Australia and New Zealand, this is also true and so it goes. In the United States, education is a matter of states' rights and in every state in the Union there has been agitation from the time of the beginning of the public school system.

It is familiar to all that private school systems, conducted principally by denominations, were the forerunners of the public schools in New York State. Schools were started particularly to teach the Bible and religion. Everybody knows this is true in New England and Virginia but it is not commonly known that it was true also in our own State. It is rather an interesting fact that when the Methodist Episcopal Church came to the place where it considered giving up its school system in New York City to the public authorities, it agreed to do so on condition that the Bible should be forever read in these public schools.

Our law provides that sectarianism can not be supported by public moneys. All right thinking people would agree to this. Our city charter provides that the Bible should be read each day in the public schools. This provision is fairly well carried out. Any one of three versions may be used—King James, Douay, or the American Translation. The King James is the most widely read and accepted edition of Protestantism; the Douay is the official edition of Catholicism; the American Translation is sometimes called the Jewish English translation.

A little group of Freethinkers have always contended that the Bible is a sectarian book but the courts of New York State have never upheld them in their contention. They never will as long as there are friends of the Bible to see that the matter is properly presented to the courts. Bible reading in public schools is required in eleven states and the District of Columbia. In five states it is specifically permitted by law and is construed as lawful in twenty of the remaining 32 states. In twelve of these remaining states, six have practically universally given up Bible reading in public schools and the other six have no information about how widespread Bible reading is. In all of these twelve states however the constitutions and states are silent on this specific question of Bible reading. It is to be noted that neither constitutions nor Superior Court decisions in any of these states render Bible reading unlawful though superintendents and states attorneys have given opinions that it is so.

The Greater New York Federation of Churches has a very good reference library on this matter and would be glad to put it at the disposal of anyone interested.—The Bible in New York.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

UNITE FOR CRUSADE OF EVANGELISM

The Disciples, Baptist and Methodist conferences have held their annual meetings already and the Presbyterians will assemble in San Diego this week. The reports in these various groups are very much alike. They show difficult conditions in the work due to the prevailing financial stringency, but a new confidence in the gospel message and a determination that the forces of lawlessness and godlessness shall not pass. There have been gains in attendance on church services, but as yet no marked gains in membership. The united Protestantism will join in a huge evangelistic crusade, beginning in special tabernacle meetings next Sunday. This is part of the movement known as the Olympiad of Religion which is to parallel the emphasis upon Olympic athletics and Olympic art exhibits and so on. Bishop Arthur J. Moore, one of the most brilliant and effective evangelists of the Methodist Church, south, will be the preacher in this union effort to commend the gospel to the people of southern California and also to the hundreds of thousands who have already begun to roll into our southland in every make of vehicle, not a few coming afoot.—Christian Century.

ONLY A FIRE

The other day they had a fire at Coney Island, the amusement resort of New York City. It was estimated that it involved a loss of $2,000,000. Investigation revealed that it started from some boys setting fire to a few old bits of trash under the boardwalk and that a large number of people watched the bonfire the boys created until it got so strong that the blaze seized upon the boardwalk and was beyond immediate control.

That is characteristic of our age. We have thrown away all the inhibitions about "playing with fire." We want to have experience. We want the thrill. We want to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. We want to experiment with everything, whether it be machinery, gambling or the sexual powers. It is only a fire.

Had some good soul come along and warned those boys that the fire might get beyond control and burn valuable property he would have been scoffed at as a crabbed old fogey, and an opponent of personal liberty. Many a modern psychologist would have assured him that he must let these youngsters learn from experience. They would have paid no attention to the fact that he represented the judgment of the race, formed by experience. He would have been sidereed prejudiced.

The incident is typical of the modern situation.—Christian Standard.

WHENCE OUR PRESIDENTS?

It is interesting this year of an election of President of the United States to look to the record to note the states from whence they came. For the first forty years (1789-1829), Virginia and Massachusetts had father and son (Adams) one term each, while Virginia had four (three in succession), two terms each. Harrison, Tyler and Wilson were born in Virginia, but were residents of other states when elected to the Presidency. Virginia takes the lead in being the native state of eight Presidents, but W. H. Harrison was a resident of Ohio, and Wilson of New Jersey, when elected. Ohio rivals Virginia, seven Presidents having been born there: Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley, Taft, Harding; but Grant was of Illinois, Harrison of Indiana, and Taft of Connecticut, when elected. On the other hand, W. H. Harrison, though born elsewhere, was of Ohio when elected. Grant's residence was not a matter of state pride when elected, as he was more than any other the property of the nation rather than any state. New York has not fared so well, Van Buren and Roosevelt being the only New Yorkers who were native and residents when elected. Cleveland was a New York resident when elected, but was born in New Jersey. We omit Fillmore, who was of New York by birth and residence, because he succeeded to, but was not elected President. Two elected Vice Presidents, but succeeding to the Presidency by the death of the President, were born in Vermont, but Arthur was a citizen of New York, and Coolidge of Massachusetts, when chosen. Coolidge was elected President. Jackson was born in North Carolina, but was of Tennessee when elected, and the same was true of President Polk. The great State of Pennsylvania has furnished but one President, and New Hampshire likewise one, viz., Buchanan and Pierce. Abraham Lincoln was born in Kentucky, but, like Grant, was elected from Illinois. President Hoover was born in Iowa and elected when a citizen of California, the only one to represent either state. Thirty-one men have been Presidents by election or succession, but only eleven states have had Presidents born within their boundaries, and only nine have had citizens elected Presidents. A person's location may have weight in nominating conventions, but it has little or no weight in election. We cannot imagine a citizen of the United States voting for a person because he happens to be a citizen of a certain state. As a native of New York, we did not vote in 1928 for a fellow-citizen of our own state in preference to one who is a citizen of California. To allow state lines to have weight would be folly superlative. We must look to the man, his qualities, party and policies, and vote as we prefer, whether he comes from Pennsylvania or Idaho. To do otherwise would be perilous.—The Presbyterian.

WHY WORRY?

A great many people in democratic America do worry about their social status—not about whether they are good citizens or not, but whether they have the recognition which they should have by the socially worth while. A recent writer calls attention to the fact that the social registers of 14 of the largest American cities since the war in 1931 shows an increase of over 50,000 names since 1914. The conditions of being so registered are given, together with the manner of life of those registered. After reading it all, one wonders why any one should worry over not being included. Indeed, an honest, earnest, upright citizen would feel such registration to be a very doubtful distinction. There are plenty of very excellent people with whom to associate and plenty of most worthwhile things to do, to prevent any right-minded person from worrying about social recognition. The best people do not worry about such things.—The Presbyterian Advance.

CHOOSING CONGRESSMEN

... we join our voice with other good citizens in warning electors of the great responsibility resting on them this year in the selection of the right kind of congressmen. We ask again as in our July issue, why are not men of high capacity and character drafted for that service? What legislative body in the world today can compare in potency for good or ill with our United States Senate and House of Representatives? And if that be true, can we excuse ourselves if we permit the least trustworthy elements of our citizenry to determine the complexion of those bodies?

The last session of the Congress should have furnished us an admonition sufficient for at least one generation, and if we repeat that folly we shall well deserve the penalty to follow. Alas, however, the penalty in such cases is visited upon our children unto the third and fourth generation.

The open saloon may not return in our day, but it will require the utmost vigilance on our part in choosing congressmen this fall, if it will not return to plague the infants now pressed at their mother's breasts. May God forbid!—Moody Monthly.

THEY CAN'T DO IT

The Presidential candidates and their sponsors will be making many promises of what they will do to bring good times and create a just distribution of wealth. We may expect some most encouraging assurances of what a golden age is ahead of us.

But the discerning students know that most of this is pure buncombe. Absolutely all these politicians can do, whether they be Republican, Democratic, Socialist or Prohibition, is to ameliorate conditions.

Take the single item of taxes. Put a heavy tax upon the men of great wealth and one of two things results: The tax is either passed on to the public through increased prices or this wealth goes out of industry and into tax-free securities.

The essential fact is that you can't cure selfishness by laws, and selfishness is at the bottom of all human distress. Neither Hoover nor Roosevelt has the cure for the trouble, because the trouble is sin. It may be a matter of embarrassment that the platforms omitted reference to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, but the genuine and fundamental embarrassment is that neither platform has a word to say about plain old human cus-nessness.

There is only one Candidate who says anything about that in his platform. And his campaign has been on for quite some time. —Christian Standard.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Isaiah

Isaiah is the greatest of the Old Testament prophets. To mention his name is to recall a host of historical facts surrounding the heads of some of the mighty in the days of the rule of men like Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. The latter were kings of Judah.

The Prophet Himself

The prophet was the son of Amoz, not Amos, (the confusion of names is quite common) a young noble prince of the educated class of Jerusalem, and withal, a man of splendid parts and extraordinary ability. He possessed literary and oratorical talents which men have held in the highest esteem ever since his golden-tongued persuasion was silenced by a martyr's death.

When the scholar Ambrose, and he was one of the very best in the early church, was approached by the repentant Augustine concerning the one book of the Old Testament which a novice should read, the mighty linguist replied: "Isaiah." Now why should a finished student and scholar suggest the very book that would at first blush seem perhaps among those which are the most difficult of understanding in the entire Jewish canon? The answer to that query is simple: this book is the book of grace in the Old Testament and at no other point in the ancient writings do we have anything which equals its clear presentation of the gospel of grace and truth as it is later objectively revealed in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Great Exponents of Grace

When we remember that Paul, Augustine, Calvin, Luther, and a few other latter day heroes of the faith, are among the spiritually elite in the understanding of the Biblical doctrine of grace, we can readily appreciate the above remark of the Latin father. Little wonder is it that the work of the prophet Isaiah has been referred to as that of "The Prophet of Redemption," or "The Fifth Evangelist," or "The Gospel According to Isaiah." Isaiah truly is one of the first of a great line of prophets who, by prophetic insight and utterance, bridged the chasm between legalism and grace. Only Christ could completely fill up the gorge of roaring waters of law and judgment and establish in its place the river of life and peace.

Whatever else we may affirm or fail to affirm concerning Isaiah, let it be remembered that he was of royal blood, called directly by Jehovah, served the cause of righteousness with a strong and vigorous personality, became one of the world's outstanding statesmen, and wielded an everlasting influence over many individuals of his day. His writings are sublime and beautiful and couched in the language of poetry. His style is seldom excelled in or out of the Divine Library. A prophet who labors under the guiding influence of the Spirit of God may expect his words to abide forever although he himself may not fully understand them or even see them fulfilled in his generation.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Isaiah.
2. When and Where Written. Between 630 and 590 B. C. in or around the environs of Jerusalem.

3. To Whom Addressed. To Jews and the Nations.
4. Purpose. To declare the will of God for his time and hour before the nations of mankind.
5. Authenticity. The work has been accepted as genuine throughout the centuries. Only recently has its authorship been questioned. It has stood the test of much discussion and painstaking investigation.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK (Morgan).

1. Prophecies of Judgment. 1:35.
2. Historical Interlude. 36-39.
3. Prophecies of Peace. 40-66.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

It is interesting to note that the book Isaiah is a small Bible in itself. It has 66 chapters; so does the Bible. It is sometimes divided into two great divisions of 39 and 27 chapters respectively with a historical interlude appearing between the divisions. Such is also the case with the Scriptures.

If the book is divided into three sections, the first may be said to deal with cycles of judgment (1) Against Judah and Jerusalem, (2) Against the Nations and the World, and (3) Concerning the Selected and the World. The second section presents a historical interlude setting forth the trials, prayer, sickness, and mistake of Hezekiah. The last division evinces the great threefold nature of peace as to its (1) Object, (2) Leader, (3) Platform.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Salvation. "Holy One"—Used 33 times.
2. Key Verses. 45:22; 53:7; 55:1.
3. Key Chapters. 6 and 53.
4. Key Topics. Government and Grace: Judgment and Peace.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

Aside from the literary, historical, and ethical value of the book of Isaiah, it is a compendium of general prophecy such as we do not find anywhere else in the Old Testament. It is true that other major and minor prophets exist, but none excell Isaiah in bold and direct outlining of significant future events. Some others are more specific, but none give a better bird's-eye view of the whole scheme of prophecy. In that fact and that fact alone resides the chief merit of the writing.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Christ's name is literally written all over the pages of Isaiah's prophesying. Christ is the beginning, the spirit, and the goal of prophecy. Although many passages abound in the entire volume which have a very direct bearing on the coming future Messiah, we will select texts from the famous fifty-third chapter as an illustration. Where did Isaiah secure the following perfect picture of Christ's suffering for sin?

1. "He was wounded for our transgressions."
2. "He was bruised for our iniquities."
3. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."
4. "For the transgression of my people was the stroke upon him."
5. "Thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin."
6. "He shall bear their iniquities."
7. "He bare the sin of many."

Find me a man other than The Man of Galilee who ever did all this for humanity! Truly the ages have not witnessed his face.

VII. THE TEACHING OF THE BOOK

The book of Isaiah is especially rich in doctrinal teaching:

1. The Doctrine of the Trinity, including God, the Father, Christ, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, the Regenerator, appears in divers places.
2. Everlasting Things such as Judgment, Salvation, Light, Joy, Strength, Covenant, and Kindness are mentioned at no small length.
3. Jesus' Birth, Family, Anointing, Character, Simplicity, Gentleness, Death, Resurrection, and Final Reign as King of Kings and Lord of Lords are enumerated interestingly and almost logically.
4. Wrath and Condemnation are strangely mixed with Peace and Comfort, both in the life of the prophet and in his writing.
5. The Argument of Fulfilled Prophecy is as strong as any of the arguments of the best, if not all, logicians.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Mystery and Romance of Israel

(An Address Delivered in Baltimore and Published in the Mediator.)

By Max Isaac Reich

The story of Israel is the most fascinating story that has ever been told. From whatever angle you approach the subject, you are face to face with the mystery of divine providence and redeeming activity. The story of Israel is like the vision that came to Moses in the desert—the phenomenon of a bush that burned and yet remained unconsumed. When Moses drew near to study this great sight, he heard the voice of Jehovah speaking to him.

The natural mind has busied itself with the "Jewish question" since the days of the ancient Pharaohs. The question is with us still. Unless we see the divine purpose in the calling and education and destiny of this people, we will never get to the end of the mystery. What a mess the Gentile governments have made of the Jewish question! Israel is, in her wonderful past, and no less in her strange present, as she will be in her predicted future—a witness to the reality of prophecy and miracle, a demonstration of what we usually call the supernatural. God has linked together three divine facts: the miraculous people, the miraculous Book, and the miraculous Person. Of each of these miracles, three miraculous facts may be predicted: a miraculous origin, a miraculous preservation (resurrection after death) and a miraculous future. Israel as the miraculously begotten, preserved, and guided people, was made the custodian of the Book which came by the breath of God.

A Full History

Is it not strange that the Jewish people should have preserved a Book which is so unlike every other book? No history of any nation reads like the history which God inspired Israel to write. Their sins and backslidings, their disasters and defeats, and their shame and rebellion from century to century are all recorded there. Did any other nation ever write such an account of itself? God made no mistake when he selected the Jewish people as the custodians, and have handed on to the world that which the Book contains, unaltered and undiminished, with its marvelous witness to the one who is the light to lighten the Gentiles, and who will yet be the glory of his people, Israel.

A Unique Nation

How remarkable also is the continued preservation of this people! The Jew is still with us—not as a mummy under glass, to be exhibited as a curiosity; but as a living factor, youthful and virile; with a race-consciousness which has persisted in defiance of all the laws governing the perpetuity of nations. The secret is that God has not yet done with the Jew. He used mighty nations as his rod to chastise his chosen people, and then threw the rod away. It has been said that every effort to get rid of the Jew has failed. Pharaoh tried in vain to drown him. Nebuchadnezzar tried to burn him, but the Jew came out unscathed. Darius threw him to the lions, but the lions refused to devour him. Haman tried the gallows, but he was hung thereon himself. Neither annihilations nor assimilation nor medieval segregation have succeeded in ending the Jewish question. Nor, I am persuaded, will the modern attempt to repatriate him be successful. The only solution—the divine solution—is regeneration.

For let it be said, Israel is unique in this particular. God has declared: "This people have I formed for myself, they shall shew forth my praise." God will never drop this ideal for Israel. The Jew was meant for something else than a dealer in second-hand clothes. He was not intended to be the world's financier, or to shine as a comedian on the vaudeville stage. The Jew today is like Jonah, a runaway prophet. And the sea of the Gentiles is in uproar, because the Jew is not in his right place. You will never get the affairs of the nations settled till God has his first-born nation, as he called Israel to the king of Egypt, in harmony with his will. As long as Israel is at odds with God, he is like Jonah in the belly of the sea-monster, swallowed up among the Gentiles, an indigestible morsel, a source of continual distress.

The Change Wrought by Regeneration

When a Jew becomes a believer in him of whom Moses wrote in the law and the prophets, he becomes a true child of his father, Abraham, who, while still in uncircumcision, believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness. He then represents the natural branches which were never cut off their olive tree of privilege. The Gentile church represents the wild branches which have been detached from their pagan stock and grafted into the Israel of God, while the natural branches are broken off through unbelief.

Though the cutting off from their olive tree happened nearly two thousand years ago, and the cut-off branches are very dry indeed. "God is able to graft them in again." There have always been some who have been looking in faith for the fulfillment of the promise made to Abraham that the Messianic seed of this one man should be a blessing to all nations. This has already had an initial fulfillment in the Messiah, who is par excellence the seed of Abraham. It will have a yet richer fulfillment when the Messiah will be restored to his brethren according to the flesh. They will make a new start, in him and under his leadership. Apart from Christ, the Jew cannot fulfill his destiny in the world. Till the Jews see in him, as the sacrificial Lamb, the highest glory, they will continue to dwell in a desolate house. The Shekinah has departed from them, as the Spirit departed from King Saul. But the glory is waiting to return. The One whom they have pierced is exalted to God's right hand to give repentance to Israel and remission of sins (Acts 5:31).

The Coming Glory

As the history of this people began with glory, it will begin again with glory, in the light of which the nations will walk. The apostasy of the Jew gave opportunity for the present work of grace among the Gentiles. The rapidly increasing conversions of Jews and the final rebirth of the nations. With the restoration of Israel unto divine favor will be ushered in the day when the Messiah will have the nations for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession (Psalm 2).

With Paul, apostle to the Gentiles though he was, breaking his tender heart over the apostasy of his people from Christ, we too, are beginning to sense the significance of the rapid coming to an end of the Gentile dispensation, and with him we exclaim: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" (Rom. 11:33).

The Haunting Face

Max I. Reich

We see him still, the homeless Jew
Awandering to and fro;
Forever haunted by a face
Out of the long ago.

The face of One whose tender heart
Broke on the cross alone;
Ah me! for two millenniums
The Jew a cross has known!

Uncancelled stands the oath of God;
He has a work to do;
The world will marvel when it learns
The mission of the Jew,

When penitent, he owns him Lord
Whom long ago he spurned;
The One for whom the Jewish heart
In secret oft has yearned.

Jeshu ha-Nozri, unforgotten,
Come back unto thine own;
A stumblingblock thy name has been.
Be our Foundation Stone!

Our suffering heart can understand
Thy deep, mysterious woe;
Shine on us, strange, appealing Face
Out of the long ago!

—The King's Business.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

REVIEW: MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH

(Lesson for September 25)

Lesson Text: Deut. 32:48-52; 34:5-8; Golden Text: Ps. 116:15

Daily Readings and Suggestions MONDAY

Prospect and Retrospect. Deut. 32:48-52
Because Moses, at one time, had not honored God as he ought (Num. 20:12), God had told him that neither he nor Aaron should enter the promised land. However, at this time of his death he so far honored Moses as to permit him to behold the land he had so desired to reach. What must have been his feelings as he looked over that land! He could look back over a life of service such as few others have equalled, yet it was marred by human weakness, and he had fallen short of what he had hoped to attain. If we would not fall far short of God's will for us, and have only bitterness and disappointment as we come to the end of the way, we must place our trust in him and honor him in all our ways.

TUESDAY

The Burial of Moses. Deut. 34:5-8

The details of the burial of Moses must remain a mystery until we can ask him about it; however, his burial at the hands of God must be considered as a special and unusual honor. It was all "according to the word of the Lord." All things must ever be according to his word, whether of blessing or judgment; we shall even be judged by his word in the last day (John 12:48). But according to his word we hope for a day when none shall need burial, even at the hands of God (1 Cor. 15:51-55). Blessed hope!

WEDNESDAY

The True Perspective of Life. Ps. 90:1-12

All should read these words often. A realization of our own weakness and of God's all-sufficiency is necessary if we are to order our lives in wisdom. A self-centered life is centered in human weakness and failure. Moses failed to reach an earthly dwelling place, but he found something much better: a dwelling place not made with hands, the eternal God who is our dwelling place today. God grant that we may all obtain a true perspective of life!

THURSDAY

"Nunc Dimittis." Luke 2:22-32

"Nunc dimittis—"Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace," sang the aged Simeon after he had seen the promised Redeemer. Moses might well have used the same words when he had beheld the promised land. Note that the promise to Simeon was also fulfilled "according to thy word" (v. 29). He is the covenant-keeping God and all his promises are yea and amen; surely we may trust him and believe his word in every detail. Let us praise such a gracious and faithful God!

FRIDAY

Talking With Jesus. Mark 8:1-8

This scene is one of the strongest refutations of the unscriptural teaching of "soul-sleeping." When God laid away Moses' body on Mount Nebo, his soul was not laid away with it. Moses was "absent from the body, present with the Lord," and his state was even more blessed than formerly. In this instance he was actually permitted to enter the promised land to commune with his Lord. The subject of Moses' talk with Jesus is of special interest and significance (Luke 9:31).

SATURDAY

Parting Counsel. 2 Tim. 4:1-8

This morning I heard a speaker say that next to Jesus he considered Moses and Paul the two greatest men the world had ever known. Certainly there was much in common in the difficult tasks of these two men, and many of the words of today's passage might have been spoken as fittingly by Moses. What satisfaction it is, when we have reached the end of the way, if we can say that we have fought a good fight and have kept the faith! Let us so live, by God's grace, that we may know that henceforth there is laid up for us a crown of righteousness which fadeth not away.

SUNDAY

The Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. Ps. 116:12-19

Like Moses, we have all received many benefits at the hand of God. What shall we render unto him for all his benefits? The Psalmist has well said that we can best thank him by accepting that which he has prepared for us. Eye hath not seen, and the mind of man has not understood the fullness of the wonderful things he has prepared, but we can take the cup of salvation, and offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving. Let us pray that all his people may pay their vows today, in the courts of the Lord's house.

E. M. RIDDLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Duell Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E. Canton, Ohio
--	--	---

Brethren Young People at Conference

It occurs to the writer that there was an unusually fine group of young people on the grounds during the week of our recent conference. Their activities were largely marked in the following groupings: the meetings of the Sisterhood organization each morning which are no doubt reported by another; the Ashland College Banquet; the Vesper services at Hillside and the Annual Christian Endeavor luncheon.

It is of the last two named that I want to speak a bit. The plan of two years ago, that of having young men and young ladies in a joint vesper service is unique and most helpful. The type of discussions and the caliber of the leaders of these several sessions cannot be otherwise than helpful to our young people.

In the strictly Christian Endeavor sessions, the young people and their leaders were wide-awake. The annual luncheon, which was again held in the Brethren church of Warsaw, the uncertainty of the weather and the size of the mosquitoes making it most impossible to be outside, was attended by 131 people. They sang, prayed, and listened, were really fed physically and spiritually. The spirit of Christian Endeavor was very high. Suggestions were made for next year's work. A motto was presented by the Associate President which is to be finished by some individual or society.

The last session in charge of young people was the Sunday evening C. E. hour. The leader was Miss Donaldson of Washington, D. C. Her program was original and interesting from the beginning to the end. It in every sense was the kind of a C. E. session that will attract young people.

The future of the church is assured if we take care of our young people and plan that they shall be in goodly numbers at our annual conferences.

REV. E. M. RIDDLE,
1117 Randolph, Waterloo, Iowa.

WHAT TO ADVERTISE, AND HOW TO "BACK IT UP"

By Dorothy Rooker

Meetings. Of course we would think of that first. Probably our greatest activity is our weekly devotional meeting. So we can tell others, as well as our own members, about this meeting each week. They will need to know the time, date, and place.

They will want to know what the meeting is about—the topic, who are invited, and such things. And if the leader is well known, people will be interested in that too.

Some things we shall want to tell to outsiders, others to our own members. Our members know the cheerful atmosphere of the room, the friendly feeling of the young people, the inspiring music, the spiritual nature of the meeting; but even they need to be reminded of these things occasionally. Outsiders should be told more frequently.

The physical side of our attractions is useful to a certain extent as a basis of advertising appeals. But we want to be sure that people are made to realize that there are deeper values as well. We can tell them about comfortable seats, the cheerfully decorated room, the cozy feeling that people will find in our meeting place. These things make it easier for people to come and enjoy our meetings.

If we are advertising a good meeting, see that the meeting is good; if it is inspiring, cheerful, soul-stirring music, have the music committee prepare just that kind of music. If we advertise a friendly society, by all means see that we offer the folks companionship.

If we are advertising a society where you learn more about Christ, his love, and the Bible, see that the leaders have help in making the meeting 100 per cent. The Bible knowledge is one thing lacking in the lives of many people; we can help many of them to obtain more of it. Then there is the inspiration which young people will (or should) receive from association with Endeavorers, the inspiration to higher ideals, to better living. Also, advertise the part of the society in the community life and the opportunity it offers for community service.

Advertise the fact that the society offers training in stewardship and in financial training by discussing and working our budget system. If we can offer athletic events, social and recreational programs, these will be things to advertise, by posters, newspaper writeups, personal invitations, a friendly visit, an enthusiastic note, a chatty telephone call, or a word or two given by an Endeavorer from the platform in Sabbath school or midweek meeting.

The ideals of the church, of our young people's organization, of Christ, will give us many other things to tell to other people. Christian Endeavor special events, conventions, conferences, study-classes, debates sponsored by the branches, county unions, or State unions will give us plenty of material for advertising. The list is almost unlimited. Whatever we are doing, teaching, advocating, or endeavoring for the benefit of young people is worth telling to the young people, as well as letting the older folks know of our activities.—The Keystone Endeavor.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

A Reminiscence of a Furlough

It is just one year and three months today since the stately S. S. "Hamburg" sailed up the North River into New York harbor and brought us to the end of our long, long journey from Africa. As we passed the Statue of Liberty and again saw the great New York skyline, we could not help but think, "What great things the Lord had done for us," since last we had seen those familiar scenes. As the big ship drew up to the pier we saw the one well known to both of us, who had been permitted to come out to greet us. It was Mr. Foster's brother, Harry. Mr. and Mrs. Seitz had been compelled to wait outside of the pier for us. It was indeed good to see loved ones again, and to be in one's own country after so long an absence. We were rushed to Philadelphia in an automobile that seemed to be going about ninety miles an hour. And that very evening we met quite a few of our friends and loved ones at the home of Brother and Sister Seitz. From that very hour on it was one continuous series of meeting old friends and making new ones.

We enjoyed the fellowship of our own Brethren in both of the Philadelphia churches. Many pleasant hours were spent in the homes of our people. And every service that we were privileged to attend was a real source of inspiration and blessing; because the pastors are faithful in declaring the Word of God. We also had the great joy of meeting and greeting Mother Foster who since has gone to be with the Lord, also all the different members of our families.

Not only had we the pleasure of fellowshiping with those whom we formerly knew in Philadelphia. But in June the Lord opened the way for us to attend the Southeast District Conference that was being held at Hagerstown, Maryland. There we were taken into the hearts and homes of the people, and were greatly refreshed spiritually by the messages given throughout the Conference. We were also able to show by the pictures, how greatly the Lord has blessed our African work.

After the Conference closed we went to Waynesboro, Pennsylvania. There also we met Brethren whom we had not known before, and enjoyed fellowship in the Lord with them. We shall never forget the wonderful trip we had to Gettysburg with Brother and Sister Benshoff, and our picnic lunch on the Battlefield grounds. Especially did we enjoy the drive over the winding mountain roads. Where tall pines sent forth their peculiar fragrance, and where we were told to keep a watchful eye for any deer that might be loitering in the dense forest.

We were also privileged to visit our New Jersey churches, and to enjoy rich blessings with the pastor, his family and the people. These Brethren had been among the last to bid us farewell just before we sailed for Africa, and among the first to welcome us back.

The love and friendship of our Brethren in Washington was all that one could wish. There we spent three wonderful days of blessing in the home of Brother and Sister Kent; also in visiting former friends. All of these blessings came to us during the beautiful month of June. During July we taught in the Daily Vacation Bible School in our Philadelphia church. And the first part of August we visited with our own dear ones, who had been waiting so patiently for our return.

The middle of August we left for Winona Lake, where the National Conference was to be held. En route we stopped at Fort Wayne and visited with Brother and Sister Adams who are members of our Philadelphia church. How wonderful it was to see them again! From there we went to Berne, Indiana, where our dear Brother and Sister Miller are now at home. It reminded us of former times when he was our much-loved pastor in Philadelphia. We thoroughly enjoyed every moment of our visit there. At last we found ourselves being whirled to Winona. There our souls feasted on the Bread of Life. The morning prayer meetings were all greatly enjoyed, and new strength in the Lord was derived from them. We felt that there was a spirit of unity and oneness throughout the business sessions that exceeded anything that we had formerly experienced. The Bible study hours had a great attraction for us, who had not had the opportunity of sitting and hearing the Word expounded. We were thrilled as we heard Christ exalted, and humbled as we anew realized what he has done and is doing for us. Old acquaintances were renewed and new friendships formed. No one can possibly realize what a Bible Conference means to a Missionary. We are so isolated here in Africa, and are constantly giving out; so that just to be able to sit and listen in itself is a real blessing.

After National Conference we had the opportunity of visiting with our Indiana Brethren. During September and October we held services in nearly every church in that State. Time and space would not permit us to tell of the many happy hours we spent with dear ones during these two months. But our cup of blessing was literally running over. The Indiana District Conference terminated our stay in that State, for almost immediately we left for Illinois, where we visited two of our churches; and again had much blessing in the homes of the dear ones we were privileged to associate with.

The beginning of November was spent in the southern part of Wisconsin, visiting and holding meetings in two United Brethren churches. We also held several services in school houses, showing our curios to the school children and telling them about Africa. On one occasion we had to ascend a steep, rough, narrow road. It was so narrow that it was almost impossible to turn around with the car without going over the embankment. But in spite of the difficulties we endured in reaching the school, the children enjoyed the curios so much that we felt well repaid. We were a real curiosity to some of the folks; because they had never seen a real, live missionary before.

After leaving Wisconsin we crossed the Mississippi River and journeyed south toward Cedar Rapids, where we again found friends and held a service. We also enjoyed seeing the large plant of Brother Ronk, and to get some idea of the manufacturing of the "Speeder." We had planned to visit all of our churches in Iowa, but were hindered by bad roads and sickness. However, after resting one week with our dear Brother and Sister Early at Hudson, we were able to take part in the Young People's Conference held at Waterloo, which we enjoyed immensely. We spent Thanksgiving Day in the home of Sister Peek and her son, also ate of a bountiful dinner in the home of Brother and Sister Whetstone. To us it was a real day of thanksgiving, because the Lord had so abundantly blessed.

We had planned to go all the way to the West coast, but the Lord very definitely led otherwise, so we turned our faces East instead. In spite of our disappointment in not having the privilege of visiting our Brethren in the West, our blessings had not ended, because we were able to stop over at Ashland, the place we had so often longed to see. We were able to sit in the class rooms with the students, and to drink in the Truths from the Word of God. Especially did we enjoy Prof. McClain's classes, for it brought back to us memories of other days and other scenes when he was our pastor in Philadelphia. We also enjoyed the hospitality of these dear ones and of Prof. and Mrs. Stuckey in whose home we stayed part of the time, as well as that of others whom we met while at Ashland. We were very favorably impressed with our College and Seminary. In this day when so many young people are taught error, what a blessing it is to have a place where they are taught the TRUTH. We were very much pleased to see so many fine young men taking the Seminary course, because every teacher is well fitted for the high position that he occupies, both as a scholar and as a leader among those who come under their influence. The Seminary is going to produce pastors who are strictly Brethren. They will not only know the Word of God, but they will be fitted to preach and teach it. Every teacher is out and out for the Lord, and for the whole Bible and nothing but the Bible. They deserve the earnest prayers and support of the entire Brethren Church, for many are making a real sacrifice in holding the fort at our Christian institution.

Our last stop before reaching our native city was at Uniontown, Pennsylvania with Brother and Sister Clough. There too, we enjoyed the fellowship of our former colleagues in Philadelphia and had a splendid service. We arrived in Philadelphia just a few days before Christmas. There were many other places we would like to have visited, but time and strength did not permit.

We praise the Lord again for all the blessings we enjoyed, and for all the opportunities we had to show by word and picture the things God has brought to pass in the hearts and lives of many of our people in this dark land. We pray earnestly that our people may realize their duty and opportunities as children of God. That it may be possible to proclaim the "Good Tidings" far and wide.

We realize that our church is passing through a crisis. but if all of us will continually look to the Lord and trust him; also render to him all things that are his, then will we be able to say with David, "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Sincerely,

MR. AND MRS. J. H. FOSTER.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

MATHIAS, WEST VIRGINIA

The Brethren church at this place has experienced a two weeks' meeting. The meeting began on Sunday night, July 31st, by the writer, then on Monday night our good Brother E. L. Miller of Maurertown, Virginia, arrived to take charge of the meeting, which continued for two weeks, closing with a communion service.

From every point of view we consider it a most excellent meeting. Brother Miller gave us sermons of a high order, true to the Bible, convincing, logical and true to the needs of the people.

Our people are pleased, others, not of our particular faith, are pleased those not members of any church, who attended these meetings, seem to be very warm towards Brother Miller, and we hear it asked on every hand, "Will he come again?"

It seems to be the opinion of our people that his sermons were of that type which is needed.

The field has been well worked, yet we had several additions and others are expected to unite with us.

The Communion service was one long to be remembered. It was our privilege to enjoy the presence of Brother Miller's two youngest daughters, who were with him the two weeks. They helped in the preparation of the meals as well as in the work of the meeting, and when the time of their departure neared, it seemed hard to see them go, but we have the assurance that they will come again.

Our prayers go with this useful and good family, and our appreciation to the Maurertown congregation for the services rendered.

ARTHUR SNIDER. Pastor.

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA

We have been appearing in the Evangelist quite often in the past several months but we know that a number of people over the brotherhood are interested in the work here at Roanoke and therefore we feel it our duty to keep you informed.

We want to express our gratitude to the mission board for inducing Brother Herman Koontz to take up the pastorate at Roanoke. He is one of the most energetic, sacrificing, spiritual young men it has been our privilege to know, and the manner in which he has handled the financial situation here could only have been done by a person who is guided by the Holy Spirit. I am quite sure I bespeak the sentiment of the entire membership when I say that we are very much pleased with the leadership of Brother Koontz and have a very high regard for him. We know that if we members will do our part this church will go on to great victory for our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

We also want to say that we are very fortunate indeed to have such a fine, capable, spiritual person as Mrs. Koontz in our midst. She is always ready to do anything she is called upon to do (and that is quite often) and the cheerful, efficient manner in which she does it really means much to the church. Among the many things she does is to conduct a teachers' training class each Wednesday evening after prayer meeting which is certainly instructive and inspiring.

We want to ask the entire brotherhood to pray that in some way we may be able to meet our financial obligations in September. It will be necessary for us to raise $1100 by September 20, 1932, from gifts and sale of bonds, which has to be paid on our new church. This seems an impossibility from a human standpoint, considering our small membership, that a number of our members are out of work and we have already had so many obligations to meet, but we know that anything is possible with God. If it is his will that the work shall continue at this place he will lay it upon the hearts of people to support it. If any of you who read this article have some money you would like to invest at 6% interest and at the same time help a good cause we shall be glad to hear from you and will explain the matter of bonds we have for sale in detail.

We are glad to report that we have not had a "summer slump" but our activities have increased. A "Men's Evangelistic Club" has been organized and they conduct prayer services in different homes each Tuesday evening. They hope to enlarge their work a little later by holding services in jails, convict camps and wherever they have opportunity to spread the Gospel. Brother and Sister Koontz also conduct a Bible class each Friday afternoon in our old church building. Brother Koontz has charge of the adults and uses as a theme "Seeing Christ in the Bible," and Sister Koontz teaches the children and the attendance at these classes has been good.

We want to give God all the glory for everything that has been accomplished, for we know without his help we could not accomplish anything.

We believe there is a great opportunity for the Brethren church here in Roanoke and again we ask you to remember us in your prayers.

MRS. J. HAROLD PUTT, Secretary.

G. W. BRUMBAUGH RETIRES

After Teaching 48 Years

The following is a clipping from the Dayton Daily News telling of the splendid teaching record of Brother Brumbaugh:

Granville W. Brumbaugh, a teacher in the Dayton schools for 36 years and in schools within Montgomery county for a total of 48 years, submitted his resignation to the board of education. He is retiring under the state teachers' retirement system.

Eighteen of Prof. Brumbaugh's years as a Dayton school teacher were spent as principal of Garfield elementary school and the remaining 18 at Parker and Col. White junior high schools. He has been an instructor in mathematics at Col. White for the past few years.

Although Brumbaugh has not reached the age when retirement becomes mandatory, he began teaching as long ago as 1882, when he was but a very young man. Of the subsequent 50 years he taught 48, teaching thousands of boys and girls.

He was graduated from Juniata college, Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, in 1887, with a degree of Bachelor of English. He received his master's degree at the same institution two years later. In 1895 Brumbaugh founded Randolph township high school.

Since coming to Dayton he has attended summer sessions in the University of Chicago, Pennsylvania summer school at Juniata college, and has taken a number of university extension courses given under the auspices of Miami university, Wittenberg college and a number of local institutions.

Brumbaugh served on the Montgomery county board of school examiners from 1895 to 1901, and has been widely and favorably known among the teachers of the county and city.

His interest in his profession is evidenced by membership in a number of educational associations for many years. He has been a member of the National Education association since 1896 and has attended a number of its summer sessions. He is also a member of the Central Ohio Teachers' Association, Ohio State Teachers' association, Dayton Schoolmasters' club, Dayton Teachers' club and has been active in each of these organizations.

Brumbaugh served on the executive committee of the Southwestern Ohio Teachers' association for several years and was president for the 1905-1906 term. He was secretary of the Dayton Teachers' Relief association for 24 years.

Wednesday he said: "While my active service in the schools will terminate at this time, I always will be interested in the welfare and continued success of the Dayton public schools."—Dayton Daily News.

MINUTES OF THE FORTY-FOURTH GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

(Continued from last week)

Geo E. Cone, National Statistician, submitted a careful and detailed report which was adopted. It follows:

Statistician's Annual Report

Dear Brethren Greetings:

On this Semi-Centenary Celebration Year the District and National Statisticians have done all they could to have a full report of the Brethren churches in the United States of North America.

Long and patiently have we worked and now we give you the results of our labor.

There were 160* active churches reporting and 4* inactive totaling 164*

There were 160* Church Houses valued at $2,404,472.76*.

Union houses, Halls and School Houses used 16* making a total of 176* places of worship reported.

Interest in Union Houses is valued at $1,850.00.*

There are 64* Parsonages valued at $225,600.00*.

Other properties reported 14* valued at $70,200.00*.

Total Property Valuations is $2,710,122.76.*

There were 99* churches reporting prayer meetings with 3,021* attendants per week.

Elders numbering 212* reported with Pastors' Salaries at $146,229.01†.

Evangelistic Services cost the churches $9,773.31.†

Current expenses amounted to $85,344.36.†

Improvements $4,498.77.†

District Missions $6,983.06.†

Home Missions $9,602.01.†

Foreign Missions $32,640.43.*

Superannuated Minister's Fund $2,053.72.*

Brethren's Home $832.38.†

Ashland College $1,011.01.†

Brethren Publishing Company $1,679.89.†

Miscellaneous Expenses $21,058.80.*

Making a total running expense of $321,706.75.†

A total of $19,112.52 in the treasuries at the time of reporting.

Deacons number 470* and Deaconesses 361.*

Membership reports are as follows:

Number of Male members 12,118.*

Number of female members 16,860.*

Total number of members 28,978.*

Additions by letter and relation 426* By Baptism 2,053.* Total 2,479.*

Lost by death, letter, etc. 919* leaving a net gain of 1,560.*

Revivals held and Bible Conferences conducted 135.*

This report is submitted for your approval and use.

Your statistician has copies of all of the reports and will be glad to have you inspect them at any convenient time if you so desire. A few reports were incomplete.

Our Foreign Mission Work is as follows:

Africa:

3 Preaching stations.

5 Churches.

8 Established points of work.

1062 Communicants

South America:

8 Congregations.

1 Bible Coach.

6 Churches.

4 Halls.

6 Parsonages.

767 Members.

Grand total—U. S., 28,978—Africa, 1062

+S. A. 767=30,807.*

* Denotes increase over last year.

† Denotes decrease from last year

Your Servant and Brother in Christ,

GEO. E. CONE.

A motion prevailed that a committee be appointed by the Committee on Committees to investigate changes for the report blanks. Conference reelected the following brethren as members for Publication Board—J. C. Beal, G. W. Rench, E. G. Mason.

Conference entered the next period of conference by singing, "The Promised Land." N. V. Leatherman presented very interesting facts relative to the National Sunday School work. R. Paul Miller read a detailed report of the Home Mission work. The history and need of the Roanoke Church was presented by the pastor, Herman Koontz.

Friday Morning Business

Moderator W. C. Benshoff called the opening session to order and Conference sang "I Shall See the King." God's guidance was implored by Herman Koontz. The report of the Credential Committee was made and showed a total to date of 83 ministerial, 188 lay credentials. total 271. The report was adopted in regular manner. Conference elected Chas. W. Mayes, Geo. Cone and N. V. Leatherman to form the committee to consider changes in the National Statistical blanks. The following elections ensued—C. E. Officers: President, E. M. Riddle; Associate President, F. C. Vanator; Secretary and Treasurer, Gladys Spice; Editor and publicity, C. D. Whitmer; Intermediate Superintendent, Mrs. Joyce Saylor; Junior Superintendent, Mildred Dietz; Quiet Hour Superintendent, Ray Klingensmith; Stewardship, Herman Koontz; Citizenship, Conard Sandy; Missionary, Grant McDonald.

National S. S. Officers: President, W. I. Duker; Vice President, E. L. Miller; Secretary, N. V. Leatherman; Treasurer, M. P. Puterbaugh; Administrative Superintendent, S. M. Whetstone; Children's Superintendent, Hazel Keiser; Young People's Superintendent, Geo. H. Jones; Adult Superintendent, Dr. K. M. Monroe; Educational Superintendent, H. W. Koontz; Home Department Superintendent, A. H. Kent; Missionary Superintendent, Miles Taber; Citizenship—R. R. Haun; Tract Promotion Superintendent, L. E. Lindowner.

Budget for the National Association was adopted as follows—Seminary, $2,000.00; Seminary Library, $100.00; Foreign Missionary Society $250.00; Shipshewana, $175.00; S. S. Association Promotional work $250.00; International Council of Religious Education $150.00; Miscellaneous, $75.00. Which makes a total budget of $3,000.

The following men were elected to the Home Mission Board: Claude Studebaker, A. B. Cover, Roy A. Patterson, Frank Coleman.

Ohio Conference submitted the following resolution:

June 16, 1932.

"As a Conference we recommend to the Foreign Mission Board, the Home Mission Board, and the Women's Society that they consider or reconsider the proposition of the Publishing Board for the merging of all publications with the Brethren Evangelist."

Ohio District.

C. A. Bame, moderator

G. C. Pontius, Secretary.

A motion prevailed that we take cognizance of this resolution and that the matter be referred for consideration at next year's conference.

Conference voted to print 1000 copies of the Brethren Annual and that these be apportioned to the congregations with accompanying financial statement.

Financial Report for Evangelistic and Bible Study League

For the year closing July 31, 1932.

Received from Dr. H. V. Wall ....$155.28

Received from dues at National Conf. 11.00

Received from dues during the year 10.00

Total .....$176.28

Eleven dollars of this amount is held by the George D. Harter Bank which suspended payment. This leaves in the hands of the Financial Secretary for disposition by the League, $165.28.

J. C. BEAL.

Saturday Morning

"I Shall See the King" announced the opening of the business session. God's wisdom and blessing were implored by Milton Bowman. The final report of the credential committee revealed a total of 87 ministerial and 195 lay credentials or a grand total of 282 delegates. This report was adopted.

The minutes of the previous business session were read and approved. Next followed a resolution from the National S. S. Association, "That we recommend that White Gift literature and envelopes shall only be used for money to be sent to the National S. S. Association, though any congregation may, by using other envelopes take up two or more offerings for other needs." Conference agreed to this request.

The new Executive Committee submitted their report which reads:

1. The place and time for 1933 conference to be Winona Lake, Aug. 21-27.

2. That the eleven o'clock Bible lecture hour, with our own men be continued.

3. That the 2 to 3 o'clock hour in the afternoon be known as Bible and Mission hour.

4. That the evening services, except Monday and Sunday, be dedicated to special interests and organizations of the church according to the outline of service submitted by the executive committee.

The report was adopted.

The Committee to report on the Moderator's address submitted the following, which was received—"Since the Moderator's report assumed that no recommendations should come from it and since it anticipated only such action as should come regularly from Boards and committees, and since it now appears in the Evangelist, therefore, your committee commends it a valuable summary of present conditions and a splendid presentation of goals and ideals. We believe, with the Moderator, that all our churches and organizations should take aggressive evangelism of the old time, whole Gospel type and that our church officers should allow nothing to prevent or curtail the regular program of our organizations. We recommend its publication along with the other addresses of this conference if they are printed."

The committee on Resolutions submitted their report which was adopted and requested to be given extra publicity. (They appear elsewhere in this paper.—Ed.)

A report of the Boys' Work Committee was received which reads, "An outline of procedure was agreed to and a definite plan of action mapped out which the Committee decided will be published and presented to the church at large as the project matures.

Due to the fact that most of the committee have been actively identified with other interests of the conference, we have been compelled to discover time to meet, as freedom from other duties permit. This next year we hope to have something tangible which will meet the expectation of conference in work accomplished."

A further report of the finance Committee was given but because of its incompleteness was received with the proviso that all matters in question be investigated by the Committee. A motion prevailed that the Publishing Co., submit a detailed financial statement to the Conference Treasurer.

A financial report of the C. E. Society was read and adopted. It follows:
Financial Report—Aug. 18, 1931 to Aug. 15, 1932

Receipts:
 Balance on hand 8-18-31 .....$ 92.04
 Receipts on pledges ..... 132.00
 Interest ..... .60

$224.64

Disbursements:
 Prtg. envelopes and letterheads....$ 8.25
 Postage, postal cards ..... 2.75

Home Mission Sec'y. .... 11.00
 ..... 121.00

132.00

Balance on hand (In Geo. D. Harter bank which is closed) .....$ 92.64

Pledges paid to C. E. Secretary during year 1931-32:

1. Milledgeville, Ill. ....$ 10.00
 2. Oakville, Ind. .... 5.00
 3. Warsaw, Ind. .... 20.00
 4. Peru, Ind. .... 6.00
 5. Nappanee, Ind. .... 6.00
 6. Fremont, Ohio .... 5.00
 7. Leon, Iowa .... 5.00
 8. West Salem, Ohio .... 30.00
 9. Ashland, Ohio .... 10.00
 10. Washington, D. C. .... 25.00
 11. Johnstown, Pa. .... 5.00
 12. Clay City, Ind. .... 5.00

132.00

Respectfully submitted,

GLADYS M. SPICE,
 Sec'y.-Treas.

Conference merged into the Foreign Mission Society for further business. The society reelected to membership to the Board, Dr. J. Allen Miller, A. V. Kimmel, C. H. Ashman. A resolution was read from the Society and accepted that Dr. Florence Gribble be permitted to return, according to her own request, to Africa even though she is unable to pass successfully the medical examination.

Referring to the printing of the Brethren Annual, Conference granted the request of the Ministerial Association to print their addresses.

A motion prevailed that the Committee on Committees appoint a committee of three to receive material, to edit the same and to consider ways and means of publishing the same. This report to be made at the evening session. The following brethren constituted the committee—Dr. Kenneth Monroe, Charles A. Bame and J. L. Gingrich. Conference agreed to conduct a short business session Saturday evening.

Saturday Evening

Song service, as usual characterized the opening of the evening session. Invocation was asked by Frank Gehman. The editing committee report for printing the Annual was submitted and accepted. It reads, "We recommend that all manuscripts on Brethren History and Brethren ordinances be given first rank and that a digest of all others be made by the authors and submitted to the editing committee by the first day of October, and all manuscripts not submitted in final form by that day shall automatically be eliminated, and that the manuscripts together with the Annual material shall be kept within a range of sixty cents. As a committee we feel that the Annual should include full and complete officiating of National and District conferences, names of pastors with their addresses, names of congregations with their numerical strength.

The minutes of the closing business were read and approved.

Sunday Morning

Attendance for Sunday School was $39. Offering for Sunday School was $205.45. Offering for Sunday afternoon session of conference was $51.35.

Offering for Morning Worship was $141.67.

JOS. L. GINGRICH, Sec'y.

Linking our weakness to God's omnipotence makes all human greatness possible.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Dear Editor:

Not for a long time has an article gripped my attention like your "Why not a United Evangelistic Program?"

However, for a much longer time I have thought that we as Christians must put first things first, if we expect to deserve the name. Nothing less than doing our utmost to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ and winning souls to him is enough.

Mark 12:33, The First Commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength."

Matt. 6:33—"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness . . ."

When each one of us can pray this prayer from the heart, the United Evangelistic Program will have begun.

Prayer

My dear compassionate Heavenly Father: Thou knowest the intentions of my heart. Thou knowest my thoughts before they are born, and I am glad it is so. If I have moneys, or houses, or lands, or home, or ambitions, or personality, or friends, or time, or talents, or gifts of any kind, and I allow them to separate me from thee, and if I fail to willingly use them all for thee, wilt thou take them from me and give them to some one who will use them for thy glory.

Lord, I pray thee, help me to be empty of self, so that I may be filled with the Holy Spirit, and increase all I have that magnifies thy name, and give me wisdom, that I need so much, that all within me is may be used to spread thy saving Gospel. For Jesus' sake I ask it. Amen.

MRS. BELLE ZOOK,
 Huntington, Indiana.

CONVERSION

*O cross of wood!
 O bitter cup!
 O prayer of blood!
 O fatal sop!
 O members rent!
 O anguish spent!
 O cry of pain; O prayer of Love for me!
 O goodness spurned:
 Love unreturned;
 My penitent, unworthy heart I bring to thee!*

*A sinner loved,
 A thief forgiv'n
 A wand'rer lost,
 Called back to heav'n;
 A prodigal,
 Confessing all,
 I cast myself, all woe-begone, on thee
 Triumphant Lord,
 Thy grace conferred
 Constrains me and undone, I follow thee!
 —Ira R. Aldrich in Pacific Christian Advocate.*

OUT OF HELL ON BAIL

When Bishop James was preaching at the Conference in Saginaw, Michigan, in 1867, he said, "I was on my way to hold the New Mission Conference in San Francisco, California. We were just out of New York harbor, and a minister and a few friends

SUMMARY—1931-1932 FOREIGN MISSION REPORT

	—Receipts—		—Disbursements—		—Balances—
	By Cash	By Transfer	By Cash	By Transfer	July 1, 1931	July 1, 1932
African Bible Translation Fund .....	3,590.59	5,029.79	5,346.09	6,509.24	2,838.04	.....
African General Fund .....	614.58	73.87	638.45	.....	102.35	$ 102.35
African Hospital Fund .....	25.15	.....	24.00	.....	146.27	147.42
African Native Evangelists' Fund .....	109.67	.....	35.00	30.50	1,606.50	1,635.73
African Special Funds .....	788.32	.....	704.08	.....	133.51	157.75
Bible Fund .....	335.00	.....	350.07	.....	336.90	321.83
Brethren Missionary Fund .....	58.10	904.00	1,429.43	.....	1,935.83	568.50
Bible Fund .....	127.75	.....	351.99	.....	.....	.....
Crawford Fund .....	41.65	648.29	689.94	.....	.....	.....
Emmert Fund .....	272.00	94.06	366.06	.....	.....	.....
Foster Fund .....	1,529.71	478.91	2,629.78	.....	651.15	.....
General Fund .....	14,344.08	1,386.45	3,851.95	15,472.33	23,050.72	21,402.95
Gribble Fund .....	369.37	.....	1,344.04	.....	425.48	.....
Hathaway Fund .....	210.05	484.00	700.05	.....	.....	.....
Jobson Fund .....	554.82	2,306.70	2,801.52	.....	.....	.....
Kennedy Fund .....	212.00	700.00	602.81	.....	.....	309.19
Larson Fund .....	553.40	.....	551.10	.....	.....	2.30
Meyers Fund .....	910.10	.....	885.75	.....	.....	48.35
Nielsen Fund .....	688.40	.....	635.14	.....	201.43	314.69
Patterson Fund .....	397.00	350.00	359.71	.....	78.49	465.78
Romaneuigh Fund .....	1,205.00	244.92	1,449.92	.....	.....	.....
Sheldon Auto Fund .....	75.00	.....	.....	.....	72.00	187.00
Sheldon Fund .....	101.08	811.53	972.66	.....	.....	.....
South American Bible & Tract Fund .....	80.00	.....	5.20	.....	507.95	642.75
South American Building Fund .....	.....	1,000.00	.....	.....	1,005.24	2,005.24
South American General Fund .....	3,602.95	8,101.50	9,116.67	356.92	1,172.47	3,405.94
South American Helpers' Children Fund .....	84.00	71.00	165.04	.....	.....	.....
South American Special Fund .....	55.00	.....	65.00	400.00	.....	.....
South American Students' Aid Fund .....	290.00	400.00	.....	.....	.....	690.00
Taber Fund .....	622.49	10.00	829.47	.....	530.79	345.81
Yvan Fund .....	211.50	.....	300.08	.....	.....	381.42
W. M. S. Fund .....	2,155.20	.....	616.28	1,806.20	.....	.....
Yaloke Fire Fund .....	292.36	20.00	232.19	.....	.....	46.13
Yett Fund .....	695.50	.....	974.67	.....	794.11	80.17
Undesignated Fund .....	1,681.30	.....	.....	1,681.30	.....	487.04
Miscellaneous Funds .....	680.00	.....	680.00	.....	.....	.....
	$38,305.23	$24,262.49	$30,949.24	$24,262.49	$35,471.48	$33,827.47
Annuity Fund .....	3,000.00	.....	.....	.....	12,411.65	15,411.65
Endowment Fund .....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,200.00	1,100.00
GRAND TOTALS .....	$41,305.23	$24,262.49	$30,949.24	$24,262.49	$48,983.13	$50,339.12

were standing together on deck when a man came up with a New Testament open at the words, 'And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the righteous, who is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world,' and with his finger on it, said to the minister, 'Do you believe that?'

"Yes," said the minister 'I do.'

"Well," said the man, 'I don't. I would not be mean enough to go sneaking into Heaven on the merits of another. If I could not go in on my own merits, I wouldn't go in at all.'

"The minister waited a moment, and said, 'Sir, those words of yours come with an ill grace from a man who is out of jail on bail, and is running away from his securities.'"

"The Bishop then told us, 'We had no more trouble all the way to San Francisco,' and so let us know that he himself was the minister and knew the facts in the man's case."

Then the Bishop lifted his hand high and said with a loud voice, "We are all out of hell today on bail."

When I told this in an address in a recent Conference, one of the ministers said, "He wouldn't preach that way in this new age."

I answered, "Yes, he would. The age makes no difference. If preachers don't preach that way now, they ought to. 'The facts are the same.' And this is as true in Pasadena as in Saginaw or Detroit; as true in California as it is in Michigan.—Christian Witness."

57 VARIETIES OF WETS, 56 FOOLISH, ONE WISE

Now that the political conventions are over and the Democrats have tried to commit their party to repeal a few of the more thoughtful repealists are beginning to worry a bit, and well they may.

Who is going to direct this repeal move so as to prevent the saloon's return? Will it work automatically so as to bring in a refined sale of good liquor?

One congressman assures us that no ex-convict will be employed by the government saloons. That is cheering, but what authority has he?

The Detroit Saturday Night has never been accused of being dry, but Mark Sullivan, in a recent article, turns aside from panning the Anti-Saloon League to utter a fear that must be in other hearts in the repeal camp:

What the wets need to do is to accept a continuing responsibility for bringing about and maintaining proper control of liquor. Somebody, some element of the population, will always take a direct and continuing interest in liquor. If the wets who are really earnest and high-minded fail to do it, there is one element that will always step in.

That element is the distillers and brewers, commercial interest in liquor. The possibility of that condition is just ahead of us. The other day, someone remarked that the Democrats would have difficulty getting a campaign fund. The cynical reply—and the perfectly truthful one—was that the Democrats can get, if they will take it the biggest campaign fund that ever was. The Democrats will have difficulty in keeping the commercial liquor interest at arm's length. In 1908, when the very dry William Jennings Bryan was the Democratic candidate, the brewers, without Bryan's knowledge, slipped an immense bunch of thousand-dollar bills into the campaign fund of the party. This generation knows nothing of the ruthless sordidness of the commercial liquor interests. It was their dominance in politics, as much as the direct evils of liquor that gave rise to the popular rage which resulted in the Eighteenth Amendment.

Brother Sullivan, you are pretty late with this advice. The real wets behind this conspiracy are not wondering who is to direct the stampede and the hoped-for return of the saloon, they are reaching right now for the controls.

Before the delegates got home from Chicago the papers carried the news of the plans of a big brewer to reopen and double his plant. The United Brewers have never given up their organization.

Does anybody think that the wets are going to ask John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to guide the movement?

While 56 of the minor varieties of wets are monkeying with the Constitution, the master wets are finishing the blue-prints for tomorrow.

Our only hope is a divided wet camp. The brewers are hot for beer only, but the distillers are not fools. They are clever and out of work. This job is all they have on hand right now.

When these two factions meet, then there will be a battle royal and maybe, while they are fighting it out, we can save the Constitution.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

OUR LITTLE READERS

WHY THE LIZARD CONTINUALLY MOVES HIS HEAD UP AND DOWN

By Mrs. Orville D. Johnson

(Eighth of a Series of Africa Folk Stories collected by Mrs. Orville D. Johnson, Missionary to French Equatorial Africa, and published at intervals in The Evangelist for the special benefit of our little readers.—EDITOR.)

In a town not very far from Anansi's home lived a great king. This king had three beautiful daughters whose names were kept a secret from everybody except their own family.

One day their father made a proclamation that his three daughters would be given as wives to any man who could find out their names. Anansi made up his mind to do so.

He first bought a large jar of honey, and set off for the bathing place of the king's daughters. After arriving there, he climbed to the top of a tree on which grew some very fine fruit. He picked some of this fruit and poured honey over it. When he saw the princesses approaching he dropped the fruit on the ground and waited. The girls thought the fruit dropped of its own accord, and one of them ran forward to pick it up.

When she tasted it, she called out to her sisters by name to exclaim on its sweetness.

Anansi dropped another which the second princess picked up—she, in return, calling out the names of the other two. In this fashion Anansi found out all the names.

As soon as the princesses had gone, Anansi came down from the tree and hurried into town. He went to all the great men and summoned them to a meeting at the King's palace on the morrow. He then visited his friend the Lizard, to get him to act as herald of the Court next day. He told Lizard the three names, and the latter was to sound them through his trumpet when the time came.

Early next morning the King and his Court were assembled as usual. All the great men of the town appeared, as Anansi had requested. Anansi stated his business, reminding the King of his promise to give his three daughters to the man who had found out their names. The King demanded to hear the latter, whereupon Lizard sounded them on the trumpet.

The King and courtiers were much surprised. His Majesty however, could not break the promise he had made of giving his three daughters to the man who named them.

He accordingly gave them to Mr. Lizard. Anansi was very angry, and explained that he had told the names to Lizard, so that he ought to get at least two of the girls, while Lizard could have the third. The King refused. Anansi then begged hard for even one, but was also refused. He went home in a very bad temper, declaring that he would be avenged on Lizard for taking his wives away.

He thought over the matter very carefully, but could not find a way of punishing Lizard. At last however he had an idea.

He went to the King and explained that he was leaving next morning on a long journey. He wished to start very early, and so begged the King's help. The King had a fine cock which always crowed at daybreak to awaken the King if he wished to get up early. Anansi begged the King to command the cock to crow the next morning, that Anansi might be sure of getting off in time. This the King readily promised.

As soon as night fell, Anansi went by a back way to the chicken house, seized the bird quickly and killed it. He then carried it to Lizard's house, where all were in bed. There he cooked the cock, placed the feathers under Lizard's bed, and some of the meat on a dish close to Lizard's hand. The wicked Anansi then took some boiling water and poured it into poor Lizard's mouth, thus making him dumb.

When morning came, Anansi went to the King and asked why the cock did not crow. The King was much surprised to hear that it had not obeyed his commands.

He sent one of his servants to find and bring the cock to him, but of course the servant returned empty handed. The King then ordered them to find the thief. No trace of him could be found anywhere. Anansi then cunningly said to the King: "I know Lizard is a rogue because he took my three wives from me. Perhaps he is the thief." Then the men went to search Lizard's house. There, of course, they found the remnants of the cock. Cooked ready to eat and his feathers under the bed. They questioned Lizard but the poor animal was unable to speak. They took him to the King but he could only move his head up and down. The King did not know that Anansi had made the poor animal dumb. Lizard tried very hard to speak but in vain. He was accordingly judged guilty of theft, and as a punishment his wives were taken away and given to Anansi.

Since then lizards have always had a way of moving their heads helplessly backward and forward, as if saying, "How can any one be so foolish as to trust Anansi?"

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

The Way

ISAIAH 30:21.

By Isobel Gibson, in "The New Outlook"

(Organ of the United Church of Canada)

*"This is the Way," and if we follow Jesus
Joy shall our portion be, and sorrow, too,
If we will choose to follow Jesus only
And do the work that he would have us do.*

*"This is the Way," and in the early morning,
The dawn of life, when hearts beat high and true,
This be the answer to the great world's calling,
This way we go, and these things must we do.*

*"This is the Way," and in the glaring noonday,
When wearied we would faint beneath the load,
Then do we hear the voice behind us saying,
"Lo, I am with thee," this is still the road.*

*"This is the Way," and when the night is falling,
And lagging feet can scarcely reach the goal;
Then shining angels clothed in white shall lead us
Into the haven of the weary souls.*

*"This is the way," and if we follow Jesus
Wher'er he leads us we at last shall come
Into the glory of our Father's presence,
Into the sunshine of our Father's Home.*

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

BIBLICAL Problems and Difficulties

Ever since God gave the Scriptures, perfect as they are, men have been discovering difficulties in them. Many of these difficulties were largely imaginary and vanished before a sincere and devout study. Others have been very real and stubbornly resisted the attempts to explain and solve them. Infidelity has made a great deal over these problems and often Christian believers have been quite disturbed because of their inability to solve them.

When I first became a Christian, twenty-one years ago, these things disturbed me not a little. Not that I have ever doubted the infallibility of the Word, but when I found an apparent contradiction I felt that it had to be solved immediately for my own comfort. So when a new problem was discovered in my reading of the Bible, I would scarcely sleep until I had a solution which seemed adequate. As I look back now, I have no doubt that my feeling, was providentially used of God to urge me on in searching his Word.

Today I have come to face these matters more composedly. I still search the Word. In fact, it has now become a habit. But the discovery of an apparent discrepancy or any other problem, I confess, disturbs me not at all. In the years of my study I have seen so many of these alleged problems disappear in the light of more complete knowledge that I have become confident that all of them will be solved when we know enough about the Book, its interpretation, and the Universe of which it speaks. It is only in our younger and rasher days that we fear for the Ark of God. As the years pass we come to regard the Bible as an old and trusted Friend whose words we may firmly believe even though we may not fully understand them at the moment. We may still bestir ourselves to "beat off attacks," as Sir Robert Anderson puts the matter, but we have no inner fears as to the outcome. Forever, O Lord, Thy Word is settled in heaven!

THE Problem of the "Cock-crowing"

One of the Biblical problems with which not a few Christians have wrestled is that which involves the denials of Peter and the crowing of the cock. The records include both our Lord's prophecy of these events and the narrative of their fulfillment.

All four Gospel writers agree as to the prophecy of a three-fold denial (Mk. 14:30, Mt. 26:34, Lk. 22:34, Jn. 13:38). Matthew Mark and Luke record three denials in the fulfillment (Mt. 26:70-74, Mk. 68-72, Lk. 22:57-60). John records but two (Jn. 18:25-27). This variation, however, does not involve any necessary contradiction. John does not say there were only two. The records are merely complementary.

The real problem has to do with the number of times the cock crowed, and also the exact time of his crowing in relation to the denials of Peter. Matthew, Luke and John describe the denials and then tell us that "straightway" (Matthew and John) or "immediately" (Luke) the "cock crew." They say nothing about how many times the cock sounded. But Mark mentions two cock-crowings in both the prophecy and its fulfillment, putting the first after the first denial and the second after the last denial. We come here to the crux of the supposed problem.

Mark 14:30—"Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice." Matt. 26:34—"Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice." Luke 22:34—"The cock shall not crow this day, until thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me." John 13:38—"The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice."

To put the matter in a sentence: Mark very definitely in the record of fulfillment (14:68) puts one cock-crowing before the last two denials. The other three Gospels seem to say that the cock would not crow at all until after the thrice repeated denial.

THE Key to the Problem

As usual the solution is found in the Bible itself. In Mark 13:35 we read, "Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the COCK-CROWING, or in the morning." We have here the popular names for the four watches of the night which the Jews had adopted after Pompey's conquest. You will recall that Christ came to the disciples under the storm about the "fourth watch of the night." Just as the second watch took its name from the time it ended, called popularly "the cock-crowing," because the crowing of the cocks took place at about this time.

Now when Mark says "Before the cock crow twice," he refers to exactly the same time that was in the minds of the other three writers when they write "Before the cock crow," namely, before the end of that watch which closed with the crowing of the cocks. The only difference is that Mark caught a detail which the others pass over, that is, the number of times the cock would crow on this particular morning. The other three make no attempt to relate how many times the cock crowed. They do not say, as some seem to assume, "before the cock crows once," but simply make the general statement, "before the cock crows," having in mind not the number of times, but the period of cock-crowing which marked the end of the third watch.

AN Illustration

We have a tendency to read into the records of Matthew, Luke and John, something which is not there. Suppose that two men today were predicting an event which would take place before three o'clock in the morning. One might say the event would occur "before the clock strikes the hour of three." The other might conceivably place it before "the clock strikes three times."

The first man would be thinking merely of the hour of the event while the other might be interested in both the exact hour and also the number of times the clock struck to indicate that hour.

Thus, Matthew, Luke and John tell us that Peter's denials took place before the end of the third watch called "cock-crowing" and which was not ended until the cocks had finished crowing. But Mark describes the event more minutely, declaring that Peter had finished three denials before the cock had crowed twice.

All the former three writers had to do, in order to fulfill their apparent purpose, was to record the denials and then point out that they were followed by the cock-crowing. It would not matter whether it was the first, second or tenth time the cock sounded, just so the three denials were finished before the cock finished crowing. As long as the cocks were sounding, popularly the third watch was not ended.

I am not an expert at law, but I believe that if a man should guarantee to finish a certain piece of work before the clock strikes twelve, the law would regard him as having fulfilled his promise if he finished the task before the final stroke of twelve.

NO Contradictions

There is no contradiction between the Gospel writers. The difficulties arise because one fills in details omitted by the others. These very problems demonstrate that in the four Gospels we have four independent accounts by independent investigators and eye-witnesses. If they had sat down to invent the story of the Gospel such apparent difficulties would have been eliminated in advance. But the Gospel writers set out to make a record of historical events, each guided by a certain definite purpose of God, and according to this purpose each selected or omitted details. They were historians, not exegetes.

Personally, I am convinced that some of the problems in the four Gospels will never be completely solved until we stand in the Presence of the Lord himself and hear from his own lips an account of many things which the Gospel writers were led to leave out. If you do not believe there are some things left unrecorded read John 21:24-25.

In the meantime let us not forget that we have enough in Scripture to make us wise unto salvation which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. What more could we ask?

Let the current of your being set toward God, then your life will be filled and calmed by one master-passion which unites and stills the soul.—Alexander MacLaren.

IN THIS NUMBER

Christians Who Live in Defeat—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
A Test of Conscience—Luis Farre, Speaking of Truth in Love.—C. F. Yoder, .....	6
Studies in the Book of Revelation—R. I. Humbert, .....	7
God's People a Peculiar People—Thomas Gibson, .....	8
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
General Secretary's Report of the National S. S. A.—N. V. Leatherman, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	11
Attention Endeavorers!—C. D. Whitmer, .....	11
News from the Field, .....	12-13
Conference Programs, .....	13-15
Announcements, .....	16
Business Manager's Corner, .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Christians Who Live in Defeat

For all too many the Christian life is one continuous round of defeats. Instead of rejoicing in the strength of Christ and knowing the peace and satisfaction that comes from victory, they live in disappointment and failure. Habits of worldliness still have power over them. Temptations to carnality swerve them from the right course. Fear leads to a compromising of Christian standards. And a sense of inconsistency causes them to seek to conceal their profession, to hide their lamps under a bushel. Instead of happiness, buoyancy and contentment, there is sadness, moroseness and disquietude. Instead of coming to the close of each day with joy in the heart and praise on the lips, they come with the soul full of discouragement and regretfulness, or—and what is still worse—with the conscience hardened and made more spiritually unconcerned. Instead of growing daily in the grace and power of our Lord Jesus Christ, they are living in self-confidence and defeat.

Such Christians are more of a liability than an asset to the cause of Christ. They lower the power and retard the progress of the church. They are a hindrance to the effectiveness of the Evangel as it is proclaimed to dying men. For their fellow Christians they are the source of much grief and disappointment, as well as much added burden. And for themselves their experience is continually resulting in discouragement and remorse. Why should men persist in such a situation that is undesirable from every point of view, and wholly unnecessary? What has brought it about?

Sometimes it is due to failure to get started right. It makes a vast difference how one starts out in the Christian life. In any undertaking, beginnings are important. Alexander Clark placed so much more importance upon them that he said, "Let us watch well our beginnings, and results will manage themselves." Polybius remarks, "When the ancients said a work well begun was half done, they meant to impress the importance of always endeavoring to make a good beginning." Our Lord Jesus also was concerned about right beginnings. At the close of his earthly ministry, when he had charged his disciples that they were "witnesses of these things," that they were to preach "repentance and remission of sins" among all nations, he added with emphasis, "But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." And never is there a more significant beginning in all the realms of human experience than the beginning of the new life in Christ Jesus.

That beginning must be thoroughly and deeply sincere. Sometimes there is a lack at this point that may account for the lamentable defeat into which some Christians are fallen. It is hard to think that any one could take so sacred a step as the confession of the Lord Jesus as his Savior and the entrance into the church by the watery grave of baptism, and not be sincere. Yet that is what actually happens sometimes. It has been done to increase one's social standing, to escape punishment, to win a dowry, to please a persistent friend, and not infrequently it is done just because the crowd is doing it. Crowd psychology has its perils as well as its advantages, and both need to be taken into account in making evangelistic appeals before large numbers of people. John the Baptist kept a keen eye on the multitudes that came to him to be baptized and among them he saw insincere Pharisees and Sadducees and he challenged them to "bring forth fruits worthy of repentance." Insincerity in such an undertaking makes Confession a mockery and Baptism a sacrilege, and the one who plays the double role becomes a base hypocrite. For such a nominal Christian nothing but defeat and disgrace is in store, except he repent.

The beginning of the Christian life must be accompanied with a real experience of conversion. That does not mean any particular type of conversion. It may be conversion of the type of Saint Paul, that takes place suddenly, or it may be of the kind that Timothy must have experienced, that began in childhood and was simply climaxed at the preaching of Paul, but one thing is necessary, and that is the experience of a real conversion. There must be a complete change, a right-about-face of attitude and life purpose. There must be a change in one's thinking and feeling toward Christ, and a change in one's spirit and conduct, a change in one's service and sense of relationship. Before conversion we were children of the Evil One and we served him and our conduct was of the world, but after that memorable experience we are no longer children of the devil but children of God and joint-heirs with Christ, and we henceforth serve him whose we are, and we prove the genuineness of our conversion by the readiness with which we obey him whom we serve. For him who has been really converted, the Christian life will not be one round of defeats but will be a blessed victory, and he will win through him who declared his strength to be sufficient for every human need.

Again, our Christian beginning must be made with full surrender to Christ. That may be said to be included in genuine conversion, and yet there is such a tendency to go through all the forms that point to conversion with seeming sincerity and yet hold on to some of the old habits of thought and conduct, that this phase of truth needs separate emphasis. There are many people who try to be happy with less than full surrender to Christ and satisfied with less than the full measure of freedom that he offers from the bondage of worldly thoughts and habits and carnal appetites and influences. How often do Christian people, even those in positions of leadership, show themselves in bondage to irritability, and intolerance, to a harsh, unkind and critical spirit, to self-exaltation and insubmission, and yet give evidence of enjoying a measure of Gospel freedom. And not a few seem able to participate in certain worldly and unwholesome indulgences and give support to unchristian institutions and places and yet maintain at least a modicum of Christian respectability. But are not such Christians really living in defeat? Are they not in bondage to the spirit of the world?

Dr. Charles G. Trumbull relates an incident he gleaned from a newspaper. "A Negro stowaway from West Africa got on a steamer to come to the United States and after he was discovered he was put in irons. When the boat neared Brooklyn, he jumped overboard and swam to shore under water. Still in irons he crawled up on the shore, and there was re-arrested. Why? Because he was still chained!" Then Dr. Trumbull comments: "I could not help thinking of experiences of my own and many other Christians, who think they have made their escape and find they are still in the same old bondage. That is not the sort of Gospel God has for us, but I am afraid it is the sort of experience that some of us have had." There is no victory in that sort of experience; there is only bareness and defeat and disappointment. Victory can only be had by divine forgiveness and cleansing, and by enrichment and empowerment of the Holy Spirit. The promise comes directly to stumbling Christians, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." And the aged apostle pleads: "My little children, these things write I unto you that ye sin not." They who live in sin are living in defeat.

But not all defeated Christians got themselves in that situation by failing to get a right start; many have lost out after they have been well started, through neglect of the divinely appointed means of grace. Bible reading and prayer have had little or no place. There has been no time for meditation on things divine, no time for spiritual conversation and prayerful fellowship with godly friends, no time for thinking the thoughts of God. And for some there is no time even for Bible school or the preaching of the Word. Prayer meeting has been crowded out, also the communion service.

Hosts of people are thus denying themselves of everything that would nourish and sustain the soul. The spiritual life is given nothing that would build it up, and consequently it grows lean and powerless.

There are many people who are undernourished physically in these times. Men out of work, out of funds and out of food, are being kept from starvation by the kind provision of fellow mortals of more fortunate circumstances, but the fare for many is meagre, far below what is normally required to maintain physical vigor and strength. Many children and adults must go without sufficient food and consequently become undernourished. Appeals are being made everywhere in behalf of needy humanity, and it is the duty of all who have a supply to share with those who have not, but with the best we can do vast numbers will go underfed. Far more tragic, however, is the spiritual undernourishment that extends so widely, and is all so unnecessary. Literally millions are starving spiritually, many of them starving themselves, when there is food in abundance. Uncounted numbers of professing Christians are neglecting the Word of God because their lives are being crowded with other things; they have no interest in the Bible, no relish for its truths, no rejoicing in prayer, no thought for spiritual realities. There is Bread and Water in abundance for the soul, but few are partaking of it. The Lord Jesus says: "I am the Bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger." But he also said: "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." And men are now as unconcerned about spiritual things as they were during Christ's own days upon the earth. The Gospel message goes unheard, though it is the message of the abundant and victorious life. The Bible remains for many a closed book, and for others an unknown book, though it is neither locked nor forbidden. The resources of heaven are unappropriated, though they are inexhaustible and freely offered, and brought to the very door of every soul through the mediation of the Lord Jesus. And that is the explanation of the defeat of hosts of Christian people—they are starving in the midst of plenty. May God give us hearts that are hungering and thirsting for the Bread and Water of life.

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

As we were about ready for the press another district conference program came to hand—the program of the Pennsylvania district conference, which we are giving a place in this issue.

The Pennsylvania District Conference will be held in the First church of Johnstown, of which Brother C. H. Ashman is pastor and who gives a note this week about how to reach the church and the entertainment that will be provided. The date is October 3 to 6.

The Indiana District Conference will be convened at Flora, October 4, 5 and 6. Brother Freeman Ankrum, the pastor of the entertaining church, tells how to get there and offers some inducements to prospective delegates to come. The moderator is Brother Fred C. Vanator and the secretary is Brother M. L. Sands. The program is printed in this issue.

Christian Endeavorers, the month of October is to be "organization month", so says your publicity director, Brother C. D. Whitmer this week. And he promises brief messages from other officers and department superintendents during the next few weeks. Organize a new society, if you can. If you need help, write your officers. They are anxious to help you.

Remember that worldliness is a more decisive test of a man's spiritual state than even sin. Sin may be sudden, the result of temptation, without premeditation, yet afterward, hated, repented of, forsaken. But if a man be at home in the world's pleasures and pursuits, contented . . . if they could but last forever, is not his genealogy and character clearly stemped?—Frederick W. Robertson.

Sunday school workers will be interested in the carefully prepared report of the secretary of the National Sunday School Association, Brother N. V. Leatherman. He measures up the schools from various standpoints and provides us with much interesting data. As Prof. Stuckey remarks, we are all indebted to our General Secretary for this splendid service.

Brother M. L. Sands, pastor of the church at Muncie, Indiana, is leaving this pastorate the first of October, having decided not to accept a call for another year at that place. Brother and Sister Sands are good workers and have done a splendid piece of work at Muncie during their years of service, the outstanding achievement being the erection of the first unit of the new church building. They are open to a call to a new pastorate.

The Columbus Cooperative church had its annual Vacation Bible School, closing the last day of July under the experienced leadership of Brother and Sister D. R. Murray. The enrollment was 78 and the average attendance 64, the youngest pupil being 3 years old and the oldest 81. The pupils made useful articles to send to our African missions. The school was financed by means of two ice cream socials and donations. The leaders were cheered by the splendid response of the community and also by the devoted service of twelve capable teachers.

Our faithful correspondent from Canton, Ohio, reports the church there under the capable leadership of Dr. J. C. Beal, to be pressing forward, with confessions being made from Sunday to Sunday. The Sunday school reached the high average during the summer months of 295. A successful Vacation Bible school was conducted with the aid of outside leadership. The enrollment was 104 and the average attendance 75. Some of the pupils were so enthusiastic about the Bible study offered that they persisted in their class work all summer.

The Highland church, in Pennsylvania, reports the Lord blessing their work in a splendid way, under the pastoral leadership of Brother Floyd Sibert of Masontown. Attendance at both church and Sunday school is very encouraging, though the church services are not a regular part of the weekly program. The Sunday school's attendance has been the largest during the summer that has ever been experienced. Brother and Sister Sibert are taking special interest in organizing and setting the young people to work, and with much appreciated results.

We are happy to pass on to our readers the announcement of the marriage on September 16th, 1932 of Rev. John Funk Locke to Miss Frances Virginia Funkhouser, of McGaheysville, Virginia. Brother Locke is pastor of the Harrisonburg and Mount Olive churches in Virginia, and also has been for some time doing work as field secretary of the Virginia State Sunday School Association. We congratulate these splendid young people on behalf of their many friends among the Evangelist family and wish them God's choicest blessings in their journey through life together.

Brother Alan S. Pearce, secretary of the Southern California conference, gives us a belated but interesting report of the meeting in the First church of Long Beach, July 15 to 24. Besides the local pastors, a number of prominent Bible teachers from outside the church were on the program as also was Dr. Florence N. Gribble and Brother A. V. Kimmel of the First church of Philadelphia, but for many years a pastor in that district. The resolutions passed by the conference were of a very practical nature. We commend the conference on their stand in each instance. We personally might go further in our statement regarding war, but we are glad to know that the conference took a definite stand on the matter.

The Business Manager, Dr. R. R. Teeter, has an important message this week, particularly for all churches and Sunday schools having financial obligations to the Publishing House. He not only speaks of "Frozen Assets", which he hopes will be thawed out soon, but also of Evangelist subscriptions, which we trust will be renewed soon in large numbers. There are two good reasons why every subscriber should continue his or her subscription: First, you need your own church paper to keep you informed with the work of your own church and to help in building you up in faith and loyalty; and Second, your paper needs your support and you. But give it more than your financial support; give it the support of your prayers, that God may continue to use it to his glory.

A Test of Conscience

By Luis Farre

(Brother Farre, former priest of the Roman Catholic church, is a young man of thorough training in Catholic schools and was listed for high place in the Roman hierarchy of South America. His conversion is cause for thanksgiving for the triumph of the Gospel. His excellent article was translated from the Spanish by Miss Johanna Nielsen, Missionary to Argentina.—EDITOR.)

It is necessary at times to place the conscience in the balance, to see if it has the proper weight. Perhaps it may have lost something through friction, or inadvertently through outside influence have appropriated bits that change the exact balance. If the soul were unique and universal, as certain philosophers erroneously have held, we should not concern ourselves about our individuality: we should be only an exotic manifestation that chance, death, or reason would be careful to dilute anew in the admixture. Irresponsible, in such a case, for acts or thought, there would always remain the easy recourse of attributing any malice to an unfortunate destiny, that had assigned us such an unhappy part in the human comedy. We should be like the foam on a boiling pot that, in its bubbling causes to emerge now a savory bit of meat, or a round, white potato, or ironically, a prosaic carrot. We should have no other remedy than to resign ourselves to the caprice of the water, that jiggles us how and when it pleases.

But if the world, unhappily, is much like a pot, in which in whirling mixture, presses, leaps, and actuates the evil and the good; it is not chance, nor fate, nor, much less, God, who obliges man to fulfil a destiny. There is nothing more individual, personal and singular than conscience, and each one must give an account of his own before the eternal Judge. Familiar influences, the circumstances in which the lot has fallen, education received, may serve as excuses; but never, will all this serve as justification for leaving the path, which God, from the beginning of the ages, had marked out. To admit the contrary is equivalent to denying free will. The majority, nevertheless, prefer to jiggle on in the world pot, without having sufficient boldness to give a leap and escape; to manage personally, and in conformity with the Divine Will, the reins of his destiny. We do not deny that the former conduct is easier; like getting on board a ship and going to sleep, confiding in the accuracy and skill of the helmsman.

And, why, you ask, this philosophic cold shower in a religious article? It will serve to clarify certain positions, held by many who call themselves Catholics. When these see that one of their number has escaped from the pot, they raise a tremendous zum-zum, calling him apostate, unfaithful to familiar traditions, belfry weather-cock, moved whichever way the wind may chance to blow. In their lack of Christian charity, they find no justification whatsoever; they attribute the leap to vile self-interest, to the ambition of making a name, if they do not dare to defame and trample upon his honor. Psychologically there is an explanation for this. Bound to a system like hounds on leash, their only care is to obey the cry of the hunter; too blind to see beyond their circumscribed limits, mnemonic repetition of prayers, thoughts, eulogies and reproaches, necessarily when their ranks are reduced they unsheath their musty swords, though antiquated, against the mortal, who by his leap, disturbed the tranquility with which, beatifically, they rose and fell in the pot.

One of the principal Catholics, Ignacio de Loyola, founder of the Jesuit order, teaches, and in this he was not mistaken, that among the best means of reaching perfection is, daily, before retiring to make a careful review of the acts of the day and purpose the correction of those that seem least perfect. Many centuries before Ignacio, the Greek, Pythagoras, proposed the same to his disciples. So that this is philosophical counsel, and not Catholic; though, being good, I should not refuse to accept it, no matter how Catholic and dogmatic it might be. Enlarging upon this bit of advice, I should say that, not only the acts of the day should be examined; but even more the thoughts and system that create the acts. Imitating the manner peculiar to Ignacio, I should say that it is well to subject one-self to spiritual exercises, to measure and ponder religious ideas; to see if they are exact; or if perchance they lack solidity, if with fantasmagoric appearance they hide the emptiness. One must imitate the anatomical observer who, taking in his hands the object under observation, turns it, studying it on all sides; if he must split it to study the interior, he does it without mercy; and even breaking it to bits to understand better, in the knowledge of all its parts, the truth and solidity of the whole. Something similar should be done, above all, with Catholicism because of the special nature with which it presents itself; it is a system of layer pressed upon layer through the passing centuries firmly pressed together, but without the solid uniformity of one body; rather held together by the nail of Papal infallibility. The spirit within breathes an atmosphere fetid and rarified. The majority become accustomed to it, thinking it their proper and natural state. They are like turtles who live contentedly within their ugly and voluminous shells which serve as home, refuge and defense.

But not all Catholics are simple-minded. Religious unrest is a torment to many; the grandest and most sublime unrest that a man may suffer, while living uprightly. Catholicism with its anathemas crushes him who is endowed with sufficient valor to expose himself to the danger of religious unrest. It wishes its adepts to sleep; and if one is wakeful, gives him a dose of morphine that he may grow sleepy. Not all the spirits of men were born to be slaves, and nod the head affirmatively before the impositions of a man, no matter how wise and holy we may suppose him to be. Those who boast of being rational, are caught on the prongs of reason, by the solidity of argument, by the evidence and clarity of ideas. They were not born to grope among the shadows, or to be satisfied with the crumbs their leaders may let fall, pecking and scratching like fowls in the plot of ground assigned them. These valiant souls earn their spiritual sustenance by sweat and toil, not omitting sacrifice, not fearing the dangers that threaten; because God is with those who seek with uprightness and sincerity of heart.

And, in truth, nothing is more disturbing than unrest in the matter of religion. To leave without solution a question in metaphysics, a problem in mathematics, a theorem, a chemical combination, a business doubt, means, at most, a lessening in some material interest; but would not go beyond this, and there would always remain the hope of compensation when the occasion should be more propitious. Religion is neither philosophy, nor chemistry, nor mathematics; religion is a form of life. Certainty in religion illumines the path of the present with the light of eternity; it affects our beliefs, morals, relations with our fellowman, and our personal behavior even in our most secret acts. Error, on the other hand, unbalances us, robs us of strength in action, blurs the bright colors of virtue, and torments us with the incessant questioning of an unhappy soul.

What if some have not felt the sting of doubt! The worse for them; either the material so crushes them as to blot out the iridescence of the spirit; or they prefer to cover their eyes so as not to contemplate the foundations of what they believe to be truth. I do not believe in truth that has never been tossed about in the mind; even as I do not believe in the firmness of a tree that, growing on a mountain height, did not have its roots entwined in the hardness of the rock, dauntlessly defying wind, rain and heat of sun. Perhaps its branches are twisted by the storm, or hang limp with the weight of water, or droop with the noonday heat; but the tree does not die; rather it acquires vigor and strength, and on fair days displays its glory of exuberant life. Similar effects are experienced through religious unrest in the soul that seeks the truth; he is twisted with pain, as though part of his very being were torn away; the floods beat upon him, carrying away in their rapid course fatuities, vanities, and fictions that were formerly admitted as divine expressions and commands; before the splendor of the sunlight of truth, noxious juices that corrupted are evaporated. And the soul becomes serene, and is tranquil and enjoys in abundance the fruits of peace, after the horrors of the tempest. And he takes firmer root in the solid rock; his tree of life shoots forth an abundance of foliage, is beautified with fragrant blossoms, that change to luscious fruits. Limpidity, serenity, peace, joy and happiness come after the darkness and stress of the struggle.

Many are the fruits that grow after the storm, now that the environment is peaceful. One only I wish to touch, if not to taste it leisurely: freedom of the spirit. When one has lived for a long time in a murky cavern, in which the darkness could be felt, hands and feet fettered; when the chains are broken and he passes out where the breeze caresses, and he feels the warmth of the sun, and he may himself, spontaneously, direct his steps, the sweetest peace takes possession of his being. Liberty, sweet liberty amazes him, pointing out horizons unknown, opening wide the windows of the firmament. The same thing happens to the soul, that with a critic's scalpel, has cut away the weight of unscientific dogmas, invigorating himself with solid things of unmovable stability. He abandons the old and worn out, and clothes himself with the new that gives him a beauty unsurpassed. Then he expands his chest, to the splendors of the sunlight of truth and to the gentle breezes of loving sentiment that always accompany the former; and learns that in religion, as in science, there is always a delightful 'more beyond' that allows the joy of investigation and a taste of well-earned peace. Humpbacked souls, I should call those who, bowed down with the weight of ancient dogma, have not the courage to straighten themselves and contemplate in its fulness the wonderful light that radiates from the Holy Scriptures.

The word liberty is one of those that, being so much used, is exposed to false interpretations. Catholicism does not give it a letter of credit; and always inculcates the predominance of law, which degrades and enslaves. Christ broke the bonds of the law; and bound us with love. Love is life, energy, spontaneity; the law is a club held over the back of a slave to make him work, even though the inner man may protest. He who works and believes because he loves has arrived at a knowledge of the sweetness of liberty. He does not feel the weight of obligation, but rather the joy of doing the right. When the law, bare and rigid controls the action, it paints the exterior; but love, generator of liberty, renews the inner man to the most secret thoughts. Liberty is not unrestrained power to give loose rein to the passions and whims of the soul; but the voluntary and joyous subjection to the will and desires of the one we love. The law governs, only with commands; with love it is necessary only to manifest the wish. And, finally, I will say: that love is liberty, while law is bondage. Protestantism is liberty and love; Catholicism, law and bondage.

Catholic bondage is death under many aspects. First, scientifically; dogma and law are landmarks that limit the field of action, that say—thus far and no farther; though the mind may strive to see beyond these limits. Dogma is an idea, stereotyped, indisputable, dry. The centuries will pass; science will throw new light on the universe, will clothe itself anew, laying aside the things that are out of date. Dogma will follow in the wake of progress, giving a beggarly explanation that is but a ragged covering for its scientific nakedness. It may hide, perhaps, behind a monstrous mass of scholastic argument; but "¿unque la mona se vista de seda; mona queda." (Spanish proverb—Though the monkey clothes herself in silk; she remains a monkey.) Fiction of the human reason, in most cases, Catholic dogmas without being based on the Bible, are the product of a school that imposed itself by sheer force of greater power and numbers, crushing its adversaries and canonizing its own opinions, caprice of the Roman Sede, stamping such caprice with the seal of infallibility; never again can the divine word have any value. Man's vision is limited; and that which, in one period of history may seem true, with the passing years may easily be displaced by a new idea, which makes the old flee to the shadows. Only God, in his infinite and

Speaking Truth in Love

Dr. C. F. Yoder

It isn't enough to proclaim the truth

To a world that is lost in sin,

Not sufficient to say to the sinner, "Arise,

You must now a new life begin.

The sinner is dead, and he cannot arise,

Unless he have life from above,

He is deaf, and he cannot the truth receive,

Unless it is spoken in love.

Not the words but the life it is that speaks,

Not the head but the heart that hears.

The tears in the voice of the preacher precede

The penitent prodigal's tears.

It isn't enough to give good advice,

Or correct the mistakes of a friend,

A cutting rebuke and advice with disdain

May cause greater ills than they mend.

It isn't enough to contribute a coin

To the beggar who comes to the door.

The coin he may need but a kindly word

Is something he needs still more.

It isn't enough to obey the law

To do a good citizen's part,

The country needs people of honest good will

Who do their good deeds from the heart.

It isn't the thing you pretend that counts

At the going down of the sun.

It isn't so much the deed that you do

As the spirit in which it is done.

Almafuerte, Argentina

eternal being, may formulate, in revealed thought, unchangeable truths. Sooner shall the universe reel upon its foundations, than these lose their value.

The word of God is not enigmatic and obscure for him who wishes to understand it, willing morally and religiously. If salvation is for all, all have the right to read the word which teaches it; and the truth of God will reveal it to them. The Bible is God's letter to the world: his writing is clear, the principal thoughts the most simple may comprehend. He who interferes between God and man, presuming to be the only way, is like a cloud that obscures the rays of the sun. And, if he takes the Bible in hand, resting it on immutable dogmas, scholastic productions, and pontifical whims, he destroys the word of God with the superabundance of human rhetoric. Scholastic theology and philosophy have assassinated the Bible in the Catholic field; and as a result, have given a mortal blow to science. If there is any progress among Catholics it is behind the back and against the wish of its legislation and dogmatism.

Catholic bondage destroys morals. The legislative oppression to which its adherents are subject, dries up the fountain of liberality, obliges them to observe precepts contrary to our times. Fear of retracting what had mistakenly been given as good precepts in times past, causes them to be retained in the present. Those who believe themselves obliged to the faithful and loyal observance of these precepts become over-scrupulous, hysterical, beside themselves; and those who, not being able to observe them, trespass wittingly, do not stop within reasonable limits but go to extremes. It is well known that mockery at a law, recognized as such, weakens the conscience, in regard to observance of other laws.

In closing this article, I only wish, further, to thank God who has seen fit to illuminate me that I might know the truth: and has given me courage sufficient to break the yoke of bondage and to enjoy the fruits of the liberty that is found in the knowledge of Jesus Christ.

Argentina, South America.

Studies in the Book of Revelation

By R. I. Humbert

Study No. Six

Divisions of the Book

In verse nineteen, we have the three divisions of the book. "Write the things which thou hast seen", that is, chapter one, or the vision of Christ in glory, "and the things which are", the second and third chapters, or the messages to the churches; "and the things which shall be hereafter (after these)," from the fourth chapter on through the book we have the things that are to happen after the church age has run its course and has been removed from the earth (1 Thess. 4:14-18).

Messages to the Churches

We now come to chapter two. Let us remember that these messages are given to seven real churches of that time but have a message for the churches of all ages. Also, the local churches of our day may have the different elements that call for a warning or a commendation. Each individual Christian may also find his own life set forth here for, although these messages are given to the pastors as though they alone are responsible, yet they are for the whole church, seven times do we hear the entreaty, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

Divine Thermometer

The sermon on the mount is Christ's own words while in humiliation. These two chapters consist of his own words after he had been in glory some sixty years. This fact, accompanied with the seven times repeated entreaty to "hear", gives us an urgency that no Christian dare neglect without dire consequence to his own spiritual life.

These messages are a divine thermometer given by the judge himself. Thus, if a Christian has left his first love and is cooling off, or if he has gotten so far as to be lukewarm, let him take warning and hear what the Spirit has to say to him.

The Imperfect Churches

Great things are to happen under the seals, trumpets and vials, but our Lord pauses to write to his church to warn them of failure and to encourage them to serve him fully.

The early churches were overseen by the apostles themselves and we might think that they would be perfect. But these messages reveal a sad lack. They are one of praise and rebuke; there is a mingling of good and bad; wheat and tares. It is well for us to read these messages and see what Christ likes and what he dislikes.

Methods of Study

I hardly know which method is best in the study of these two chapters. I have several large fifteen foot charts on the book of Revelation, that I use in my Bible Chart Lectures. In my chart on these two chapters, I have divided the seven messages in such a way that they fall under seven heads, Salutation, Introduction, Information, Inspection, Admonition, Exhortation and Exaltation. I think we will study them briefly under these headings.

The Church at Ephesus

Ephesus is the first church named. It is here that Paul taught in the school of Tyrannus for two years until all which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord. We can thus be sure that this church had a good foundation of truth. Here God wrought special miracles by the hand of Paul and healed the sick; here the seven sons of Sceva were overpowered by the demons. Paul sent a most important epistle to this church. This was the home of the apostle John, and since our Lord committed his mother into John's keeping, it is probably the place where she laid off her mortal body.

Here such a mighty revival broke out that the magicians destroyed their books to the value of fifty thousand pieces of silver and Demetrius suffered such a depression in his trade as to move him to set the city in an uproar against the disciples.

A Cooling Off

Although this church started out with such a bright prospect, yet our Lord sees an easing up; they had left their first love. What a danger here, and how many today, who started out with a warm love for their Lord, have now cooled off until they scarce remember from whence they have fallen. If such be so with the reader of these lines, may he repent and turn to his first love, or else his Lord may come quickly and his end will be in sorrow.

Martinsburg, Pennsylvania.

FOR THOUGHTFUL READING

Duty is gradually revealed. Suddenly was Paul converted, gradually learned he what that involved. He found that illumination of soul is different from illumination of the future. The next duty is the key to victorious living.—George H. Morrison.

God's People a Peculiar People

By Thomas Gibson

God's people have been a peculiar people from time immemorial. God in speaking to his people Israel, through his servant Moses, said, "Ye must not disfigure yourselves in mourning. For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God, and the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself above all the nations that are upon the earth" (Deut. 14:2). God in covenanting with Israel, laid down certain conditions upon which they would be his people. "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine" (Exod. 19:5).

They were to have characteristics exclusively their own. They were to be a peculiar, strange people unto himself. "For the Lord hath chosen Jacob for his peculiar treasure" (Psa. 135:4). They were peculiar in that they should not marry or intermarry with the other nations. Peculiar in that they should not worship other gods. But that they should render unto him the living God, their undivided love, and undivided service. Coming down to the Christian dispensation, God through his servant Peter, says to his people, "Thou art a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people that ye might show forth the praises of him, who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light" (1 Peter 2:9).

God still demands the same distinctive peculiarities in his people of today, as he did from his ancient people Israel. God's people are peculiar in that they are "a called out people," a separated people. Separated from "the world, the flesh, and the devil." These are the three great enemies of man's soul. Peculiar, in that they are not conformed to this world. For the Holy Spirit has wrought a transformation of life and character. He has purged them from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. God's people are "peculiar," in that they "Counsel not with the ungodly, nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornful." God's people are peculiar in that they "have risen with Christ, and have set their affections on things above." Peculiar in that they don't see the pleasures of the world. They don't engage in mirth and revelry, which leads to vanity and vexation of soul, and ultimately "to destruction and perdition of ungodly men." They are peculiar in that they, "bring all the tithes into the storehouse" that there may be meat in God's House. And prove him, as saith thus the Lord, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour out, empty thee out, a blessing, such that there shall not be room enough to receive it. "You will not have the capacity to contain it. It will be an overflowing blessing. Like a river overflowing its banks flooding the surrounding country, giving life and growth to all nature, and seed to the sower and bread to the eater." There will be great abundance for both man and beast. They are unique, peculiar in that they do not solicit any aid from unbelievers, for the promotion of truth and righteousness.

When the Israelites returned from the Babylonian captivity, the rebuilding of the wall was undertaken by that faithful, fearless, heroic man of God, Nehemiah. He refused any help from those who were not God's people. "If the Lord build not the house, they labor in vain that build it." The unbelieving world, "who walk in lasciviousness, lust, excess of wine, revellings, and banquetings, and abominable idolatries. Think the people of God are strangely peculiar in that they do not run with them to the same "excess of riot" (Eph. 4:4). Jesus gave himself a sacrifice, that he might purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:14).

"God does not want yours but you." After you give him your life, you are not your own, but you have been bought with a price. And what you call your possessions are not yours. You are but a steward of the manifold gifts of God. You have been entrusted with the management of affairs not your own. After a while you will be called upon to give an account of your stewardship. If one is soundly converted, he knows his duty in reference to supporting God's cause. Let us not solicit money from unbelievers for the promotion of truth and righteousness, but let us diligently seek to win them for Christ.

Let us be God's peculiar people in this regard. Then we will meet his approval, and receive his loving benediction.

1816 Woolsey St., Berkeley, California.

---

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

---

OLD GAZA FORTIFICATIONS

Old Gaza, the great city of Palestine, which was well known to Abraham, was one of the most strongly fortified in the ancient world. Sir Flinders Petrie, the veteran archeologist, announced a short time ago, the discovery of another secret passage leading out into the desert. So great is the area still to be explored in Gaza, that Sir Flinders estimated that it will take 50 years to excavate it all. The elaborate defenses of the city, which was in its heyday at the time of Abraham, are so complicated that military experts with the expedition did not fully understand them. A great tunnel leading from inside the city, under the walls and nearly 500 yards out into the desert, was found. This was considered to be a means of escape in emergency, or a method by which a surprise attack from the rear could be made on besieging forces. Further excavations of the main gate revealed another tunnel cut in the solid sandstone.—The Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

THE ANCESTRY OF INTERNATIONALISM

"Christianity began as an international movement transcending national and racial distinctions. That was one of the main factors in its strong appeal to men of the early centuries. One of the tragic results of the Protestant Reformation, great and good though most of its results have been, was the tendency of churches everywhere to become purely national institutions, and to forget that they were parts of a great international fellowship. We must recover that obscured sense of the world character of our religion. Way back in the middle of the second century of our era a man unknown to us even by name wrote a letter to another man of whom we know only that his name was Diognetus. It is just a fragment of a personal letter, but in it the writer says, 'What the soul is in the body, Christians are in the world; for the soul holds the body together and Christians hold the world together. This illustrious function was assigned them of Almighty God, which it is not lawful for them ever to forsake.' May God help us ever to remember that this is our function as Christians, and never to forsake it!"—From an address delivered by William P. Merrill in Shanghai last spring.—The Congregationalist.

MAKING PROFIT OUT OF THE PANIC

In the midst of the contagion of wage and salary reduction, it is a matter of common knowledge that some business firms and corporations with a large margin of profits have taken advantage of the prevalent slashing of wages.

In a different form the same selfishness has invaded the churches. There are wealthy church members who capitalize the depression and have reduced their gifts on the benevolent and missionary collections. They are financially secure and independent, having suffered little or no material loss. Their profiteering spirit results in a tragical spiritual loss. If they manifested the Christian spirit of generosity they would say to their pastors, "Since some of the members have lost their jobs and have had heavy losses, I will increase my offering." Instead of this they make the misfortune of others a pretext for reducing their own gifts. This is a disloyalty to the Church and to the Kingdom of God which is even baser than the disruptive sins, since it betrays a selfishness which is calculating and cold-blooded.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

GOING AFTER LOTTERIES

Not since the Louisiana lottery was suppressed in 1890 was such a stir raised along this line as by the indictment of Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, and other prominent men for promoting alleged fraternal lotteries. Late years have seen a steady growth of the lottery business, mostly local, in which fraternal organizations, benevolent societies and even churches have participated. Senator Davis figured in the anti-lottery drive by the New York branch of the Department of Justice as a former director-general of the Loyal Order of Moose. Indicted with Senator Davis was Conrad T. Mann, head of the Eagles, and officials of the Western Union Telegraph Co., charged with sending, transporting or delivering lottery tickets across state lines in violation of the federal criminal code. The two fraternal organizations were said to have received some $5,000,000 for tickets, to have distributed prizes totaling $225,999, and to have devoted the profits to charitable enterprises. Officials denied having received any personal gain, and those indicted pleaded not guilty. One big drawing for prizes is said to have been held on a boat in Lake Erie and another off the shore of Connecticut. A big drawing planned in connection with the Shriners' convention last year in San Francisco was stopped because of a warning from the government. In the last session of Congress the House passed a bill prohibiting the broadcasting of news of lotteries over the radio, but the Senate did not act. Local lottery activities, in which the prizes are usually some kind of merchandise, are amenable only to local laws. The Department of Justice revealed that 17 lottery investigations were pending, but added that "none of them involve churches."—Pathfinder.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Jeremiah

The great Scotch divine, Principal Whyte, regarded the book of Jeremiah as "second only to the Psalms as the most spiritual book of the Old Testament." Dr. W. W. White has felt that "so far as we have a data for judgment, Jeremiah was the healthiest, youngest, bravest grandest man of Old Testament history." Isaac Williams has written thusly in praise of the prophet: "There is nothing in all Scripture so eloquent of love and sorrow and consolation as the thirty-first and thirty-third chapters of Jeremiah. No words can be found in any language of such touching beauty."

The Call and Commission of Jeremiah

This veritable chorus of opinion mentioned above is hard to understand until we investigate the man Jeremiah himself, and then note the conditions which obtained during the period of his prophetic utterances. The Bible plainly states the following enlightening facts:

"The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin: to whom the word of the Lord came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign. It came also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah, king of Judah, unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah, king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month." (Jeremiah 1:1-3). No words of mine could more succinctly describe the historical background.

What was the nature of the prophet's call? Let the Scripture again testify:

"The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations." Here is the call and the commission of the prophet.

How did the waiting Jeremiah respond? Again the Holy Word continues:

"Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, I cannot speak: for I am a child: But the Lord said unto me, say not, I am a child: for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak." No wonder he spoke fearlessly and furiously.

Dr. Moorehead writes brilliantly of his time after this fashion: "It was Jeremiah's lot to prophesy at a time when all things in Judah were rushing down to the final and mournful catastrophe; when political excitement was at its height; when the worst passions swayed the various parties, and the most fateful counsels prevailed; ... to ... see his own people, whom he loved with the tenderness of a woman, plunge over the precipice into the wide, weltering ruin."

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Jeremiah, "the weeping prophet."
2. When and Where Written? Between 630-585 B. C. near Jerusalem.
3. To Whom Written? To Judah and the Nations.
4. Purpose. To Correct the Degradation and Disastrous Conditions of his Time.
5. Authenticity. Reliable History and Trustworthy Prophecy.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Call and Commission of Jeremiah. 1-13.
2. The Ministry and Work of Jeremiah. 14-51.
3. The Conclusion and Appendix of Jeremiah. 52.

III. THE CONTENTS OF THE BOOK

The book under consideration opens with an introductory account of the prophet's genealogy and call. The story of persecution in his home town and the treachery of his friends are given. "In the swelling of the Jordan" section a unique picture of the prophet and conditions in Judah are depicted. Then follow the messages in the reigns of Zedekiah and Jehoiakim, first and second series. The closing events of the siege of Jerusalem follow hard on the heels of warning after warning and the Egyptian captivity is the resulting outcome. The history ends with an account of the remnant, Jeremiah's farewell message, plus the historical appendix.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Warning. Back-sliding. Return. Love.
2. Key Verses. 1:10; 3:12, 22; 31:3.
3. Key Chapters. 2; 31-33.
4. Key Ideas. Sin and Judgment. Tenderness and Love.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The book of Jeremiah serves as an excellent record of the prophecies of Old Testament times and the numerous workings of God with man. The history is accurately related and the literature has been marvelously preserved. It is highly auto-biographical and personal.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

In Jeremiah 28:6 Christ is observed as "Jehovah our Righteousness." He stands forth as the "Righteous Branch" of the Davidic line and shall yet become the truly great King of that ancestry. He is to be prosperous and will reign with absolute authority. As a Judge he will execute justice during his reign. 33:15.

Israel was scattered during Jeremiah's day and she is scattered today; she suffered then and she suffers now; but she was restored and shall be restored again from Gentile persecution and influence. This is truly a prophetic and dispensational picture which passes before the eyes of men as the moon when her seasons change.

VII. THE TEACHING OF THE BOOK

1. Idolatry is vain and useless.
2. God's warnings and promises are sometimes conditional.
3. Obedience is superior to burnt offerings.
4. Intercessory prayer is not always availing.
5. God is patient when man is impatient.
6. Before God every individual man is individually responsible.
7. God made and will keep his covenants with man.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN. MAGAZINE SECTION M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR. ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

General Secretary's Report of the National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church

By N. V. Leatherman

Editorial Note: Again the Secretary of the National Sunday School Association comes with his comprehensive and excellent report of the activities of the recent year. All readers of this page will thank the Secretary, Brother Leatherman, personally as they read this report for the fine way in which it has been arranged. They will also be grateful to him for his painstaking efforts in behalf of the Association and brotherhood which he represents. Certainly the entire church is obligated to him for his rich and useful service. M. A. S.)

-tB

The first ten schools reporting follow in the order of their reports:

Washington, D. C.; Fort Scott, Kans.; Krypton, Kentucky; Leon, Iowa; Carleton, Nebraska; Morrill, Kansas; College Corner, Indiana; Brighton, Indiana; Fort Wayne, Indiana; Williamstown, Ohio.

Reports by Districts
District	Schools	Reporting	Percent
Mid-West . . . .	9	9	100
Indiana . . . . .	38	28	73
Central Calif. . .	3	2	66
Pennsylvania . . .	41	26	63
Ohio . . . . .	29	18	62
Southern Calif. . .	8	5	62
Illikokota . . . .	10	6	60
Southeastern . . .	25	9	36
Northwestern . . .	3	1	33
Total . . . . .	166	104	62

The number of schools reporting last year was 93. Thus the percent of gain in schools reporting is 12. At this same rate of gain in reports we should have a 100% report by 1937.

Attendance Reported by Districts

District	Ave. At.	Membrs.	Percent
Ohio . . . . .	2256	3749	46
Indiana . . . . .	4414	6020	73
Pennsylvania . . .	2950	4849	61
Southeastern . . .	1056	1726	61
Illikokota . . . .	778	2222	35
Mid-West . . . . .	622	1058	58
S. Calif. . . . .	2074	4506	46
Central Calif. . .	127	172	73
Northwestern . .	109	182	60
Totals . . . . .	14385	24484	58

Ten Largest Schools Reporting

School	Ave. Att.	Membership	% Att.	Ave. Last Yr.	Gain
Long Beach, Calif. 1st . . . .	901	2954	30	721	180
Dayton, Ohio . . . . .	506	942	54	504	2
Long Beach, Calif. 2nd . . . .	484	685	70
Los Angeles, Cal. 2nd . . . .	389	474	82	346	43
Nappanee, Ind. . . . .	376	469	80	351	25
Johnstown, Pa. 1st . . . . .	362	594	61	329	33
Goshen, Ind. . . . .	315	586	53	305	11
Elkhart, Ind. . . . .	314	570	55	306	8
Canton, Ohio . . . . .	300	476	63	300
North Manchester, Ind . . . .	253	399	65	238	20

Thus 104 schools report an average attendance of 138. Last year's average was 131. This shows a gain in average attendance of 7.

There are 62 schools not reporting. These schools are the smaller schools and will fall at least 50% below the average in attendance. Presuming they had this 50% of the general average would make them average 69 in attendance. And 62 schools at an average of 69 would make 4278 to be added to the 14385 giving the approximate average attendance of all our schools at 18663.

We have 28978 church members reported this year. Therefore 64% of the church membership reported equals the average attendance at our Sunday schools.

The First Brethren church of Long Beach, California shows by far the largest gain for the year. Theirs is a 25% gain. Their membership record would indicate also that they have not exhausted their possibilities. Others of our schools report commendable gains in average attendance. The total average attendance reported over last year's average is 780. The total loss reported under last year's average is 255. This makes a net gain where exact comparisons can be made of 525.

Ten Largest Cradle Roll Departments Reporting

Long Beach, California, 1st . . . . .	93
Long Beach, California, 2nd . . . . .	80
Canton, Ohio . . . . .	76
South Bend, Indiana . . . . .	70
North Manchester, Indiana . . . . .	59
Johnstown, Pennsylvania, 1st . . . . .	56
Hagerstown, Maryland . . . . .	56
Peru, Indiana . . . . .	48
Elkhart, Indiana . . . . .	47
Leon, Iowa . . . . .	43

Eighty-nine percent of our Sunday schools report a Cradle Roll Department with a total of 1772 babies.

Our schools thereby show a splendid and encouraging interest in the infant department of the church.

Ten Largest Home Departments Reporting

Long Beach, California, 2nd . . . . .	150
Canton, Ohio . . . . .	76
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania . . . . .	57
Washington, D. C. . . . .	53

Waterloo, Iowa . . . . .	35
Long Beach, California, 1st . . . . .	30
North Manchester, Indiana . . . . .	27
Johnstown, Pennsylvania, 1st . . . . .	26

The prospering Sunday schools are those schools that give attention to their Home Departments.

Sixty percent of our schools reporting have Home Departments.

Training Schools

Falls City, Nebraska . . . . .	25
Gratis, Ohio . . . . .	24
Kittanning, Pennsylvania . . . . .	24
Brush Valley, Pennsylvania . . . . .	24

A total of 23 schools reported having training schools. That is 2 more than last year.

Report of Districts of Diplomas Held

Ohio, 62; Indiana, 62; Pennsylvania, 57; Southeastern, 55; Southern California, 30; Illikokota, 19; Mid-West, 10. Total 295.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools

There were 31 D. V. B. S. reported of which 14 were conducted by the churches locally and 17 were conducted by the community.

Week Day Bible Schools

There were 8 week day Bible schools reported of which 3 were conducted by the churches locally and 5 were conducted by the communities.

Brethren Publications

Reports show that all schools reporting use some Brethren Literature. 74 schools or 71% of schools reporting, report the use of the Brethren Teacher.

Workers' Conferences

62 schools or 60% of schools reporting have regular Workers' Conferences.

Libraries

27 schools or 26% of schools reporting have libraries. 19 schools or 18% have added new books to their libraries. 3 new libraries were started this year.

White Gift Reports

57 schools or 55% of those reporting state that they received a White Gift. The Treasurer reports this offering. However it is known definitely that many Sunday schools exercise a mental reservation and dispose of their White Gift Offering other than the intent fostered by the National Sunday School Association. If our other special offerings were treated as loosely by our churches and Sunday schools there would be no doubt about our cause suffering tremendously. We believe it is just as necessary that loyalty to the purpose of our offering be shown in one offering as well as another.

Standard of Excellence

Front Line Schools 100%

North Manchester, Indiana; Berlin, Pennsylvania; Elkhart, Indiana; Johnstown, Pennsylvania; Conemaugh, Pennsylvania; Washington, D. C.; Waterloo, Iowa.

These schools are awarded a $1.00 book.

Banner Schools 85%-99%

Dayton, Ohio, 95%; Clayton, Ohio, 90%; Milledgeville, Illinois, 90%; Lanark, Illinois, 88%; Los Angeles, California, 1st, 86%; Peru, Indiana, 90%; Winchester, Virginia, 85%; Krypton, Kentucky, 85%; Los Angeles, California, 2nd, 85%; Louisville, Ohio, 85%; Masontown, Pennsylvania, 85%; Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, 85%.

A total of 12 Banner schools. 4 of last year the Banner schools are Front Line schools this year.

These schools are awarded a 60c book.

Schools of Merit 70%-84%

Warsaw, Indiana, 82%; New Lebanon, Ohio, 82%; Long Beach, California, 1st, 80%; Long Beach, California, 2nd, 80%; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, 80%; College Corner, Indiana, 80%; Oakville, Indiana, 80%; Nappanee, Indiana, 77%; Flora, Indiana, 77%; Meyersdale, Pennsylvania, 75%; Summit Mills, Pennsylvania, 73%; Gratis, Ohio, 73%; Gretna, Ohio, 73%; Maurertown, Virginia, 73%; Hagerstown, Maryland, 73%.

There are 15 schools of Merit. Thus making a total of 34 schools grading above 70%. There were 26 with this standard reported last year, making a gain of 8 schools. We believe this demonstrated a real increase in efficiency.

Promotional Work

Last year there were held two Young People's Training Camps. The one at Shipshewana Lake, Indiana, with an attendance of 115, and one at Camp Black Hawk with an attendance of 80. This next year there will likely be an additional camp started in Pennsylvania. Better than 200 students were reported taking teacher training work under the supervision of Prof. M. A. Stuckey. Inspirational Sunday School Institutes were held at South Bend, Indiana; Johnstown, Pennsylvania; Berlin, Pennsylvania, and Terra Alta, West Virginia. Besides representatives of the National Sunday School Board were sent to most of our District Conferences.

Budget

Seminary of Ashland College	$2,000.00
Library for Seminary Books	100.00
Foreign Missionary Society	250.00
Shipshewana Camp	175.00
Promotional Work	250.00
International Council of Religious Education	50.00
Secretarial Work	100.00
Miscellaneous	75.00

Total $3,000.00
Berlin, Pennsylvania.

sage we can bring Christians on this subject is a direct quotation from v. 6: "And when thou hast shut the door, PRAY!"

TUESDAY

The Master's Example. Luke 6:12-19

If we would only more closely follow the Master's example in this regard we should find it easier to follow his example in other things as well. Undoubtedly Jesus found the deepest of pleasure simply in communing with the Father, for the sake of communion. However, with work to do, he had other need of prayer, also. In the verses just preceding today's Scripture, Jesus had experienced most disheartening opposition on the part of those who should have been with him; he needed the strength that comes only from a night of prayer. From this he plunged into the needy field about him, choosing the Twelve and healing the souls and bodies of suffering humanity. Let us follow the Master's example in prayer, that we may follow him in service.

WEDNESDAY

Cherishing the Word. 2 Tim. 3:14-17

To cherish the Word is "to hold dear; to make much of" (see Webster). Christians should cherish the Word for the Word's sake, for it alone is "able to make thee wise unto salvation." The Word has been handed down to us from our mothers, and has proved of such untold blessing all along the line that again we would do well to cherish the Word. We should make much of the Word, using it often, regularly, because it is given by inspiration of God and has been so designed by him that it is profitable to us for our every need. Pray that we may hold God's Word dearer, and may indeed make much of it.

THURSDAY

Obedying the Word. Jas. 1:22-27

If we say that we cherish the Word but do not obey it, we make ourselves hypocrites and lay ourselves open to the awful woes which Jesus pronounced upon such men in Matt. 23. It is claiming faith, but not proving our faith by our works—dead faith (Jas. 2:26). Nowhere is there a promise to those who believe only with the intellect, who cherish the Word only in an intellectual sense; it is the DOING of the Word that counts. Pray that we may not be hearers only, but that in all things we may be obedient to the Word we cherish.

FRIDAY

Growing in Grace. 2 Pet. 3:14-18

Peter tells of things in Paul's writings that are hard to be understood, but which may yet be understood if we follow on. After all, this is the experience of every earnest Christian. There are Scriptures we understand today which were meaningless to us last year; conversely, there were deeds which we did in all good conscience last year which we now know were not in accordance with his will. It is this experience which Peter has in mind when he urges us to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior." This should be our prayer each time we open God's Word.

SATURDAY

Joy in the Word. Ps. 1:1-6

Joy in the Word affects a man's walk. The man who finds no joy in the law of the Lord is most likely to walk in the counsel of the ungodly, to stand in the way of sinners, and to sit in the seat of the scornful; but not so the man whose delight is in God's law! How different his thoughts and actions, and his final state! May we find our joy in his Word!

SUNDAY

Joy in the Sanctuary. Ps. 122

God's day, God's Word, God's house—what more should be needed to bring joy to God's people? To the worldling, of course, none of these things mean anything at all. There are many living in a sort of spiritual No-Man's-Land, torn now this way, now that, and finding no pleasure either in the things of God or the things of the world. Let us pray that his people may be WHOLLY his, and that we may all find joy in his sanctuary this day.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

E. M. RIDDLE,
President
Warsaw, Indiana

F. C. VANATOR,
Associate
Peru, Indiana

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK

C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Duball Ave., South Bend, Ind.

GLADYS M. SPICE,
General Secretary
and
Treasurer
2301 13th St., N. E.,
Canton, Ohio

THE CHRISTIAN'S DEVOTIONAL LIFE

(Lesson for October 2)

Lesson Text: Matt. 6:5-15; 2 Tim. 3:14-17;

Golden Text, 2 Pet. 3:18

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Prayer Life. Matt. 6:5-8

Some one has aptly called prayer the Christian's "breath of life," for it is as important to the spiritual life as breath to the physical life. Jesus mentions certain forms of "prayer" that are not prayer at all; let us shun such hypocrisies. It will prove well worth while to spend some time trying to define what prayer really is. Then bear in mind the words of the Negro spiritual: "It's not my brother, nor my sister, but it's ME, O Lord, Standing in the need of prayer." Perhaps the most forceful mes-

Attention Endeavorers!

October—Organization Month

Objective: "A C. E. Society in my Church" To the first 10 groups of Young People in any church who will organize a NEW Society (either Adult, Senior, Intermediate or Junior) during October, will be given honorable mention in the C. E. page of the Evangelist. Please send name of church and officers of Society to C. D. Whitmer, Publicity Superintendent, 217 E. Duball Avenue, South Bend, Indiana by or before November 15th.

In this C. E. page, you will find splendid suggestions from the different departmental superintendents urging organization or reorganization. Any questions will be given due consideration by writing to the Superintendent of Department in question.

C. D. WHITMER, Publicity Supt.

HOW THE CHURCH RECOGNIZES CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

(Quoted from Chapter 1 of the new manual, "Leadership through Christian Endeavor," by Bert H. Davis. Published by the International Society of Christian Endeavor, Boston, Mass. $1.)

Church leaders in countless instances have recognized the Christian Endeavor societies as forming an ideal training school for Christian service. Educational guidance is needed. The societies should be helped to offer a continuing, progressive training for Christian living and church work. Correlation with the Sunday school, with missionary education, and with other youth groups of the church is a necessity to avoid conflict and to serve the entire needs of young people's religious training.

Examples of Church Recognition

1. Pastor or director of religious education is in close personal touch with the Christian Endeavor program.

2. Christian Endeavor is represented in the church commission on religious education (or board or council of religious education). Every society should have an adult counsellor. Such counsellors might well represent their societies in the education board or commission. Older young people may similarly serve. In some churches young people are elected to commission membership.

3. In the absence of such a commission Alumni Christian Endeavorers who are also active in the Sunday school may form under official auspices a Christian Endeavor adult council, to assist the societies in cooperating with the educational program of the church.

4. Some churches elect both a Sunday school superintendent and a Christian Endeavor superintendent. Each officer is in charge of these related educational activities, the Christian Endeavor superintendent serving most effectively when he is a counsellor rather than a director of the societies engaged in training youth for service.

5. In a number of churches the young people's work has as a clearing house and planning centre a "young people's cabinet." (See Chapter VI of "Leadership through Christian Endeavor.") music. A play was presented in three churches of the community and was proved to be of great success. The sum realized was used for the support of the church. The class has its regular meeting and during these meetings, they study the word of God.

6. Whether or not there is a "young people's cabinet" in the church, the Christian Endeavor societies of Intermediate and Young People's ages may form a "Christian Endeavor cabinet," each society being represented by its principal officers. The pastor and counsellors should be ex-officio members of the Christian Endeavor cabinet.

The Highland people must say that they have not felt the depression spiritually but it seems as if the people have more time during this period to give to the Lord's cause. We feel that the people have been greatly benefited by all of the work taken up and great results of improvement have been shown in both church and Sunday school work since the month of March.

EMMA NICHOLS, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE TWENTY-SECOND ANNUAL BIBLE CONFERENCE OF BRETHREN CHURCHES OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.
CONVENED AT LONG BEACH, JULY 15 TO 24

Though rather belated, we believe the following brief report of the annual Bible Conference of the Southern California District will be none the less interesting to the brotherhood and therefore shall proceed to give a few of the "high lights" of this conference which in the minds of so many exceeded in spiritual blessings the twenty-one similar preceding conferences.

Readers of the Evangelist have already enjoyed reading the address of the moderator of this conference, which appeared in the August 13 issue under the caption, "Standards of Progress for the Brethren Church at the Close of the Church Age," by A. D. Cashman.

In addition to messages given by our own local men such outside leading preachers and teachers, as Dr. Cortland Myers, Dr. R. E. Neighbour, Dr. John Hubbard, Rev. C. G. Westerdahl, Rev. Louis Talbot, Rev. Harry Anderson and others addressed the conference. The Conference also enjoyed the unique privilege of having as one of its outstanding speakers our own Brother Kimmel who journeyed from Philadelphia to fellowship with us this year. Dr. Florence Gribble brought to us the challenge of the African field in three stirring addresses. A few of the interesting subjects upon which the speakers spoke were: "The Present War Against the Word of God and What the Outcome will Be," "Russia and the Last Days," "Mussolini and the Last Days," "The Three Imperatives," "Present Day Relationships with God," "The Fall of Man," "The Glorious Gospel of Christ," "unequally Yoked in Its Three-fold Application," "Exposition of the Song of Solomon," "Scenes of the Lord's Birth, Life, Death, Burial and Resurrection" (Stereopticon Lecture), "Is Faith in an Omniscent, Omnipotent, and Omnipresent God of Love Consistent with the Facts We Face in our Troubled World Today?" "Aspects of Salvation Symbolized," "The Christ at the Father's Right Hand," "The Christ of Calvary," "In Heavenly Places," "The Christ of the Glory Cloud," "Soiled Feet in the Master's Hands," "The Christ of David's Throne," "The Tabernacle of the Wilderness," "An African Clinic," "The Hypocrisy of Modernism."

Some very important resolutions were adopted at this conference, a few of which we will give, believing that the same will not only prove of interest to the reader in general, but also profitable to conferences.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

CANTON, OHIO

The Lord has been making his Presence felt in the Canton church very definitely this summer. Daily he has been supplying the needs of those sorely tried and more and more we are learning to "lean on him" for all things and thus we are appreciating more fully just "what a Friend we have in Jesus."

We have suffered several severe blows to our congregation in that we have lost some very active and valuable workers by death. Their absence is felt very keenly by the entire church, but we still rest in the promise of Romans 8:28. Those of our Brethren friends who had learned to know our Sister Lindower, can well understand just what it has meant to have her removed from our number. While Sister Ritchey was not so widely known outside the church, nevertheless her two years of active service in the church endeared her to all who did know her and she too is missed very greatly, especially in the Junior Department of our Sunday school. The attendance during the summer has been very fine, average Sunday school attendance being 295. A two weeks' daily vacation Bible school was held in June under the leadership of three fine Moody students and assisted by local teachers. The enrollment was 104 and average attendance 75. The program was built on the Bible, the whole Bible and nothing but the Bible, and at the close of the school, we who sat for two hours listening to the messages brought by all classes, were amazed at the amount of Bible knowledge which had been stored away in those young hearts in so short a time. As a result of this school, there came a demand for a continuance of same during the summer months and accordingly, a number of faithful children (about 20 in number) met twice a week for Bible instruction. Notes were kept in notebooks and a Scofield Bible is being given for a reward for the most complete and neatest notes on lessons. Our hearts are simply overjoyed at the intense interest among our children for God's Word. Already five have dedicated their lives for full time Christian service and are proving themselves very faithful. The Tuesday evening and Thursday afternoon Bible classes continue and we are happy to have so many friends outside our own church so regularly attending same. The regular services are very well attended. A series of studies on the book of Romans is being given by our pastor on Sunday mornings, and the evenings at present are devoted to a series on the Signs of the times, which are drawing wide attention and interest. Confessions are being made from Sunday to Sunday, thus proving the truth of Christ's words, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." While we realize that these words have to do with the necessity of his crucifixion, yet we believe we dare make the spiritual application that if our Crucified Lord really is lifted up as the Son of God, and the Saviour of mankind, and people's attention is drawn to him as such, that it does result in transformation of life, through the work of the Holy Spirit.

GLADYS SPICE, Correspondent.

SCENERY HILL, VIRGINIA

Dear Brethren Evangelist Readers:

It may be thought that the Highland church has fallen down with its Christian work since there hasn't been any report for a long period of time. At the present time we are having a church every two weeks. Rev. and Mrs. Floyd Sibert, who are among the Brethren of Masontown, Pennsylvania, have been bringing the message of God to us. They are much interested in the work here, and have taken special interest in seeing that the Young People are encouraged to progress in Christian work.

The depression has affected almost every one and every business and work, but we have found one great institution that it evidently has not touched, and that is our Sunday school. Even though we don't have regular church services it has not effected our Sunday school in number or interest. We have had the largest attendance during these summer months that has ever been known in the history of the Sunday school.

The Young People have been organized and have been doing some very interesting work, in which we may include an organized orchestra, and other special work with of other districts throughout the country. They are as follows:

RESOLVED: That this conference of the Brethren churches for the District of Southern California re-affirm once more the position of the Brethren Church from her origin, as being utterly opposed to the use of violence or any physical force that works injury even to an enemy, as a righteous means to an end, whether in our relations with individuals or with nations. We affirm that while war as a possible method for the attainment of justice, or the securing and maintenance of human liberty, may at times be justifiable among the unregenerate world-systems of the earth, yet, we must affirm that according to the teaching of the Master himself, we, as children of God, do not belong to these world systems. We gladly offer our service, time, money, and life itself, if necessary to bind up the world's wounds, or to heal its sorrows by any means or methods approved by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

RESOLVED: That we, the delegates to the Twenty-second Annual Conference of Brethren Churches in the District of Southern California, do hereby declare our belief that the moving picture industry, as it is now being conducted is an even more vicious menace to the welfare of the people of this nation than was the saloon in its palmy days; and, that we call upon the members of our various churches to outlaw it and abstain from entering it as they would abstain from entering any other den of iniquity; and, be it further

RESOLVED: that we earnestly protest to the editors of such newspapers as enter our homes against longer flaunting before the eyes of our children the indecent, offensive, corrupting, and indecently suggestive advertisements of the movie theatres; and be it further

RESOLVED: that a copy of this resolution shall be sent to every editor in Southern California, as well as to Mr. Will Hayes, President Producers Motion Pictures Association.

RESOLVED, that this Conference affirms that it is the inalienable right of a Home or Foreign Missions Board, or any other duly constituted organization of the Church, to determine its own polity, being subject only to the Conference body that created and maintains it; and be it further

RESOLVED that, as a simple matter of good government, we express our belief that it is the duty of every employee to work in harmony with the polity of the Church organization that employs him, or to quietly and peacefully resign his commission thereunder, and be it further.

RESOLVED that the churches of this District pledge themselves to support the Boards of the Church in maintaining their work under the policies they may determine so long as said Boards prove to be faithful and obedient to the decisions of the Conference or Conferences that are over them.

The Conference selected for its officers to serve during the coming year the following persons:

Dr. Louis S. Bauman, Moderator; Rev. W. A. Ogden, Vice-Moderator; Rev. Alan S. Pearce, Secretary; Rev. A. L. Lynn, Assistant Secretary; Rev. Charles W. Mayes, Treasurer; Dr. H. V. Wall, Member at large; Rev. John G. Lienhard, Statistician.

Signed,

ALAN S. PEARCE, Secretary.

PROGRAM, MID-WEST CONFERENCE

October 11, 12, 13, 1932. Portis, Kansas

Tuesday Evening, October 11

- 7:00 Song and Devotionals
- 7:15 Appointment of Committees
- Notes of Welcome led by D. G. Lemon
- Response by Delegates
- 7:45 Moderator's Address. James S. Cook

Wednesday Morning, October 12

- 9:30 Devotionals
- Scripture Reading and Comment. L. A. Meyers
- 10:00 Organization and Business
- Election of Officers
- 11:00 Special Number
- Sermon. H. H. Rowsey

Dinner

Wednesday Afternoon, October 12

- 2:00 Devotionals. G. J. Wolters
- District Mission Session
- Reports: President, L. A. Meyers, Morrill, Kansas
- Secretary, N. P. Eglin, Hamlin, Kansas
- Treasurer, D. G. Lemon, Portis, Kansas
- Mission Pastors, L. G. Wood, Ft. Scott, Kansas
- Mulvane, Kansas
- McLouth, Kansas

- 3:00-4:00 W. M. S. Session
- In charge of Mrs. Anna Wood, Pres. Mid-west District

Evening Session, October 12

- 7:00 Song and Scripture Interpretation.
- W. R. Deeter, Carleton Nebraska
- 7:30 Address. Prof. M. A. Stuckey, Ashland College
- 8:10 Our College. Dr. W. S. Bell, Representative

Thursday Morning, October 13

- 9:30 Devotionals. J. S. C. Spickerman
- 9:45 Business Session
- 10:15 Church School Session
- Messages from Superintendents
- Theme: "The Purpose of the Church School in the Community."
- a. Developing Leaders. D. G. Lemon, Portis
- b. An Educational Institution,
- Mrs. Ella Miller, Carleton
- c. The Spiritual Life. N. P. Eglin, Hamlin
- Open Discussion, led by Prof. Stuckey
- 11:00 Address by Prof. Stuckey of Ashland College, who represents the National Church School Association.
- Noon Hour.

Afternoon Session, October 13

- 2:00 Devotionals
- 2:10 Scripture Exposition. L. G. Wood, Ft. Scott
- 2:30 Publication Interests. Dr. W. S. Bell, Ashland
- 3:10 W. M. S. Session—Mrs. Anna Wood President
- Problem Hour and Round Table Discussion
- Evening Session, October 13
- 7:30 Devotionals. H. H. Rowsey, Falls City
- 7:15 Special. Mr. & Mrs. W. R. Deeter
- 7:20 Inspirational Address. Dr. W. S. Bell
- 8:00 Doctrinal Sermon. Prof. M. A. Stuckey.

THE FORTY-FIFTH INDIANA DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF BRETHREN CHURCHES, FLORA BRETHREN CHURCH

OCTOBER 4, 5, 6, 1932

PROGRAMME

TUESDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 4

- 7:15 Devotions. Rev. H. F. Stuckman
- 7:30 Address of Welcome. Rev. Freeman Ankrum
- 7:45 Sermon. Rev. R. Paul Miller

Wednesday Morning—Ministerium 8 A. M. to 9:30

- Devotions and Remarks. President B. F. Flora
- Church Problems: "In the City." Rev. R. F. Porte
- "In the Rural Districts." Rev. C. D. Whitmer
- General Discussion

Women's Missionary Society 8 to 9:30

- Violin Solo. Mrs. Raymond Kuns
- Devotions. Mrs. J. R. Schutz
- Vocal Solo. Vernebelte Pope
- Reports of Officers
- Temptations that May Hinder the Progress of W. M. S.
- Mrs. Funderburg
- Overcoming These Temptations. Mrs. S. C. Henderson
- Laymen's Program 8 A. M. to 9:30.

Conference Session

- 9:30 Scripture and Prayer. Rev. Bertram King
- 9:45 Organization of Conference:
- Report of Credential Committee, Committee on Committees, Statistician's Report, Other Business
- 10:15 Moderator's Address. Vice-Moderator, Fred C. Vanator
- 10:45 Bible Lecture, "The Doctrine of Sin." Rev. L. E. Lindower
- Wednesday Afternoon—District Missions
- 1:15 "The Future of District Missions." Mr. Glenn Carpenter
- Report of Secretary. Rev. W. I. Duker
- Report of Treasurer. Mr. C. G. Wolfe

Trustees Session

- 2:00 Report of Secretary. Mr. C. G. Wolfe
 Report of Treasurer. Mr. Eph Culp
 What We Hope to Accomplish. Rev. A. T. Wirick
 2:45 The Laymen and Their Program. Mr. Eph Culp
 3:30 Business Session

WEDNESDAY EVENING

- 7:00 Song Service and Special Numbers
 7:30 Devotional Bible Study. Rev. S. C. Henderson
 7:45 Sermon. Rev. S. M. Whetstone

THURSDAY MORNING

Ministerium 8 A. M. to 9:30

- Devotions. Rev. D. A. C. Teeter
 Secretary's Report. Rev. E. M. Riddle
 Address. "The Successful Preacher, His Aids and How to Use Them." Rev. M. L. Sands
 Business and Election of Officers

Women's Missionary Society 8 A. M. to 9:30

- Devotions. Mrs. Edna Nichols
 Report of Registration Committee.
 Vocal Duet. Mrs. Mary Fisher and Mrs. Bessie Kuns
 Election of Officers
 Training Our Daughters for the W. M. S. Mrs. F. C. Vanator
 Solo. Mrs. Kyle Newman
 Round Table Discussion. Mrs. U. J. Shively
 Installation of Officers

Laymen's Program 8 A. M. to 9:30

Conference Session

- 9:30 Scripture and Prayer. Rev. C. D. Whitmer
 9:45 Election of Officers, Report of Resolutions Committee,
 Other Reports, Miscellaneous Business
 10:45 Bible Lecture. "The Divine Preservation of the Messianic Lineage." Rev. L. E. Lindower

THURSDAY AFTERNOON

C. E. Session

- 1:15 Song and Devotions
 Ten Minute Paper, "How the Church Helps Us Live the Christian Life." Miss Vivian Anderson
 Ten Minute Paper, "How Our Society Meets Young People's Needs." Miss Mary Kellogg
 Twenty Minute Paper, "What is a Useful Life?"

Rev. C. D. Whitmer

Discussion

Sunday School Session

- 2:15 Devotions. Rev. Mark Spacht
 Address, "The Greatest Need of the Sunday School."

Prof. K. M. Monroe

- 3:15 Final Business Session

Reading of Minutes and Approval by Conference, All other Business. Invitations for Next Year's Conference

Sisterhood Program

- 3:45 Conference Sisterhood Songs, Led by Miss Helen Garber
 Devotions. Miss Gwendolyn Richmond
 Special Music, by Flora Sisterhood
 Echoes from National Conference.

Vera Frantz and Alberta Hartman

Secretary and Treasurer's Reports. Mrs. Martha Parcell
 Higher Ground of Service. Rev. S. J. Adams
 Installation of Officers. Mrs. Clyde Rager Closing Song, "Living For Jesus."

THURSDAY EVENING

- 6:30 Young People's Banquet and Special Program. Southern District Young People's Association in Charge.

PROGRAM OF THE FORTY-FOURTH PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH, OCTOBER 3rd TO 6th, Inc., 1932, JOHNSTOWN, PA.

MONDAY EVENING

- 7:30 Devotions. F. Sibert.
 8:00 Sermon, "Why Should the Work Cease?" Wm. A. Steffler

TUESDAY MORNING

- 8:30 Simultaneous Conferences:
 Ministerial—Devotions

Address, "Problem of Sin." F. Sibert
 W. M. S.—Devotions. Mrs. C. H. Ashman

Report Session:

- Secretary-Treasurer. Mrs. W. C. Benshoff
 President. Mrs. D. C. White
 Appointment of Committees
 Presentation of Mission Study Book
 Layman Organization
 9:30 General Session:
 Devotions. Wm. Clough
 Address of Welcome. C. H. Ashman
 Response of Districts
 10:00 Moderator's Address. C. Studebaker
 10:45 Conference Business Session—Reports:
 District Evangelists
 District Missions
 Statistician
 Ministerial Examining Board

TUESDAY AFTERNOON

- 1:30 Christian Endeavor Session
 Devotions. Melvin R. Wertz
 "What our C. E. is Doing for Young People."
 Miss Dorothy McCoy
 "Our Young People at Work in Our Church." S. H. Buzard
 Special Music
 Reports and Recognition of C. E. Work in the Pennsylvania Conference
 2:30 Sunday School Session
 "How the Church has Taught; A Review." W. E. Ronk
 "How the Church May Improve in Teaching."
 Prof. A. B. Cober.
 "The National Sunday School Association's Projects."
 N. V. Leatherman, General Secretary
 5:00 Sisterhood of Mary and Martha Session
 Devotions. First Church of Johnstown S. M. M. Girls
 Special Music. Morrellville S. M. M. Girls
 Business
 6:00 Lunch in Church Basement
 6:30 Missionary Talk
 Conference Reports

TUESDAY EVENING

- 7:30 Worship
 Prayer Service. Robert Crees
 7:45 Devotional Bible Study. W. C. Benshoff
 8:05 Announcements and Special Music
 8:15 Bible Lecture. Prof. A. J. McClain

WEDNESDAY MORNING

- 8:30 Simultaneous Conferences
 Ministerial—Devotions
 Address, "The Pastor a Teacher." N. Leatherman
 W. M. S. Devotions. Mrs. Laura Frank
 Presentation of New Program and Goals
 Address. Miss Clara Hendley
 Layman Session
 9:30 General Session
 Devotions. R. I. Humbird
 Benevolences, "Brethren Home and Superannuated Ministers." A. V. Kimmell
 10:15 Business Session
 Organization

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

- 1:30 Ashland College and Seminary. Prof. A. J. McClain
 2:30 Home and District Mission Session. J. L. Gingrich and Claude Studebaker
 6:30 S. M. M. Session. Devotions. Pike Church S. M. M. Girls
 Music. Vinco S. M. M. Girls
 Discussion on Conference Reports

WEDNESDAY EVENING

- 7:30 Worship
 Prayer Service. S. E. Christiansen
 Devotional Bible Study. N. V. Leatherman

8:05 Offering and Special Music
 8:15 Bible Lecture. Prof. A. J. McClain
THURSDAY MORNING
 8:30 Simultaneous Conferences:
 Ministerial—Devotions
 Address. Willis Ronk
 W. M. S. Devotions. Mrs. W. H. Schaffer
 Election of Officers
 Address
 Layman Organization
 9:30 General Session
 Devotions. E. S. Flora
 Business Session
 11:00 Bible Lecture. Prof. A. J. McClain

THURSDAY AFTERNOON
 1:30 Foreign Missionary and W. M. S. Session
 C. H. Ashman and Mrs. D. C. White
 2:30 Publication Interests. Dr. C. A. Bame
 3:00 Unfinished Business
 6:30 S. M. M. Session
 Devotions. Conemaugh S. M. M. Girls
 Music. Berlin S. M. M. Girls
 Address. Mrs. G. H. Jones
THURSDAY EVENING
 7:30 Worship. N. V. Leatherman
 7:45 Address. W. E. Ronk
 8:05 Offering and Special Music
 8:15 Bible Lecture. Prof. A. J. McClain

"KEEP FAST THAT WHICH IS COMMITTED TO THEE"

By Helen Gauntlett Williams

A few days ago, in the largest place of assemblage in the city of New Haven, there was held a debate, between a brilliant English author, speaking for Christianity, and an equally brilliant American lawyer, who is an atheist. The audience was large, the battle of wits, sharp. Several days later, meeting one of my former Sabbath school girls in a church, other than the Church of the Nazarene, she asked if I attended the debate, and I said, "No."

She said, "I thought you liked to hear brilliant speakers," and I answered that I thought too much of my Christ, who had done so much for me, to go to a place where I knew he would be reviled, and abused, mocked, and sneered at, treated as the onlookers treated him when he hung on the cross. And the girl answered that she had never thought of it that way.

Do we not often make a mistake, even professed Christians, in the places to which we go, and in the things which we allow ourselves to hear?

The idea in this college town seems to be to subject all the young people who are not sure of themselves on any ground, who have not, by repeated testings of the goodness of God and of his Christ, come to really know him, to all the winds of doctrine that blow and then wonder that so many of them made shipwreck of their religious experience.

Is not this a duty which the older people owe to the younger ones in the church, to take time to combat any false views which may be creeping in, to "exhort, admonish, instruct," as did Paul his dearly beloved son Timothy? Hear him say, "Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us" (II Tim. 1: 13, 14). That does not sound like going to debates where one of the speakers is an atheist, or this, "Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers" (II Timothy 2:14).

Probably more than three-quarters of the audience called themselves Christians, and I thought, "What a travesty on the word."

The faith of many a man and woman has been destroyed by such attacks of the enemy. Some word, remembered in an hour of darkness, has caused a breakdown in the faith of many believers and has brought joy to the abode of Satan and his angels.

Let us remember the words of the staunch old warrior, Paul, still speaking to Timothy, "Keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science, falsely so called" (I Timothy 6:20).

Surely today, as never before, we need to "keep that which is committed to our trust" that our matchless Christ may not be founded in the house of those who call themselves his friends: "Behold, I come quickly hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown" (Revelation 3:11). —Herald of Holiness.

Who is the weakling? The man who boasts that he is not afraid to sin.

LOVE

By Clyde Edwin Tuck

*Love is the greatest power, greatest good;
 Of all world forces, it alone survives
 Times and its changes, teaching brotherhood;*

*All evil and all hate it has withstood—
 It is the impulse molding all our lives.*

*Love rules in palace and the humble home;
 It rocks the cradle and it lights the grave.
 Love sends its message from cathedral dome,
 Relief ships glide across the ocean foam,
 And nations without truth it comes to save.*

*Love finds the lost sheep in the wilderness;
 It smoothes the pillow on the bed of pain.
 Wherever sorrow dwells or lurks distress,
 Its watch it keeps to comfort and to bless—
 Love's bow of hope shines brightly through the rain.*

*I only ask for growth in love divine;
 Self-love dismissing, let me others serve
 That Christ's pure love may by reflection shine
 The light that seeks to gladden and refine
 The love that would our peace and calm preserve.*

*Love is the sole possession I desire,
 Love that transforms all paltry, sordid things;
 It floods my being with celestial fire;
 With courage that can nevermore expire
 It comes to give the spirit buoyant wings.*

*Love is immortal; it can never die.
 Love is not of earth, but from above,
 And brighter grows its flame as years go by,
 Our hearts to cheer, our souls to purify—
 It fills the universe, for God is love.
 Jefferson City, Mo.*

ALL THINGS

When we are in the place God would have us no evil can befall. Joseph, sold into slavery, is but being sent to school that he may be fitted for the place God is preparing for him. Sorrow and suffering are often the necessary preparation for a life of service.

A missionary tells a story of a Chinaman who needed a donkey but had no money to purchase it. At length he arranged to exchange one of his children for a donkey in order that he might support the remainder of the family. The boy thus exchanged must have had something attractive about him, for like Joseph of old he found favor, and at length was rescued from his life of slavery and given an opportunity for a Christian education.

A short time ago the missionary who tells

This Corner

will Enlighten you

What about

What? Wait and see
 When? Next week
 Perhaps

the story was addressing a large Chinese school. His interpreter so won his admiration by his accuracy and his understanding of the matter presented that he made inquiries about him and discovered that he was the little boy who had been exchanged for a donkey, now grown up and entering on a life of usefulness among his own people.—Selected.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SERGEANTSVILLE, NEW JERSEY

The semi-annual Love Feast and Communion service will be held at the Sergeantsville, New Jersey, Brethren church, Sunday evening, October 9, 1932.

The annual Homecoming Day service for Sergeantsville, New Jersey, Brethren church will be held Sunday, October 16, 1932. Morning service beginning at 10 o'clock; afternoon service at 2 o'clock. All neighboring Brethren are cordially invited to attend these services.

M. H. WILSON, Secretary.

PASTORATE WANTED

We have not accepted the call for further service in Muncie. We are leaving here October 1. We are open for a call to a church or churches desiring the help of an experienced pastor. A report of some of our work here appears in a previous number of the Evangelist. Mrs. Sands is a fine worker with the children. We should be glad to correspond with your pastoral committee. We would be lenient as to salary.

M. L. SANDS,

1320 E. Kirby Ave., Muncie, Indiana.

PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT OF INDIANA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Forty-fifth Indiana District Conference of Brethren Churches will meet at Flora, Indiana, October 4, 5, 6. A fine program has been arranged and a wonderful conference is expected. The Young People's Banquet will be held as usual on the last night of the conference. The Flora Brethren are preparing for and expecting a large gathering. The churches of Indiana are urged to help make this the Best Ever Conference in Indiana. Program will be printed soon.

FRED C. VANATOR, Vice Moderator,
M. L. SANDS, Secretary-Treasurer.

PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE, JOHNSTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

The First Brethren church, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, extends a most cordial invitation to all the churches of the Pennsylvania District to be their guests at the District Conference to convene, Monday evening, October 3 to Thursday evening, October 6, inclusive. The church is located on the corner of Dibert and Napoleon Streets, just six blocks from the center of the city. Night's lodging and breakfast will be furnished free in the homes. The noon and evening meals will be served at the church for as low a price as possible and serve the kind of meals the delegates ought to have. The church will do all within her power to make everybody welcome and feel at home throughout the entire conference.

Pastor, CHARLES H. ASHMAN.

FLORA WELCOMES THE INDIANA CONFERENCE

It is not too early to extend from Flora a welcome to those who may be contemplating a visit here during the State Conference. The time will soon be here. The dates are October 4 to 6. Flora is situated almost in the heart of Carroll County, and is on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad from Logansport to Indianapolis. It is also situated upon state highway number 18 which runs East and West. Those coming by auto from the North should likely come to Logansport and on down on highway 29 some fourteen miles and then take 18 six miles West into Flora. The church is in the Northwest section of the town. The people of Flora are making preparations to entertain the Conference and are amply fitted to take care of all who shall come. You will also want to visit the Brethren Home which is just outside the corporation a short distance. Come and bring some one with you and let this be an outstanding Conference. Lodging will be furnished free and all meals will be served in the commodious dining room of the church at the regular Conference rates.

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

Business Manager's Corner

FROZEN ASSETS

The expression "frozen assets", if not newly coined to meet the situation of banks and loan companies that were crushed as a result of the crash in the stock market in the fall of 1929 had not come into common use until after that great calamity.

It is pretty generally understood that many of these banks could have weathered the storm had their clients given them time to realize on their assets at a later and more opportune time.

But panic stricken depositors staged a run on hundreds of these institutions, in response to the law of "self preservation", and precipitated the very condition in the entire country that they wished to avoid, and brought losses that in many cases will never be recovered.

Two kinds of customers are essential to the success of any bank or loan company, depositors and borrowers; but if the depositors demand the withdrawal of their deposits more rapidly than the borrowers are able to return their loans it is just too bad for the banks.

The business manager does not pose as an economist nor as an expert in high finance, but he does know that the payment of a single account for one hundred dollars can easily settle one thousand dollars in other accounts in ten days or less by getting into active circulation.

A Practical Application

The writer is now serving his eighteenth year as business manager of The Brethren Publishing Company, and never in that time has he been so greatly embarrassed by financial difficulties as at the present time.

This is not because we are not doing sufficient business to keep the establishment in operation, but because of FROZEN ASSETS.

We have enough accounts on our books right now to pay off every current account against the Publishing House and every current note as well, if these accounts against our debtors could be promptly collected.

This is not only a financial question, but it is an ethical question as well. Is it right that one institution that serves the entire brotherhood, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, should bear the accumulated financial burdens of the many churches and Sunday schools from the east to the west?

Unpaid Salaries

We know that a great many of our pastors do not have their salaries paid up to date, which very naturally causes them to hesitate about bringing too much pressure to bear upon their congregations in regard to the payment of other obligations. But the pastors are not alone in this embarrassing situation. Neither the editors nor the business manager have their salaries paid up by a long way; so you see we are companions in need.

However we have managed to keep the employees in the mechanical department paid up, though the rest of us have been compelled to deprive ourselves for a time.

Relieving the Situation

Some one may enquire, How can the situation be relieved? This is not such a difficult problem after all. We have Sunday schools and churches that are owing us from three dollars up to nearly three hundred. Some of these accounts are more than a year old; others nine months or six months old. It might require quite an effort on the part of the local church or Sunday school to meet its account with us; but, if fifty such churches or schools would do that, it is easy to understand what a relief to an embarrassing situation that would afford.

Delinquent Evangelist Subscriptions

Another source of relief could be found in the prompt payment of subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist. There are hundreds of subscriptions that are due or past due; some of these subscribers have received two or three notices of the expiration. It may require real sacrifice on the part of some to meet the amount of their subscription; but we feel sure a great many others spend more than the cost of a year's subscription to their church paper every once in a while for other things from force of habit or to meet a passing desire, without thinking much about it.

Smoking, chewing, soft drink habit, permanents for the ladies, etc. These things all count, and while the writer is not addicted to any of these habits, he will confess that if necessary he could cut off some expense that would pay for a year's subscription to the church paper. For a homely illustration the business manager will admit that it costs more to feed his pet gold fish a year than the price of The Evangelist. Now, let us all be honest and admit there is something for which we unnecessarily spend the price of our church paper every year and which we could do without if we could not get our paper any other way.

Our Aim

Our sole aim in writing this column has been to awaken among our churches, Sunday schools and subscribers a sense of responsibility for the well being of THEIR publishing house, and to influence them to relieve a most embarrassing situation at the earliest possible moment.

R. R. TEETER,
Business Manager.

VOL. LIV
Number 38

October 1
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

How the Late Theodore Roosevelt Met the Argument

As Reported by "The Presbyterian Advance"

Thirty years ago, with Theodore Roosevelt in the White House, the repeal crowd was trying to repeal the law prohibiting liquor sold on Sundays. Prohibiting the saloons to sell liquor on Sundays, they said, increased crime, fostered bootlegging, ruined business, deprived the poor man of his club. They used exactly the same arguments to reopen the saloons on Sundays as they now use to restore the whole legalized liquor business.

The saloons sold liquor on Sundays, of course, but they did so illegally; they said they were going to sell liquor anyhow, so they might as well be permitted to sell it legally, as selling it illegally caused so much crime. Many eminent and fashionable leaders joined the liquor interests in the 1902 cry for repeal of Sunday closing laws; and the W. C. T. U. reprinted the remarks of President Roosevelt who, as Commissioner of Police in New York City had been criticized for enforcing the laws against the sale of liquor on Sundays. This is what Theodore Roosevelt said:

"Many of the demagogues who have denounced us, have reproached us especially because we took away 'the poor man's beer,' and have announced that, law or no law, the poor man had a right to his beer on Sunday if he wished it. These gentry, when they preach such doctrine, are simply teaching lawlessness.

"If the poor man has a right to break the law so as to get beer on Sunday, he has a right to break the law so as to get bread on any day. It is a good deal more important to the poor man that he should get fed on week days than that he should get drunk on Sundays. The people who try to teach him that he has a right to break the law on one day to take beer are doing their best to prepare him for breaking the law some other day to take bread.

"But, as a matter of fact, all the talk about the law being enforced chiefly at the expense of the poor man is the veriest nonsense and hypocrisy. We did not hurt the poor man at all. The people whom we hurt were the rich brewers and liquor sellers, who had hitherto made money hand over fist by violating the Sunday law, with the corrupt connivance of the police.

"There is small cause for wonder that they should grow hot with anger when they found that we had taken away the hundreds of thousands of dollars which they had made by violation of the law. There is small cause for wonder that their newspaper allies should have raved. But it is a wonder that any citizen, wishing well to his country, should have been misled for one moment by what they have said. The fight they have waged was not a fight for the poor man; it was a fight in the interest of the rich and unscrupulous man, who had been accustomed to buy immunity from justice.

"As a matter of fact we have helped the poor man, and, notably, we have helped the poor man's wife and children. Many a man who before was accustomed to spend his week's wages getting drunk in a saloon, now either puts them up or takes his wife and children for a day's outing. The hospitals found that their Monday labors were lessened by nearly one half, owing to the startling diminution in cases of injury due to drunken brawls. The work of the magistrates who sat in the city courts for the trial of small offenders was correspondingly decreased. All this was brought about by our honest enforcement of the law."

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

ARE the Drys Disfranchised This Year?

The prohibition problem, as the election approaches, is becoming more confused and muddled every day by reason of the words and actions of friends as well as enemies. Some will tell you that a vote for Hoover is a vote for prohibition. Others say that there is no practical difference between the two important candidates, except that one has spoken more clearly than the other; and that a vote for either is a wet vote. Still others claim that you may vote for either one, as you like, because neither could change the Constitution even if elected. One of the most prominent dry leaders in the country, who lives in Washington, D. C., is reported to have said pessimistically that he thanked God he had no vote this year.

You will see many strange things this year. The various dry leaders and organizations continue to exhort us to VOTE DRY. But for the most part they do not advise you WHO TO VOTE FOR. Many of them do not agree among themselves.

For example, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the Allied Forces favoring prohibition, enters this week on a high speed campaign in support of President Hoover for reelection. Using an airplane, he expects to make 201 speeches in 43 days covering the territory of 31 states. He thinks with many others that the drys can and should support Hoover.

On the other hand, Senator Borah, an experienced legislator and life-long prohibitionist, is reported as saying, "I can see no difference whatever in the practical effect between the platforms of the two parties with reference to the 18th Amendment. They both mean, in practical effect, the repeal of the 18th Amendment. . . . Those who are in favor of the 18th Amendment have been adroitly and effectually disfranchised so far as the presidential election is concerned. WHICHEVER WAY THEY VOTE, THEY VOTE FOR REPEAL."

THERE is a Way Out

Neither Dr. Poling nor Senator Borah are infallible in their judgments as to what will happen in the future. But Senator Borah ought to know, if anyone knows, what the practical meaning of the Republican platform is. He is mistaken, however, in saying that the present situation has disfranchised the dry voter.

Although most people seem to have forgotten it during the "dry millennium", there is in this country an organization known as the PROHIBITION PARTY. You need not, this year, vote for a wet political party or its candidate. Since both the major parties have half-heartedly tried their hand at prohibition enforcement, why not now hand the problem over to a party which really believes in prohibition? Of course it will be said that the prohibition party has no chance to win an election, which is doubtless true, and will continue to be true as long as the dry leaders continue to support leaders and parties whose policies are framed like the Delphic oracle to please both sides.

PERHAPS THE PROHIBITION PARTY MIGHT SOMETIME WIN AN ELECTION IF THE DRY LEADERS LIKE DR. POLING WOULD START FLYING AROUND IN AIRPLANES IN ITS SUPPORT.

THE Depth Closed Me Round About

Last week Dr. Beebe, explorer of the under-seas, was lowered in a specially constructed steel ball to the depth of 2200 feet off the coast of Bermuda. With him he took a microphone and during the descent broadcast a description of the experience which was heard plainly by many radio listeners. It was a very remarkable and dangerous achievement, accomplished without mishap.

Bible students will recall another man who went down into the ocean depth, and although his accommodations were not so comfortable, he stayed longer than Dr. Beebe; in fact, three days and three nights. Moreover, he came up just as safely.

It is also of interest to recall that Jonah, like Dr. Beebe, did some broadcasting while in the ocean depths. "Then Jonah prayed . . . out of the fish's belly." And although there were no radios in Jonah's day, yet his broadcast was heard by the One for whom it was intended. For "The Lord spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land." (You may read the entire broadcast in the second chapter of Jonah's very brief biography.)

Dr. Beebe went down to learn more about the ocean and its creatures. Jonah was not a scientist. He did not deliberately take his famous trip for the purpose of studying life in the sea. So far as the record he left is concerned we do not know whether he learned anything of scientific value about the digestive processes of the "great fish." But he learned something about God, and that, after all, is the important thing to learn.

Jonah learned first, that a man cannot escape God by fleeing to Tarshish or going down to Joppa; and second, that God answers prayer which is sincere, no matter where we are when we offer it; and third, Jonah learned that "SALVATION IS OF THE LORD" (Jon. 2:9). Until a man has learned this last, he knows nothing.

THE Value of The Sensational

Until Dr. Beebe went down 2200 feet in the ocean and conducted a broadcast, millions of people knew nothing about him. Until Lindbergh flew alone across the Atlantic, very few had ever heard of him, and most of them would not have walked across the street to hear him speak, much less merely to look at him. Now he has to hide from the crowds and plead with reporters to grant him some privacy.

If you remember this peculiar twist in the mind of the crowd, its craze to see and hear someone who has done something sensational, it will help you to understand why the whole city of Nineveh turned out to hear him, and why from the human standpoint the city gave heed to what he had to say. Human nature is the same in every age. The Lord knows all about it. Perhaps that is one reason why Jonah was given his remarkable sea voyage.

What do you think, even in this age of sophistication and unbelief, would happen if a great fish would vomit up a man in plain view of the bathers at Long Beach, California? He might not be much of a preacher, but he would certainly get a hearing.

You will notice carefully, however, that Jonah himself was not what we call today a "publicity hound." He was pushed, did not push himself, into the limelight. Nothing is so detestable as the preacher who is always trying to break into the news columns, no matter how, always trying, trying to find a whale in order to be swallowed.

HOW the Theaters Capitalize Crime

The craze of people to see those who figure in any kind of sensational publicity has been capitalized by theatrical owners in a most reprehensible way. Some months ago a woman in Chicago shot and killed her husband. As a newspaper reporter put the matter, "she shot her way to the footlights," and was paid $1000 a week to exhibit herself before the curious public. Another woman shot a man, and was immediately engaged by theatrical interests. But the man recovered, and as a result of his plea for her there was no sensational trial; therefore, her salary was reduced!

This condition is a judgment, not only on the theater as an institution, but also upon the civilization which has produced and supports it. The last Book of the Bible pictures the entire world-system of the present age—commercially, politically, socially and religiously—as Babylon the Great. When at last the judgment of God falls upon this system, we read that "in her was found THE BLOOD . . . OF ALL THAT WERE SLAIN UPON THE EARTH." (Rev. 18:24).

The call of God is clear to those who have ears to hear: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18:4).

"Pain, both mental and physical, is a hard schoolmaster, but one that teaches us great lessons in understanding of the burdens and heartaches of others."

IN THIS NUMBER

Simple Living Enforced by Depression—Editor, . . . . .	3
The Brethren Home's Emergency Appeal—Editor, . . . . .	3
"The Truth that is in Thee" On Prohibition—Editor, . . . . .	4
Editorial Review, . . . . .	4
Spiritual Economy—W. S. Criel, . . .	5
Youth's Need of the Cross—P. R. Campbell, . . . . .	6
For an Autumn "Drive"—W. T. Ellis, . .	8
Significant News and Views, . . . .	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, . . . . .	9
The Gospel Song Movement—J. B. Trowbridge, . . . . .	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, . . . . .	11
October—Organization Month—F. C. Vanator, . . . . .	11
Good Publicity—Virginia Kaiser, . . .	11
Christ or Gandhi in India—J. T. Nichols, . . . . .	12
News from the Field, . . . . .	13-15
Our Little Readers, . . . . .	15
Announcements, . . . . .	16
The Tie that Binds, . . . . .	16
In the Shadow, . . . . .	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Simpler Living Enforced by Depression

The depression is being blamed for a great many things, but there is very little for which it is being given credit. Of late, however, there are those who have been able to discover some good coming out of it. In some quarters they tell us that people are turning to religion with more seriousness than when prosperity filled the land. It is quite natural that it should be so. When people are hard pressed and unable to help themselves, they seek the help of a Power that is higher than human, but when fortune favors them and they have everything in abundance, they seem to think they are sufficient unto themselves and do not need God. If the depression results in driving men to their knees in dependence upon the wisdom and power of Almighty God, and if it brings them the more readily to call upon him for his forgiving and saving grace, then will it indeed prove a blessing and we shall know that God overrules even the evil results of man's sinfulness to bring about his glory.

Now we learn of still another benefit being attributed to the depression. It seems that men are being forced to content themselves with simpler living, with a consequent improvement in health. And the testimony comes from a high medical authority. Dr. Benjamin Goldberg, of Chicago, associate professor in Medicine at the University of Illinois and formerly director of the Chicago Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium, in addressing recently the American Congress of Physical Therapy, meeting in New York, according to a report by The Evangelical-Messenger, told the gathering that the depression has returned physical gains to the country, notably an eight per cent drop in the mortality rate from the white plague. Information from ten states having an approximate population of more than 52,000,000 persons, reveals that not one showed a gain in mortality of tuberculosis for the first half of 1932 as against the same period in 1931. He cited the reasons the higher death rate had not been experienced, as follows:

Because unemployment and lowered incomes have produced a simpler form of living, with more relaxation and elimination of fatigue produced in an era of high industrial production and pleasure seeking.

Because food curtailment has not occurred to an extent where starvation has broken the resistance of an individual to disease. Because epidemics of respiratory infections are usually followed by increases in the incidence of tuberculosis morbidity, and there has been no such epidemic in several years.

Because the era of industrial activity which enticed the population from the rural communities into the urban has been reversed, over 500,000 individuals having left the cities for the farm in the first six months of this year.

In other words, according to the testimony of this expert, the American people have been driven by the force of circumstances into simpler ways of living and have profited thereby. It would be well if the spirit of wholesome simplicity could enter more largely and widely into our national life, and that, not by compulsion but by choice. But real simplicity is a spiritual attribute and cannot be expected in the life of the worldly man or woman. Fundamentally, it is the spirit of separation from the worldliness of the world, from its extravagances, extremes and unwholesomeness, not to mention its vicious and wicked ways. It is the spirit that refuses to rush pell-mell with the greedy, pleasure-mad, God-forgetting, Christ-denying crowd, but takes time rather to "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness", trusting that all things else that are needful will be added. It seeks to live in lofty, uncrowded ways, where men have time to think deeply and to live sincerely. Simplicity of spirit is not popular, but it is extremely worth while. It has been a long time since Wagner wrote: "To yearn for simple living, is to long to fulfill the highest human destiny," but it is still true. He who is actuated by the desire to live the simple life has the aim that Paul urged when he pleaded: "And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Nothing would do so much to unchain the wheels of spiritual progress as a revival of the spirit of separateness from the world, and from its mad rush after the things that gratify the carnal mind. And the church is being reminded of this spiritual duty by means of this by-product of the depression.

The Brethren Home's Emergency Appeal

Somebody has slipped. Yes, a good many people have. What other conclusion can you reach when you are faced with the fact that the entire brotherhood gave only $651.85 during the year closing July 31st for the support of the Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana? That small sum isn't due to the smallness of many offerings, but to the fact that there weren't many given. A good many churches and individuals didn't give even a small offering. Among those who didn't give are a few who just positively couldn't give; they are fighting for their lives and are compelled to use every available cent to meet their own emergency. But such churches have been supporting and will again support when their crisis is past. But there are a good many churches that are just hard up financially, though not dangerously so, and have decided that they cannot afford to give to all the general interests during these hard times. And so they have cut out this or that special offering with the result that some of our enterprises are suffering. And the Brethren's Home Board is one of those brotherhood agencies that has suffered, their offerings from the churches amounting to just about half what it was last year, and last year's total being nearly 600 dollars under that of the preceding year, the slump in offerings starting with the depression.

This, we think, is merely a slip in loyalty, that is, it has been made without purpose or intent to be disloyal to this institution. We have given this short support, doubtless, merely because we were hard pressed and without seriously thinking of what it might mean to the Brethren Home, and also without fully realizing the extent of its need. Nevertheless it is a slip that will have serious consequences, if somebody does not presently come forward with additional funds. The Home has had other shrinkages in income this year also, that is, smaller sales of farm products and fewer boarders, and these add to the seriousness of the situation. Our superintendent and matron are good workers and managers and we may count on them doing the very best possible under present conditions. But the support problem is up to the brotherhood. We have put our hands to the plow and we must not look back. We have an obligation that we cannot evade nor slight with honor. We must do the best we can, even though it means hardship. But doing the best we can will require cooperation. Every one who can possibly do something, must do it. If all—both churches and individuals—will do their bit, we will succeed.

No suggestion as to time has been put forward, so we are suggesting on our own account the advisability of lifting an offering at your Rally Day service, if that event is not already past. If it is, then why not make use of a "harvest home" service, or a "laymen's service" for the lifting of a special offering. No one has said anything to us about the erstwhile annual Layman's Day observance, but it is too good an event to let die. And if there is no other offering (and we know of none ordered by Conference) that must needs be raised on that occasion, it would seem a splendid opportunity to do something for the Brethren Home. These are mere suggestions and we would have you consult your own convenience in the matter of using them, but be sure to do something for this cause, if it is at all possible, and especially if you have not already made an offering this year. Or, if you have previously done something and now feel able to do more, be assured that the cause is worthy and the need is dire and urgent.

"The Faith That Is In Thee" On Prohibition

The Word admonishes us to "be ready to give a reason for the faith that is in thee." There is real need of being ready to do that with regard to Prohibition just now. Anti-prohibition propaganda is so blustering and widespread and those who believe in Prohibition are so timid and so seldom heard, that many are led to believe that there isn't much to say in defense of Prohibition, that it is a lost cause and a failure as a method of dealing with the liquor evil. The Prohibition cause needs more live propagandists, more leaders who believe strongly enough that absolute prohibition is the only method of dealing with the liquor traffic that they are willing to fight for it. There is too much lukewarmness and lack of positiveness and aggressiveness. There is too much thoughtful attention, too much evidence, given to the arguments of the wets. This is true on the part of leaders of all classes and ranks, from President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt on down. A lot of the misleading propaganda is being taken for "gospel truth." Even some religious paper editors are leaning over backwards in an effort to "face the facts" as they term it.

A group of representatives of the religious press met in New York recently under the chairmanship of John R. Mott in an endeavor to "arrive at a common mind, elaborate united plans and give themselves to concerted action" with regard to Prohibition. As a result of an open forum they brought forth ten points itemizing benefits of Prohibition that should by all means be preserved. Then they felt they must not "ignore the unfavorable aspects of the present situation", some of which were thought to be the "widespread law-breaking", increasing "social drinking" in families and social groups, the possibility that Prohibition had more greatly "corrupted the political machinery in the large metropolitan areas and in certain state governments." These are all wet claims and we take issue with them in every particular. There are evils aplenty along all these lines, but to suggest that they are the result of Prohibition, or that they are as great or worse than in pre-prohibition days is simply to re-echo wet propaganda. It is all so much camouflage to conceal their real aim of destroying Prohibition and bringing back the saloon or its equivalent under some other name.

We will get nowhere against this wet gang by half-heartedness and soft words. We must be quick to recognize the falseness of their claims and positive in denouncing them. We need more of the spirit of Theodore Roosevelt, who, as President thirty years ago, met the same wet arguments against the enforcement of Sunday closing laws as are now being used against the enforcement of the law forbidding the traffic on any day. They tell us now that only the rich can have their drinks and that the poor man should have his rights. But it isn't the rights of the poor man but the greedy gain of the rich that is sought. Moreover they say that the law is being so terribly violated, we had better repeal the law so as not to encourage lawlessness since men will not obey the law under any circumstances. The cure of lawlessness is enforcement and not repeal of law. The words of the popular late president are about as good for our day as for his own. (They appear on front page. We not only need enforcement officials of his stripe, but we need more Prohibition leaders with his keen discrimination and forceful denunciation.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The spirit of bitterness or of retaliation has no rightful place in the Christian life, and much less in the pulpit or in the religious press. "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth: but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil."

Brother William D. Schaffer of Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, gives us an extended report of the excellent Sunday school institute recently held at the Mount Pleasant church. It can be seen that it was an inspiring and instructive meeting, and the Sunday School Association agrees to assist other groups of churches in holding similarly helpful institutes.

Brother Robert D. Crees reports thirteen confessions of faith and six reconsecrations as a result of a revival in his Brush Valley church in Pennsylvania. Brother Claud Studebaker of Pittsburgh was the evangelist and his gospel preaching was greatly enjoyed and helped to quicken the spiritual life of the church. At the time of the report four of the converts had been baptized and the rest were to have been baptized the following Sunday.

Brother R. I. Humbert writes of the progress of his work at Martinsburg, Pennsylvania, and of his fellowshiping with kindred spirits on the way to National Conference and back. He visited with and preached for the people of the Campbell church in Michigan, his former pastorate. He records several special features of interest in his own church program. Aside from his emphasis on Bible Study, he puts forth special effort to develop the missionary spirit among his people.

Christian Endeavorers have a brief suggestion this week from their associate president, Brother Fred C. Vanator. He urges the organization of new societies. October is Organization month. You are getting the word in time to get a good start. Let's hope that every district comes through with some new societies organized. We are charging the publicity director, Brother C. D. Whitmer now with the responsibility of seeing that we get a report at the close of the month.

Indiana Brethren are invited to bring along with them to their state conference to be held at Flora, something in the line of food supplies, particularly staple groceries, and money for the benefit of the Brethren Home. This suggestion grows out of the critical financial situation obtaining at the Home at the present time. Dr. Miller authorizes us to say that any old people wanting a place to live for the winter may secure board and room at the Home at Flora for $20.00 a month. That is certainly a very nominal price. Any one wishing to economize for the winter will find this an opportunity, and the environment is most pleasant and Christian.

The evangelistic leaders of our brotherhood will be interested in learning of the next national convention of the Interdenominational Association of Evangelists to be held at Indianapolis, Indiana, in Cadle Tabernacle, January first to eighth. This is one of the outstanding national religious gatherings of the year and most of the great evangelists and song leaders and singers will be in attendance. Some of our ministers may appreciate having the notice thus far in advance that they may plan to attend. We were especially interested in a resolution which was adopted at the last business conference held at Winona Lake and which reads as follows:

"We do not now nor ever have placed our endorsement upon 'Public Healing meetings.' While every member of the Association believes that God heals the human body in answer to prayer, we do not believe as some extremists who assume the position of 'Healing of Bodily Diseases in the Atonement', in general anointing and public healing meetings. Nor do we admit to membership in our Association those who so believe and conduct such meetings."

President E. E. Jacobs gives us his first college news letter since the opening of the school year and from it we learn of a slight decrease in attendance, due to the depression no doubt, as he points out. Not only are bank savings gone in many instances so that parents are unable to send their children to college, but work is also gone or unobtainable, so that students who would go to college if they could get work to pay their own way are compelled to remain at home this year. The editor has received by letter and in person appeals from several young men to help locate work for them, that they might make their way at college. There is very little opportunity for students, when men, heads of families, are out of work and seeking it on every hand. It seems to us the college is fortunate in not having experienced more of a decline in attendance than it has—only twenty. Dr. Jacobs asks for a continued interest in the prayers of our people in behalf of the college. That we ought to give, and be very much in earnest about it. It is needed now, if ever, and prayer counts. For let us not forget that the prayer of faith will reach the ear of God and will touch the hearts of God's people.

Spiritual Economy

By W. S. Crick

A Sermon preached at the Ohio Conference held at Bryan, June 14-17, 1932

Text: "I have a stewardship entrusted to me" (R. V.) I Cor. 9:17

"Economics is the science which treats of the production, use, distribution and administration of wealth, resources, or capital," according to the definition. In I Cor. 9:17, the Apostle Paul characterizes his ministry as a 'stewardship', and the word he used in the original is that from which we derive the English word 'economics.' Evidently, in the thought of the apostle, his ministry in dealing with the spiritual wealth, resources, and 'riches in grace' required him to be a 'spiritual economist', and the administration of those spiritual resources, constituted for him a 'spiritual economy' or stewardship.

The term "oikonomos" (economics) is used more than a dozen times in the New Testament, in Luke 16:1-3, and many other times in the epistles. In the Authorized Version it is generally translated "dispensation", but the Revised Version more accurately uses the word "stewardship". An analysis of the use of the term discovers that there are several types of economy (administration) in which not only the apostle, but his successors in the ministry, and every child of God is called upon to serve.

Possibly there has never been a time when world conditions demanded so much of its leaders as the economic situation demands today. But, when one studies present economic conditions in the light of the inspired Word, he comes to understand that the present material depression was preceded by a terrible depression in spiritual values, when the nations became morally bankrupt and spiritually insolvent. The greater majority of folk were little concerned about empty lives, empty churches, empty profession and empty formalism. But an empty stomach, a depleted bank balance, and idle man-power arouses the concern of everyone. The conclusion that the spiritual depression was largely responsible for the economic depression is based on saner argument than merely the accident that one follows the other.

A schoolboy surprised his teacher when he replied to his question that Lord Nelson was victorious in a sea engagement with the Spanish fleet because the "Spaniards lacked three ships." "What three ships do you mean?" asked the teacher. Replied the pupil, "Seamanship, generalship, and marksmanship." The church of Jesus Christ, too, has lost many an engagement largely through the lack of one "ship"—STEWARDSHIP!

Let us examine God's Word in an effort to learn the nature of some of the spiritual wealth, and resources which it is the believer's economy to administer.

The Economy of Time.

First, let us think of the administration of time with its special opportunities and responsibilities. We are warned that "the days are evil", and that it behooves us to demand and give "meat in due season". Not only the season, but the time of day affects our menu—how much more should the "signs of the times" affect our use of our opportunities, "our moments and our days". Instructed believers are "sons of the day" and "Everyone that hath this hope set in him purifieth himself . . ." (I John 3:3). Surely we should minister with the admonition "Be ye also ready" in our ears.

The Economy of Conduct, Example, Service.

Rev. W. S. Crick
Pastor Brethren Church
Fremont, Ohio

"The overseer (R. V. Marg.) must be blameless as God's steward (economist)" Titus 1:7. Indeed, great losses have been sustained in the building of character because the examples of leaders have been faulty. But this responsibility is not limited to "overseers", as St. Peter counsels "Be ye holy in all manner of living" (I Pet. 1:15). Believers in general are to administer the gift among themselves in such a way as to be "good stewards of the manifold grace of God" (I Pet. 4:10) St. Paul in Ephesians 4: 7, 11, tabulates the various measures of grace as equipping "some to be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors, some teachers and some SAINTS!" We are to "offer our bodies as living sacrifices" because we "are bought with a price", yes, "redeemed with the precious blood of Christ!"

The Economy of Preaching and Teaching.

St. Paul declared "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel, for I have a stewardship (economy) entrusted to me." He makes it quite plain that he is not ministering merely for reward (wages), but because of an inner divine necessity. This urge characterizes every true steward of the "mysteries of God" (I Cor. 4:4), and the "necessity" is not limited to those "sent" but includes also the "senders." In Acts, thirteenth chapter, the Holy Spirit "called" but the Antioch Church "sent" them missionaries out. Significantly the Apostle asks in Romans 10:15, "How can they preach except they be sent?"

All too many Christians (?) have left the matter of economy of preaching, teaching and soul winning practically out of their budgets. Many have overlooked the fact that all things belong to God—and plan first to take care of their earthly creditors, and pay to the heavenly Creditor whatever may be "left."

The prophet Elijah taught the widow of Zarephath (I Kings 17:8-16), a lesson which many financially embarrassed folk need to learn today. The brief dialogue reads: Elijah: "Bring me a morsel of bread". Widow: "We are using the last we have for ourselves." Elijah: "Bring me a cake FIRST, and AFTER that make for thee and thy son." And the inspired narrative goes on to state that "she did according to the saying of Elijah, and she and he, AND HER HOUSE did eat many days!"

In these trying times when the necessity to retrench finds expression in many cases in curtailed contributions to the Church and her activities for the sake of saving the "last cake" for self, the Prophet's demand is worthy of consideration. Not only in times of depression have church members shown a marked "carefulness" in giving to the Lord's work, as was evidenced by the exemptions claimed for benevolences in income tax reports in a year of prosperity. While the government allows a deduction of fifteen per cent from incomes for contributions to religious and benevolent causes, one year's reports showed that the exception actually claimed averaged one-fourth of one percent! Centuries ago Jesus asked the question which is paramount today: "Whence shall we buy bread . . . ?" and HE ANSWERED IT when a fisher lad gave the Lord ALL his lunch. "Your Heavenly Father knows ye have need . . . seek first his Kingdom and his righteousness, and all these THINGS shall be added unto you." (Mt. 6:33).

The Economy of the TRUTH.

St. Paul regarded himself as a steward, not only of time, opportunity and substance, but also a guardian of the TRUTH. (I Tim. 1:4), hence he warns Timothy not to "teach a different doctrine." The aged apostle urged the younger minister to "guard the deposit" (I Tim. 6:20), and to "hold the pattern of sound words" (II Tim. 1:13). Since we are administrators of "the mysteries of God" (I Cor. 4:1), surely we should have a profound concern that humanity, already morally and spiritually bankrupt, should not be cheated by a fraudulent "handling of the Word of TRUTH" (II Tim. 2:15).

Spiritual Economy Which God Will Honor.

An example of spiritual economy which the Holy Spirit commended through the writing of St. Paul is that which was practiced by some members of the churches in Macedonia, who "FIRST gave their OWN SELVES to the Lord and to us through the will of God" (II Cor. 8:5). Now, as always, what the church has lacked is a complete giving of life to the Lord. For dynamic zeal for the Lord, the Church has substituted a mechanical program—instead of instilling the Spirit of God, the Church has sought to install systems to "raise money." When, and not until then, the Christian, as a wise economist, gives HIMSELF to the Lord, and in return RECEIVES of his fullness, will he have both abundance and ability to administer the material resources of this world.

Salvation is primarily a matter of RECEIVING, out of which the "giving" will issue cheerfully. Truly, the child of God is rich, for he has "an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away" and he himself is "by the power of God guarded through faith unto a salvation ready to be revealed in the last time" (II Pet. 1:4, 5).

Fremont, Ohio.

Youth's Need of the Cross

By Preston R. Campbell

(Address at Young People's Session of the Southeastern District Conference held at Roanoke, Virginia, June 14-16, 1932)

Let us consider briefly a few of the outstanding reasons why youth has need of the Cross. First of all it is an absolute essential to salvation. Youth of the world has sat in the classroom, church pew and other places and has had grounded into its life and faith teachings concerning Christ that tend to obscure the Cross. We hear much of the "Jesus of Social Welfare," "The Jesus of Marvelous Teaching," "The Jesus of Community and Moral Uplift," "The Jesus Way" and "The Principles of Jesus." Very little emphasis has been placed on or directed toward the real truth that the first place where faith must see Christ is on the Cross. Because of such blind rations Youth has acquired the habit, the special art of placing the Cross in the shadow of these misconceptions of the very heart of the Gospel.

Lest we fall into the same trouble let our policy be always to beware of the one that talks much about the example of Christ and imitating Christ and leaves out the message of the Cross and to rally to the one that exalts Christ and rests all on the Cross. Youth must awaken to the blessed reality of the Cross and learn the part it plays in the weaving of its destiny. Youth must take into consideration the facts; that the Cross occupies the central place in the Bible; that the very keynote of the Gospel is Calvary; that the Old Testament looks forward to the Cross and the New Testament looks back to the Cross; that the Cross occupies the central place in the life of Christ and in his ministry and should be the same in its life.

Youth needs to realize that its only hope lies in the Cross. Our older generation has worked faithfully to keep us on the right track; at least they express the same in establishing mediums to interest us. But humanitarian activities, social service, the building of community centers, the application of the finest spirit of sacrifices by our parents to the human problems of the day, the multiplication of philanthropic activities, the most practical ministries made to the needs of the multitude, none of these nor all of these can be allowed to overshadow or supplant our need of the Cross. The Cross still remains the primary requisite of salvation. Without the Cross the sun sets not in the clear sky of a promised new rising; it goes down into the abyss of a hopeless night of eternal darkness.

Without the Cross we find our future black indeed but with the Cross comes salvation a free and unmerited gift that makes all eternity ahead brighter than the noonday sun in the light of his presence. The Cross means that our sins are forgiven, our debt of sin has been paid to God by the propitiatory offering and sacrifice of Christ who humbled, emptied, laid down himself upon the cruel tree for us. It means that we are Christ's by adoption and redemption. It means that by faith in his death as a sacrifice for sin, by believing that he took our sins, that he died in our place, by thus in some sense making his offering ours, by approving it, by loving it, by embracing it, trusting it and clinging to it no matter how life's stormy gales threaten, our sins become pardoned and our souls made pure. Sin, that virulent force which had brought about the ruin of mankind, has been put away forever, and dealt with in Judgment for every sin-burdened soul who will flee for refuge to the hope set before him in the Gospel. The Cross cast a shadow over the heart of God, a burden on the soul of the Son of God but it makes grand all eternity ahead for us. God peered down the slope of the ages and saw the everlasting need of man and provided a remedy, a remedy we could not provide ourselves. We could not have paid the penalty, the price Christ paid upon the cross for us. The world has little, in fact nothing, to offer of sufficient value to pay a just and righteous God who was outraged by our careless or willful sinning. Money with all its intrinsic purchasing power that controls men and moves them at will can not buy salvation. Here is kindness and happiness that cannot be bought at any cost.

On the two arms of the cross has hung all the salvation of this old world. It is all the wisdom of God provided to satisfy the urge of that mighty passion in the heart of God and we will either rise with the whole world as it struggles for a better life at the foot of the cross or we will go down in the wreck with the rest of it as it blasphemes the cross in unbelief and ignorance. We must needs begin the new life at the foot of the cross. If there was any other way would not the infinite resources and wisdom of God have provided it? But there is no other way. It is not the waters of baptism, the bread and cup of communion or the commendable things of a moral life or good works by which men are saved, it is by receiving the Crucified Son of God as their Saviour from the penalty of their just condemnation.

As we look back to the time when God's word was fulfilled on Calvary, a vision of life the result of death to sin and the deliverance from it makes the Cross loom over centuries of time in the onward march of redeemed souls as the bright hope of humanity. Centuries have witnessed the rise and fall of nations, human ambitions realized and defeated, the Cross of Christ accepted and rejected, but the Cross still goes on ever marching gloriously in the lives of men and women saved by the blood of the Crucified One. That is the only refuge we have today. We have no other such hope of so great a salvation.

In the second place Youth has need of the Cross after salvation as a power to overcome temptations, environment, circumstances. Temptations have always left their stain upon every generation and youth of today has not been excepted to any degree. Modern youth has been faced with all the inducements that a modern civilization has produced to draw attention and loyalty away from the Cross and its power. Youth repairs to the world in its efforts to attain power and prominence as well as temporal gains. Youth thus places its faith and trust in the transitory things of this life and follows the path of desire and of least resistance and in doing so goes overboard, and grows weaker and weaker under the wiles of Satan. Youth can not grow in grace or serve God rightly in such a state. Such indulgence in the habits of the world bring spiritual dwarfing, lack of power and an end to the joy of salvation.

Many heart-rending tragedies have resulted when Youth has failed to appropriate the power of the Cross after salvation. Many have set out to Crusade with Christ, to be co-workers with him in his crusade for lost souls, to go with him in his world saving way after the example of countless heroes of the faith. They have dropped out along the way when the battle for the defense of the Gospel has waxed hard. Their power has been lacking. They fail to possess the same overwhelming, dominant convictions about Jesus Christ which possess the souls of those who have acquired the passion of the Cross and who live, teach, and preach the Cross as indispensable to the salvation of the world.

We can not be satisfied with such degeneration if it exists in our lives. If we are to possess real power and victory in our lives we must find our way back by the way of the Cross to the light and path of life that is progressive and fruitful. A revised version of our life just off the press will help a whole lot to harmonize our life with the Cross. We must make and keep contact with the power lines of the Cross, turn on the full current and develop dynamic, persuasive power. We will discover that with the power of the Cross the power to do the humanly impossible is given freely. Power, Power, wonder working power is ours. A complete transformation of life and its interests is attained. Sacrifices and losses sustained when the world is deserted for the way of the Cross proves to be but the exchanging of temporal gains and advantages for eternal ones. The Cross brings new quality into life, a quality enduring and eternal. It is the communication of the divine nature to our human life. So the Cross by bringing youth into contact with God through Jesus Christ, the one divine mediator, puts into our lives a divine quality, ennobling, enabling, empowering. It offers the "plus ultra" of a larger life, a deeper experience, a diviner quality, the warmest spiritual atmosphere, the warmest kind of Christian fellowship. It lengthens life's cords and strengthens its stakes. So to the individual does the power of the Cross come enlarging, enriching, and fulfilling.

We read in Revelation 12:11, "They overcame him by the blood of the lamb and by the word of their testimony." The reference here is to the downfall of Satan. Yea, the blood of the lamb, the sacrifice, the Cross of Christ, is all that will overcome the sins of this world. We as young people contemplating fruitful ministries in the Master's name dare not proceed save backed up by the strong arms of Jesus and the power of the Cross. Some one has said, "the Cross of Christ was the divine lightning rod that gathered all the pent up wrath of God on sin and grounded it in the body of the Son of God." And if we are to overcome temptations and have power in our lives we must have the Cross. Archimedes said, "Give me a fulcrum where I can place my lever and I can lift the world." What Archimedes longed for Jesus used. He took the Cross as a lever and has been lifting every sinner who would come to him out of the miry pit of sin and shame unto God. So the Cross lifts the gaze of youth to a broader horizon and clearer vision to better fellowship, a closer walk with God and empowers us with a great testimony.

That brings us to a third reason why youth has need of the Cross. Youth needs the Cross for power as a soul winner. God had compassion upon us and sent his only begotten Son to the Cross that we through him might have eternal life and it more abundantly. And now he relies on our Christian influence through the blood of the Cross for the winning of more souls for his kingdom.

Our charge is to carry on with a definite enhancement and endorsement of the Cross, living epistles, burning passionate soul-winners. There is a great unreached mass of unsaved men, sheep without a shepherd awaiting our help. Yea, men gloat over sin today more than ever. To cope with rampant wickedness, more highly educated and carefully trained detectives and policemen are needed than ever before. There is a high art today found within the range of criminology and the cleverest brains are necessary to grapple with the problem. Sin, both original and actional, increases in the evidence of its Satanic origin and never was the four-square preaching of the Gospel based on the Cross more needed. Satan and the powers of darkness must be conquered. Souls steeped in sin, marked and marred with the consequences thereof must needs be saved and delivered.

We need then, as young people, to go forward conscious of a commission out of the unseen, on fire and awake with a vision of the Cross to preach as Paul said, "Christ and him crucified." We as Endeavorers must be Heralds of Christ and his Gospel, servants with the keynote of our lives Service, Ambassadors of God, Watchmen on the walls lest any soul go astray.

God has ordained, sanctified and honored us to be samples, advertisements of the faith once and for all delivered unto the saints. We then should be passive instruments in the hands of God, our dominant thought, how we can spend ourselves that we might best carry the message of the Cross to the lost; we should be lighthouse Christians, lighted to give light, to save. We should go forth courageous, high spirited, spurred on by enthusiasm from the Cross, with an unconquerable passion for saving lost souls,—that makes life worth living.

To fulfill its great opportunity, youth needs to emphasize in all its dealings faithful adherence to the precious theme of the Cross, that sets forth with such absolute authority the central fact of substitutionary atonement, made by Jesus Christ our Lord as the only ground upon which a hell-deserving sinner can find acceptance in the presence of a Holy God—for it is the Cross that has actuated all true service toward God and men throughout the ages. It is the element that has characterized every

(Continued on page 14)

For an Autumn "Drive"

By William T. Ellis

Less for their own sakes than for the public's, the churches should be seriously at the business of a Fall "drive" this year. For the bewildered and burdened people are readier than ever for leadership and guidance.

Without any pretentious machinery or "movement", but by agreement and cooperation of local units, under pastoral leadership, it should easily be possible for all churches to pursue unwonted activity in behalf of three great objectives; upon which they are already in complete agreement.

First of all, and fundamentally important, is the gathering of children and young people into the Sunday schools. Men who deal in statistics tell us that there are fourteen million young people of school age in this country who are receiving no religious instruction whatsoever. Every local community has its proportion of children and youth outside of the Sunday school, who could be recruited by little more effort than a personal invitation. It should be a simple matter to conduct a "drive", participated in by old and young, for a great increase in Sunday school enrollment.

Second in importance—many will say first—is the grave problem of how to increase church attendance.

There are ominously too many unemployed pews in the land.

Religious "leaders," engaged in weighty matters of polity and finance, pay scant heed to this question, which underlies all other aspects of church life.

Obviously, if the Church does not get the people into her pews, she cannot get them anywhere else. Before any influence can be exerted upon the public by the clergy or the organization, men and women must be got into the pews. Overshadowing all other grave concerns of the Church today is this one of widespread non-attendance upon the public services of Divine worship.

It should be possible to create a vogue of church-going. This, however, requires cooperation and concerted activity. Methods are many, and mostly obvious. The voice of the nation's leaders should be heard in support of this activity. Display advertisements in the newspapers, when of the right sort, have proved powerfully effective; and they have the advantage of enlisting active press support for a "Go-To-Church" campaign.

Third, and least tangible and most difficult of the objectives of an Autumn "drive" should be an increase of personal piety. Only praying, Bible-studying, God-experiencing Christians can maintain the life and work of the Church and the creation of such characters is the Church's first work.

---

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

---

RESENTMENT AROUSED BY "THIRD DEGREE" DEATH

Public sentiment in Detroit has been deeply stirred by the fatal shooting of a crippled burglar, named David Canton, from whom policemen were attempting to secure a profession. Not only did a policeman shoot the cripple, but he was beaten severely by two officers before the shooting. Before he died he dictated a damaging indictment of the policemen whom he claimed gave him the "third degree" with a vengeance. The newspapers devoted much space to the affair, and as a result the coroner impaneled a jury composed of six well known Detroiters, and among these two widely influential religious leaders, Rev. M. S. Rice, minister Metropolitan Methodist church, and Rabbi Leon Fram, associate of Dr. Leo Franklin at Temple Beth El. After listening to extended testimony the jury returned a verdict to the effect that "unnecessary force" had been used in the handling of the prisoner, and recommended a grand jury investigation. The apparent brutality in this instance has intensified popular feeling, since this is the third fatal third degree case to occur in this country within the last few months.—The Christian Century.

WHAT DO THE PASSING TABLOIDS SUGGEST?

Reports are to the effect that the salacious type of tabloid journal is finding it increasingly difficult to keep alive. At least two of these tabloids have gone—The New York Daily Graphic (some times called "The Pornographic" by those not friendly to this type of publication) has passed out of existence, as has The Detroit Mirror and perhaps others of the same type. Perhaps the reason is purely financial, that these concerns lack capital or suffered bad management; but at least one daily paper suggests that "the sensational, salacious froth that appealed to a great many people in boom times does not satisfy them now." It is sincerely to be hoped that the latter reason is the true one and that the American people are developing a better and higher taste.—The Presbyterian Advance.

EINSTEIN WILL TEACH IN U. S.

Professor Albert Einstein, world famous scientist, has accepted appointment as a life member of the staff of the Institution for Advanced Study, in the United States, it was announced August 25. The condition is that his work with the institute will require his presence in the United States for only five months of the year, leaving him free to pass the rest of the time in Germany.

The Institute for Advanced Study is to be an educational foundation, established with a gift of $5,000,000 from Mrs. Felix Fuld and her brother, Louis Bamberger, retired merchant of Newark. Mrs. Fuld is the widow of Felix Fuld, philanthropist, and lives on a forty-two acre estate at 602 Center Street, South Orange, New Jersey. It was recently reported that this estate would be used as the home of the institute.

When Professor Einstein arrives at the institute. it will be his fourth visit to the United States. His first was in 1921. He came with his violin and smiled gently when reporters asked him to explain his theory of relativity. He arrived again in December, 1930, with Mrs. Einstein, to carry on his studies at the California Institute of Technology, in Pasadena. He returned to Germany in March, 1931.

Last winter Dr. and Mrs. Einstein were again in Pasadena at the Institute of Technology for several months. When he landed back in Rotterdam, the scientist commented: "Nice people, those Americans."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

NEW YORK'S NEW MAYOR STARTS THINGS

Joseph V. McKee, president of the Board of Aldermen, who succeeded to the duties of mayor until another is elected, is not proceeding in a way to add to the Walker prestige. He began by reducing his own salary from $40,000 to $25,000 a year and ordered the salaries of appointed commissioners slashed from $15,000 to $12,000. He said that similar salary reductions would proceed right down the scale until those earning less than $2,000 per annum were reached. He ordered the luxurious automobile used by Walker into storage and asked that other employment be found for the two chauffeurs to the mayor, since he had his own car and chauffeur, which are used only to get to and from the subway. All these things indicate that the charge of waste of public money might be fastened upon the Walker administration.—The Presbyterian Advance.

GAMBLING INCREASING

The Christian Advocate (Pacific Coast) has the following to say about gambling:

"The Gambling instinct, which seems to be universal, is finding increasing expression by means of dog racing. In this so-called sport greyhounds are compelled to chase electrically-propelled rabbits. The interest is chiefly in the betting. One track south of San Francisco is said to take in $30,000 a night. The Retail Merchants' Association of the city has delivered itself of this opinion, backed by careful investigation:

"The attendance of employees at the dog races helps to encourage a factor which is diverting millions of dollars from San Francisco business and by thus weakening business, has a tendency to place all employees' positions in jeopardy.

"Many employers are putting this notice, printed in large type, on the walls of their places of business. Years ago the Retail Merchants' Association of Butte, Montana, went to the expense of chartering a special train and sending a large group to the capital at Helena in order to lobby against a bill for the continuance of horse racing. It still seems to be true that honesty is the best policy, and that it is impossible to get something for nothing."

But men will not refrain from gambling because of "policy," that is, the mass of people won't. They must have some convictions about gambling, and those must be gotten in youth. That throws the responsibility upon parents and teachers and preachers. The moulders of youth must challenge the gambling spirit, and set a right example.

Grave fears are felt in Chinese circles that the coming autumn will bring decisive developments in relations between China and Japan affecting not only Manchuria but also China proper. Chinese newspapers are carrying sensational reports presented as exposing a Japanese military scheme for "further aggression in China." This scheme, the newspapers say, embraces seizure of the leading ports of the China coast, including Shanghai, Tsingtao, Amoy and Swatow, to block the entry of foreign arms and ammunition. The reports are especially gloomy concerning Shanghai, where "strong Japanese military action" is predicted.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Lamentations

"The Lamentations of Jeremiah," says Dr. Philip Schaff, "are the most extensive elegy in the Bible. They are a funeral dirge of the theocracy and the Holy City after its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, and give most pathetic utterances to the most intense grief. The first lines strike the keynote. Jerusalem is personified and bewailed as a solitary widow."

"She weepeth bitterly in the night,
And her tears are upon her cheeks;
She hath no comforter
From among all her lovers;
They have become her enemies.
All her friends have turned traitor to her,

A truer estimate of the general character of the book would be hard to find. As we have odes and songs of sacred joy in Holy Writ, so have we mournful elegies and songs of poignant grief and distress. These latter songs appear to soften the hard-headedness and hard-heartedness of our race. We read them—or at least always should—and think. The ways of Divine Providence and the Infinite Wisdom are exceedingly devious and instructive.

The Writer

These mournful speeches or compositions were written in poetical strain by none other than Jeremiah, the Prophet. They are adjoined to his major writing as a sort of an appendix and describe accurately the scenes which none other than the weeping seer could have experienced.

What kind of attestation do we have as to Jeremiah's authorship of the book? Tradition of an unbroken nature ascribes the book to the historical prophet-poet. Josephus, the greatest Jewish historian, the Talmud, the Targum, and the Septuagint Translation, all point unitedly to him as the penman. To the Septuagint the following prefix occurs: "And it came to pass after Israel had been carried away captive, and Jerusalem made desolate, Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented this lament over Jerusalem and said, 'This is very definite and very concrete evidence. The serious

Biblical scholar will accept it as trustworthy and reliable evidence after he has considered all other claims.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Jeremiah.
2. When and Where Written? Around 587 B. C., near Jerusalem.
3. To Whom Written? To Wayward and Captive Israel.
4. Occasion. The Destruction of Judah and Jerusalem by the Chaldean Army.
5. Authenticity. The best scholarship ascribes the book to the Weeping Prophet.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. First Lament: Lam. 1:1; Jerusalem's Solitariness—Ch. I.
2. Second Lament: Lam. 2:1; Jerusalem's Sorrow—Ch. II.
3. Third Lament: Lam. 3:1; Jerusalem's Prophet—Ch. III.
4. Fourth Lament: Lam. 4:1; Jerusalem's Desolation—Ch. IV.
5. Fifth Lament: Lam. 5:1; Jerusalem's Appeal—Ch. V.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

Writes Principal Whyte: "There is nothing like the Lamentations of Jeremiah in the whole world. There has been plenty of sorrow in every age, and in every land, but such another preacher and author, with such a heart for sorrow has never again been born. Dante comes next to Jeremiah and we know that Jeremiah was that exile's favorite poet." Truly sorrow and regret run through his lamentations.

But the structure of the book is also highly interesting. Of its five chapters, I, II, IV, and V, have each twenty-two verses, and chapter III has sixty-six. (22x3). In the Hebrew alphabet twenty-two distinct letters occur, and in I, II, and IV, the sentences are alphabetically arranged, the first beginning with aleph, the second with beth, the third with gimel, the fourth with daleth, and so on until the end.

Chapter three is different and the first three verses begin with aleph, and the second three with beth, et cetera. A minor change may be noted occasionally, but the order of the first four chapters has always been regarded as alphabetical. However, chapter five is non-alphabetical.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Affliction, Destruction.
2. Key Verses. 1:12, 16; 2:13, 14, 17; 3:21-26, 31-33, 37, 39-41; 4:1, 22; 5:7, 16, 17, 21.
3. Key Chapters. 3 and 5.
4. Key Ideas. Sin and Sorrow: Love and Compassion.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

To the Jews, the lessons of Jeremiah's Lamentations are yearly stressed. During the fast of the month of Abib, he hears the mournful elegy read and remembers five great catastrophes which befell his nation:

1. The Wilderness Wanderings.
2. The Destruction of the Temple by Nebuchadnezzar.
3. The Destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman, Titus.
4. The Slaying of 580,000 Jews under Hadrian.
5. The Fulfillment of Jer. 26:18 When Zion's Fields were Ploughed.

The modern wailing wall of Jerusalem bears the Jewish mind back to these days of desolation. He is repenting and praying now; but some day he shall find his sorrow turned into gladness and his mourning into song. That will come when they recognize the Prince of Life as their Messiah.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Jeremiah, sitting outside of Jerusalem's walls bewailing the fate of the city, is only another prefiguration of the Weeping Savior, sitting on the Mount of Olives crying: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem!" Jeremiah's prediction concerning the city of his days were fulfilled and the prophet rejoiced not; the Jerusalem of Jesus' predictions was destroyed, and exactly as he said, but did the Christ rejoice in heaven over its destruction?

VII. THE TEACHING OF THE BOOK

1. Chastening always follows disobedience with God.
2. The famous "wails" were followed by famous degradation and defeat. Read Deut. 1:12; Isa. 1:21; Lam. 1:1.
3. "In all their afflictions he was afflicted."
4. "The bruised reed he will not break, but strengthen and sustain." (Isaiah and Whittier)

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N. MAGAZINE SECTION M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR, ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Gospel Song Movement

By Prof. John Bissell Trowbridge, Director Music Department, Bible Institute of Los Angeles

The Hymnody of the 19th and 20th centuries has been noticeably affected in technique, and greatly enriched in spiritual power, by the so-called Gospel song movement. Being the outgrowth of a great religious awakening it is evangelistic both in conception and outworking. Only those churches and individuals that believe in an aggressive Bible program are enthusiastic about the Gospel song. Some of the more conservative of the Gospel songs have found their way into the standard hymnals and so have a chance to testify alongside of the old veteran hymn that has stood the test of centuries. The Gospel song, as a rule, is sung with a dash and vigor unknown to the old psalm and hymn tune. In this way it has improved the congregational singing of the old hymns by a process of emulation and demonstration.

Taking definite form in the Moody and Sankey campaigns in England in 1873, which were simultaneous with the work of Whittle and Bliss in America, the Gospel song has developed in scope and quality and its wide use has been a mighty factor in the greatest evangelistic campaigns ever known. These evangelistic meetings have been nation-wide and world-wide in their sweep, under Moody, Torrey, Chapman, Biederwolf, Sunday, and many lesser lights, having associated with them such outstanding singers and leaders as Sankey, Towner, Stebbins, McGranahan, Alexander and Rodeheaver.

Sources of the New Movement

The streams of influence that were converging to give impetus to this musical epoch have their sources far back in national and religious history. In the successive religious awakenings since the Reformation there was a reaching out after something—a need recognized but not clearly defined. But as we view it in retrospect we see that this need was a simpler and more spontaneous expression of religious emotion—a more direct lyrical wording of personal religious experience, and the desire to give a definite Gospel message with a hortative appeal.

With the removal of the ban on congregational singing that came with the launching of the Reformation, the Psalms were again taken as the fountain-head of praise. Luther arranged his great hymn, "A Mighty Fortress," from Psalm 46. Calvin and Knox promoted the publication of the Genevan Psalter, and leaders in every country brought out versions of the Psalms. In England there was the Rouse version, Sternhold and Hopkins' (known as the "old version"), Tate and Brady's (the "New version"), and these were followed in 1719 by Watts' paraphrases in which he sought to couch the Psalms in New Testament language, thus making many of them real hymns. An example of this is "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun," a paraphrase of Psalm 72. Watts made a systematic attempt to create a new standard of congregational singing, and laid down definite principles to work by: First, he set himself the task of versifying all the Psalms "as I may suppose David would have done had he lived in the days of Christianity." Second, he sought to improve the Hymnody by writing hymns Scriptural in thought and free in style. He published his "Hymns and Spiritual Songs" in 1707. These works of Watts were well received and soon widely used in England. But in America the process of adoption was slow, owing to the suspicious attitude of the Colonists regarding anything from England.

The great Wesleyan revival produced results in England that literally transformed society, and the singing of the hymns was a large factor in all meetings. This was especially true in the great open-air gatherings. Whitefield used Watts' hymns in his American campaigns; and the stern Jonathan Edwards used music effectively and testified to the wonderful way in which "grace was poured out" through song in his meetings. All this was accomplished in spite of the slow and cumbersome psalm tunes that were in vogue and the scarcity of books with notes.

The handicap of primitive musical advantages in America could only be overcome by the slow process of growth. In the meantime, the crude attempts of William Billings and others of his school in the 18th century both helped and hindered. His compositions were bombastic and stilted and yet he wrote some hymns and war songs that set the Revolutionary patriots to singing in the camps and at the home fireside, even as George F. Root's songs did eighty-five years later during the Civil War.

Early Reformers of Church Music in America

The work of Lowell Mason as a reformer in church music began to be felt in the Eastern States about 1830. He has been called "The Father of American Church Music," but he was not a Gospel song writer. His hymn tunes are of the staid, conservative type. He was a teacher and promoter primarily, and two of his most noted pupils went out to write songs that carried his principles into the real of Gospel music. William Bradbury was the older of the two and as a young organist and choir director in the Baptist Tabernacle, New York, he began what was probably his greatest contribution to the cause, in his children's choir work. Starting with a singing class for children in his own church, the work spread city-wide until he had his hands full with classes numbering several hundred each and resulting in annual "Juvenile Music Festivals" that for several years were events that attracted wide attention. Bradbury developed a real style of writing for juveniles, illustrations of which are seen in "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us," "Jesus Loves Me," "He Leadeth Me," and "The Solid Rock." Songs of this type were being sung in Sunday schools throughout the country in the '50's and '60's, and were among the earliest efforts in the use of real Gospel Singing.

The claim that the Gospel Song was "born" in Newcastle, England, in 1873, is thus seen to be "stretching a point." This movement did not spring into being full grown "over night." The work of Mr. Sankey simply brought out its first definite designation as such. This was its first real challenge to the world for recognition. The appeal of the people for simpler form of religious expression was being definitely recognized in 1840—it was being realized in 1873.

George F. Root was the second Mason pupil referred to as being a maker of music history. His work was more like that of his famous teacher, except that he launched out fearlessly, wrote many popular home songs, such as "Hazel Dell" and "There's Music in the Air" and during the Civil War he wrote patriotic songs that were doubtless the most effective of the period—"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys are Marching," "Battle Cry of Freedom," and "Just Before the Battle, Mother." These songs may be classed with Stephen C. Foster's songs such as "Old Folks at Home," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," and "Old Black Joe," and Daniel Decatur Emmett's inimitable "Dixie," and other songs, all of which had a wholesome moral influence in quickening the musical pulse of America and preparing the way for the burst of Gospel song that was to follow.

The writings of Root were extremely simple in structure and almost entirely free from chromatic tones, and the harmonies were elementary—yet his melodies were chaste and clear as crystal and there is something extremely wholesome and appealing about them. "Come to the Savior," "Jewels," and "The Shining Shore" are illustrations of his Gospel song writings that make models that should be followed more closely by some of the writers of present-day Gospel songs.

During this time a body of spontaneous religious "folk songs" was growing in America, west of the Alleghenies in the pioneer regions of the Middle West and South, that without doubt had a great influence on the development of the Gospel-song tune. Some have claimed that the "Spiritual" was the progenitor of the Gospel song and that the melodies grew out of ballad tunes from Scotland and England brought over by the Colonists. They served their day in the old frontier camp meetings, and can be traced in the tunes sometimes still sung to the words, "O Thou in Whose Presence My Soul Takes Delight," and a minor tune to "Come, ye Sinners, Poor and Needy."

One of the unique characters of this period during which the Gospel song was developing, was Philip Phillips, known as "The Singing Pilgrim" because of his wide travels in giving "Song Services." In 1868 he was invited to London to give one hundred evenings of sacred song, which he accomplished with pronounced success, receiving an invitation to return. In this he proved to be a sort of "John the Baptist" for Mr. Sankey, preparing the way before him. Mr. Phillips had a winning way with him, and his song services, given literally around the world—across America, Australia, India, Ceylon, Egypt, Jerusalem, Italy, and for the third time in England—gave a foretaste of what was to be accomplished by the great army of Gospel singers that were to follow. His book "Hallowed Hymns" was used by Mr. Sankey in his first English campaign.

Henry Ward Beecher became pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, in 1851, and he found the music in a very bad state, old-style psalm singing being in vogue. "One of Mr. Beecher's oddities" was that he determined to improve the music. The result of this was the great "Plymouth Collection of Hymns" published in 1855. This incident shows the musical condition at this time in one of the largest and most widely known churches. The Gospel song movement did not have material ready for this great leader in the crisis he faced in his local church.

In his introduction to this new hymn book Mr. Beecher says this about Watts and the Wesleys: "The contributions of the Wesleys to Hymnology have been so rich as to leave the Christian world under an obligation which can not be paid so long as there is a struggling Christian brotherhood to sing and be comforted amid the trials of this world." And of Watts' hymns he says: "With whatever partiality to Dr. Watts we may have begun this compilation, a comparison of his hymns and psalms with the best effusions of the best hymn writers has only served to increase our admiration and our conviction that he stands incomparably above all other English writers." This opinion of Mr. Beecher represents the true estimate of these two great men whose work so largely dominated English hymnody for two centuries and who still maintain their supremacy in all standard hymn books. But the time was fast approaching when a new body of sacred song was to take its place alongside these classics of the hymn book—not to displace but to supplement.

TUESDAY

The Home of Mary and Martha. Luke 10:38-42

Mary loved to sit at the feet of Jesus, and found it indeed a place of blessing. Undoubtedly Martha too loved to sit there, but she allowed the press of other duties to hinder her fellowship, and Jesus said that Mary had chosen the better part. We do not read of Lazarus here, but undoubtedly he too had learned to sit at the feet of the Master, for the message that was sent to Jesus (John 11), was: "He whom thou lovest is sick." The home that loves Jesus is a home that Jesus blesses with his presence, and we read that "Jesus loved Martha and her sister, and Lazarus." Could any goal be more worth striving for?

WEDNESDAY

A Child's Heritage. 2 Tim. 1:1-7

A child's heritage is a priceless thing, and should be guarded well. Earthly riches are as nothing by comparison. Fortunate indeed the child with a heritage such as Timothy's, yet not all can be born with such a heritage. This passage also suggests the spiritual heritage that is bestowed upon everyone who is born of our Father who is in heaven—and thank God ALL may claim this heritage! Let us pray for more mothers like Eunice, more sons like Timothy, more teachers like Paul.

THURSDAY

Instruction in Wisdom. Prov. 4:1-9

In this home the child was tenderly loved by both father and mother, and apparently every effort was made to instruct the child in wisdom. The scriptures make a distinction with regard to wisdom, and we read of the "wisdom of this world," and the wisdom that cometh down from above. In the complex life of which we are a part today, we dare not neglect even the wisdom of this world, but above all things let us be wise in God's sight, and let us instruct our children in his laws.

FRIDAY

Forgiving Offenses. Gen. 50:15-21

There are few more beautiful incidents than this. Remember, too, that while Joseph had communed much with God and knew much of his ways, still he had not the advantages we Christians have experienced through our knowledge of Jesus. The Christian's rule for family life is found in Eph. 4:32: "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Pray that we may have the spirit of Christ.

SATURDAY

The Godless Home in Danger. Deut. 29:14-21

This warning to the individuals is no less a warning to the home, which is made up of individuals. The Lord spared not the angels which fell, and he will not spare the home that turns away from him. Indeed, in the current happenings of our land and of the whole world today we have abundant evidence that he has not spared. Let us return unto the Lord, and he will abundantly pardon.

SUNDAY

The Ideal Home. Ps. 101:1-7

David's ideal of life is well expressed in our Golden Text for the week: "I will walk within my house with a perfect heart." Pause and consider what is meant by a perfect heart, then answer these questions: Is my heart perfect? Who can make my heart perfect? Let us pray that there may be more perfect hearts in God's sight, less hypocrisies, and more perfect Christian example in all things.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE CHRISTIAN IN THE FAMILY

(Lesson for October 9)

Lesson Text: Luke 2:40-52; 10:38-42; Golden Text: Ps. 101:2

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Home Life of Jesus. Luke 2:40-52

There is little that we know about the home life of Jesus, yet that little makes us certain it must have been very beautiful. We know that Joseph was a just man, and considerate of Mary (Matt. 1:19), and we know something of the character of the virgin who was chosen from among all the maidens of Israel to give birth to the Messiah. Knowing the loving gentleness of Jesus, we can realize something of how these three, at least, must have lived together. Even on the cross, Jesus was not forgetful of the needs of his mother. Probably the boy Jesus owed no small part of his spiritual insight to the teaching of his godly parents, in the home. The need of the church, and of the nation, is for more homes like that of Jesus. Surely we have much to pray for!

E. M. RIDDLE,
President
Warsaw, Indiana

F. C. VANATOR,
Associate
Peru, Indiana

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK

C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Dublin Ave., South Bend, Ind.

GLADYS M. SPICE,
General Secretary
and
Treasurer
2301 13th St., N. E.,
Canton, Ohio

OCTOBER—ORGANIZATION MONTH

By Fred C. Vanator, Associate President
Suggestive Program for Society Extension

Adult or Alumni

1. Organization of Adult Study Classes, same to meet at the time of the Senior Societies of C. E.
2. Concerted effort for definite Bible Study, not merely reading of the Bible.
3. Programs conducted to emphasize the idea of Church extension.

Senior

1. Organization or reorganization of the Young People into very definite C. E. work, reporting same immediately to the National Secretary, Miss Gladys Spice, 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.
2. Equipping societies with the proper committees, which will plan and put in operation the program of the National organization.

Peru, Indiana.

GOOD PUBLICITY AND HOW TO GET IT

By Virginia Kaiser

Publicity workers in Westchester County, New York, met recently in White Plains.

The conference had three main objectives: (1) to receive information and suggestions on newspaper publicity and posters; (2) to see the type of work being done by local chairmen through an exhibit of scrap-books and posters; (3) to discuss the county publicity program and review present and future plans.

Two notices were sent to all local and district chairmen in the county as well as to all county officers. The editor of one of the outstanding local papers was invited to talk on newspaper publicity, and one experienced along that line, to talk on posters.

The editor made these suggestions:

That for newspaper copy, paper 8½ by 11 inches be used.

That copy be typewritten—double-spaced.

That in the upper left-hand corner be placed name, address, and telephone number of the person writing, and in the right-hand corner the date on which the material is to be released.

That simple words and short sentences be used.

That the publicity chairman study the style of the newspaper in which the Christian Endeavor news is printed, and try to write accordingly.

That copy be on editor's desk as early in the morning as possible.

Then scrap-books and posters were examined. Some helpful suggestions made were:

That posters be exhibited at least a couple of weeks in advance of the event.

That they be related to timely events.

That objects, such as a pail of sand, might be used to advertise a beach party, with these words attached: "Stay off the grass. Come to the beach party and stay on the sand." Or a bowl of fish might announce a meeting with some such caption as "Poor fish! He doesn't know about Christian Endeavor."

That style of printing be varied.

That photographs be used when possible. For instance, photographs of a field-day the year before might be used to arouse interest in a coming one.

That such combinations as "January Jam-boree," "Hearty Party," etc., be used when possible.

That slogans be adopted.

In Westchester County a yearly program is prepared, and at the county convention an award is made to the society that has accomplished the most along publicity lines. —C. E. World.

Harrison, New York.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Christ or Gandhi in India

By James T. Nichols

A recent visitor to that unhappy empire tells in the "Christian Standard" something of the disturbed conditions as India faces problems, but he particularly shows wherein Gandhi's practice fails to match that of Jesus.

Eighty people injured in one riot last night. Twenty-one injured in a second riot—six of them women." So stated the Monday morning daily papers in Bombay the day I left that great city some months ago.

No one familiar with the situation in India would be surprised in the least at such a report. With some friends I had gone through one of the great thoroughfares of the city on Saturday evening before, and the crowd was so dense that it was almost impossible to get through. Only two or three other cars were in the street, and, as far as one could see, it was one solid mass of people.

Everybody seemed to be jabbering, and some were excited. The driver of our car said he was going to give us a glimpse of the real thing, and he surely made good on his boast. For a bit the car could only go a few feet at a time. One little act would have turned that crowd into a howling, merciless mob. The Taj Mahal Hotel looked mighty good when we reached it, and the liner out in the harbor where we were to spend the night looked still better a little later.

In parts of India students especially are up in arms. Women are taking part in the uprisings. The day before I reached India a girl student fired five shots at the Governor of Bengal. The shooting occurred at the University of Calcutta. After the first shot, the Vice-Chancellor rushed at the girl, hitting her arm, and this practically saved the life of the Governor.

Missionaries are Required to Say Nothing

Quite naturally all missionaries have to keep still. As I understand the situation, they have to give their pledge to do so. They also have to keep away from any political demonstration. Several of them have already got into trouble.

Before Gandhi reached home from the London conference, the No-rent and No-tax campaign was on among the farmers, and it bade fair to paralyze the Government. The falling off of income tax and shortage of imports were already plunging the Government into debt.

Leaders and agitators were being imprisoned before Gandhi reached home from the London conference, and he was imprisoned soon after his arrival. While I was in India no one knew how many were in prison for this uprising, but the estimate was given as high as one hundred thousand.

Two Gallons of "Gas" for a Dollar

Early in the struggle postage on letters was raised, and all classes of railroad fares were advanced and prices of all goods, especially from America, soared. Brother Schaefer wrote me that all canned goods, motor-car parts, and all such, had advanced 40 per cent in price from last year; that petrol (gasoline) was taxed eighteen cents per gallon, and that he had to pay one dollar for a two-gallon can of same.

Strange as it may seem, the poor people were not hit so hard as those a little higher up, according to Brother Schaefer. The poor people are farmers, and, as they live from their products, they scarcely ever have any money. Crops were quite good this year, and they were having as much to eat as ever. Every one having an income as much as $300 a year has to pay a heavy income tax, but practically no farmer has such a munificent annual income as that.

A Half-Million Villages Without a School

Common people in India are ignorant and superstitious almost beyond belief. In the vast population of more than three hundred and fifty million people, only twelve million are in school. Only twenty million men and three million women are literate. It is said there are five hundred thousand villages in India without a school of any kind.

Gandhi Losing His Power

Without a doubt Gandhi is fast losing his hold on the people of India. Nine years ago I traveled thousands of miles in India, and was amazed on every hand at the hold this man Gandhi had on the common people. To speak his name to an Indian was to see a new light in his face. Not one in twenty with whom I talked failed to indicate his love and loyalty to Gandhi.

On this occasion six nights were spent on sleeping cars in India, and thousands of miles were covered, and at least half of the Indians with whom I talked were against Gandhi and many of these quite outspoken against him. Brother Farrand, my traveling companion, is an attorney, and, if any man can ask more questions of strangers than he, I have never found him. Before reaching India I requested Mr. Farrand to ask every Indian he met what he thought of Gandhi, and he declares that in this experience not more than one in ten were for Gandhi.

At first it seems that Mr. Gandhi made some overtures to the Mohammedans, and nine years ago many of them were for him. Now they are practically all against him, and there are about seventy million of them. Early in the struggle Mr. Gandhi all but championed the cause of the outcasts or "untouchables." Not only so, but he adopted a couple of these, taking them into his own home.

That the "untouchables" have lost confidence in Mr. Gandhi was very evident in the London conference, for they had a representative there to inform the conference that Mr. Gandhi did not represent them. According to the Mahatma's own estimate, there are sixty million of these outcasts.

Then, it would seem that multiplied thousands of Mr. Gandhi's own religious people (the Hindus) have lost faith in him. He stands for some things that practically every priest is against. In a way at least, Mr. Gandhi stands for education and enlightenment, and these priests almost to a man fight everything that looks toward enlightenment, for the only possible way they can control the people is to keep them in ignorance and superstition.

Far be it from this writer to criticize or defame the character of Mr. Gandhi. That he is a wonderful man, and is willing to suffer with his people, no one can doubt. That millions would be willing to die for him at this moment practically every one who is familiar with the situation will freely admit.

But to place Mr. Gandhi on a par with the Savior of the world is, as I see it, so far from the truth as to be all but sacrilegious. While most of his teaching that is worth while is from the Sermon on the Mount, yet he positively refuses to acknowledge Jesus as anything other than one of the great men. He is once for all a Hindu, and declares that he will die as such. That Jesus is the Redeemer of the world is simply ridiculous to Mahatma Gandhi.

To advocate Hinduism and condone its practices is far from the teaching of Jesus. While there is some good in all of the great religions, Hinduism is about as low as the lowest. It is against nearly everything that Christianity is for.

Practically everything that England has done to alleviate the suffering of the people, or raise their standard of living, has been fought by the priests of Hinduism. Hinduism spends more money, and does more, for absolutely worthless, decrepit old cows than it does for sick people.

The Support of the Filthy and the Ignorant

If all that I have seen with my own eyes in Hindu temples in two visits to India were written in plain English, the story could not be sent through the United States mails. Yet, with all his education and experience, Mr. Gandhi belongs to and upholds this religion in which people are kept in dire ignorance, and worship filthy images rather than the Creator, and not only teaches that the caste system is divine, but fights every effort to make its own people a real brotherhood.

Jesus Cleaned Out the Temple

The record says that Jesus was in the thickest of the fight against evil; that when he went into the Temple and found traffickers in holy things, as one sees about Hindu temples today, he upset the tables of the scoundrels and called them thieves. When he found religious men doing wrong, he called them vipers, whited sepulchres, hypocrites, and used the most cutting language that can be found in all the literature of the world.

He told people that, unless they would repent, they would perish. He selected and trained twelve men to take up his work and carry it forward, and the boldness and courage of eleven of these men are the wonder of the world to this day. He waked up a sleeping fold, and set in motion influences that would clean up India today if they were used in the right way.

Jesus found the world ruled by criminals, but he started the process of cleaning it up. He found more than half of the population of the world in slavery, but he began striking the chains that bound them, and his followers through the ages have gone a long way toward freedom and a world brotherhood, to say the least.

If Mr. Gandhi had his way at this moment, every railroad train in India would stop, and famine and pestilence would be sweeping thousands away like a flood in a few weeks; every factory would be shut down and millions would be out of employment, and men, women and children would be dying like flies; every irrigation plant would soon be worthless, and nearly thirty million acres of the best-producing land in India would soon be dry and parched as a desert.

Every modern hospital would be closed, and suffering would increase a hundredfold in a month. Every Englishman and American would get out of the country as soon as possible, and civil war would be all over India almost overnight. If the things for advocating which Mr. Gandhi is in prison at this moment should come to pass at once, it would bring upon the people of India the greatest calamity since the flood.

Can anyone imagine Jesus of Nazareth directing such a campaign? Did he sit around dreaming while men were dying? Did he follow such a method during his ministry of three years?

Gospel does draw young people, and worldly means are not necessary to get them into the Church.

The visible results of the meeting were thirteen confessions and six reconsecrations. Four of these were men who were heads of families, and this step now makes their homes completely Christian. There was an especially good response from the men and boys, a group sometimes hard to reach. Brother Studebaker preached Gospel facts, which would bring any thinking person to the Lord. The invisible results of the meeting cannot be estimated, but we do know that the spiritual life of the church had been quickened. On the closing Sunday afternoon, one meeting was held for the women and girls and another for the men and boys. These services were well attended and the people blessed. Four of the converts have already been baptized, and the remainder are awaiting baptism next Sunday. We pray that similar blessings may be experienced by the other churches in the brotherhood.

ROBERT D. CREES, Pastor.

Kittanning, Pennsylvania.

BRETHREN SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE, MT. PLEASANT, PA., SEPT. 15, 1932

Purpose

To Help Our Sunday Schools Make a Success With Rally Day and to Conserve the Results Through the Year

Promoting Rally Day

Key Verse for the Day. Heb. 10:24: "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works."

"The Purpose of Rally Day: the Why."—Rev. William H. Schaffer. "Why Have a Rally Day? Is it a confession that during the past year we have not kept high our standards? Have we failed? Or, is it a Rally, a special effort, to gather in new members? In the majority of cases it is both. In our church life we never think of a revival only for a day but we speak in terms of weeks. How about a Rally Month? Is Rally Day the time to make a 'big show'? Why not take advantage of this splendid opportunity to introduce strangers to Christ and to impress 'the annual Rally Day visitors' with what they have missed the past year? A Sunday school with a message such as we profess to teach and preach should have a Rally Day. The purpose is not to rally around a certain class, teacher, or Sunday school, but around our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Let's show the world where we stand as we rally around the Cross." The discussion suggested that we might use Rally Day as an opportunity for survey of the community.

"Getting Attendance on Rally Day; the How."—Rev. Floyd Sibert. "One of the main things we need to make Rally Day a Success in attendance is to get a Rallying spirit. Use advertisements in newspapers and window cards and personal contacts. Personal contacts, favorable or unfavorable, just to get folks talking will be one of your greatest attendance getters. Be careful however, that little or no proselyting is done. It may boost your attendance one day but that is all. Try to enlist folks who attend no Sunday school in the community. It may take several attempts to find out the best method to get attendance on Rally Day. Do not be discouraged if you do not

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Doubtless the many friends of the College are anxious to learn about the opening this year. The enrollment is satisfactory, although it is about twenty less than last year.

The summer sessions were the largest in our history and I had thought that perhaps the enrollment this year would reach or pass that of last winter but as it looks now, we will not have quite so many.

However, many of the Faculty members here have expressed themselves as satisfied for, as I hear, many colleges have suffered a very distinct loss in enrollment. It is too early yet to say definitely just what the attendance is at the other Ohio colleges but rumors have it that there is quite a decline.

I attribute this wholly to financial difficulties for in my judgment the depression is striking home this winter more than ever before. Savings are gone and still times have not improved; hence there is more poverty than ever before. This is bound to affect college attendance.

Another element in the situation is that in almost all large high schools, graduates of last June returned for further work because there was no tuition to pay. Whether tax payers are pleased with this situation, when all public schools claim to be overcrowded, is another question, but it has made inroads upon college attendance.

These young people, however, ought not to be deceived,—high school work is not college work, and while this may be a temporary way out, both they and the colleges will be embarrassed when they come to evaluate this fifth year in high school. My guess is, that colleges will have to accept a part of this as freshman work, but perhaps not all of it. Which is to say, can a person who is attending high school for the fifth year be graduated from college now in three years? And if so, is that just to those who stayed at college four years? The accrediting agencies will have to take note of that within the year and give a ruling.

Aside from this slight slump in the attendance, the work of the school is very encouraging. The teachers are all here and the work is organized for the year.

I ask those in the church who are at all interested in higher education, to continue their interest and prayers for the college.

We defeated Cedarville in football in a night game last Friday on our field, 23 to 0.

It was a pleasure to have Rev. Lester King visit the College one day last week.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

BRUSH VALLEY

Another victory has been won for the Lord. The Brush Valley Church, near Kittanning, Pennsylvania, has just experienced a wonderful revival under the evangelistic leadership of Rev. Claud Studebaker of Pittsburgh. The pastor and evangelist visited almost the entire membership in addition to the unsaved in the community. The church was packed almost every night, the most conspicuous thing being the large number of young people in attendance. The make your goal the first time. Do not set your goal too high, nor too low. Too high might lead to discouragement, too low to carelessness."

"Rallying with the Bible; the Means."—Rev. C. H. Ashman. "Are we going to seek on methods? If we get lost in the intricacy of the machinery and lose sight of the real purpose of Rally Day we lose all. The Bible should be the center around which all other things move. We ought to encourage folks to bring their Bibles. We have a message and a very precious one. If we continue to use literature which questions our doctrinal position we cannot hope to succeed as a Brethren Sunday school. Our own literature is safe and ought to be used more widely or we defeat our purpose."

Conserving Rally Day Results

"Some Objectives for the Children's Division."—Mrs. N. V. Leatherman. "Too much attention can never be given to the children although they are faithful as a rule under most any condition. One aim should be to have them learn by memory a new song, about one a month. Another aim, to be able to quote Scripture verses and choice selections of Scripture. A strictly Biblical work should be promoted but care should be taken by the teacher that the lesson is given in a way so that the child can grasp its real meaning."

"Some Objectives for the Young People's Division."—Rev. Geo. H. Jones. "One objective in this day should be to help our young people to be proud to be a Christian. We find a good many of our young folks in the high school living an apologetic life for professing Christianity. Lead them to the place where they will say 'No, I will not dance, use tobacco, play cards, or do other worldly things because I am a Christian and I'm proud of it.' The world offers no incentive for our young people to live Christ-like lives and if we do not impress it on their minds in our Sunday schools we are going to lose in the near future virile Christian manhood and womanhood."

"The General Superintendent's Program Through the Year." (Given by Rev. N. V. Leatherman from an outline prepared by A. B. Cober.) "The General Superintendent should have definite goals prepared for the next six months to a year. First, for the school in general; second, for the officers and teachers; third, for each class; fourth for each pupil. The type of goals to be—attendance, reading and study, especially the Bible. Social activities is another goal. Special programs throughout the year that give opportunity for expression. There should also be a definite program of administration such as having departmental superintendents take charge of opening exercises and arrange for suitable programs."

"The Relation Between the Church and the Sunday School." Prof. M. A. Stuckey. "The Sunday school and the church should work in harmony. There are several ways in which this may be done. A Sunday school hour preceding the regular preaching hour. A combined service of Sunday school and church where there is no dismissal from Sunday school but after the lesson study period an immediate merger with the church worship, starting for example with the church offering. The regular church worship and sermon with no dismissal but going immediately into the Lesson Study period and assembling afterwards for announcements and reports. That in the main covers prevailing methods now in vogue. All of them have their good points and all of them have their weaknesses. It is best to use the one which works. The Brethren church has a wonderful heritage in its teaching ministry through the Sunday school and it ought not to be neglected nor passed over lightly by a mere 25 to 30 minutes' study of the lesson. More time should be spent in the lesson study than is usually the case. A merged service gives this opportunity by condensing the duplicated worship found in so many of our churches and Sunday schools. Sunday school is a place to study the Bible and should be so used."

NOTES ON SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE

N. V. Leatherman in charge.

Wm. Clough read Romans 8:1-14 for Scripture lesson.

W. H. Schaffer led in prayer.

Men's Chorus sang "God's Grace."

Offering received.

Youth's Need of the Cross

(Continued from page 7)

holy life, whether found among the highest stations of men or among the lowest. God planted the Cross down before Saul of Tarsus and it broke his heart and changed his whole life. He no longer gloried in his wealth or position or learning (and he had them all) but in the Cross of Christ and he went forth and laid down his life on the guillotine after setting all Rome ablaze with the name of Jesus.

We read in John 12:32, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The failure of arguments, of Theological training, of education in the best institutions to win or convince is certain and will be quite evident; if we have no Cross in our plea.

For until we see the lost world through the eyes of the Lamb slain upon the Cross, we have not received our fullest vision and passion of the Cross. In the Cross we have a message that will sway the heart and convince the mind. If we as mere beginners in the Crusade for souls are to be victorious we must center our activities around the Cross. All the enlightenment of the present age fails to solve the problem apart from the Cross. Without it we are no more than purveyors of dull and dry platitudes.

There is nothing to offer the world but the Cross. If we have a soul to save we should bring it to the Cross. If we have a family to raise, we should rear them around the Cross. In building a church it should be built around the Cross. In building a college or seminary we should erect it around the Cross. Again let us stress the fact that in seeking to save lost men we must bring them to the Cross. It is God's only hope for the world. It is the only message of the preacher, the teacher, or the soul-winner. God help the Christian youth and Christian worker that gets away from the Cross. His message then becomes but sounding brass, his ministry is vain, and his power is broken.

Because of the outstanding needs presented to us in times past purposes have been born and we have declared ourselves in ringing resolutions and we meant it. So there cannot and must not be retrenchment from belief in our need for the Cross. We need rather forward-going in evangelism, forward-going in definite, persistent, warm-hearted Christian service. The words of the song are the words of our heart.

When I survey the wondrous Cross

On which the Prince of Glory died,

My richest gain I count but loss,

And pour contempt on all my pride.

Forbid it Lord, that I should boast

Save in the death of Christ my God,

All the vain things that charm me most

I sacrifice them to his blood.

Were the whole realm of nature mine,

That were a present far too small,

Love so amazing, so divine,

Demands my soul, my life, my all.

And finally, Fellow Endeavorers, if we would know the fulness of Jesus Christ, his grace and his glory in our lives, if we would have the final and full consciousness of the indwelling of God's Spirit, if we would know the complete fellowship of the Father, we must go forward a little and empty ourselves of ourselves that we might be filled with all the blessings of the Cross. And if we want the keynote with which to pitch the song of our lives, if we want the well-orbed, well-rounded life like Paul, we must strike up the full octave of the Christian virtues and bring all the notes in tune with the Cross.

Washington, D. C.

Solo by Miss Virgie Miller, "Jesus is my Precious Friend."

Sermon of the evening by Willis Ronk:

"Final Instructions"

"The scientific discoveries of the past few years are now so commonplace that we are not conscious of them, although every phase of life has been transformed by them. Home life has changed. The church has been compelled to test the old in the light of the new. Every doctrine has been called into question because of the age in which we are living. The Church has been compelled to feel her own pulse—engage in introspection. Here lies a danger,—she is conscious of every criticism and allows the world to worry her. I challenge any man to search out the Scripture and prove that they are not on a firm foundation. Christianity has a rational basis. It challenges the most intellectual man in the world. Perhaps it is well that we introspect ourselves—look within. We need a more efficient church but we need inspiration from on high with all our efficiency and methods. What we need is a final word, "Ye shall receive power"—that is our fundamental need. In conclusion—our profession, teaching, preaching all is fraud and cheat, unless there is the Holy Spirit sent by God in this earth to fill our hearts so that we will NOT compromise. If that is true and we know it is true by our experience, let's show it."

The Institute was dismissed by N. V. Leatherman with prayer and benediction. Items of interest:

80 delegates.

27 from Mt. Pleasant.

53 from twelve other churches.

3 from other local denominations.

Wm. Gray, the pastor of the Mt. Pleasant church, produced an interesting program reading as follows: "Annual Convention of the Brethren Churches and Sunday Schools of Pennsylvania to be held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, October 4, 5, 6, 1904 in the First Brethren Church, Mt. Pleasant, Pennsylvania." On the inside we notice this subject, "Planning and Working for Definite Results in the Sunday School." Geo. H. Jones. Within a few weeks of 28 years ago Rev. Geo. Jones made his first address before the Pennsylvania Sunday School Convention on nearly the same subject as in this recent institute. A. B. Cober was also on that program and his message was also read at this one. Most of the other names on that program are found no longer with us. It might be interesting to name those who are still active in the work: J. L. Bowman, A. D. Gnagey, L. S. Bauman, I. D. Bowman, Dyoil Belote.

WM. H. SCHAFFER.

MARTINSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

National Conference is passed and we are home again, looking forward to another year of service for the Lord, if he should tarry.

Natural ties are strong, but the ties that bind pastor and people are not easily broken, and, although out of the way to Winona Lake, we visited our former home at Lake Odessa, Michigan. Akron, Ohio being midway and Brother and Sister Grant McDonald being "given to hospitality" (1 Tim. 3:2), we were glad to stay over night with them. Brother McDonald is making good use of his talent in drawing charts to illustrate Bible truths.

While in Michigan, we made our home with Brother and Sister Victor Clum. We had planned to leave on Friday morning but after the whirl of ice cream freezers had ceased the night before, we were invited to remain a few nights and preach in the old pulpit. We accepted the invitation and remained with them two evenings. Never have we found a more loyal response than with the good people at Lake Odessa.

From Michigan we went "home" to Flora, Indiana. Brother Ankrum, who has a smile that will not rub off, invited us to speak to the old home congregation. Then we went to National Conference and back "home" to the good people in Pennsylvania.

En route to Pennsylvania we passed through our old pastorate at Roanoke, Indiana and partook of the hospitality of Oak Park Hotel. How we thank God for the Christian friends and how we are made to rejoice as we meet the Brethren at National Conference. We find good people everywhere we go, but none better than right here in Pennsylvania.

We are always glad for the visiting Brethren, and since the last report we have had the privilege of hearing some preach in our pulpit. This congregation is "home" to Brothers Joseph and Raymond Gingrich, both of whom paid us a visit and preached for us on Sunday evenings. Using Brother Joe's own words, we were glad to "give in" to him, for he felt that if he was to hear a good sermon, he would have to preach it himself.

July 10 was Homecoming day and Brother Wm. Schaffer, pastor of the Brethren church of Conemaugh, spoke to us in the afternoon. Brother and Sister L. S. Bauman and son Paul favored us with their presence Sunday morning following National Conference.

Our Spring communion was well attended. Despite depression this past year, this church gave the largest Foreign and also Home Mission offering in their history.

One feature of our services is the reading of letters from our Foreign Missionaries, someone being appointed to write to each missionary. Also Mrs. Humbert reads a chapter from "A Little Girl's Four Years in Africa," which is a collection of letters written by Sister Gribble some twelve to fourteen years ago.

Since a blessing is promised to that person who will read and keep the book of Revelation (Rev. 1:3), we have purchased little individual booklets and read a chapter responsively at church service. Tithing literature is also distributed through the mail.

Sister Sannie Klepser and her Sunday school class have beautified the church property by setting out shrubbery.

Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

R. I. HUMBERD.

PRAYER FOR THE NEW COLLEGE YEAR

Our Heavenly Father, God of wisdom and truth, be with this college through the days of the new year.

Bless the old students coming back to familiar halls of learning, to friendships established and teachers known.

Be with the students who come among us for the first time. Keep them steady and clear-eyed in the midst of the newness of college life and all the adjustments they must immediately make.

Bless the homes from which these young people have come with confidence and deep affection.

Guide the members of the faculty in their classrooms and out. Enrich and strengthen them with thy understanding and zeal.

Bless all those others who labor for the college good—all members of the college family, young and old, trustees, alumni, friends.

Especially be with the members of the class of 1932, who face new tasks in strange places.

In the days of the new year may this college be worthy of the Christ she loves and serves. Amen.—Katharine McAfee Parker, Hanover College, In The Presbyterian Advance.

It is not opportunity, but the use of opportunity that makes success.

"The way we treat man is the surest test of the state of our hearts toward God."

Promise without performance is like a fair orange that is dry inside.

OUR LITTLE READERS

BOYS AND SHEEP

JOE came home with his clothes and even his hair all wringing wet. "I just knew the ice wasn't strong 'nough," he said.

"Then why did you slide?" asked his auntie. (We forget the story's source).

"'Cause all the other boys did," answered Joe. "So I had to, or they'd laugh. And nobody wants the other boys to laugh at him, you know."

His aunt gave him dry clothes, set him down by the fire and made him drink hot lemonade. Then she told him a story:

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

THE TRUSTEES of the Brethren Home have asked for space to set forth briefly the serious situation that has arisen.

This is not an alarmist cry. But it is a call to the dire need for help and an appeal that that need may be met.

THE HOME must be supported. Only two sources of support are open to it. The produce secured from the farm, and the gifts of the churches.

For the year ending July 31, 1932 the entire offering of the whole brotherhood was only $651.85 and $70.40 from individuals. As a result of these greatly decreased offerings we now face a crisis. We need money for the maintenance of the Home and to pay taxes and other obligations that remain unpaid.

We earnestly and sincerely appeal to all who read this notice to come to our help. Will not every reader see that an offering is made, either personally or through his church, soon?

Send money for the support of the Home to the Matron, Mrs. Cyrus Myers, or to the Treasurer, Henry Rinehart, Flora, Indiana.

ACT AT ONCE

Signed
THE TRUSTEES.

"When I was a little girl, Joe, my father had a large flock of sheep. They were queer things. Where one went, all the rest would follow. One day a big ram found a hole in the fence, and he thought it would be fun to see what was on the other side. So in he jumped, without looking where he was going, and tumbled to the bottom of an old, dry well where father used to throw stones and rubbish.

"The next sheep never stopped to think what had become of him, but jumped right after, and the next and the next, though father tried to drive them back, and Watch, the old sheep dog, barked his very loudest. But they kept on jumping and jumping till the well was full. Then father had to pull them out as fast as he could, and the sheep at the bottom of the well were almost smothered to death."

"My, what silly things!" exclaimed Joe. Then he looked up at his aunt and laughed and became quite red in the face.—The Christian World.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FAIR HAVEN CHURCH, WEST SALEM, OHIO

The semi-annual Fall communion service will be observed at this church Sunday evening, October 2. We wish to invite all neighboring Brethren who can do so to unite with us in this service. May the Lord greatly bless this service and strengthen his Body which is the Church.

R. E. GINGRICH, Pastor.

AN INVITATION

Especially to Indiana Brethren

All Indiana Brethren who will attend the Conference at Flora next week are cordially invited to visit the BRETHREN HOME.

We ask that in this hour of great need at the Home you bring some gift or offering for its maintenance. MONEY is needed most of all. Staple Groceries, doubtless such as sugar, coffee, flour, etc. and food supplies can be used.

Leave your gift with Sister Myers. Brother and Sister Myers, the Superintendent and Matron, will welcome you.

J. ALLEN MILLER,

President of the Board of Trustees.

SPECIAL OFFER OF TITHING LITERATURE

The Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, will furnish to churches a set of bulletins for a tithing campaign, including one especially written for present conditions entitled "Tithing in Hard Times." These bulletins have two pages blank for the use of the local church. Price list and samples sent on request includes a pamphlet, "Teaching the Church to Tithe," containing full directions for a ten weeks' program of silent, church-wide education at trifling expense.

Please mention the Brethren Evangelist, also give your denomination.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

BAER-KAUFFMAN—Owen Earl Baer and Alta Marie Kauffman were united in marriage at eleven o'clock on August 28th, 1932, at the home of the bride's parents, nine miles east of Goshen, Indiana, the writer officiating. The immediate families of the bride and groom witnessed the ceremony, which was followed by a sumptuous wedding dinner. Mrs. Baer is a member of the Mennonite church while Mr. Baer is a member of the First Brethren church of Goshen, Indiana. The groom is an able teacher for a happy Christian journey through life together.

GEORGE S. BAER.

STEINER-KING—On Tuesday, August 30, 1932, at Smithville, Ohio, Miss Ruth King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben King of Sterling, Ohio, was united in marriage to Myron H. Steiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Steiner of Pandora, Ohio. The bride is a highly respected and accomplished young lady and a faithful member of the Smithville-Brethren church. The groom is an able teacher in the Pandora schools. They left at once for Washington, D. C. and after a brief honeymoon trip they will reside at Pandora. A host of friends extend congratulations and best wishes. The ring ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, the undersigned.

G. C. CARPENTER.

NELSON-MYER—At the home of the bride in Burlington, Indiana, Sunday, August 28, at 4 P. M. occurred the marriage of William Nelson and Sarah Elizabeth Meyer. The religious ceremony was used. Only members of both families were present for the service. They are two well known and popular young people who are worthy of the best wishes of their friends. Ceremony by the undersigned.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

IN THE SHADOW

BECKNER—Frank Beckner, son of Martin and Viola Beckner, was born near Flora, Indiana, November 25, 1875, and died on the morning of his birth, August 29, 1932, aged 56 years, 9 months and 25 days. July 27, 1895 he was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Elkoberg to which union were born eleven children, ten surviving. A number of the children are members of the First Brethren church of Flora. Besides his wife he is survived by one brother and six children. Funeral at the home in charge of the writer. Burial in the Maple Lawn Cemetery.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

SMITH—Mary Barnhart Smith, daughter of John and Susannah Barnhart, was born in Preble County, Ohio, June 15, 1854, and departed this life, August 16, 1932, aged 78 years, two months and one day. The cause of her death was an auto accident, January 7, 1883 in the town of Eaton, Ohio, she was united in marriage to Solomon Smith. She is survived by one son and granddaughter. She was a member of the First Brethren Sunday school and was a regular attendant. Services in the Methodist Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. O. Michael, pastor of the Methodist church.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

NOAKES—Henry Redman Noakes, son of Thomas and Mary Ann Noakes, was born in Clark County, Illinois, March 17, 1858, and died at the home of his parents, August 15, 1932, aged 74 years, four months and five days. August 10, 1881 he was united in marriage to Emma E. Wikel of Flora, Indiana, who preceded him in death November 7, 1932. He is survived by three children—Vivian, Cora and William. He was a member of the First Brethren church of Newton, Iowa. He is survived by a number of grandchildren and an aged brother and sister in Flora. He had been a member of the First Brethren church for over 20 years. A few days before his death he was married. Services at the Leifer funeral home and burial in Maple Lawn Cemetery. Services by the writer.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

CAMDEN—Mrs. Susie Camden was called home to be with the Lord August 1, 1932. She had reached the east of this year, most of which time she had spent in quietly serving her Lord whom she loved. By my ministry as her pastor and also by the testimony of those who had known her all of her life I came to know the virtue of her sweet Christian life. Her life was full of dark trials, darker than the ordinary, I think, yet her faith and her devotion to the Savior was such that she bore them with cheerful submission and great fortitude. She had literally learned to "rejoice in tribulation." Faithfulness, fidelity and devotion to God, to children so characterized her life that we feel that she was one of those whom Paul said would "fight the good fight, finish the course, keep the faith, receive the crown." She was a member of the First Brethren church of Buena Vista, Indiana. We are sad to see her departure from us but glad for the memory of such a life.

REV. P. M. NAFF, Pastor.

MILLER—Elder John A. Miller died at his home at Summit Mills, Pa., July 18th, 1932, at the age of 81 years, 3 months and 9 days. Death came after several months' illness from a complication of diseases. He was the son of the late John P. and Anna Deacy Miller, and was born at Cove, Garrett County, Md. He was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this section. Mr. Miller was a retired farmer and preacher.

He received his education in the public schools and normal schools. Thirteen years of his life he spent in the teaching profession, holding positions in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Iowa. Early in life he joined the Church of the Brethren. In 1865 he was drafted for military service, but being a firm believer in the doctrine of peace, as taught by Christ, he paid $1400 (all his earnings to that time) to secure exemption from military duty. In 1870 he was elected to the ministry. Although the clergy of his church at that time served without pay, he gave himself to study and diligent service, riding horseback as much as 24 miles a Sunday to fill two pulpits. He farmed to support his family. After the time of the church he was elected to the lot with the "Progressives," the newly organized Brethren Church. He was instrumental in the organization of the Summit Mills Brethren Church, and became its first elder. In 1887 he retired from his agricultural pursuits, and devoted most of his time to the church and Sunday school, of which he was superintendent for 35 years. He spared neither time nor money to make the work succeed. He was 78 years old before he resigned from this work, insisting that a younger man should take his place. Elder Miller was a loyal supporter of all church projects.

WILLIS E. RONK.

FOX—Elizabeth Ann Nettie Fox had been a faithful and loyal member of the Miamisburg Brethren congregation for twenty-eight years. After a long and testing illness she went to her reward on the evening of August 29. She faced death with an enviable courage, and amid the discouragement and suffering of her long illness never complained. At different times she served as a teacher in the Sunday school and also as secretary, and in this service as well as her death, thoroughness and faithfulness characterized her work. Her death brings a real loss to the church. Two devoted sisters survive Sister Fox. A concourse of people too large to be accommodated in the church, and many beautiful floral tributes, gave evidence of the esteem in which Sister Nettie Fox was held. The undersigned, who was her pastor, was in charge of the service. Our sympathy and prayers go out to the surviving sisters.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

DURKLE—The Gratis church sustained a keen loss in the death of Brother Frank Durkle, who passed away after a long illness, August 19th, at a little more than 60 years of age. The youngest in a family of five, one brother survives him, also the sister, Mrs. C. Durkle, who was uniting in her ministrations to Brother Frank amid his long suffering. It is a somewhat unusual coincidence that six years to the day after Brother Stan baptized Brother Durkle and confirmed him in the church, he also preached his funeral sermon. A large audience was present. Brother Durkle was a highly deserving, loyal, and faithful member of the church. He will be greatly missed in the ways that count for the most in church membership. We like to think that he has gone to a splendid reward. Our sympathy goes out to the brother and the sister-in-law.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

HEETER—Mrs. Lillie L. Heeter, daughter of William and Margaret Kuhnle, was born near North Manchester, Indiana, December 3rd, 1861, died August 20th, 1932, at her home near the same city, aged 70 years, 8 months and 23 days. She was the youngest of four children and the mother of three daughters, Pearl, Hazel and Mary.

On March 4th, 1882 she was married to Stephen Heeter, a schoolmate, with whom she lived in happy wedlock for almost fifty years. She leaves 16 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren, with hosts of other relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

In her younger days, she united with the Methodist Church, but in 1884, at the persuasion of her neighbors, she was united with her husband with the First Brethren church of North Manchester, in which she lived a faithful, consistent, cheerful Christian life, full of good deeds and kindly service.

Humble and unassuming in her personality, she has nevertheless left an impression on her family and neighbors, a church which will not soon be forgotten. Her life radiated cheerfulness and many will rise up to call her blessed.

Patiently she bore her long affliction and as patiently her husband cared for her. An "exceeding and eternal weight of glory must await the resurrection morning for them. Funeral by her pastor, Dr. J. F. Schurz, assisted by the writer and Albert T. Ronk, before a large concourse of neighbors and friends.

CHARLES A. BAXIE.

JAMES—Martha Ann James was born February 26, 1863 in Pembroke, Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, and departed to be with her Lord, September 9, 1932, at her home in Mount Rainier, Maryland. She was a devoted Christian and a faithful home maker. She was a member of the First Brethren church of Washington, D. C., where her exemplary Christian life was a benediction to all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her passing, a husband, George W., two sons, Reginald J. and George H., one brother Charles Foote, and a host of relatives and friends. Funeral and service conducted by the writer at her home and interment took place Sunday afternoon at beautiful Cedar Hill Cemetery, Washington, D. C.

HOOPER A. KENT.

KAUFMAN—Brother Tobias V. Kaufman, of Johnstown, Pa., aged seventy-eight years, born in Somerset Co., and moved to Johnstown some fifty-five years ago. A large family was born to Brother Kaufman, of which four survive, with a number of grandchildren. Brother Kaufman and his grandchildren also remain. His health had been good up until a short time before his death.

He was a member of the First church and as Brother Ashman was absent in Ashland at the time of his death, the writer presided at the funeral. We have known Brother Kaufman for many years. Brother Kaufman assisted at the services, by taking entire charge for the interment. The writer having another funeral within the hour. Interment was made in the Maple Springs Memorial Park, near Johnstown, Pa.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended to the bereaved family in their loss.

GEORGE H. JONES.

WISE—Mrs. George Wise, an aged resident of Morrillville, eighty-six years of age, and so invalid for some time, passed to her Heavenly Home, at her residence, Fairfield Avenue, West End, Johnstown, Pa., August 17th, 1932. She had been a resident of that district almost fifty years and left many friends to mourn her departure. She is survived by her husband. Funeral services by the writer with interment in Grandview.

GEORGE H. JONES.

KURTZ—Mrs. George Kurtz died at her home in Martinsburg, Pa., on September 14, 1932. For some time, Sister Kurtz had not been able to attend church because of a very serious nervous ailment.

It is written that by their fruits we are to know them. As her pastor, I have often been made to rejoice at the great faithfulness of her dear daughter. May the Lord's richest blessings abide upon these daughters and their father.

Funeral services were held at the home and were conducted by her pastor.

R. I. HUMBERD.

VOL. LIV
Number 39

October 8
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

I Will Not Doubt

I will not doubt, though all my ships at sea,
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails;
I shall believe the Hand that never fails
From seeming evil worketh good for me:
And though I grieve because those sails are battered,
Yet shall I cry while life's best hopes are shattered,
I trust in thee.

I will not doubt, though all my prayers return,
Unanswered from the still white realm above;
I shall believe an all-wise love
Refuses those things for which I yearn;
And though at times I cannot keep from grieving,
Yet the pure ardor of my fixed believing
Undimmed shall burn.

I will not doubt, though troubles fall like rain,
And sorrows swarm like bees about the hive;
I shall believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish, and by pain,
And though I groan and tremble 'neath my crosses
Yet shall I see through all my bitter losses,
The greater gain.

I will not doubt, well anchored in the Faith,
Like some staunch ship my soul braves every gale
So strong its courage that it will not fail
To breast the mighty unknown sea of death;
Oh, may I cry when body parts with Spirit,
I do not doubt! So listening worlds can hear it
With my last breath.

—Author Unknown.

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

RELIGION that is Dead

"A Christianity that is merely a system of morals, and the best only of natural religions, is not worth preserving. A Christianity without a Christ Divine, an atonement vicarious, and a Bible inspired, will never carry power. A devitalized Gospel, a diluted Gospel, an attenuated Gospel, will conceive no splendid program, inspire no splendid effort. It never inspired a reformer, and it never will. The two religious perversities of the day, a lost sense of sin, and a lost sense of God, are simply the result of this attenuated Socinianism that is becoming so prevalent. No minister of Christ has any right to smooth off the corners of the cross."

"At the same time, a Christianity that is merely orthodox, or an orthodoxy clasped in the dead hand of a moribund Christianity, is one of the greatest of curses. A Church that is only the custodian of the great tradition of the past, and not the expression of a forceful spiritual life; a Christian who is simply conserving a traditional creed, and not exemplifying the life of the living God, is a cumberer of the ground. A dead Church can never be the exponent of the living God, and a dead Church-man can never be the exponent of a living Church, for the test of every religious, political or educational system, after all, as Amiel says, is the man it forms." (Dyson Hague in The Fundamentals.)

NO Theology, No Church

"A true Church is inseparable from a belief in certain doctrines for which men are ready to die—is, indeed, impossible without such belief; and the decay in the Church idea (as distinct from that of a mere association, sympathetic or religious), is due chiefly to the decay of doctrinal interest and conviction. No theology, no Church." (P. T. Forsyth in Theology in Church and State.)

THE Church and Politics

"No amount of political action taken by itself, however suffused by sympathy or righteousness, will bring to pass the Kingdom of God, or realize more than an unstable satrapy of it. When the Church, with its unearthly message and power, becomes a mere creature of the State, or when it becomes a spiritual luxury, salon, or hospital, outside the interests of the strong men or those honored as efficient—then religion and ethic alike are paganized. They cease to be either spiritual or moral. And they head for a moral debacle which is the collapse of Humanity. Culture becomes, as it was in the Italian Republics, the engine of wickedness and the varnish of Cruelty. Machiavelli is its prophet."

PROPHECY—The Antidote to Unbelief

"True prophetic study is an inquiry into these unsearchable counsels, these deep riches of Divine wisdom and knowledge. Beneath the light it gives, the Scriptures are no longer a heterogeneous compilation of religious books, but one harmonious whole, from which no part could be omitted without destroying the completeness of the revelation. And yet the study is disparaged in the Churches as being of no practical importance. If the Churches are leavened with scepticism at this moment, their neglect of prophetic study in this its true and broader aspect has done more than all the rationalism of Germany to promote the evil. Sceptics may boast of learned Professors and Doctors of Divinity among their ranks, but we may challenge them to name a single one of the number who has given proof that he knows anything whatever of these deeper mysteries of revelation." (Sir Robert Anderson in The Coming Prince.)

THE Book of Books

"Complete in itself—'accursed any man that shall add unto or take away'—unchanged and unchangeable, this Bible stands for centuries, unconcerned about the praise and the reproach of men; it does not accommodate itself to progress, does not recant a single word, remains grandly simple and divinely overpowering, and in its sight all men are equal and feel their impotency."

"With sublime freedom it strides through the history of mankind, dismisses entire nations with a glance, with a word, in order to tarry a long time with the deeds of a shepherd; complacently it seven times repeats a list of gifts; records seemingly unimportant genealogies; suddenly powers of the world to come flash from some word apparently casually dropped; or thunders roll in the background of the cool narration of some great crime."

"Now it speaks of God playing with his creatures and delighting in the daring chamois, the snorting horse, and the beautiful lily; now it rises like an eagle to heights that make people, passing hither and thither, appear like swarms of grasshoppers, yea, all nations like a drop in a bucket. This word tells of a coat of many colors that a father made for his favorite son; and is silent concerning the life and efforts of Isaiah or John, and the martyrdom of Paul."

"It raises deepest questions, as if they were but trifles: 'Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?' It condenses into a single word a sweeping view of the world: 'The things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.' It reveals vast counsels of the Lord, that he will make a new heaven and a new earth, where old things shall no longer rise in the hearts of men."

"What book is there written by man that does not grow trite from repeated readings? But of this Book thousands of the best and most talented among men have testified, not only that they never tired of reading and studying it, but also that it constantly grew grander, richer, more unfathomable. How often some unseeing word, that you have read a hundred times, suddenly opens up, revealing its deep, hidden meaning! If every sentence, yea, every word in the Bible that has been important or beneficial to this soul or that were underscored, would a single one be found, that had been written uselessly and without purpose, or that had borne no fruit? I think not." (F. Bettex in The Bible the Word of God.)

THE Fool hath Said—

Somewhere I have read the story of a king who gave to his fool one day a walking stick and said, "If you ever find a greater fool than yourself, give it to him." Year passed on while the jester kept the stick. One day the king was dying and he called the fool into his room, and said,

"I am going on a long journey; 'Good bye!'"

"And where are you going," said the fool "and when will you return?"

"I am going, said the king, 'into a far country, and alas! I shall never come back!'"

"And pray," said the fool, "what provisions have you made for a journey like that?"

"None whatever," said the king, "none whatever."

"Then," said the fool "you had better take this stick, for with all my folly I am not so great a fool as you." (W. E. Biederwolf in Winona Echoes, 1931).

THE Answer of the Believer

"When John Quincy Adams was more than eighty years old he met one day in the streets of Boston an old friend, who shook his trembling hand and said, 'Good morning! How is John Quincy Adams to day?'"

"Thank you," was the ex-president's reply, 'John Quincy Adams is well, sir; quit well, I thank you. The house in which I live is becoming quite dilapidated. It's tottering upon its foundation. Time has nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. Its walls are much shattered, and it trembles with every wind. The old tenement is becoming almost unfit to live in but John Quincy Adams, himself, thank you is quite well, sir; thank you, quite well. And the tottering old sixth president of the United States moved on with the help of his cane. It came not long after that he had his second and fatal stroke of paralysis in the Capitol at Washington, and he said 'This is the last of earth, but I am content, because he knew it was the beginning of the great adventure in the long ages of Eternity.'"—W. E. Biederwolf in Winona Echoes 1931).

IN THIS NUMBER

Putting Men to Work—Editor, . . . .
"The Sin of Superstition"—Editor, . .
Editorial Review, . . . . .
A Soul Finds God—R. F. Porte, . . .
The Testimony of the Centuries—
Miles Taber, . . . . .
"Being Dead Yet Speaketh"—H. H.
Smith, . . . . .
Significant News and Views. . . . .
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, . . . . .
Berlin Brethren Sunday School—A.
B. Cober, . . . . .	1
The Gospel Song Movement—J. B.
Trowbridge, . . . . .	1
Studying the Sunday School Lesson
—T. C. Lyon, . . . . .	1
The Adolescent Age—Joyce K. Saylor, . . . . .	1
News from the Field, . . . . .	12-1
The Brethren's Home Emergency
Corner—M. M. Shively, . . . . .	1
Our Readers' Views—H. M. Lichty,
Our Little Readers, . . . . .	1
Announcements, . . . . .	1

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Putting Men to Work

It's church work we have in mind, and there is no scarcity in that kind of work. There is always more work than workers. And especially among men is there a dearth of workers. The progress of the kingdom goes halting because of the comparatively few men who are enlisted in the service of the Lord. All too many men regard the church as a side issue and religious activity as a mere diversion in which one may engage or not, as he feels, and with little consequence. That attitude needs to be changed and men brought to take the church more seriously. There is scarcely a bigger or more important problem facing the church of Christ today than to discover how to bring more men under its saving influence and put them to work, to enlist them in larger numbers to make a really active part in the services of the house of God and to shoulder the responsibilities for the advancement of the kingdom.

Nearly all the denominations have at one time or another launched a movement designed to encourage men to become more active in the work of the church. One such movement by the church of the Brethren is being aggressively promoted and is worthy of our attention, though we mentioned it on a previous occasion. They have organized what is called the "National Council for Men's Work", with a general secretary, whose duty it is to promote the organization of Men's Work groups in the various districts and sections and in the congregations, and to encourage actual work on the part of the men. The secretary expresses gratification over the progress realized during the past year, saying, "Men's Work is growing," and "Our men are serving, and much of this service is being done in the name of the church."

A national project has been set before the men for the year, which is "promoting church attendance," according to a quarterly letter sent out by their National Council. It goes on to say: "The church has a message for men and boys, but in order to get this message to them we must get them into the church. Beginning with October first and continuing until Easter, it is our aim to have an average attendance of 40,000 men at every Sunday morning service." That is a worthy aim, and is based upon this declaration: "If ever there was a time in our memory when men needed the church it is today. Men must have some abiding values to which to cling, and the church with its message affords those values."

Then the secretary makes this appeal: "Two things we must do about this project, advertise it and work it. Every man can help in both of these." How to advertise, they are instructed, and supplied with the material, and then there is this admonition: "Announce your intentions to promote church attendance, talk church attendance among yourselves, and let it be known that you for one are determined to place your church first." The second suggestion is on how to work it, and it is to "organize your men for the purpose of HOME VISITATION. Set aside one evening each week when men go two by two into homes in the name of the church and invite others to become interested in the church." Such a project, aimed from increasing church attendance, ought to result in the development, on the part of those who engage in the work, of a new sense of denominational loyalty that will bear much and valuable fruitage in years to come.

May God cause our own laymen to continue on in the noble aims they have set before themselves and with still greater zeal. In a number of our congregations, the laymen are being put to work, and are showing themselves willing to work, in a manner that is most encouraging. But there are large numbers who need to be stirred with a new interest and challenged into activity for Christ and the church.

"The Sin of Superstition"

When we think of the sin of superstition, it is usually in connection with the ignorant natives of Africa, or some other desperately needy mission land, but a little introspection may reveal the fact that not all superstition is confined to "the poor heathen." In fact, it is quite prevalent among the folks with whom we mingle every day, and even in our own hearts may be found remnants of family superstitions handed down to us. Some of these pet notions we may cling to with somewhat of pride, as a part of our heritage of sentiment, though reason tells us they are without foundation, and conscience warns us they are dishonoring to God. But the Christian who believes in the daily, watchful care of a God who is all-powerful, all-wise and all-loving, has no business harboring such superstition. The editor of The Evangelical-Messenger calls it positively sinful. It is "the sin of superstition",—nothing less positive or stringent. But we want you to read what he says, that you may possibly have your conscience stirred on this point, as was ours.

Are you a professing Christian and bound by superstition?

Do you fear certain signs and omens, and rejoice in others?

Do you carry charms about with you, being careful not to lose them because they mean good luck?

Does it make you nervous if a black cat crosses your path, or an umbrella is raised over your head, while in a building?

Do you refrain from starting on a journey or beginning a task on Friday because that is an unlucky day?

If you are sitting at a table where you are one of thirteen, do you get up?

Do you fear to let your baby look into a mirror before it is a year old because it will die if it does?

Are you careful not to look at the moon over your left shoulder?

When you have told of some good fortune that has been yours do you "hit the wood"?

Have you got a horseshoe hanging over your door for good luck?

Listen! If you do any of these things, or any one of the many similar things some folks are guilty of, you ought to be ashamed of yourself!

More than that, you should get down and ask God to forgive you for this foolishness and lack of trust in him.

The object of this editorial is to show some folks how the devil has been robbing them of their feeling of security in Jesus Christ.

Your success and protection and well being do not rest upon any charm of any kind you may keep in your possession. Harm does not come to you as the result of some trivial incident that occurs in the ordinary routine of life. To believe in omens is the height of foolishness.

Superstition is of the devil, and one of his means of defeating Christian people in their lives, of robbing them of their joy, of filling their hearts with anxiety and worry, is by getting them to believe in such things as we have previously mentioned.

You should get out from under the spell of these things.

Realize that their source is the evil one.

Know that your security and prosperity depend upon your abiding in Jesus Christ.

Appropriate the consolation of that glorious assurance of the Psalmist where he says: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, he is my refuge and fortress, my God, in him will I trust."

In fact, if you are at all troubled read the whole of the ninety-first Psalm where there is such a beautiful and sublime expression of trust and confidence in Almighty God.

God's power and strength are absolutely and eternally independent of any charm or sign or fetish. Refuse to play longer into the hands of the devil. Put your hand into the nail-pierced hand of Jesus and trust to his leadership and care. Nothing can happen to you but what he wills, and what he wills for us, we do not fear.

Are those words too strong for your faith? At any rate, you ought to believe that nothing can harm you as long as you trust and obey him. He will never abdicate his power nor be defeated.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Brother S. C. Henderson informs us in a personal communication that his "church work at Roanoke and Huntington (Indiana) is progressing nicely in spite of handicaps and a bank failure. Baptized one last Sunday (September 25)."

If your church happens to be small and composed of inconspicuous folk, don't be ashamed of it. The first church in Jerusalem started with only twelve members and they were humble and unlearned men.

On the Sunday School page, in addition to the conclusion of the article begun last week on "The Gospel Song Movement", we have an excellent list of Scripture passages for memory work to cover an entire year, for three age groups of Sunday school scholars. The Scriptures were selected by Prof. A. B. Cober, educator and Sunday school leader of Berlin, Pennsylvania.

Christian Endeavor leaders, and pastors, should read the plea on behalf of the adolescent boys and girls by Intermediate Superintendent, Mrs. Joyce Kanauer Saylor. October is "Organization Month," and she is urging the organization of Intermediate societies, and there are some churches in which there is need of such an organization. If you are not looking after your early teen aged youth, you are neglecting a most vital group in the constituency of your church.

We are in receipt of a catchy, Rotospeed-made Rally Day invitation sent out by Brother Leo Polman, pastor of the church at South Gate, California. It is put up somewhat after the fashion of a radiogram and carries this admonition, "Having received the message, flash it on to others." That is the burden of the Gospel message—it is good news, not to be kept and hoarded, but to be passed on, and it remains "good news" to us only as we are willing to share it with those who have it not.

The church at Osceola, Indiana, now has a pastor in the person of Brother Frank Gehman, and the people are rejoicing in the fact, as one of the members writes this week. Our every contact with these people has indicated them to be an optimistic, faith-venturing group, and under the leadership of a man of consecration and faith we dare say they will go forward to victory for God. When a man believes he is in the place where God wants him to be, as Brother Gehman does, he is in a position to do great work for the Lord.

Dr. Martin Shively, a member of the Brethren's Home Board, has a short message this week in the department we have set apart for a time for the promotion of the Board's work. He pleads for the support of that institution that stands ready to provide a home for those elderly brothers or sisters who are left homeless and uncared for. In this connection, permit us to repeat the offer of Dr. Miller, president of the Board, in last week's paper, to the effect that any old people desiring an economical place to live for the winter may have it for $20 a month for board and room at the Brethren's Home at Flora, Indiana.

A number of education and publication leaders left Ashland to attend some of the district conferences in session this week. Dr. Bame and Dr. Teeter, representing the Publishing House, are attending the Pennsylvania and Indiana conferences respectively. Prof. McClain of the Seminary is to be the Bible lecturer at the Keystone conference and Dr. Monroe at the Hoosier conference. While Prof. Stuckey of the Seminary and also representing the National Sunday School Association will attend the Mid-west district conference. Dr. Bell will also attend the Mid-west conference and speak in behalf of both the College and Publishing House.

Dr. K. M. Monroe reports for the Ashland Seminary, accounting for the activities of the faculty members during the summer and giving the number and classification of the students of the Seminary. There are seventeen students in the graduate school and fifteen pre-seminary students and eleven special students. These figures indicate a commendable growth and reflect credit upon the quality of the school. A number of contributions to the Seminary House Rent Fund are reported, among them being a considerable sum turned over by the Seminary Quartet, money received for services rendered to churches. Doubtless offerings from churches to this fund will be gratefully received at any time.

The Berlin church is on top of the state of Pennsylvania, altitudinally speaking, the claim being that the town is situated highest up in the mountains of any town in the state. And the church is about the highest in Brethren historical significance, and for a number of years it has been steadily rising in spiritual power and achievement. It is now under the efficient pastoral care of Brother N. V. Leatherman and is going steadily forward. Ten were added to the membership of the church during the year. The most significant feature is the regularity in Sunday school attendance the average attendance for the year having been 192 and twenty-five per cent having been present every Sunday. Some of their members have a record of being present every Sunday for twenty-two years. A church with such loyalty has a pretty bright future.

We have another thoughtful letter this week in "Our Readers' Views" department, written by Brother H. M. Lichty of Sunnyside, Washington. He is enthusiastic in his support of the Eighteenth Amendment, as we think all good Brethren should be. He presents a helpful suggestion in his report of what was done in his community to encourage the nomination at the primaries of men who stood for sobriety and Prohibition. Others are invited to contribute their "views" to this department. Kindly write briefly, legibly, on one side of the paper only and in a constructive, helpful manner, as those who have already written, have done. This department can be made of large interest and helpfulness by a kindly, considerate, nevertheless frank exchange of views, by our readers, if they will.

President E. E. Jacobs tells us the enrollment in the regular courses and in the Saturday classes continues to improve and he believes the Freshman class will just about reach the number enrolled in that class last year. Dr. Jacobs expresses disappointment at the small amount offered for educational work by the churches during the past year. No one knows quite so well as he how critical is the situation, and how much is at stake in the adequate support of the college. The burden resting upon the college management during these days is great and the weight of the responsibility will increase and the seriousness of the problems connected with the maintenance of the school's standing will become more accentuated as the days of the depression are extended. The situation merits our most earnest thought and prayer.

Brother E. J. Rohart, the wide-awake pastor of the church at Winchester, Virginia, reports progress in the Lord's work at that place. The Sunday school attendance at their anniversary service reached the 200 mark, which is quite an achievement for a little mission church. The fact is, it is not so small any more. It is growing, as a goodly number of our other mission churches are. Its average attendance is above 100. A summer Vacation Bible School had an enrollment of more than a hundred and an average attendance of 85. Aside from imparting valuable Bible information, it resulted in increasing the Sunday school enrollment, which such schools ought to do. Brother Rohart assisted the St. Luke's congregation in an evangelistic meeting, resulting in the addition of eleven new members by baptism and one by relation. We are glad this good pastor appreciates the Evangelist and thank him for being so kind as to say so.

Brother Claud Studebaker of Pittsburgh writes of his evangelistic campaign conducted for the Brush Valley church in Pennsylvania, where Brother Robert D. Crees is the energetic pastor, and who made report of the meeting last week. He lets us in on a matter of interest that Brother Crees evidently forgot to tell us, namely, the arrival of a new baby girl in the home of Brother and Sister Crees. We congratulate them on this favor of God and pray the blessing of heaven's protection upon the little one. Brother Studebaker says his work at Pittsburgh is being prospered of the Lord, last year having yielded as large an increase in church membership as the six years previous. The Sunday school also is growing in numbers. The possibilities of growth in this field are still large, he says, and as long as he and his people believe that, the future is promising. You have heard it said that where there is no vision the people perish, but let us put it positively, Where there is vision the people live and grow.

A Soul Finds God

(Sermon Preached by the writer in his South Bend, Indiana, pulpit August 7, 1932)

By Robert F. Porte

"I sought the Lord and he answered me, and delivered me from all my fears." Psalm 34:4.

The thirty-fourth Psalm is the experience of a person who has been plunged into the depths of human despair and need. It is thought, with good reason, that this is the recounting of the experiences of David in the Cave of Adullam when he was fleeing from King Saul. Well does this psalm fit the experiences which David doubtless had to meet in those trying moments of his life. David was an innocent shepherd boy with no design upon any person's rights or position. He never thought of being king as he faithfully tended his father's sheep on the hills of Bethlehem and amused himself by playing his harp or practicing with his sling. His life was that free life of a shepherd boy, far from the noise and rush of the city.

David was God's choice. He lived in God's great temple, the out of doors. What religious knowledge he had was to him a treasure. One can imagine this shepherd lad singing the chants of his home worship and meditating upon the religious experiences of his people. This lad is called to play his harp in the palace to the demented king Saul. Obedience is one of David's great virtues and he goes to the palace. In a mad frenzy the king attempts to kill David with a spear. Maddened and blinded by hatred Saul even tries to kill his own son Jonathan because he dares to speak a word in defence of David. Saul killed eighteen priests because one of them gave David a piece of bread. Then out upon the mountains went this shepherd boy hunted and hounded by the demon possessed king and three thousands of picked soldiers. It is this situation which drives David to his God. Resting for a moment in a dark cave, the very hope of life gone and with no sense of having done harm to any soul, David can truly say, "Many are the afflictions of the righteous." No earthly friend can help him now. A maddened king has prostrated the power of his office to capture and kill this shepherd, but David is not without some knowledge of the power of the God who had rescued his people many times and perhaps had come to David's help. David turns to God.

1—David personally sought to know God.

In these days of great economic uncertainty when all that we trusted in seems to have failed us and adversity comes like an overwhelming flood upon us then perhaps we feel alone and no one seems near to help us. What are we to do? Look with me for a moment at this shepherd lad, alone and without friends to help him, cornered in this cave with the king and an army near by to slay him. Consider if you will the fact that this lad had done no violence to any one, nor had he sought to take any person's position, yet he is afflicted and sorely distressed. In this condition David finds God satisfying to his need. Out of the darkness of despair he reaches up his hand and finds the strong hand of God with its assuring power and grace. There is help for many others here. The years bring us the testimony of a great multitude who testify, "I sought the Lord and he heard me"—

Let us assume that we know nothing about the miraculous deliverance of God of which the text speaks. Let us assume that we doubt whether God can even help us

R. F. Porte, Pastor
First Church, South Bend, Indiana

in this present need. We can be sure of one thing, namely, our economic and social, yea, religious condition brings us only great distress. The helplessness of the people of the world is very apparent to all. What does such a condition yield us? It yields no hope for the future. We turn to find some avenue of hope for our despair and we find it in kindness and unselfishness and the other virtues. We seek to know the source of these virtues which bring us hope and we discover that the people who possess these virtues have their faces turned away from the dark, perishing things of the material world. When we look at some creation we are not only interested in this created thing, we are also interested in the one who made it. This leads us to ask who is the author of kindness, goodness, friendship. Where do people find these flowers of human character? What sun paints on the material being of man these beautiful blossoms so fragrant with virtue. It is here that no honest person can lightly pass by the testimony of Godly men and women. I cannot ignore the evil I know is present in some human lives, neither can I ignore the virtues I see in those who believe God's Word. David did not reach out in the darkness for naught. He had a God greater than all the powers of evil. Then David could say, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear and delivereth them"—Like John Wesley when he found the Lord he exclaimed, "Now I know."

In the American Magazine of November, 1930, there appeared two articles by two men, one who found God and the other who failed to find God. The latter article begins as follows, "I would have you meet one of the loneliest and most unhappy individuals on earth. I am talking about the man who doesn't believe in God." It is an article which excites one's pity and yet one is made to wonder why this man failed to find God. One thing is evident in the article and that is that the author got a very poor return for his experience. The other writer features what he calls "Faith and Contentment." He states that he found that "Jesus demonstrated the certainty about God, that he is our Father and that he is a Person." Such a conclusion certainly brings a fruitage of contentment and joy. It is the fruit of serious and reverent cherishing of all the religious knowledge one may possess. Careless and irreverent attitudes toward things holy and sacred leads to the blackest moral darkness from which there is no escape because the soul has despised the light of life.

2—David did not allow Saul to blot out his view of God. There are people whose difficulties are greater than their faith. The editor of a popular magazine remarks, "One of the worst features of a period of depression is that people are prone to lose their faith in certain of the cardinal virtues." In one of the worst circumstances a human life might be in, David reaches up and finds God. His faith in God is greater than the power of an evil king, greater than his own undeserved persecution. David's faith was founded on the assurance of God's adequacy and gracious willingness to help his humble servant. It is a confidence born of actual knowledge and experience of God.

Such faith as David here displays is born out of positive knowledge of God. Some people seem afraid to be certain of their religious knowledge. During the world war there was a period of certainty in the reality of God and the immortality of man. Immediately following the war period there was a swing away from such positive belief. Such attitude is reflected in an article in Scribner's magazine of June, 1930, by Mr. Henshaw Ward, entitled, "The Disappearance of God." The main indictment set forth in that article is that religious leaders have indicated an uncertainty as to their knowledge of God. Mr. Ward speaks of the "wreckage of opinions about God" and quotes the words of a well-known theological professor who said, "Appeal to God occupies a decreasing place in modern religion." One cannot hardly blame Mr. Ward for his daring article in view of what he discovers among those who ought to be certain. The Christian religion must be factual. We must believe God's Word as being as secure and unchanging as God himself. We must act upon it, live it, and if necessary, give our life in its defence. Religious faith is not something to be dissected in a laboratory and analyzed as material is analyzed, it is to be accepted and treasured as a treasure from the Great God of Heaven. Doubt will dissolve any faith. Living faith will always save. This living faith is illustrated in David's life, he never lost sight of God. It was that abiding sense of God and God's holiness that made possible that repentance when David was rebuked by Nathan the Prophet. The message of the prophet went home to his heart because God still had a place in his heart. Faith and spiritual understanding can do wonders in holding people steady in the storms and adversities of life. Don't be untrue to your own soul nor to your God.

3—David found God to be the answer to his life's problem. It would be glorious if every person in the world could learn this truth. I wonder if we can guess or image what was going on in the mind of the guilty Peter who had denied his Lord as he witnessed that beloved Friend going to trial. Remorse, yes, but the sense of his loss, I believe. Why such anguish of soul when the enormity of his sin came home? In denying Jesus, Peter drove the Lord out of his life and Peter wanted Jesus. Judas had trifled with those sacred associations with Jesus. He had interested himself in material things. When money proved only dust and ashes in his hands he could not find his way back to Christ and God. Walter Lippmann, the brilliant editor of the New York World says in respect to the loss of belief in God, "Some substitute must be discovered for the belief in God or sheer anarchy will result." The most brilliant minds of the world testify to the fact that God is the indispensable keystone to human life and progress. Man cannot get along without God and God cannot get along with man unless man yields his heart in obedience to God's Word. There cannot be a heaven until man universally can say, "O how love I thy law." Ps. 119:97. Godlikeness comes of living and obeying God's Word in all that it requires.

Man needs God in order that he may hold his poise as a man. Morality lives when there is a sense of obligation. Recognize your duty to God and you will do your duty to man. Leave God out and war and carnage will flourish. Man lives in hope and hope lives in the certainty of the larger inheritances of the race and these larger inheritances of the race are in the keeping of God. Hope cannot live on a belief that "God is a vague emotional inheritance." If man loses sight of God he at once creates a god. Like the Children of Israel at the foot of the mountain, it may be a golden calf that will be made. Man's moral stature will be determined by his estimate or understanding of God. The world we know cannot furnish humanity any structure upon which to erect any moral or spiritual aspirations. In order to rise above the world we need God.

4. God and man meet at the place called reverence. Reverence is called, "The flower of faith." Reverence recognizes sovereignty. In Psalm thirty-four we read, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." God's care is near those who hold him in honor and reverence. There are certain supernatural powers which inspire awe and reverence in all people but the most difficult thing to understand is why persons stop with a certain reverence toward an impersonal force, such as wind, wave, the storm, death, and do not go on to seek the Great Personal Power back of all nature and life. The great Harvard Psychologist and Philosopher of the last generation, William James said, "I need God, therefore God is." The present Harvard Philosopher, William E. Hocking, says, "I have an idea of God, therefore God exists." In this last statement we find the sense of need in the human heart for God. Like the Psalmist we say, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Ps. 42:1. The atheist may get along without God and so does the earth worm, but the earth worm always remains a worm. Some people want us to think that it does not matter what you believe just so you believe. Many people thought that way to their sorrow. It does matter what you believe if you have any treasures you care for. It is assurance that we want and this world does not promise us real assurance, especially in this present world crisis. Our assurance is in the word of a Personal Living God Who created and sustains all things. The God in Whom great souls trusted and were never disappointed. Prof. Max Carl Otto ends his part of the Christian Century Conversation about God with this hopeless conclusion, "Complete and abiding satisfaction and unclouded assurance of life's significance are unattainable." The implication is to make the most out of a bad bargain. This conclusion and the conclusions of all unbelievers in God reflects a hopeless outlook for human life. The believer lifts his eyes and says, "Though now we see through a glass darkly but then face to face, now we know in part but then we shall know even as we are known." How gracious God was to David, the God who rescued him from imminent danger. Is God precious to you, the God who so loved the world as to give his Only Begotten Son to be your Savior and mine? If he is, then he will have your devotion and service. You will not serve the world but God and in his fellowship you and I shall walk in light that knows no shadow.

South Bend, Indiana.

The Testimony of the Centuries to the Form of Christian Baptism

Compiled by Miles Taber

First Century—Jesus Christ.

"All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. 28:18-20.)

Second Century—Justin Martyr

"For in the name of God, the Father of all and Lord, and of our Savior Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Ghost, they then receive the bath in water." (Apology, Chap. 61.)

Third Century—Tertullian

"He gave as his last command that they should immerse unto the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, not into one person. For we are immersed not once, but thrice, at the naming of each person of the Trinity." (Concerning Baptism, c. 14.)

Fourth Century—Jerome

"We are dipped in water that the mystery of the Trinity may appear to be but one, and therefore, though we be thrice put under water to represent the mystery of the Trinity, yet it is reputed but one baptism." (Note on Eph. 4:5, 6.)

Fifth Century—Augustine

"After you averred that you believed, we immersed three times your heads in the sacred font. For you are rightly immersed three times who receive baptism in the name of the Trinity. You are rightly immersed three times, you who receive baptism in the name of Jesus Christ, who rose the third day from the dead. Trine immersion is the symbol of the burial of the Lord, by which you are buried with Christ in baptism, and with Christ rise again by faith, that, purified of your sins, you may live, following Christ in the holiness of virtue." (In his sermon "We Mysterio Baptismatis.")

Sixth Century—Pope Pelagius

"There are many who say that they baptize in the name of Christ alone and by a single immersion. But the gospel command, which was given by God himself and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, reminds us that we should administer holy baptism to everyone in the name of the Trinity and by trine immersion, for our Lord said to his disciples, 'Go baptize all nations in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.'" (Quoted from Burrage, "The Act of Baptism", page 77.)

Seventh Century—Pope Gregory the Great

"Let the priest baptize with a triple immersion, but with only one invocation of the Holy Trinity, saying, 'I baptize thee in the name of the Father (then let him immerse the person once), and of the Son (then immerse him a second time), and of the Holy Spirit' (and immerse him a third time)." (Sacramentary.)

Eighth Century—John of Damascus

"The rite of baptism is a type of Christ's death; for by the three immersions baptism portrays the three days of the Lord's burial." (De Fide Orth.)

Ninth Century—Walafrid Strabo, Abbot of Richenau

"Suffice it to say that the trine immersion prevails everywhere in the world this day, and that it can by no means be changed, unless in accordance with a rash desire of novelty and to the scandal of the weak." (De Offic. Eccles., c. 26.)

Tenth Century—Atto, Bishop of Vercelli

"We are baptized into his death, since as he died, so also we, when we renounce the devil and his works, the world and its pomp, in like manner die when we are immersed in water." (In his exposition of Rom. 6:4.)

Eleventh Century—Lafranc, Archbishop of Canterbury

"As Christ lay for three days in the sepulchre, so let there be a trine immersion when the act is administered." (Expositions of the Epistles of Paul, note on Phil. 3:10.)

Twelfth Century—Bernard of Clairvaux

"Baptism is the first of all the sacraments in which we are planted together with the likeness of his death. Hence trine immersion represents the three days which we are about to celebrate." (Sermon on the Lord's Supper.)

Thirteenth Century—Council of Worcester, 1240

"Let the candidate for baptism always be thrice immersed."

Fourteenth Century—Council of Prague, 1355

"As to the form, let the immersion be trine."

Fifteenth Century—Gregory

"That the trine immersion is necessary is evident, for thus has it been handed down by the saints to signify the three days' burial of the Lord." (Speech at the Council of Florence, 1439.)

Sixteenth Century—John Calvin

"The very word baptize, however, signifies to immerse, and it is certain that immersion was observed by the ancient church." (Institutes, lib. iv., cap. 15, sec. 19.)

Seventeenth Century—Pope Paul V.

"Where it is the custom to baptize by immersion, the priest takes the infant; and exercising care lest it be injured, he immerses its head and baptizes it with trine immersion."

Eighteenth Century—John Wesley

"I was asked to baptize a child of Mr. Parker, second bailiff of Savannah. But Mrs. Parker told me, 'Neither Mr. Parker nor I will consent to its being dipped.' I answered, 'If you certify that your child is weak, it will suffice, the Rubric says, to pour water upon it.' She replied: 'Nay, the child is not weak; but I am resolved it shall not be dipped'. This argument I could not confute. So I went home, and the child was baptized by another person." (Works, vol. i., p. 134.)

Nineteenth Century—Rev. James Chrystal, Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States

"Should we restore the trine immersion as the general practice, we shall have good reason to lay claim to the only mode which, so far as we can judge from all the testimony which the early church affords, can lay historically-attested claim to being the normal mode of the apostles." (A History of the Modes of Christian Baptism, p. 213.)

Twentieth Century—Message of the Brethren Ministry

"The Christian should observe, as his duty and privilege, the ordinances of our Lord Jesus Christ, among which is the baptism of believers by Trine Immersion."

Leon, Iowa.

---

"Being Dead Yet Speaketh"

By H. H. Smith

Shakespeare makes one of his prominent characters say: "The evil men do, lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." While it is true that the world is often prone to forget the good and remember the evil, it is a momentous fact that both the good and the evil of one's life survive to bless or curse the world. Every life sets in motion currents of influence that continue after death. Some rough English soldiers, entering a town, complained: "Why can't a fellow get a drink here?" The reply was: "Because a man named John Wesley passed through this town a hundred years ago." The good that Wesley did was not interred with his bones. Not long ago a noted criminal was arrested for mail robbery and murder. He confessed that he had been a student and admirer of atheistic literature. The skeptics, infidels, and atheists set forth their doctrines in their books and finally passed on, but their influence survived and brought forth a harvest of evil.

Stephen was a mighty preacher—we have his fiery sermon in the book of Acts—but no sermon he ever preached accomplished so much as his triumphant death for the truth. Saul of Tarsus, a young man, stood by and watched the face of Stephen in his dying hour,—a face glowing with heavenly light and peace, as he prayed for the forgiveness of his enemies. It was such a spectacle as could never be forgotten. On his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians, no doubt the persecutor meditated upon that strange but impressive scene—a man dying in agony, with the joy of heaven in his heart, fervently praying for the forgiveness of the murderous persecutors. No doubt that this incident had much to do with the great apostle's conversion to Christianity.

On North Broad Street, Philadelphia, there is a great church—Dr. Russell Conwell's church—known as the Temple Baptist church. There is an interesting story connected with the building of this church. Dr. Conwell had been preaching in a very small church building in that community,—so small that it could not accommodate the growing congregation. One Sunday morning, as Dr. Conwell approached the church, he met a little girl who was crying, and when he asked her why she was crying, she replied that there was no room for her in the Sunday school and she had to go home. The great-hearted preacher took the little girl in his arms and said: "I will find a place for you." A short while afterward, when the matter of building a larger church was being discussed, the little girl showed great interest and began to save her pennies for the building fund. Only a few weeks after that she was taken suddenly ill and died. At the funeral, her father told Dr. Conwell that the little girl had been saving her pennies for the building fund, and handed him the amount she had saved—fifty-seven cents. At a meeting of the trustees of the church, Dr. Conwell told them of the little girl's desire to help build the church, and the pennies she had saved. He says: "The trustees seemed much impressed, and it turned out that they were far more impressed than I could possibly have hoped, for in a few days one of them came to me and said that he thought it would be an excellent idea to buy a lot on Broad Street—the very lot on which the building now stands. I talked the matter over with the owner of the piece of land, and told him of the beginning of the fund, the story of the little girl. The man was not one of our church, nor, in fact, was he a church-goer at all, but he listened attentively to the tale of the fifty-seven cents and simply said he was quite ready to go ahead and sell us that piece of land for ten thousand dollars, taking—and the unexpectedness of this deeply touched me—taking a first payment of just fifty-seven cents and letting the entire balance stand on a five per cent mortgage."

It was only a short while after this negotiation for the property that another pleasant surprise came to Dr. Conwell. His members arranged a surprise party for him, and at that gathering it was announced that the entire amount, $10,000, had been raised to pay for the building lot for the new church.

When you visit Philadelphia, and pass the Temple Baptist church, recall this story of the little girl and the fifty-seven cents. "Being dead yet speaketh."

Ashland, Virginia.

---

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

---

IMMIGRATION HAS SHIFTED THE OTHER WAY

According to a report by Secretary Doak, of the Department of Labor, immigration movements are greater going away from the United States than they are coming.

"During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1932, only 35,576 permanent immigrants were admitted, and 103,295 alien residents left the United States with the expressed intention of making their homes in other countries. In other words, alien emigration exceeded immigration by 67,719.

Of the 67,719 alien emigrants 19,426 were formally deported, 2,627 were aliens who had become destitute within three years after arrival and were returned to their native countries, and 10,750 were aliens who had been apprehended and were permitted to depart at their own expense.

It is desirable that the immigrant coming should be worthy of the ideals and aims of this country. The original feeling was that this land should be an asylum for the oppressed of every land. But many criminals took advantage of our liberal, wide-open gates, came in to do harm rather than good, to steal and loot rather than to create and conserve. Such men and women have no right to a country. They ought to be outcasts from every land.—The Christian-Evangelist.

GERMANY STILL ABROGATING

Germany is still seeking to escape the harvest of her own sowing in the World War by further abrogation of the Treaty of Versailles. She recently renewed her efforts to secure equality in armaments with her former foes by submitting an aide memoire to the French Government setting forth ten demands for increases in her military forces and training. This is accompanied by a threat that Germany will not participate in the disarmament conference at Geneva unless her demands are met. The French Cabinet is considering the situation, which is manifestly fraught with dangerous possibilities, and is thought to be consulting with England, Italy, the United States and other nations concerned. There are indications of a revival of militarism in Germany which are extremely disquieting to friends of peace.—Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

A MODERN PHILIP

Hitch-hiking is not as popular as it was a few years ago, but if more such travelers were inspired by the same high motive as the one reported in the following item taken from The Methodist Protestant-Recorder, there would at least be less general fear of the hitch-hiker:

Missions tells the story of a personal worker, a retired minister, who is following the steps of the evangelist Philip by preaching the Gospel to any who will take him into their cars on the western highways. Between San Francisco and Los Angeles he has ridden with more than five hundred men. Here is a civil engineer going to Santa Barbara with whom he has three hours' conversation. At the end a card is filled out affirming the man's acceptance of Christ. He has joined the Fellowship of Philip. The next man is a Russian Jew, a well-known figure on the Coast who is traveling at sixty-five miles an hour. They are soon pondering on Moses and the prophets, the fore-runners of the Lord Jesus. The next day's close finds this Christian teacher in Reno. There have been helpful conversations all the day from daybreak until the shadows fall. Twelve men were ridden with, and all with seemingly great gratitude thanked the Philip-man for his words. There were, however, no confessions. But the next driver who picked him up and carried him across the desert to Salt Lake City announces that he is going to make his confession of Christ before his dying father in Iowa. "This has been the richest experience in my life."

CALIFORNIA PRIMARY RESULT

It may be presumed that the wet daily press throughout the country pictured the results of the California primary election as a verdict against Prohibition. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The militant wets, voting for Tubbs, Youngworth, Wardell and McCarthy, cast 403,000 votes. The militant drys, voting for Shuler and Crail, cast 473,000, or 70,000 more votes. The 463,000 votes which went to Shortridge and McAdoo were primarily neither wet nor dry. The outstanding wet, Tubbs, received 214,000; the outstanding dry, Shuler, running on three tickets, received almost 300,000. It is apparent that if Dr. Shuler had not entered the race, Crail would have beaten Tubbs. To which the answer is perfectly in order that, if the Anti-Saloon League and the Board of Strategy had endorsed Shuler instead of Crail, the former would have won the nomination easily. California drys are now faced with a difficult but somewhat familiar situation. They can vote for Tubbs, the wet, for Shuler the dry, or for McAdoo, whose personal sympathies have been dry, though he is now running on a wet platform. Shuler's name will appear on the Prohibition ticket. Practically all his votes in the primary campaign came from Republicans and Democrats. It is possible that enough of these will break away from the old parties to elect him, but it is extremely improbable. The outcome of the primaries show conclusively that there is much more wet talk than wet votes. The propaganda of the brewers and distillers has misled the politicians into thinking that wet sentiment is dominant, which is not the case. California can, if it will, elect a dry Senator in November.—Pacific Christian Advocate.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Ezekiel

"Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives by the river Chebar, that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God."

"In the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity, the word of Jehovah came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of Jehovah was there upon him."

Here are the introductory lines to a book of visions—visions of the glory of the Lord—as they were vouchsafed to a man of vision, Ezekiel, in the days when the oriental nations were turning and overturning their political affairs.

Ezekiel's Background

It was the good fortune of this prophet to be a contemporary of Jeremiah and Daniel. No serious student of the Scriptures will ever understand him unless he is viewed in the midst of the historical background in which Greece was nearing her golden age, and the horizon of the then known world was rapidly expanding. Some think he is but an echo of Jeremiah and a sort of a second Isaiah. Truly there are likenesses between these latter men, yet each one had a distinctive mission to perform. It must be steadily remembered that this trilogy of seers called attention to the doctrines of the Trinity in a day of darkness and gloom. Jeremiah is the prophet of the Father, Isaiah is the prophet of the Son, and Ezekiel is the prophet of the Spirit.

Ezekiel was a priest by birth and training. When he reached the age of thirty no priestly function was open for him to prosecute and consequently he was called to do the work of a prophet in, around, and away from the precincts of Jerusalem. He seems to have been an eloquent and popular speaker, a man of wisdom and good judgment, and withal an opposite of the weeping Jeremiah, bold, aggressive, optimistic. In fact, he was beginning his ministry just as that of Jeremiah was coming to a tragic close.

His prophecies abound in God-given symbolical pictures, riddles, parables, et cetera. Analogies are traced with the greatest detail and the prophetic map of the ages seems an inevitable ocean where only elephants may swim; but, on second reflections, it turns out to be a river through which even lambs may wade.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Ezekiel.
2. When and Where Written? 600-574 B. C., probably in Captivity.
3. Scope. From Ezekiel's day to the Day of the Kingdom.
5. Authenticity. Ezekiel—history attests, wrote the prophecies bearing his name.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Glory of the Lord Revealed in Prophecy Preceding Jerusalem's Fall. 1-24.
2. The Glory of the Lord Revealed in Prophecy During Jerusalem's Fall. 25-32.
3. The Glory of the Lord Revealed in Prophecy After Jerusalem's Fall. 33-48.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

The writing is primarily prophetic. Its interpretation is difficult in many places because of the variety of visions used. The latter part of the book is especially rich because it presents a panoramic view of the events between the Israel of that day and the revived Israel of the latter day. Dr. Gray has some interesting things for our consideration relative to the varieties of interpretation now extant on the prophet's visions. Talking about the five views of interpretation on chapters 40-48 he avers:

"There are five interpretations of these chapters:

(1) Some think they describe the temple at Jerusalem prior to the Babylonian captivity, and are designed to preserve a memorial of it. But the objection is that such a memorial is unnecessary because of the records in Kings and Chronicles; while the description is untrue because in many particulars it does not agree with that in the books named.

(2) Some think these chapters describe the temple in Jerusalem after the return from the seventy years in Babylon, but this can not be, because there are more marks of contrast than likeness between the temple here described and that.

(3) Some think they describe the ideal temple which the Jews should have built after the seventy years' return, and which they never realized. But this lowers the character of the divine Word. Why should this prophecy in Ezekiel have been given if it was never to be fulfilled?

(4) Some think this temple in Ezekiel symbolizes the spiritual blessings of the church in the present age. But this appears unlikely, because even those who hold the theory can not explain the symbolism of which they speak. Moreover, even as symbolism it leaves out several important features of Christianity, such as the atonement and intercession of the high priest.

(5) The last view is that in the preceding comments, that we have here a prediction of the temple that shall be built in the millennial age. This appears a fitting and intelligent sequel to the preceding prophecies. A strong objection to it exists in that sacrifices and feasts are referred to, which seem contradictory to Christianity. But it should be remembered that Christianity is not meant, but a new dispensation with Israel on the earth while the church is in the air with Christ. This involves changes of immense magnitude.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Vision, Son of Man, Glory of the Lord.
2. Key Verses. 1:1, 7:2.
3. Key Chapters. 37 and 16.
4. Key Ideas. The Goodness and the Severity of God.

V. THE CONTENTS OF THE BOOK (Scofield)

Part I Ezekiel's Preparation and Commission. 1:3-9.

Part II The Prophet; Commission as Watchman. 3:10-21.

Part III Ezekiel's Second Vision of the Glory, and the Result in Service. 3:22-7:27.

Part IV General Theme: Jehovah Justified in Sending his People Into Captivity. 8-33:21.

Part V General Theme: The Future Kingdom of the Son of David. 33:21-36:38.

Part VI General Theme: Restoration of Israel; The Davidic Kingdom: Judgment on the Nations! 37:1-39:29.

Part VII General Theme: Israel in the Land During the Kingdom Age. 40:1-48:35.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

The prophet Ezekiel pictures Christ as a Priest of God dealing with his wayward Israel. Christ will some day come as the Prince into Jerusalem and minister as a Priest in the Temple. He will be King of the Jews in word and in truth. He will be the same Son of Man as he was when he trod the paths of earth nearly twenty centuries ago.

VII. THE TEACHINGS OF THE BOOK

1. Jehovah's Name is a Name of Respect and Must Be respected among the Nations.
2. Jehovah yearns for the Salvation of Captive Israel.
3. Freedom and responsibility are set forth in chapters 18 and 33.
4. Christ is Able to Renew and Revive Ancient Israel.
5. The Messianic Teaching Concerning the Future Kingdom is Part and Parcel of David, Matthew, and the Revelation Program.
6. Satan is Revealed as to his Past History. (38:11-19).
7. The Architecture of the New Temple is Depicted. (40-42.).

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

Berlin Brethren Sunday School

Scripture Passages to be Memorized during the year ending October 1, 1933, Prepared by Prof. A. B. Cober, Berlin, Pennsylvania

The Primary Department

1. Matt. 6:11—Give us this day our daily bread.
2. Ex. 20:12—Honor thy father and thy mother.
3. Ex. 20:8—Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.
4. Psalm 23:1—The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want.
5. II Cor. 9:7—God loveth a cheerful giver.
6. John 10:11—The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.
7. John 4:19—We love him because he first loved us.
8. I Peter 5:7—He careth for you.
9. John 1:3—All things were made by him.
10. Psalm 145:9—The Lord is good to all.
11. Gal. 6:10—Let us do good to all.
12. I John 4:11—We ought also to love one another.
9. John 3:16-17—For God so loved the world.
10. Rev. 3:20-21—Behold I stand at the door.
11. Matt. 28:18-20—Go ye therefore and teach.
12. Matt. 7:21-29—Not every one that saith.

Note—One of the above numbers should be memorized each month. Review every Sunday. Teach also one new song each month.

The Young People's Division

1. Ex. 20:3-17—The Ten Commandments.
2. Psalm 1.—Blessed is the man.
3. Psalm 19—The heavens declare.
4. Psalm 24—The earth is the Lord's.
5. Psalm 20—Lord thou hast been our dwelling place.
6. Psalm 119:9-12—Wherewithal shall a young man.
7. Matt. 5:1-16—The Beatitudes.
8. Matt. 11:28-30—Come unto me all ye that labor.
9. John 14:1-15—Let not your heart be troubled.
10. I Cor. 13—The Psalm of love.
11. Phil. 4:4-8—Rejoice in the Lord always.
12. I John 4:7-11—God is love.

Note: One of the above numbers is suggested for memory work each month. Young people who have difficulty in memorizing should be given only parts of the above. The assignment should not be burdensome to the pupils.

The Junior Department

1. Ex. 20:3-17—The Ten Commandments.
2. Psalm 1—Blessed is the man.
3. Psalm 23—The Lord is my shepherd.
4. Psalm 100—Make a joyful noise unto the Lord.
5. Psalm 121—I will lift up mine eyes.
6. Matt. 5:1-12—The Beatitudes.
7. Matt. 6:9-13—The Lord's Prayer.
8. Matt. 7:7-11—Ask and it shall be given you.

The Gospel Song Movement

By Prof. John Bissell Trowbridge, Director Music Department, Bible Institute of Los Angeles

(Continued from last week)

The Nature and Function of the Gospel Song

There will always be a large place for the stately, devotional hymn. The Gospel song can never take its place. It is made for a different purpose and has a distinct and unique function. A true hymn is a medium of worship. Through it we approach God in adoration and praise. It coordinates with prayer. The Gospel song is more objective and coordinates with preaching. It tells an experience, states a Gospel truth, or gives an invitation. It is directed manward and carries with it the spirit of missionary zeal or evangelistic inspiration.

There are hymns that suggest some of the elements of the Gospel song: "Come, Said Jesus Sacred Voice" or "Rejoice, All Ye Believers." And there are Gospel songs that have some worship elements in them—such as Whittle's "Christ Liveth in Me"

(music by McGranahan) or Mrs. Hawks' "I Need Thee Every Hour" (music by Lowry). The latter is very nearly a pure hymn, but is usually classed as a Gospel song because of its form. But this mixing of the types often makes the strongest possible song.

The Gospel song has been severely criticized for lack of dignity and meaning in the words—"doggerel" as the lyrics are sometimes called. It is not to be denied that many words set to music are unworthy, but these usually find their places in the discard after one hearing. A great authority in music, in speaking adversely of Gospel music, used as an illustration an old song beginning with the words: "I should like to die said Willie, if my papa could die too," but he was not fair enough to mention, "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break," "Under His Wings I am Safely Abiding," or "When Peace Like a River Attendeth My Way." The fact is that Charles Wesley wrote 6,000 hymns, and over 5,500 of them are never used. Isaac Watts wrote 600 hymns and scarcely 100 can be found in the hymnals of all denominations combined. If only the Gospel song lyrics that have stood the test of repeated publication were considered, the critic would find a wealth of worthy material.

In the music of the Gospel song the same line of criticism is possible. The hymn tunes are usually written by men of far more musical culture than those who have written the Gospel song tunes, and so they adhere more closely to the canons of musical art harmonically and contrapuntally. They are admittedly better music. It is a matter of regret that many poorly equipped men have put out their musical efforts in ignorance and inexperience, thus giving Gospel song tunes a bad reputation. And with the coming of "ragtime" and "jazz" in popular music, a reflection of this style has been found in our Gospel song books. But a careful study of the work of the best later writers will reveal an upward trend as a result of the wide dissemination of music instruction. The inexorable working of the process of elimination is relegating the unworthy to oblivion, and a body of Gospel song tunes is growing of which musicians need not be ashamed.

The "Golden Age" of Gospel Song

The Gospel song movement crystallized around a few great personalities, which is true of every epoch-making event. In this case the great central figure and the greatest promoter could not "carry" a tune. Mr. Stebbins tells about hearing some strange sounds on the occasion when he conducted the music for the first time in one of Mr. Moody's meetings. He soon discovered that the "disturbance" was produced by the great evangelist, who was following the song intently and "making a joyful noise." Mr. Moody's great practical sense perceived the powerful aid of music in the work he was doing, and he was quick to secure the very best singers he could find in Sankey, Stebbins, Towner, McGranahan, Bliss and others. His intense and far-seeing way of going at any work in hand would have made him a merchant prince had he remained in commercial life; but he consecrated his all to the Lord, and in taking his place as one of the greatest names of all time in evangelism he utilized, through others, the magic power of song, of which he himself knew nothing, and thus established the value of Gospel music as coequal with evangelistic preaching.

It is a great thing to write a Gospel song poem, bearing a vital message of Life. Infinite results may follow the releasing of such a message on the wings of an attractive musical setting that will carry it world wide. And so we owe a great debt to the army of men and women who have written the words for Gospel songs. Many of these consecrated people have given us their heart experiences in these poems. The name of Fanny J. Crosby, our own blind poet, whose fragrant life was a beautiful background for the thousands of lyrics she wrote for many musicians, stands preeminent in this list. She will be remembered best by "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Saved by Grace," "Jesus is Calling," and "I Am Thine, O Lord." Major Whittle (El Nathan) wrote "Moment by Moment," and it was set to music by his daughter, May

(Continued on page 15)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE HOME AND THE COMING GENERATION

(Lesson for October 16)

Lesson Text: Gen. 18:17-19; Deut. 6:4-9;
Mark 10:13-16; Golden Text: Prov. 22:6

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Parental Authority. Gen. 18:16-21

In the writer's opinion one of the greatest weaknesses of America today lies in the mistaken lenience and indulgence of fathers and mothers. It is not a kindness or a benefit to allow children to dictate their wishes; neither is it God's plan. Note the words of v. 19: "He will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord." Abraham exercised complete authority and control, even the power of life and death (Gen. 22) over his family. Let us pray that Christian parents, especially, may rule their homes aright, in true love that, if need be, can be severe without harshness, leading the children to obey their parents in the Lord, which is right.

TUESDAY

Home Instruction. Deut. 6:4-9

Closely linked with parental authority is parental instruction in the things of God. In fact, such instruction induces the child to recognize that parental authority is a part of God's plan. We should find opportunity to teach the things of God to our children in everything that is done in the home throughout the day. There are endless little happenings which may be used as illustrations of some phase of God's love and care, or of his will for us. Fortunate the child who lives in an atmosphere such as that outlined in vs. 7-9! God help us to keep our eyes ever open for these opportunities, and our hearts and minds ever glad to teach our children his ways!

WEDNESDAY

Jesus' Attitude Toward Children. Mark 10:13-16

We scarcely need to re-read this beautiful story, so familiar is it, and so well-loved. Jesus loved little children, and drew many lessons from them besides the one contained in this passage. If we would have in us the mind which was also in Christ Jesus, we must learn to love the little children of all the world. May our hearts become more child-like, that we may love his children more and may have right to the kingdom of God.

THURSDAY

Dedicating the Child to God. 1 Sam. 1:21-28

"I have lent him to the Lord"—could there be anything more expressive of the relationship which parents and children should bear to their Lord? Samuel was Hannah's son. She did not relinquish him entirely; she continued to love him and provide for him, but she lent him to the service of the Lord. The dedication of the child to God, as practised in the Brethren Church, has exactly this significance. No longer do we leave our children at the temple, for the need is different; but let us lend our children to the Lord, and so shall we all be blessed.

FRIDAY

Obedience Enjoined. Col. 3:18-25

Too often we remember the part of a verse that applies to the other fellow, and forget the unpleasant part that applies to ourselves. Children are to obey their parents in all things in order to be pleasing unto the Lord. But the fathers are to provoke not the children to wrath, lest they be discouraged. We should pray for insight that we may see the child's viewpoint and not merely offend them with inconsiderate and arbitrary commands. May we learn of thee, O Lord!

SATURDAY

Blessing Posterity. Gen. 12:1-9

All are familiar with the marvelous way in which God has fulfilled this promise to Abraham, and through his Seed has blessed all the nations of the earth. That God could bless Abraham as he did was because of Abraham's implicit obedience to his commands. God grant that we too may be obedient to every wish of our heavenly Father, that we may be blessed and may be a blessing to our children and to all those about us.

SUNDAY

The Happy Family. Ps. 128

To live to a good old age and see our children's children is considered by most people as one of earth's greatest pleasures. During millennial days we may not only do this, but may eat the labor of our hands, under our own vine and fig tree. But how much greater and deeper the pleasure of seeing those whom we have won for Christ bringing others to him—our children's children in a spiritual sense! We covet a happy family life, in a spiritual as well as in a physical sense, for all Gods children.

E. M. RIDOLE, President Warsaw, Indiana F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICER, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Deball Ave., South Bend, Ind.

The Adolescent Age

A Plea for the Organization of Intermediate Societies

By Joyce K. Saylor, Intermediate Superintendent

If you have no Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society in your church, there is no better time to organize than right now, this month of October, when the public schools are getting into full swing and the young people are ready for real work.

This adolescent age, the period in the lives of boys and girls when they seem to belong nowhere, where they have outgrown the Juniors and seem like strangers among the Seniors, should receive special attention by pastors and church leaders.

Even though you may be able to start with only half a dozen, you will find the work worth while and many boys and girls may be saved to the church that would otherwise slip away. The Intermediate society is indeed the logical link between the Junior and Young People's societies and where there is no Intermediate, many slip away from the church rather than go into a Senior society where they feel out of place and unwanted.

We are urging that pastors encourage this work and Senior Christian Endeavor leaders give this matter their careful and prayerful attention.

Winona Lake, Indiana.

MUSIC AND WORSHIP

For Music Committees

Organists and pianists are offered a much larger possibility of service in the church than many imagine. Worship is a part of Christian education, and music enters into worship in the very closest manner.

Is it not true that almost everywhere the worship of children and young people in their own gatherings suffers from a notable lack of guidance? Perhaps it is because organists and pianists do not understand their opportunities; but, at any rate, the possibility of important service is present. Every one who leads the musical part of a worship service, should study worship material for the young and apply the result of his studies in the meeting.

It is an excellent plan to have the Juniors themselves play the piano in their meetings, and also to have young people perform this service in their Christian Endeavor gatherings, but every society would benefit if there were in it an adult who made a study of music in its application to worship and guided the work of the society along these lines.

For instance, Junior choirs could certainly be formed in most Junior societies. These choirs would bring the society to the attention of the church-members in a way it has never been brought before by the Junior choir's cooperating with the adult choir of mixed voices. The Juniors could be used in processional, for antiphony, and in other ways that would help and make impressive the worship of the church.

Women are especially suited for training such choirs, and they readily attain the necessary experience for it. What has just been said about Junior choirs is equally applicable to Intermediate and young people's choirs.

Experience gained in Christian Endeavor societies may lead those interested in organ and piano music to larger success in life. The magic influence of electrical control has brought even the largest organs within the capacity of a woman to handle. An education in organ-playing is now readily available in our large music centres. Work begun in a Junior society may develop into a very wide field of service later on.—R. P. A., in C. E. World.

WELL-BALANCED INTERMEDIATE PROGRAM

Miss Ida Banker, superintendent of Intermediate work in Westchester County (New York) Christian Endeavor Union, has proposed a program for the season of 1931-1932. A similarly well-balanced Intermediate program, used during the past year, helped this union to double the number of Intermediate societies.

The program is arranged in six groupings, titled "Service and Development" (20 points), "World Friendship and Christian Citizenship" (17 points), "Evangelism and Bible-Study" (20 points), "Organization" (eight points), "Larger Leadership" (25 points), and "Recreation" (10 points).

Among the emphases of the program within these divisions are the following:

"Every active member leading at least one meeting during the year."

"Twenty-five percent increase in membership during the year."

"Conduct a mission-study class."

"One hundred percent of members in church-membership."

"Monthly consecration meeting, with pledge recited in unison."

"Definite pledge toward the county-union budget."

"Publish a monthly bulletin of activities."

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Things are being organized here and the work of the school goes forward, notwithstanding that there have been some rather great disappointments. The Saturday school is large, perhaps it will equal that of last year when we had upwards of 100 the first Saturday term. This is a source of income that we could hardly do without.

The regular courses also are still growing. We have had some good transfers from other institutions and the Freshman class will equal that of last year. I do not know the number of new Freshman (that is, excluding hold-overs from last year) but it will be about an even hundred.

Wooster College defeated our team on our own field last Saturday before a rather large crowd, 12 to 0. The federal tax is filching from us just about what we ought to make in profit on these games. If any one of my readers thinks that our federal government has distributed its taxes fairly, you are welcome to so believe but to come in here and take this money from us is indefensible.

A report is before me issued by the Association of American Colleges and I find that almost every item in the budget in the colleges represented in the survey, has been reduced, some of them, including salaries, up to 23%, but what I can not get our constituency to understand is that if we were to teach here WITHOUT SALARIES AT ALL, giving our services for absolutely nothing, that would still not keep us in the North Central for it DEMANDS A CERTAIN STATED INCOME, REGARDLESS OF HOW IT IS SPENT. So everyone who has any hand at all in giving to the college and proceeds to cut off slices, doubtless thinking that we ought to reduce our expenses here, as we ought and have, should bear in mind that that is not the point. HOW THE CHURCH EXPECTS US TO MAINTAIN A COLLEGE HERE WITH NORTH CENTRAL STANDARDS ON A NIGGARDLY AND INSUFFICIENT INCOME PASSES HUMAN UNDERSTANDING. No other interest in the church is so driven. If missions, the publishing house, the Sunday schools, and all other interests were to find themselves with reduced incomes, they could get by, but we WILL BE STOPPED AS SURELY AS I WRITE THESE WORDS. AND WHEN WE ARE OUT OF THE NORTH CENTRAL, WE WILL BE OUT ALL AROUND. We could run a one-horse school here which no organization would take time to stop and look at, but we could not run a college. I have written these words over and over again but still such indifference prevails in certain quarters that merrily they cut our income and sit back to see what will happen. Well, it will happen, do not be deceived on that point.

I am bitterly disappointed in our income, and so will the Board be in due time.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

SEMINARY NOTES

The Seminary faculty spent the summer in various ways. Dean Miller taught both terms in the summer school, and attended National Conference. Prof. McClain was a speaker in the Southeastern Conference, held at Roanoke, Virginia, in June, gave Bible lectures at Shipshewana and the Winona Bible Conference and attended National Conference. Prof. Stuckey taught one term in summer school and supervised the Shipshewana Young People's Training Camp, and attended Ohio State and National Conference. The writer of these notes taught in summer school, attended Ohio State and National Conference, and taught at Shipshewana.

During the summer we have received several gifts for our Seminary House. The W. M. S. of Elkhart, Indiana, sent money for our Seminary House rent fund, and several have contributed comforters to the Seminary House. We have almost enough to go around and they will be appreciated during the cold weather of the winter.

Our Seminary rent problem has not been solved, but a number of churches have made fine contributions, and our rent this year is ten dollars cheaper per month than last. Our Seminary quartet aided in the Autumn revival at our Fair Haven, Ohio, church and an offering of $31.77 was given to the rent fund. The same quartet turned over twenty dollars, which they received while at the Canton, Ohio, church, for the same fund. Also lately we have received $70.00 from the Long Beach church, as well as the usual departmental contributions and a personal gift of ten dollars.

September 15th, Prof. Stuckey was speaker in a Western Pennsylvania Sunday School Institute, held at our Mt. Pleasant church. From the 16th to 18th he addressed an Eastern Pennsylvania Sunday School Institute, held in the First church of Philadelphia. He gave three addresses, and also preached two Sunday sermons.

Last month Brother Stuckey had an article in the "Evangelical Crusader" on an educational theme.

The record of students matriculated in the Seminary is very gratifying. To date we have one man taking some Post Graduate work, Rev. Gingrich, who graduated from our Seminary last year, two Seniors, seven middlers, seven Juniors, three full-time specials, and eight part time specials. In the pre-Seminary department of the College we have three Seniors, eight Juniors, one Sophomore, and three Freshmen. Only one man out of the seventeen men in the graduate school is not our own. There is one full-time special student and five part-time special students who do not belong to the Brethren Church. We welcome all, and are only mentioning this fact to emphasize the use of our Seminary by our own young men. Twelve men in our Graduate school have regular pastorates, and the others are preaching when opportunity is presented.

K. M. MONROE.

BERLIN, BRETHREN CHURCH

Berlin is one of the most beautiful boroughs located on the tablelands of the Alleghenys of Western Pennsylvania, about eighty-five miles southeast of Pittsburgh. It is reputed to be the highest borough in the State of Pennsylvania, being between twenty-three and twenty-four hundred feet in altitude.

The Brethren church here has a reported membership of two hundred and seventy. One is not with these good people long until you sense something of the history of the Brethren Church. It was here in 1878 that Elder H. R. Holsinger and Elder Joseph W. Beer commenced the publication of the "Progressive Christian." It was here where the committee appointed by annual meeting waited upon Brother Holsinger, that drove the final wedge between the progressives and the conservatives in the church, by which pangs of sorrow a new denomination was born — the Brethren Church. The record of this meeting is a part of the minutes of this congregation. It is here on yonder hill where the remains of Brother Holsinger lie buried. Also in the same cemetery is the burial place of Elder John Knepper and of Elder I. B. Trout.

About ten years ago under the pastorate of Rev. W. C. Benshoff these people decided to build a more stately and commodious church edifice. As a result we have here an equipment that meets all our present needs, and will doubtless do so for many years to come. The debt on this building is down now to about $10,000.00, making it a perfectly safe proposition, and even in these times of financial stress approximately $1,000.00 of the principle is being paid each year.

The church here is well organized, having the usual auxiliaries of the Brethren church. Two communion services were held last year with a good attendance at each. A week of special services was held prior to each communion service. Prayer meetings are held each Wednesday evening. At these meetings during the first six months of last year the pastor gave Bible studies from the Gospel of John, and during the last six months has been leading the people in the study of great Bible doctrines.

We have a very efficient Sunday school, with Prof. A. B. Cober, as superintendent, ever planning and leading forward. Prof. Cober is Assistant Superintendent of schools, of Somerset county. He is familiar with the field of education, and besides has proven himself devoted to the cause of Christ and his church. Sunday, September 25, was Rally Day at which time there were 235 present. This was 49 more than were present a year ago at Rally Day. One very remarkable feature about this school is the regularity of attendance. From 14 of the 18 classes of the school there were 48 who never missed a Sunday school session. We have six families that had every member present every Sunday. Our average attendance for the school last year was 192. Thus it is seen that we had exactly 25 per cent who were present every Sunday. We have individuals here with a record of twenty-two years, fifteen years, twelve years and nine years of never having missed a Sunday school session. It is interesting to note too that those who are thus faithful in attendance at Sunday school are almost invariably as faithful in attendance at the worship service of the church.

The Women's Missionary Society are interested in meeting the goals set by the national organization, and we understand with one possible exception they have done so. The pastor was asked to lead in the mission study course last fall. At the close of this course he was presented with a five dollar gold piece which was very much appreciated. This is mentioning only one of the many kindnesses shown the pastor and family by the people here.

The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha under the leadership of their patroness, Mrs. Frank Beachley, have their interesting sessions and like their elder sisters are seeking to make their goals set for them.

The laymen of this church are organized and have adopted for themselves certain local, district and national goals, which were reported on the Sunday school page of the Evangelist last year. It can be said of our men that they have earnestly endeavored to meet these goals and have had no little degree of success in doing so. Their program for the month of October is prepared by the Evangelist Commission, as follows: "Evangelism Through the Sunday School," Prof. A. B. Cober; "Personal Evangelism; or Winning Them One by One," John Flaam; "Evangelism Through Song," Edgar Lowrey; "Young People and Evangelism," George Dively. The male quartette will sing.

There are three Christian Endeavor Societies in this church; the Juniors, the Young Peoples and the Adults or Alumni. The Juniors are doing very nicely under the leadership of their splendid superintendent, Miss Mildred Dietz. The Young People and Adults are doing a bit of extension work this next month by giving a program for the old folks' home of the Church of the Brethren near Winber. Besides the singing the Juniors will recite a number of the Psalms, the young people will give a drama, "The Challenge of the Cross," and then there will be a short talk by the pastor. The regular activities of the Christian Endeavor are carried on through the year.

During the last year there were ten souls added to the church, eight by baptism and two by letter and relation. We begin a revival service here the 18th of October. The pastor has been asked to do the preaching. We believe the devout people here will pray earnestly for the success of these services.

The church has been saddened during the year in the loss of five of its members by death. It seems that sorrow visited very frequently. Those who left us and caused us to mourn are: Mr. P. M. Cober, the treasurer of the church; Mrs. Henry Dickey, Mrs. Henry G. Hay, Mr. W. W. Landis, treasurer of the Building Fund, and Mrs. Susan Saylor. May the Lord give us wisdom to understand the words of our golden text of the Sunday school lesson for September 25—"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Ps. 116:15).

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
Berlin, Pennsylvania.

NEWS FROM WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA

The church at Winchester will observe their semi-annual Love-Feast and Communion the second Sunday in October at 7 P. M. We invite everyone of like precious faith residing in nearby sections to come and have fellowship with us.

Since our anniversary Sunday in May, which was the largest in the history of the church, we have not given account of ourselves. On that day we reached the 200 mark with a few over. We are thankful for that day and regret that we have not been able to maintain that mark. However we have kept above the hundred mark. We were told by one of our faithful Mission Board members, Brother G. C. Carpenter, who is now holding a pastorate among the Ohio churches, that he would surely shout when we reached the hundred mark. And of course we just inferred that if we ever mounted above that mark that he would give a double shout. While Brother Carpenter served as pastor at Hagerstown, Maryland, 42 miles from here, he labored lovingly and untiringly in order to get this church started. We commend him and praise God for these labors of love, apart from his other ministry; we wish to notify our brothers and sisters of the Ohio District not to become surprised nor alarmed should they see Brother George rise up and shout in the spirit at some unexpected moment. A little more shouting among the Brethren ministry would not be much out of the way, especially before God. It will not hurt any of us as preachers.

During July of this summer we conducted a Summer Bible school with an enrollment of 100 and an average attendance of 85. We used no handcraft; just taught the plain, unadulterated Gospel truths. As a result of this school which added new pupils to our Sunday school, we are organizing a Junior and Intermediate church which shall meet weekly at the close of public school work. Definite and systematic instruction shall be given. Every pupil will receive recognition for satisfactory work. The course of instruction will lead to a diploma in the field of Religious Education, similar to that given in secular training.

May God bless and enrich the experience of every church in the brotherhood with much fruit of the Spirit. This is our prayer. Remember us before the throne of grace.

During my two weeks' vacation I had a delightful time leading an evangelistic campaign among the brethren of the St. Luke congregation, near Woodstock, Virginia. This is one of our weaker churches without full time pastoral care. Brother Dodgson serves these people when they have services, once or twice a month. This is a rural church but it has a good opportunity of becoming stronger if it has full time services. They have a fine Sunday school superintendent, Brother John Riffey, an experienced song leader in Brother C. Coffman, also Brother E. C. Coffelt is a fine worker. These men are doing much to build up the work of the school. With a little more interest and cooperation on the part of all others there is no reason why they should not grow and develop to a considerable extent. I want to commend them for their fellowship, hospitality and gifts, also their fine support in singing and attendance at every service. I praise not only the old, but the young folks for their splendid singing and memorization of choice Bible verses during the meetings. The services closed with the observance of the Lord's Supper, one of the largest ever held. Three adults and eight young folks were baptized and received into the church, also one young lady was received by letter. May God bless and strengthen our rural churches. They deserve credit. To see so many walk miles to get to church makes us ashamed of city people who cannot walk a few blocks, except to some place besides the church.

Just this word aside; Thank you, Brother Baer, for your good work on the Evangelist. Keep it up. E. J. ROHART.

THE FAIR HAVEN BRETHREN, WEST SALEM, OHIO

Intensive activity, supplemented by sickness, has made this report late. It is over a month since we closed an exceptionally successful revival at this church. We say successful, because in every department of the church a greater interest in spiritual things has been apparent. However, that is not the best indication of a great revival noticeable here. We, as a pastor and people, have been made to rejoice over the number of souls that have been won for Jesus Christ. Twenty people stepped out for Christ, either for the first time or to re-consecrate themselves in the service of the Master. Seventeen of these united with the Brethren church. One more came from the Presbyterian church, making eighteen in all. One of those who made his confession went into the Church of the Brethren, our next door neighbor. Two of his sisters united with the Brethren church as a result of this service. Two other young married people who made their confession are waiting to study Brethren doctrine before they decide with which church to become affiliated.

The inspiration and Biblical knowledge that was received by the pastor of the Fair Haven church is of inestimable value. Dr. Bauman of Long Beach, California, certainly is an excellent evangelist. We cannot speak too highly of him here. We can readily see why he has had so successful a pastorate and career. The Lord is ready to bless the work of one who so boldly and capably defends the Word of God.

Our mid-week prayer and Bible study service is the brightest light in the church organization. With a membership in church of 120 the attendance in prayer meeting has been averaging from 30 to 35. We have been studying the book of Daniel. The value of Bible study, especially that of prophecy, has been proven in this study. Men and women have been so interested in this study that they have come at times in their work clothes in order not to miss any of the studies. One man and his wife came one Wednesday night without any supper rather than miss the lesson for that night. They had worked in the harvest field all day, too. Interest like that certainly makes a pastor feel that the Old Book has an attraction and appeal yet. On Wednesday evening, September 14, Prof. Alva J. McClain favored us with his chart lecture on the ninth chapter of Daniel. This was indeed a treat to all of us. Wednesday evening, September 28, will mark the conclusion of our studies on Daniel. A review of the book will then be conducted before we begin another study.

We wish to express our appreciation to the Caionna Quartette for their kind and capable assistance in the evangelistic services conducted at this church. They certainly add much to a church service. Brother Paul Bauman, a member of the quartette, led our song service and had charge of the quartette and other special music. We wish to recommend their services to any church which wishes some good consecrated Christian music. You may get in touch with them at the college. Another feature which added much to our service was the willing and capable assistance of Miss Iva Bauman, who played the piano and also sang some special numbers. Miss Bauman is an accomplished and consecrated musician. We appreciated greatly her kind assistance. The quartette received an offering for their service but Miss Bauman received nothing except our gratitude. The offering which the young men received went to help pay the rent on the Seminary house in which our Seminary boys may live rent free. The Seminary furnishes that for them, as do all other Seminaries in the country.

We wish to announce through these columns that on Sunday evening, October 2, we will conduct our Fall communion service here. We wish to invite all neighboring brethren who can to join us in this service. May the Lord bless this service to the edification of the saints and the strengthening of his Body, the Church.

R. E. GINGRICH, Pastor.

MEETING AT BRUSH VALLEY CHURCH

The first Sunday evening after the closing of conference at Winona Lake found us at the Brush Valley church. It is properly named, for it is out northwest, I believe, though there seems to be no particular direction. You just follow straight down the road, they tell you, no matter how many directions you travel in going straight. Well, it is out from Kittanning, Pennsylvania ten or twelve miles, off the State road and has woods on every side. Rather a new church building, nicely furnished, with a Delco light plant and lighting system. A substantial congregation of people, right out in the country, and they go to church. Rev. Robert D. Crees is the hustling young pastor of this church and West Kittanning. He has job enough to keep him more than busy, but he is taking care of it in a fine way. His wife was in the hospital when the meeting began, having been presented with a fine baby girl. It is useless to say he was busy. He kept me very busy in visitation work, and of course he had to have a few minutes to look after the wife and baby. I came home for my Sunday morning service, returning immediately after the service for an afternoon meeting in the Meyers' school house which is another regular preaching point in this circuit. The third Sunday we preached two special afternoon sermons to women and men separately, these proved to be splendid services and well attended. The Sunday evening services were overflowing and each evening the attendance was fine. We greatly enjoyed the time spent with these delightful people. I think our time was too short to reap the real harvest of souls that should be reached. A number of confessions were received; most of them substantial men and young men, rather unusual, also some very definite reconsecrations, who came forward at the regular invitation as individuals.

Our association with Brother Crees was very pleasant. He is a good personal worker, knows how to meet people where they are, give them a spiritual ministry and pass on, leaving a warmer heart. I was given every consideration by these dear people in the services and in their homes where we were entertained, and shall not forget their kindness. May the Lord bless and prosper them every one and especially may he bless this fine young pastor in his work for Christ and his church.

Pittsburgh

We have had the hardest year's work of our ministry, but one of the very best. Last year yielded as large an increase in membership as in six years previous and 50 per cent of these were heads of families. Our Sunday school last Sunday was the largest since we have been here and we are expecting our rally day to give twice as many as we had in our first rally day service. We have many reasons to be encouraged, yet the work done is so small compared with the possibilities in this field that we feel we have hardly started. There are so many fine people in this great city with a background of faith in our church—if we could reach them and enlist them for the strength of the church, we would have one of the most outstanding testimonies to the whole Gospel of any church in the city. Our fall communion will be held the last Sunday in October. We hold a two weeks' evangelistic meeting beginning the first Sunday in November. We covet your prayers. You will be helpful to the work of building this church if you send the name and street number of any friend or relative moving to this city, to the pastor, 5000 Dearborn Street, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

CLAUD STUDEBAKER.

OSCEOLA, INDIANA

Most live-blooded folks like a degree of adventure. Our lives are liable to become so commonplace in these days of complicated social orders that there seems little possibility of experiencing anything of an adventuresome nature. The child of God, however, repeatedly finds opportunities for the adventuresome coming to him. God is always doing the unexpected for his children. The social order would make our lives a cut and dried affair; if we yield them to God, he fills them to overflowing with his unexpected, not to say miraculous, workings.

Just so it was beyond human expectation that we should now be at Osceola. We had, in fact, forgotten that a little church was started here a few years ago. Never having had any contact with it, its people or its pastor, it never had been more than a mere name to us at any time. Suddenly the call of the Lord came to the work. Indeed it was an "adventure", although the more prosaic might scoff at the thought, to prospect the field, and then more adventuresome to see how he was leading in opening up the work to our coming here. He did this so remarkably and so like a loving Heavenly Father that we felt it to be clearly his will that we should enter into this field of labor. One's life need not be dull even in this world of dull surroundings if that life be yielded to him for the pleasures of spiritual adventuring.

We are just getting acquainted with the field and the work here at Osceola. At the same time we are trying to get settled in our new home. Either process tends to slow up the other, but in due time we expect them both to be somewhat decently accomplished.

This seems a very promising field. I doubt not but that there are many others who are now as uninformed about it as I was just a few short weeks ago. Possibly I shall find opportunity at another time to write more fully of it in both a descriptive and a historical manner.

We desire the prayers of the brotherhood for the work at Osceola to the end that it may prosper according to his will, and that pastor and people may be truly dedicated to his service.

FRANK GEHMAN.

OSCEOLA, INDIANA EXPRESSES GRATITUDE

The Bethel Brethren church of Osceola knows from experiences the power of prayer. We have had to depend upon God for an answering that we might have a leader to guide us and strengthen our faith in God.

We are mighty grateful to have with us as our leader and pastor Brother Frank Gehman and family. We feel that with Brother Gehman's coming we received one of the many blessings God gives his children. With the spiritual knowledge of which Brother Gehman is possessed we will open the doors of spiritual life for those outside the ark of safety, and receive everlasting joy, peace and love in our beloved Savior and Redeemer Jesus Christ.

We especially want to thank the Mission Board for making it possible for us to have a pastor. May God bless them for their thoughtfulness in making it possible to have Brother Gehman with us. We also extend a hearty invitation to all to come to Osceola whenever possible.

RUSSEL HOFFMAN.

FRIENDSHIP FOLIOS FOR CHINA

The Department of Education of the Republic of China has recently informed the Committee on World Friendship Among Children that it will be glad to cooperate in a friendly project by American children for those of China and that it is prepared to receive and distribute to the schools the friendship symbols.

The Committee is therefore announcing the fourth friendship project and invites cooperation by children (and their leaders) in church and day schools and by young people in various organizations and societies. This project, like those preceding it—Doll Messengers of Friendship for Japan, Friendship School Bags for Mexico and Friendship Treasure Chests for the Philippine Islands—is designed to promote mutual understanding, appreciation and goodwill between our children and those of other lands. The Committee, instituted by the Federal Council of Churches in 1925, is comprehensive in its make-up and includes Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

The goodwill symbol for this fourth project is to be a Friendship Folio. It will contain Messages to the children and teachers of China, pictures which children love, large enough for framing and hanging on the walls, many smaller pictures clipped by our children from illustrated magazines, and also snapshot photos of the senders and their friends, homes and schools.

The Friendship Folio will have artistic designs on the front and back covers and can enclose twenty or thirty of the pictures clipped by our children. The cost of the Folio—post paid—is 60 cents. It may be secured from the Committee at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. A folder giving complete directions should be secured by those who plan to have a part in the project. Checks or money orders should accompany all orders for Folios.

The project may be undertaken at any time between October, 1932, and August, 1933. The Folios will be presented to the schools in China probably on Memorial Day, October 10, 1933, in connection with the patriotic exercises celebrating the establishment of the Republic of China.

The Children's Committee is also announcing a second project which is to be carried out in public and private schools. Children in elementary and junior high schools will be invited by the principals of their schools to write Goodwill Messages to the children of other lands. Two will be selected for broadcasting and publication in this country and abroad, on World Goodwill Day, May 18, 1933. All the Messages, however, will be bound together in volumes and sent to the League of Nations. Information about this project should be secured from the Principals.

COMES BUT ONCE

The men did the work faithfully. 2 Chron. 34:12.

Some things God gives often. The seasons return again and again, the flowers change with the months; but youth comes twice to none." Thus each period of life has its own closing, its last hour, in which work is ended, whether well done or neglected. Indeed, we may think of each single day as a miniature life. It comes to us new; it goes from us finished. There are three hundred and sixty-five days in a year. The only way to have a well-finished year is to finish the tasks and duties of each day as it passes. A marred or a lost day anywhere along the years may lead to loss or even some misfortune afterward.—J. R. Miller.

WET EXAGGERATION

Of course there was never any basis for Mayor Walker's assertion that there were 32,000 speakeasies in New York City. However, a number of Federal prohibition officers determined to find out. They discovered 3,490 places where liquor might be sold, but succeeded in purchasing it in only 1,698. This is only five per cent of the total given by the Mayor and the wet press. Isn't that about the usual proportion of truth to assertion in wet propaganda? It is probably true that there are fewer speakeasies than there were blind pigs in pre-prohibition days, while the many thousands of legal saloons have ceased to do business.—Pacific Christian Advocate.

REMEMBERING THE TEXT

The tale that has been longest in my memory was told me long before I went to school, and was about a girl from the country who had gone into service in the town, and had been sent one Sunday night to represent the family at Chapel. On her return she was asked what the sermon had been about, and manifested little knowledge of the tenor of the preacher's discourse, save that she knew that it had all been about three strangely-named men, called Shake'em, and Make'em, and To bed you go! The preacher, as you are at once aware, had been homilizing on a tale in Daniel. Probably the best story of those who have been asked the preacher's text is that which belongs to the biography of one of my personal friends, who played truant one Sunday morning when a boy, and was nonplussed when his mother asked to have the preacher's text quoted to her. Quickly recovering himself, however, he struck an attitude and affected the proper kind of voice, and declaimed: "Behold, I was not there!" being at once patted on the back and told, quite erroneously, that he was a good boy. Another boy, back from a Chapel where the heating apparatus had failed to function properly, declared that the text had been, "Many are cold, but few are frozen," an understandable trick of his memory, under the circumstances. Edith, another child of some fame, misheard the text one Sunday, and imagined that it ran: "This man receiveth sinners, and Edith with them," and was so overjoyed at the news that she there and then gave herself to the Man's service, never to leave it, though later she smiled at the misunderstanding that prompted her decision. Perhaps her misunderstanding had been inspired.—Selected.

THE GOSPEL SONG MOVEMENT

(Continued from page 10)

Whittle Moody. James M. Gray, President of the Moody Bible Institute, wrote "Only a Sinner Saved by Grace," set to music by Dr. Towner. J. H. Sanimis wrote "Trust and Obey," also set to music by Dr. Towner. And in every Gospel song book are found the names of Elizabeth Clephane (writer of "The Ninety and Nine"), Julia Johnson, Harriet Pierson, William A. Cushing, Frances Ridley Havergal, Jessie H. Brown and many others whose words have brought blessing to thousands of hearts. P. P. Bliss wrote both words and music of "Almost Persuaded"; Charles Gabriel did likewise in the "Glory Song"; P. P. Bilhorn in "Sweet Peace"; Robert Harkness in "Shadows"; and many other writers of Gospel music have written the lyrics for some of their own best songs.

A Panoramic View

The Gospel song movement passes before us in panoramic view as we think of the early struggles for free expression of the Gospel message in song—the constructive work of Lowell Mason, followed through the nineteenth century by an army of men who "carried on" faithfully, among whom are numbered William Bradbury, George F. Root, Philip Phillips, T. C. O'Kane, William G. Fischer, Robert Lowry, W. H. Doane and John R. Sweney, doing aggressive work in evangelism, teaching and publishing. To this period we trace songs like "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Christ Arose," and "Shall We Gather at the River?"

Then comes the "Golden Age" of Gospel song that marks the period of the active ministry of Mr. Moody and his associates. This brought to the front a group of brilliant and vigorous men who not only wrote songs that have taken a permanent place but who were inspiring leaders and soloists. Preeminent among these is Ira D. Sankey, whose name is inseparably linked with that of Mr. Moody as his coworker in those first great years of his larger ministry in America and England. The lamented P. P. Bliss, whose tragic death in a railway disaster throws a sadness over his memory, was one of the greatest of Gospel singers and writers—a man of remarkably winning personality and deep consecration. James McGranahan was another choice soul and effective singer whose writings so familiar in every Gospel song book, are commonly recognized as among the best examples of Gospel music. George S. Stebbins has left a fine addition to permanent Gospel music in his setting of "Saved by Grace," together with many other songs. Associated with Mr. Moody in his later years was Dr. D. B. Towner, director of Music at the Moody church and the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. He was a remarkable man, greatly used of God as a soloist leader, teacher and writer, who doubtless exerted a greater influence for the promotion of Gospel music than any man of his generation, owing to his strategic position as a teacher at the very center of evangelism for twenty-five years.

The past tense is sometimes used in referring to Gospel song writers and singers as if they were relics of a bygone day. There is apt to be a glamour thrown around the initial stages of any radical movement, but in this case the present is important. The Gospel singer, writer and publisher was never so well equipped and never more greatly needed. If the spotlight has been thrown on the closing decades of the nineteenth century, if there are no worthy shoulders for the mantle of Sankey to rest upon, then a mighty call comes to us to face present conditions with a new consecration—in churches, in colleges, in conventions, in Bible Institutes, and through the press, to carry "the banner of the cross" ever higher in Gospel song, "till he come."—The King's Business.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

Old age may be, and is often, beautiful, when it comes in the midst of comfortable surroundings, and the thoughtful and kindly ministrations of those to whom we are bound by ties of earthly kinship. But it is a tragic thing when it brings not only a weakening of the physical powers which are necessary to enable us to support ourselves, but too often brings with it such depleted financial resources, as leave its victim without the ability to provide the things needful for protection and comfort. Worse still, it sometimes brings a form of isolation which is hard to bear. The world continues to rush on, and too often even those bound to us by ties of blood, caught in the swirl, seem to have forgotten us, and the victim lives more and more alone. Old friends have gone, and new friends are not so easy to find, especially in the class of middle aged folk. There are more of their own kind, and thus old folks are forced to sit and watch the world go by, or to dream their dreams of other days. To furnish the comforts and companionships which are thus denied, the Brethren's Home was called into being, and this service it renders, and offers to render to all who come into its shelter.

MARTIN SHIVELY.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

Dear Editor:

Accepting your invitation in this week's Evangelist,—here is my "view." May I commend your splendid effort to stir your readers on our duties as Christian citizens, at this time politically. As Sister Zook well says, "God and his righteousness" is first, spiritually; but only to those who "seek." However there are the godless for whom we make laws. In politics today, is it not well to consider prohibition first? For what are taxes and tariff, or even unemployment vs. the Eighteenth Amendment? Our Eighteenth Amendment truly deals with life and death in the Nation's homes and yet more seriously on the highways.

Here in the great Yakima Valley of Washington we are cooperating with Dan Poling's plan, The Allied Forces. In order that we unite our Forces at Sunnyside, we appointed a committee to choose from the unusually large number of candidates those for whom we should cast our ballots. The "wets" largely predominated. While some "straddled," there were plenty of "drys" from whom to choose. We printed 3,000 cards, this being more than the registered voters. These were mailed principally to "Box holders," in Sunnyside and four smaller towns surrounding were also supplied. The result was that 22 out of 26 of the candidates we selected were nominated. It may be more than a circumstance that all of these were running on the Republican ticket. We are now trimming our sails for the finals, November 8th.

May I yet add that our sister Edith Beachy of Longview, Washington just had a letter from a Mrs. Dr. G. of Washington, D. C. saying, "For the five months we have been here, I have regularly visited the galleries of Congress. I am a Democrat; but am ashamed of what was going on and especially in the Lower House. I feel sorry for Hoover, and would be only too glad to go out and campaign for him." How proud we are that the members of the Brethren church rightly feel that Prohibition same as Slavery was always a tenet of ours even to excommunication.

Respectfully submitted,

H. M. LICHTY.

OUR LITTLE READERS

TWO LITTLE LIPS

*Two little red lips
Packed in a pout!
Surely that one little face
Sweeter is without.*

*Two little red lips
Parted in a cry!
Surely sweet words they can speak,
If they only try.*

*Two little red lips
Slipping for a smile!
Surely they are meant to give Sunshine all the while.*

*Two little red lips
Lifted for a kiss!*

Promise to be very good Ever after this.

—Exchange.

PUT YOUR HEART IN IT

Nan was fond of studying the dictionary; she always wanted to understand what she was reading and would often ask her mother the meaning of an unfamiliar word. Her mother wished her to learn to depend on her own efforts, when possible, so she would say, when asked the meaning of a word. "I think I have a good idea what it means, but suppose you get the dictionary and see if my memory serves me right," and Nan, instead of saying, "Oh! if you don't want to tell me, never mind," would get the dictionary and read the definition of the word and her mother by illustration helped her to understand it perfectly.

One evening in her Bible reading she came upon the verse, "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord," and said, "Mother, what does heartily mean?" "Dictionary," said mother briefly, with a smile.

"I might have known," laughed Nan; "I never get any help from you about a word, until I have helped myself."

Down came the dictionary from the shelf and Nan studied it for a little. "Worse than ever."

"How?" asked mother.

"It says, 'Cordially, enthusiastically,'" read Nan, trying to get her tongue round the word.

"Enthusiastically," suggested mother.

"Yes, that's it!" returned Nan.

"Doesn't help you much, Nan, does it? Suppose I define heartily as meaning putting your heart into every action?"

Nan looked bewildered and then broke into a merry laugh.

"I only have one heart and that's inside of me, where it belongs. I don't see how I can put it into things that I do."

"I thought you were putting it into your own romp with the kitten before supper; you led him quite a chase after the scrap of paper tied to the string."

"Oh! it was fun," beamed Nan, as she thought of it. "But how was my heart in it, mother?"

"It means, Nan, that you are to do things with all your thought upon what you are doing; to be earnest in work or in play, to be glad and happy and faithful in everything, because it pleases the Lord to have you be so. Aren't you happier because you love God and are trying to do the things that please Jesus, than you would otherwise be?"

"Yes," said Nan. "lots happier; but does it mean even playing with the kitten?"

"Why not?" smiled mother. "If you did not play with the kitten just as hard as you could, would you be apt to study as hard as you could, or weed the garden as though you liked to do it?"

"Perhaps not," admitted Nan.

"And," continued mother, "don't you think you enjoyed having the kitten have a good time, as well as having one yourself?"

"Oh, yes! I just love to play with him, he enjoys it so."

"So, just as you played heartily with the kitten, that he might have a good time, so, when you do things for others, you want to put your heart in it, that it may be a blessing to them. Do it heartily as unto the Lord, for you know the Savior said what we do for others in his name he accepts as done to him."

"I didn't put my heart in it, when I carried Mrs. Jacobs the Thanksgiving dinner. She said, 'Your mother is a good woman, and whatever she does she never does by halves.' I might have said I was glad to bring the food to her, for I really was, but I just didn't," said honest Nan.

"But you enter into your studies heartily," was mother's encouraging word, "and you know God is interested to have us know all we can, so we can do more good in the world."

"I try to do my best," said Nan humbly, "but I never thought much about the Lord's being interested in it."

"He is interested in everything that concerns us. You are doing it heartily as unto the Lord, when you seek to find out just what his words mean, as you did this verse, instead of just reading it and not stopping to understand it."

"It must make a big difference in people's lives when they think about this, mustn't it, mother?" said Nan, seriously. "I hope I'll always think of it. I think I will enjoy doing things more, if I do."

"I'm sure you will, Nan, and now the dishes are ready for you to do."

Nan closed her Bible with a comical expression on her face. "I most wish I hadn't found that verse."

Mother laughed and so did Nan. "Well, here goes," and she went to her task so heartily that mother said, "Save the pieces, Nan," and while she worked she kept repeating to herself, "Heartily as unto the Lord." "It's pretty hard on you, poor heart, to be inside of me and in everything I do, but I guess you can do it."—Southern Churchman.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ASHLAND, OHIO

The fall communion service will be held in the First Brethren church of Ashland, Ohio, on the evening of October 16th (Sunday) beginning at 7 o'clock. All members are urged to be present and neighboring Brethren are invited.

DYOLL BELOTE, Pastor.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Washington, D. C. Brethren church will hold their Fall Communion on Sunday night, October 9th at 7:30 o'clock. We invite any Brethren who may be able to attend to be with us in this blessed service.

HOMER A. KENT, Pastor.

WAYNESBORO, PENNSYLVANIA

The Brethren of Waynesboro, Pennsylvania will observe Holy Communion Sunday evening, October 16th, service beginning at seven o'clock. All members of the church are urged to attend. Brethren of like faith are cordially invited.

W. C. BENSHOFF, Pastor.

UMBRELLA LOST AT OHIO CONFERENCE

At the Ohio conference in June a silk umbrella was left by some one and the owner can have the umbrella by giving a description of same.

REV. C. A. STEWART.

VOL. LIV
Number 40

October 15
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

W h y ?

(From "The Christian Statesman")

WHY should the present generation of voters demand an opportunity to vote on the Eighteenth Amendment on the ground that they had no opportunity to vote on it, any more than on any other article in the constitution?

Why should the friends of prohibition give any consent to resubmission? The liquor forces never gave them anything by courtesy when they were on the defensive.

Why should the Drys allow the liquor crowd to choose the time for the test of strength which is certain to come and which they wish to bring on during the present depression?

Why should the Drys allow the Wets to dictate state conventions for ratification instead of the method always heretofore followed?

Why should the Drys accept the nullification of the unity of the national police power in regard to the liquor evil any more than in counterfeiting, narcotic control or interstate commerce?

Why tie the hands of Congress in taking away the power to prohibit the liquor traffic in the future?

Why should any Dry come to the conclusion that prohibition is a failure and can never be enforced because the tools of the European liquor forces and the Raskobites, the Sabinites, the Duponts and Jouett Shouse assert this to be a fact?

Why should any Dry, or Wet either, howl over a net cost of 4c per capita for the enforcement of the prohibition law?

Why should the Wets ask us to follow the lead of Canada in the control of liquor when the net results of that plan are a steady growth in the consumption of alcohol with all its attendant evils?

Why should we shut our eyes to the results of the South Carolina experiment with all its attendant political corruption?

Why should any sane man expect the Congressmen and Senators from legally wet states to vote appropriations to defend the dry states against the depredations of their own constituents and probably masters?

Why should any patriotic American accept the declaration that the Federal government cannot police the slacker states under the Eighteenth Amendment? President Jackson did not accept that fallacy concerning the collection of tariff in 1832.

Why should the government of the United States lie down before malefactors of great wealth, because they have combined with the corrupt politicians, the aliens and the underworld?

Why expect the remaining eighty per cent of racketeers to gain respect for the law if the people lie down before the liquor racketeers and oblige them by repealing the law which they violate?

Why establish as a special privilege, an industry that never possessed any natural or constitutional right to exist and, according to the Supreme Court in Christensen vs. Crowley, never can?

Why accept as a governmental policy, at the demand of tax dodgers, aliens, brewers and drunks, that which the science of ethics denounces as wrong, the science of politics as dangerous, the Protestant Churches denounce as a national sin and common sense denounces as folly?

Echo answers WHY? No further response except the monotonous drone of the legions of liquor who chant "We want beer."

The Holy Spirit and the Supernatural Witness, Essential to a Spiritual Revival

By Len G. Boughton

Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.—Luke 24:49.

Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

I

There are three words here that engage our thought. First, the word "endued." Have you ever stopped to ask what our Lord meant when he said, "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued"? Perhaps you have thought he meant "endowed," but endowment is a very different word from enduement, and they signify very different conditions. The revised version translates the word "endued" here, "clothed," wrapped up with, possessed by, the first thing you see when you see an individual. When you see me, the first thing you see is my clothes; and when I see you the first thing I see is your clothes. It is the thing we are covered with. Clothed! The old classic Greeks always rendered this word "clothed," and with them it was a metaphorical word, and signified one thing: it signified the outstanding, predominating characteristic of one, the thing that impresses you first and last; the outstanding, predominating characteristic. With that in mind, read the text again:

Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until your outstanding characteristic is power from on high.

II

Let me illustrate: First, I shall refer to two old Greek characters: Aristophanes and Plutarch.

We read that "Aristophanes was 'clothed with audacity.'" Now what did they mean by that? They meant that the outstanding, predominating characteristic of Aristophanes was his audacity, his defiant nature, his defiance of all ordinary and regular forms of conduct, so that when one saw him he thought not of where he lived or what he had, but of his defiant nature.

Next, let us look at Plutarch. Classic Greek in referring to Plutarch says he was "clothed with nobility and wealth." What did they mean by this? What did they expect you to understand when you read this? They expected that you would think of one whose outstanding, predominating characteristic, that which towered above everything else, was his nobility and his wealth, one or the other or both.

Now, let us reduce this line of thought to our own experience: Some years ago I had a game of golf with the richest man in the world, and all the while I could not help thinking, "There is the richest man in the world!" The outstanding characteristic of that man to me, was his wealth.

Now what does Jesus say to these disciples? "Tarry ye in Jerusalem, until the outstanding, predominating characteristic of your life is power from on high."

III

And this brings us to the second word, "power." Of course, you know the word in the original is that from which we get our word "dynamite." "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until the outstanding characteristic of your life is dynamite."

Christianity throughout its history has always been an explosive. It has ever been changing things. The nature of the right kind of Christianity is just that; it is explosive. It is a change of thought and life. It was true with these disciples when they received this "power from on high." Through their testimony and changed manner of life they helped change the life of the world. On the day of Pentecost things were changed. It was not an anarchistic, bolshevistic kind of change, but a change in conformity to the life and teaching of Jesus. Things were changed wherever Jesus went. And in that sense Christ was dynamite in the world. This he intends we shall be.

IV

And, my friends, I have found from years of experience that the only type of reform that is going to abide is the reform that comes as the result of the clothing of God's people, with the Holy Spirit. True reform must begin inside and work out.

Let me illustrate: I know a woman who for many years had her joints distorted by a bad form of arthritis. Oh, the suffering she endured! She was very much interested in the work among the slums, but at last she could not work because she could not get off her bed. So she went to live in a house down in the very heart of the slum section, and her friends wondered what she meant by it. Soon the poor, suffering women of the community found that there was a woman of God upstairs in that building, and they went up to see her, and then they told their neighbors, and they went. Finally, the influence of that godly woman spread throughout the community in which she lived, and in less than five years every slum house in that section had been transformed. There was not one left to carry on. That woman just lived there in that room, charged by the Holy Spirit. The outstanding characteristic of her living was Christ made real by the power of the Holy Spirit. As people came in touch with it they were changed, and finally the whole community was changed.

V

Now it is when we are endued with power from on high that we become witnesses. We witness in every way. This woman's life, sweet and tender even in suffering, was a testimony. When she spoke, her words somehow fell upon her hearers with power irresistible, and they were changed. Oh, if we could get a dozen or more people in any single church thus filled with the Spirit, and they would begin to manifest Christ in his way, people would begin to crowd in and fill our empty pews. The world does not look for Christ in the Bible, it looks for him in his people. The church must show Christ to the world if it is to win the world.

I know of a man who on one occasion was in a section of the country that was new to him, and he wanted to visit a cotton mill and see the machinery work. He obtained permission to walk through the mill, but the manager was very careful to tell him not to talk to any one, just walk through and look. He began his inspection.

After a while he passed some women who were working with their shuttles, and as he passed silently along one of these women, looking up and observing him as he moved along, said to the woman next her:

"Did you see that man?"

"Yes."

"Isn't he a remarkable man? I believe that man is a saint; I have never seen such a saintly face."

Finally, one man turned to another man next him, and said:

"Sure as you live that man is a saint. I'd like to know who he is."

Man after man and woman after woman commented upon his spiritual bearing. He had a grace that only the Spirit of God is able to impart.

After a while the whistle blew for the lunch hour, when the workers were free for a time. A group rushed up to the stranger and said, "Who are you?"

"I am just a visitor looking over your mill," he replied.

The manager, noting the interest created by the stranger, came and said to him:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but who are you?"

"Just a preacher visiting the mill."

"Would you like to speak to these people during their dinner hour? They all want to hear you speak."

He spoke, and kept on speaking each day for days, and a great revival broke out there in that quiet way; and the surrounding sections felt the force of it and came in touch with it, and things were changed in that mill and in the community.

My friends, take courage; it is possible to have a revival, but it will not come until our Lord's disciples are clothed with the dynamite of the Spirit. Then the church will indeed have a supernatural testimony, which is an essential part of every true Spiritual revival.—"Christian Index."

ADDITIONAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

(Too late for back page)

WARSAW, INDIANA

The Warsaw Brethren church will observe Communion, Thursday night, November 3, at 7:30. Neighboring and visiting Brethren are cordially invited to share this fellowship with us.

L. E. LINDOWER, Pastor.

ATTENTION, PASTORS

Publication of Conference Addresses

Your committee on Conference Addresses has not yet received all of them. Neither are we sure, in the light of present conditions, that we should go forward in the publication of them. There is no provision for underwriting the expense, and many pastors say they can not sell them.

Unless there are protests immediately sent to us, or money assured from some source, it is the opinion of the two members of the committee signing this notice, from reactions at Conferences and elsewhere, that the manuscripts should be filed as originally ordered, with the Brethren Publishing Company for any future use that may be determined by National Conference. We regret the necessity for this action but do not care to publish them unless the above conditions are somehow met.

Distance and time preclude consultation with the other member of the committee in regard to this matter. Signed,

K. M. MONROE
CHARLES A. BAME

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

What We Need to Emphasize About Prohibition

The Prohibition situation is admittedly in a serious plight. It is so, because of the loss of morale on the part of the Prohibition forces. They have lost confidence, lost their fighting spirit and have almost lost faith in the effectiveness and value of Prohibition itself. This is due to the fact that the wets have captured the center of the stage and have almost completely monopolized the attention of the people. All that people think or talk about, dries as well as wets, is "the terrible situation into which the Prohibition regime has brought us." We are continually hearing about the prevalence of bootlegging, lawlessness and crime, with the insinuation or the direct assertion that all these have come about as the result of Prohibition. We need to turn our eyes away from this gloomy prospect, that has been superinduced upon the public mind by high powered propaganda. It is primarily a mental attitude. The actual situation is not nearly so bad as it is represented. The worst thing about it is that we, that is, people in the large, have lost heart, lost hope. We are gripped with the feeling, or the fear, that Prohibition is a failure. That is the really serious part about it. That is why there is danger of an overturn of the Prohibition policy,—because we are giving all too much attention to and faith in what the wet press is telling us, so that we half believe that Prohibition is a failure. Of course it is not, but if we believe it is, we will cease to fight for it and will lose all we have gained by many years of conflict. We need to take our attention away from the wet show that is calculated to depress and discourage, and make a picture of our own that will inspire confidence, courage and daring.

For one thing we need to stress the fact that Prohibition is succeeding, in spite of wet propaganda to the contrary and newspaper interference. Prohibition does prohibit; not perfectly, of course, but so successfully that the wet crowd is willing to pay almost any price to get legalized liquor back again. According to the U. S. Department of Commerce Statistics, 22.43 gallons of liquor was the average for every man, woman and child in the United States yearly from 1910 to 1914. Compare the amount now being drunk with that stupendous amount and it is like comparing a bottle with a barrel. The Chicago Tribune in June, 1914, revealed the startling fact that "14,000 women and girls frequent the back rooms of saloons on Madison, Clark and Cottage Grove Avenue." Who in his right mind would say that anything like such conditions obtain today? There was a retail liquor dealer for every 74 families in 1908. It was difficult to find a prominent street corner in any city without a saloon. Nor was liquor to be had only from legal dealers. In 1908 there were 4,000 blind pigs in Minneapolis (population at that time 295,000), according to the Minneapolis Journal, March 28th. In the same year the Pittsburgh Sun, May 1st, says Judge Robert S. Frazer was told that "some drugstores in the hill district were worse than the saloons, and that little boys could get anything they wanted in the saloons." The Pittsburgh Post, March 4, 1890, said: "There are reported to be 4,000 speakeasies in Philadelphia, and so great is this evil that the judges who are to sit in the license court have given special instructions to constables to inquire and report these lawless rum shops."

So the speakeasy was before Prohibition, wet leaders to the contrary notwithstanding; nor has Prohibition caused it to increase. Prohibition Commissioner Woodcock wrote a letter to Senator Sheppard June 23, 1932 and said: "On April 11, 1932 in the city of New York the Prohibition Administrator of that district caused a survey to be made of the borough of Manhattan for the purpose of locating all premises suspected of selling liquor. The result of that survey showed that there were 3,494 places where liquor might be sold. Of these places 2,182 were speakeasies, 927 restaurants, 286 cordial shops, and 119 night clubs. In 1929 the Police Commissioner of New York stated that there were 32,000 open illegal saloons in New York City, and since that time statements have been made placing the figure as high as 60,000. Here again a careful, accurate survey discounted materially unfounded rumors." And if the state of New York had not repealed its dry law enforcement act and so had not withdrawn its state and local police and courts from all cooperation, the difference between facts and wet rumors would have been far greater than the difference between 60,000 and 2,182.

Another thing we must emphasize is the benefits of Prohibition. These must be kept in the minds of the people. For example: Our national volume of trade in 1914, wet, was twenty-two billion; 1931, dry, forty billions, a gain of 82 per cent. The bank deposits in 1914 were nineteen billions; in 1931, fifty-two billions, a gain of 178 per cent. In savings banks in 1914 there were nine billions; in 1931, twenty-eight billions, a gain of 200 per cent. The national income in 1914 was thirty-six billions; in 1931, seventy billions, a gain of 48 per cent. New life insurance issued in 1914 amounted

SONG OF THE DECANTER

There was an old decanter and its mouth was gaping wide; the rosy wine had ebbed away and left its crystal side;
and the wind
went humming, humming;
up and down the sides it flew,
and through the reed-like hollow neck
the wildest notes it blew. I placed it in the window, where the blast was blowing free, and fancied that its pale mouth sang the queerest strains to me. "They tell me—puny conquerors!—the plague has slain his ten, and War his hundred thousands of the very best of men;
but I"—twas thus the bottle spoke—"but I have conquered more than all your famous conquerors, so feared and famed of yore.
Then come, ye youth and maidens, come drink from out my cup the beverage that dulls the brain and burns the spirit up;
that puts to shame the conquerors that slay their scores below;
for this has deluged millions with its lava tide of woe. Though in the path of battle, darkest waves of blood may roll, yet while I killed the body, I have damned the very soul. The cholera, the sword, such ruin never wrought, as I, in mirth or malice on the innocent have brought. 'And still I breathe upon them, and they shrink before my breath; and year by year my thousands tread The Fearful Road To Death.

Reprinted from

The Linotype News

to twelve billions; in 1931, sixteen billions, a gain of 67 per cent. The average income per capita in 1914 was $360; in 1931, it was $562, a gain of 56 per cent. Crime has decreased under Prohibition, though the sensational newspapers have made "the world crime-conscious." The U. S. Bureau of Census records, 1910 to 1928, show that the crime rate declined almost 40 per cent, even with the added arrests for "new laws" on drugs, liquor and motor traffic. It is a benefit to the average kitchen and to the farmer. The wife could not buy butter and flour with the same money that the husband spent for liquor. She could not buy clothes and books for her children with the money that the man handed over to the bar-tender. And let the farmer remember that when booze went out milk came in, and he must know that he gets more money for butter than for the grain in booze. According to the sworn testimony of Gustav Pabst, Milwaukee brewer, given (1917) when he represented the liquor interests in Washington, "Only three-fourths of one per cent of the country's grain" was used by the brewers before Prohibition. It takes tons to pounds more grain to produce milk than it ever did to make beer, and Prohibition has increased the per capita consumption of milk from 754 pounds in 1917 to 1,000 pounds in 1929. As Louis J. Taber, president of the National Grange, says: "It takes vastly more grain for a million pork chops and a million glasses of milk than for a million glasses of beer and a million glasses of whiskey." In every way one might consider the matter, Prohibition would be found to be of incalculable benefit.

But it is not enough to set forth the benefits of Prohibition, we must emphasize the evils of drink, and particularly of the legalized liquor traffic. The young people must be made to understand this, or they will be led to accept the claim of the wets that conditions are much worse now than before Prohibition. And not only so, but they must be given a conscience against the use of intoxicants. This, The Christian Conservator believes, is "the primary argument in behalf of Prohibition." Liquor drinking is wrong; it is sin. "The vileness of this sin was impressed upon the minds and consciences of the people by the fruits which intoxication brought forth. Great emphasis was laid upon the irresponsible condition of the drunkard, his vileness, the sins committed in his drunken state, the unhappiness and impoverishment of his home; the degradation of character and the shortening of life, the disease and misery brought upon his home, the wife degraded and earning the livelihood of the family over the washtub. Then we pointed out the effect of such conditions upon the health, morals and education of the on-coming generation. At the very heart of the cause of these conditions stood the saloon as the agent of all this crime and misery." This must be made plain to the new generation if the saloon or its equivalent is not to be brought back.

And finally, we must all keep in mind the necessity of cooperation on the part of all friends of Prohibition. We must work together or we will eventually lose all we have gained. We have not been as united nor as well organized as we should. We would do well to recall William Jennings Bryan's famous story about the donkeys. He used to say that in the great West the little burros or donkeys go in droves. When any enemy molests them they all run together with their heads in the center and their heels sticking out, covering every point of the circle surrounding them. Then their motors start and their heels fly in every direction like battering rams, and woe be to any animal that comes too close. The temperance people, and particularly the church folk, have not been so wise in their defense against the enemy, strong drink. They have often lined up with their heels together, kicking one another and their heads sticking out to see what is going on. We need more unity and cooperation.

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

Don't squeal, if some preacher or writer hits a pet fault of yours; you will only expose yourself. A better way is to take it gracefully, keep quiet about it and mend your ways.

We have been informed that Brother M. L. Sands of Muncie, Indiana, has accepted a call to become pastor of the church at Clayton, Ohio, and that he and Mrs. Sands will soon be moving upon the field.

Brother Raymond Gingrich, pastor of the church at Fair Haven, Ohio, was in the editors' office recently and dropped the information that his prayer meetings are keeping up fine, the attendance at the last mid-week service being 109.

A revival meeting is now in progress at the Flora, Indiana, church, with Brother R. Paul Miller as the evangelist. Brother Freeman Ankrum is the pastor. This church has just had a busy, and we understand an enjoyable, time entertaining the Indiana Conference.

Brother Sylvester Lowman, pastor of the church at Oakville, Indiana, is in the midst of a two weeks' revival meeting. We understand he is doing most of the preaching himself, though we notice Brother M. L. Sands is scheduled for a sermon on "Our Peculiar Doctrines." On the opening night there will be a Dry Federation meeting with a Judge Guthrie as the speaker. During the last week other speakers and a musical organization known as "The Gospel Messengers" from Fort Wayne will assist Brother Lowman.

Brother Leslie E. Lindower writes of the closing of his pastorate at Terra Alta and Grafton, West Virginia, where his service, though short in duration, was abundantly blessed of the Lord. Ten were added to the membership of the churches and the people were found both cooperative and ready to spiritual instruction. He is now located at Warsaw, Indiana, where he has not only been well received, but has been favorably impressed with these good people,—and a good people they are.

The special Christian Endeavor message this week is by the superintendent of the Junior department, and she is urging the organization of Junior societies where there are none. She thinks, and we believe rightly so, that there should be a Junior society in just about every church. Don't forget, this is organization month. Pastors can afford to take time to help get a Junior organization going and thus enable him the better to train the children of his church in the service of the Lord. A well-conducted Junior society will go a long way toward the achievement of that end.

The matron of the Brethren Home at Flora, Indiana, writes this week, inviting Brethren people who wish to take a rest for the winter and at the same time to economize in living expense, to come to the Home and enjoy the splendid accommodations there to be found. The management offers board, room and washing for $20 a month per individual. Any Brethren people who are situated so as to take advantage of this offer, will not only help themselves, but will also help the institution.

Our letter this week from Conemaugh, Pennsylvania, says the work of the church, in contrast to the industrial situation, is going forward, and that all the organizations are active. The pastor's method of building up greater interest in foreign missions by encouraging the members of the W. M. S. to write to missionaries is commendable. A successful Community Daily Vacation Bible School was conducted and it was the pastor's third successive year as the superintendent. It speaks well for the life of the Sunday school that it had the largest attendance record during the past summer in its history. Effort is being put forth to deepen the spiritual life and to intensify the evangelistic passion. From reports received it seems that many of our churches are working with more than usual zeal toward such ends. It is a hopeful sign, and the future is bright if we all thus put first things first.

Brother George E. Cone writes of a special Rally Day and Homecoming program at the Milledgeville, Illinois, church where he has been the faithful leader of the people for seven years. Aside from other interesting features, Brother Z. T. Livengood of Lanark, and at several times was pastor of this church, gave a much appreciated historical statement. Brother Livengood, by the way, is one of the pioneer ministers of our church, having been ordained to the ministry before the division and having organized the congregations and led in the building of the churches at Milledgeville, Lanark and Bethlehem, Illinois. He is nearing his eighty-third birthday and, though born in Pennsylvania, grew to manhood in Illinois and has spent most of his life in the Milledgeville community. At the close of the historical sketch Dr. W. S. Bell brought a much appreciated message from the Word.

The Urgent Need of Christianity in the Home

By H. M. Oberholtzer

Something is seriously wrong with civilization today. We are no longer boasting of our advances as we once did. Some of the things in which we gloried have become our undoing. In some ways we have learned too much and our knowledge has wrought us much injury. Obsessed with an ardent ambition for intellectual attainment and material gain and with a lust for carnal pleasure, we have rejected the way of wisdom and holiness and run violently in the way of folly and sin. Professing ourselves to be wise, we became fools. We made ourselves the prey of innumerable evils and opened the way for the alarming and distressing conditions which we now lament. Whence the crime wave that has swept our country, carried on chiefly by boys and young men? Whence the appalling lawlessness of our land? Whence our vexing divorce evil? Whence our moral and spiritual decline that so many deplore? Whence the tendency of so many young people to neglect and despise the church? Why are so many churches almost depleted? Why have revivals been on the wane in recent years?

Doubtless the war, the movie, the pleasure resort, the improper use of the automobile and many other things, some of which came upon us unawares, have been contributing causes, but the source of evil lies much deeper, and perhaps nearer to most of us. Jesus said, "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies." In Proverbs we read, "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." The heart, the moral and spiritual center of our beings, is therefore most important. This we have neglected. "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

What shall we do? Where shall we begin? This is not hard to answer. It is very evident that we must go back and begin where we left off, namely in the home, for this is where we have failed, probably more than anywhere else. Paul said, "Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Note that here is an appeal to fathers, and not only an appeal, but a command, and as direct and forceful as any command in the Bible. Too often the spiritual instruction, training and influence in the home is left entirely to the mother. The father should be the spiritual head as well as the business and financial head of the home. He should be both prophet and priest in the home, instructing in the ways of righteousness and leading and directing in the worship of God. The ancient Israelites were thus commanded of God, "These words which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." The ancient principle here involved is no less essential and urgent in these modern times. In my judgment, our widespread failure to adopt and enforce such principle is the chief cause of our moral and spiritual decline and of the consequent evil and distress. Here is where we have fallen down in our modern civilization. We have been carried away with the unholy ambitions and evil tendencies of this age. The strenuous grind of business and daily toil, the desire for ease, and luxury, the ambition for wealth and power, the hallucinations of carnal and worldly pleasures, and many kindred delusions and temptations have taken us far from the way of steadfast faith in God, since devotion and true holiness, and have devastated our homes of their spiritual atmosphere and sacred influence. As the former saints have passed on, the family altars have crumbled down. The orderly arrangement that once made family worship possible no longer exists in most homes. In many homes the Bible is merely an ornament or a relic of the past, and prayer is never offered, not even at meal time. Yes, in many so called Christian homes. What wonder that our youth grow up to fall an easy prey to skepticism and atheism, and to despise the Bible and the church; that many of them become law breakers, bootleggers, gangsters and victims of vice; that our jails and penitentiaries are filled with young men; that young women have lost their virtue; that the marriage tie is losing its sacredness; that so many public officials are crooks and embezzlers.

Next to the faithful preaching of the Gospel, the most outstanding need of the hour is personal piety and active Christianity practiced and taught in the homes of our land. The most faithful preaching is seriously handicapped by the lack of cooperation in the home. Many faithful pastors are earnestly preaching the Word, but their most urgent appeals fall upon dull and listless ears and unresponsive hearts, and upon too many empty seats. Our homes must be made more thoroughly Christian. The forces of evil are multiplying and increasing in power. The present age has developed many subtle and alluring devices of sin. Higher education has rapidly advanced and has, in many instances, developed theories and influences that are dangerously antagonistic to the Christian faith. Let parents be aroused to the dangers that threaten the faith and civilization of their posterity. There is just one thing to do. Turn to the Lord. Make the Bible an open book in the home. Instruct the children in the ways of God. Establish family worship in the home. A way can be found, even in the busiest time. In this time of unemployment we have a splendid opportunity. Seek the aid of the church. Attend regularly its services. Let all the family reverence God, the Bible and the church, and faithfully obey the Word. Let there be mutuality and cooperation between the home and the church, the principles of the Gospel proclaimed by the church being demonstrated by the life in the home. But to attain this is our problem. Perhaps the great responsibility falls upon the pastor, and if his pulpit utterances are not heard and heeded, then he must take the message direct to the homes in his pastoral visitation and by urgent personal effort seek to make it effective. It must be done.

Sidney, Indiana.

I know of no peculiar preparation for immortality beyond the faithful performance of the best functions of mortal life.—James Martineau.

PRAYER

Give me grace to fight like a soldier of thine, without wrath and without fear. Give me to do my duty, but give the victory when thou pleasest. Let me live, if so thou wilt—only let me die in honor with thee. Let thy truth be victorious, if not now, yet when it shall please thee; and oh, I pray, let no deed of mine delay its coming. Let my work fail if it be unto evil, but save my soul in truth. Amen.—George Fox.

Wet Statements Challenged By Facts

This is one of the valuable statements given to the religious press by Georgia Robertson, who is a capable and informed defender of Prohibition. It is extremely timely just now as voters are contemplating the polls and are faced with the responsibility of doing what they can to elect dry legislatures and a dry Congress.—Editor.)

Statement: Our people did not and do not want prohibition, it was "put over" while two million men were overseas.

Facts: Two thousand amendments, of various kinds, to the Constitution had been proposed, but only seventeen of them had been adopted previous to the Eighteenth Amendment, showing they are not hastily adopted. The first resolution for a prohibition amendment was offered to Congress forty years before the Eighteenth Amendment.

Two-thirds of the states had State Prohibition—and there were also large dry areas in wet states—and that all but two of the legislatures in the forty-eight states ratified—instead of rejecting—the Eighteenth Amendment proves that the masses of the people wanted prohibition.

Furthermore, not more than 10 per cent of the Nation's voters were ever during the war prevented from voting by wartime duties, and "at least half of these were from dry states." Also the members of Congress who submitted the amendment were all elected before we entered the war. There are five comparatively small groups of people clamoring for return of liquor: those who want to drink themselves—largely among the foreign born—and the so-called "smart set"; a few of what psychologists call an "infantile mind who, like children, resent being told they "must not do"; those who hope thus to further their political interests; those who themselves hold, or some member of their family holds, liquor stock; and a few enormously wealthy persons who want to shift heavy income sur-taxes from their own shoulders to the shoulders of the laboring class through a three-cent tax per glass on beer. The two latter classes combined with liquor interests abroad wanting to sell to us are able to buy all the space they want in the press to broadcast wet propaganda. Personal greed regardless of the welfare of humanity is back of the cry against prohibition.

"Before prohibition less than 100 persons owned 95 per cent of the liquor business and made more money than it took to run the Federal Government!"

Statement: The people ought to have been allowed to cast their votes directly for or against prohibition.

Facts: That would have been illegal and so amounted to nothing either way, for the Constitution says that any amendment to it must be adopted by a two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress and be ratified by three-fourths of the states. This was done, and is the way all of the amendments to the Constitution were adopted.

Statement: The Eighteenth Amendment is a violation of "States' Rights."

Facts: Before we had National Prohibition a majority of the states had State Prohibition; but they could not protect themselves from the wet states unlawfully shipping in liquor, often just across the state line. Thus it had been shown the only way to protect the dry majority of states and dry areas in others from the wet minority was to have National Prohibition. It was written into the Constitution by the States themselves ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment. All but two of the 48 states voted for it!

Statement: Prohibition has caused lawlessness, and crime, and bootlegging.

Facts: Crime dates back to the days of Cain who killed his own brother, and all kinds of crime and lawlessness have flourished throughout the ages, while we have had prohibition only about 12 years. Bootlegging, moonshine stills, and "blind pigs" flourished before the days of prohibition and were a thorn in the flesh not only of Government officials but of licensed liquor dealers, whom they undersold, having paid neither Government tax nor license fee. The Chicago Tribune of July 11, 1917, said "The liquor business has been the faithful ally of every vicious element in American life. It has protected criminals, it has fostered the social evil, and it has bribed politicians, juries, and legislatures." That was before the days of prohibition. The May number of the Brewers' Journal, 1910, reads "No matter what laws may be made to cripple the beverage industry, they cannot and they will not be obeyed by those managing those industries." They sold to minors and drunkards, violated the Sunday and week-day closing hours, planted their saloons near churches and school houses and flouted the law through crooked means to dislodge them. Under Canadian Liquor Control Irving Fisher says, "The increase in the number of arrests for violation of the liquor laws, the steady increase in bootlegging and illicit distilling are much in evidence, and the Commissioners frankly state they are unable to eradicate them." How then can we expect to better control the liquor traffic by again legalizing it after having "ousted it" because we could not control it when it was legalized? It was the alcohol in the beer and liquor that made the saloon what it was, not the name saloon.

Statement: Prohibition has increased drinking.

Facts: One cannot determine facts about anything by judging from his own limited observation. If the people drink more now than before prohibition why is it, as Evangeline Booth says, that now they average taking in at the New York City "homes" only 7 drunks a night where they used to take in 1200 to 1300 drunks a night before prohibition? Or why have we "now only 11 Keeley Institutes" to help people rid themselves of the liquor habit where "we used to have 98?"

Statement: Prohibition is debauching our young people.

Facts: Your sons and daughters may tell you of shocking conditions; but can a nation popularize divorce, make sex questions the prominent feature in movies, stage, and literature, without lowering the moral tone and conduct of young people—as well as their elders? Furthermore there always has been a moral let-down following war and no one can deny that cheap automobiles, lack of parental authority, and lack of religious training have all had their effect. Many young drinkers simply follow the example set by their parents. College presidents, high school principals and college coaches know intimately conditions before and after prohibition, and they say there is much less drinking among their students, even with a much larger number in attendance—an increase of 14 per cent since 1916. Before Prohibition the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association deliberately said "We must create the appetite for liquor. . . . The open field for the creation of appetite is among the boys. Nickels expended in treats to boys now, will return dollars to your tills after the appetite has been formed." And at that time we legalized and protected their business while they deliberately planned the ruin of our boys for profit for themselves! Should prohibition be made the scapegoat for all evils?

Statement: Prohibition has increased taxes.

Facts: In 1914 the United States Government received

245 million dollars from liquor taxes, and the state and local governments 80 million from the liquor dealers. What a tremendous loss 325 million dollars from Government treasuries! But was it a loss? Where did that money come from? From the pockets of the liquor interests? Yes. But they took five times as much out of the pockets of the people, from which they handed that smaller amount over to the Federal and state Governments. All the legitimate industries of the country suffered the loss of about five times the amount of the liquor tax that otherwise would largely have been spent for worthwhile things bringing comfort and happiness instead of poverty, misery, and sickness. So the liquor interests did not really pay that 325 million dollars in taxes after all: the people themselves paid it—and paid dearly too.

Statement: The enforcement of prohibition is costing an enormous sum.

Facts: Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, Director of Prohibition said that for the first 11 years of prohibition the money received in fines, penalties and revenue from taxes on lawful distilled and fermented liquors exceeded $264,432,360.00, the money paid out for prohibition enforcement. So instead of enforcement costing anything the first 11 years the Prohibition enforcement bureau turned back to the Government over $264,432,360.00. A recent statement by Col. Woodcock showed they were about even in 1931.

Statement: Bootleg liquor has caused so much disease and death.

Facts: Remember wet physicians admit that even "pure grain alcohol" is a poison. Any one suddenly manifesting the inability to talk straight, walk straight, and falling down in a stupor unable to move—not having taken alcohol in any form—would be pronounced dangerously ill! The Government keeps a record through the Census Bureau of all deaths from alcohol and diseases caused by alcohol, and these records show there has been a decided decrease in deaths from alcohol and diseases caused by alcohol since prohibition. In New York State under state enforcement deaths from alcohol dropped from 8.2 per one hundred thousand to 1.2 per 100,000 and then under repeal of state enforcement it went up to 7.5 per 100,000 population. Repeal of state enforcement in Montana showed an increase about the same.

Statement: The return of liquor would cut down unemployment and furnish a market for grain.

Facts: When we spent about two billion dollars a year for liquor we did not have that same money to spend for the necessities and comforts of life; and we only employed in making that "beer, wine, and distilled liquor" 86,914 people and their total wages were only $58,432,000.00. "In 1930 we employed in the manufacture of motor vehicles alone 325,124—total wages $647,588,538." "Only a fraction more than one per cent of the value of farm products" were used in the liquor interests. Farmers prefer the increased demand for dairy and other farm products under prohibition, according to the National Grange. Why are the wet countries of the world so much harder hit by the depression and unemployment than the dry United States if liquor is such a cure for these evils?

Statement: Prohibition takes away personal liberty.

Facts: Why limit personal liberty to the legal right to drink? With the right to drink often is inseparably connected the slavery of drink, and also sacrifice of the personal liberty of the drinker's children to be well born, well cared for, and the right of the wife and children to a happy home with the necessities and comforts within the income of the husband and father when not debauching himself with drink and destroying his earning power. Does the personal liberty to drink outweigh the personal liberty of every one using the streets, and public highways not to have motor vehicles turned into potential death cars because the drivers have had one or two glasses of wine or bottles of beer?

Washington, D. C.

Unemployed Pews

By William T. Ellis

One of the serious unemployment problems of our day, and of our own community, is that of Unemployed Church Pews.

Here they are, in abundance: comfortable, competent pews, each a potential asset to our common life, but unemployed, because unoccupied.

Money, brains and devotion went into the making of them. They were designed for a great mission. It was purposed that they should provide rest and worship and spiritual inspiration and brotherly fellowship for soul-hungry men and women.

These pews were intended to be a meeting place for man and his Maker.

While seated in them, men and women would worship and fellowship: and hear the Everlasting Word that is life.

So these pews were meant to be vital factors in our community life. They should have a high place in the economy of society.

But, alas! Many of the pews are empty, Sunday after Sunday. They are not employed, not earning their keep. They are a charge upon the churches; and a serious reflection upon the symmetrical working of our civilization.

Every empty pew is somebody's missed opportunity.

Life would be very different today for many persons who should have been in these pews, Sunday after Sunday, but have been absent. Nobody can reckon the spiritual values which the absentees have missed—values of comfort, of recreation of the spirit's powers, of peace, of higher wisdom, of glimpses of the Divine, of a sense of solidarity with the friends of God.

How different the tale of many a life would have been had it filled its Sabbath place in the House of God!

There is intellectual stimulus, also, to be found in the unemployed pew. Therein are to be heard thoughtful discussions of the most important subjects that ever enriched or taxed the mind of man.

In these pews there is room for whole families. Traditionally, church-going America took the entire family to church on Sunday. The children grew up with reverent impressions of the Lord's Day and the Lord's House. Unconsciously, a sense of awe and solemnity, and of reverence for holy things, became part of their natures. They absorbed the great hymns of the Church—a priceless memory for later years. Their ears became attuned to the stately language of Scripture. Prayer and Stewardship were established in their nature.

One of the real forces making for the solidarity of the family was the good old custom of common church attendance. There would be less of a "younger generation" problem today if fathers and mothers had followed their parents' usage of taking their sons and daughters regularly to church.

As Better Times appear on the horizon, let us end the Unemployment Problem of the Pews.

(Copyright, 1932, by The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.)

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

SPOT WHERE SAVIOR FED MULTITUDE THOUGHT FOUND

A recent press report gives the information that church archaeologists believe they have found, at Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee, the place where, as related in the Gospel according to John, Jesus multiplied the loaves and fishes to feed 5,000 persons.

According to tradition, a church was built on the scene of the miracle, and church ruins have been uncovered by a German priest, the Rev. Evarist Andrea Mader, director of the German Oriental Institute of Jerusalem.

In an article to be published in the "Illustrazione Vaticana," the Rev. Chrysologus Spelluci, a Jesuit, announces that the discovery corresponds to all known religious history. The scene is the edge of a mountain close to the sea. Ruins of a basilica were found by Father Mader under seven feet of clay. A large area of fine, vividly-colored mosaics was well preserved, and six illustrations will be published.

The ruins show the basilica which has three names, was 170 feet long, with a sixty-six foot transept. Under the altar is a stone supposed to mark the spot of the miracle. Mosaics in front of this stone depict serpents, sea birds, plants and lotus flowers, while behind the altar are shown loaves of bread and two fishes beside a sort of basket, presumably referring to the twelve baskets in which the gospel says the disciples gathered the remains of the five loaves after the multitude had been fed.—The Evangelical Messenger.

ANOTHER CREED SEEMS ABOUT TO BE SCRAPPED

That remnant of Presbyterians who hold to the strict Calvinism of the Westminster Confession of Faith are much perturbed over one of the proposals of the basis of union between the United and the Northern branches of their faith.

It is suggested that the United Presbyterian Confessional Statement be added to the Westminster Standards, which are now a part of the constitution of the Northern church. The "foreordained, predestined and elect" claim that this move would have the effect of revising the existing creed, inasmuch as the United Presbyterian confession is mixed Calvinism.

In their attempt to arouse the denomination to the seriousness of the impending danger to their ancient creed, they are discovering that the rank and file do not share their perturbation. One of their famous pastors in New York says he never read the Westminster Confession. Thousands of their elders are amazed to know that there is any such thing! Dr. Charles E. Edwards in a recent number of The Presbyterian, says: "It does not require a theological training to perceive that in any Presbyterian denomination it is a perilous situation when there is an extensive and profound ignorance of the Westminster Standards and their merits, doctrinal and historical."

Free Christians who take the Bible, and the Bible alone, as their sole rule of faith and practice can not understand the panic which is spreading through the realm of static Presbyterian theology. We can readily understand from our knowledge of church history that democratic sects have always changed their man-made creeds to conform to the religious thinking of the times. Thus the Presbyterian Church itself, in 1837 and in 1789, revised its statements of Calvinistic doctrine. The present movement comes at the threshold of her third hundred years, and there is every indication that it will succeed. There is only one unchanging creed—the Christ of God's Word. If the theologians want to stand on solid rock, they must turn to him.

We are evidently witnessing the passing of another man-made creed. Slowly, but surely, Calvin will give way to Christ. As with the noble spirit of Geneva, so with all human leaders, until the glad day when we shall "crown him Lord of all!"—James De Forest Murch in "Christian Standard."

A PLEASANT TIME WILL NOT BE HAD BY ALL

We confess to some uncertainty as to whether the Evangelical Leagues of the New York district which held their convention at Dunkirk, New York, last month are composed of young people from the Evangelical church or from the Evangelical synod. Both are denominations with a conservative background. But we feel safe in predicting that if the young people really try to carry into effect the various things they resolved to do, there will be a considerable stirring within whatever denominational household is affected. Here are four resolutions entered by this convention: first, to "engage in a critical study of the capitalistic system as opposed to the ethics of Jesus"; second, to "practice and adhere strictly to the teachings of Jesus in all relationships"; third, to "refuse to bear arms in time of war, since it is a direct violation of the Christian conscience"; fourth, to "make a careful study of racial groups in the United States, and promote social and cultural intercourse between the races." Persons thirty years of age, or older, who read that list of "resolves" are likely to feel a stirring of the heart, together with a certain wistful longing for the return of days when the public announcement of such purposes seemed possible. Think of starting out tomorrow morning to let all and sundry know that you intended to "practice and adhere strictly to the teachings of Jesus in all relationships"! But perhaps one big trouble with the world is that there are so many over thirty who read such resolutions in this mood of indulgent reminiscence. And perhaps the principal hope of the world is that there are still those under thirty who will avow and attempt such purposes. God bless the youngsters who march into life with such a courage and faith! But we trust that they know that if they mean what their resolutions say, life in a church young people's society will not be the happy Sunday evening affair it was in a former generation.—The Christian Century.

PRAYER ANSWERED

We have read about a month ago that the whole village of Denbighshire, Wales, was turned into a place of prayer, every man, woman and child joining, in order that the threatened closing of the coal mines, throwing 12,000 men, women and children into dire want, might be averted. During the time of the directors' conference, at which the matter was to be finally decided prayer was made continually. The decision was to keep the mines open, and when it was announced, 2,000 miners with their families dropped on their knees again to render thanks to God. If we depended more on prayer and less on organizations, greater results would be seen.—The Presbyterian.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Daniel

The book of Daniel is "a lamp shining in a dark place." This word of the saintly and aged Simon Peter aptly describes the historic situation of Daniel's day. It was an hour of change, decay, and darkness—darkness into midnight and after, in which only one ray of light was manifested, namely, the prophetic light. In all of the world's darkness only one light is of any consequence to the modern Christian believer and that is the light of the Spirit of God.

Daniel Himself

Daniel was a most remarkable man. To begin with, he was a Jew and belonged to a family of high rank, perhaps of the Royal House, and, like Ezekiel, was carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. His entire career was spent in Babylon (69 years) in the midst of a pagan court. There with his select friends he lived a simple, but righteous life. He became the leading sage and seer of the day and held the highest rank of political preferment in the entire realm under the three great Kingdoms of Babylon, Media, and Persia. He was a lily that never festered. He never swerved from his religious habits and absolute devotion to God.

Daniel, the Sage

Daniel was wiser than the sages of the East. Living in the midst of heathen customs, having his name changed, he did not adopt the lower ways of living in preference to the higher ways of his Jewish fathers; he saw heathen philosophers everywhere, but he always held tenaciously to revelation instead of natural wisdom; he witnessed pride in all of its pomp and display, had an opportunity to become a boastful Haman or an autocratic war lord, yet he remained gentle, meek, and mild in temperament, disposition, and life. He could have been as full of impiety as a foul-mouthed Herod or a wicked Manasseh, yet he never stooped to one low or mean thing, or ever caused others to stumble in the way of virtue. When persecuted, he suffered silently, and God delivered him. Lions and the fiery furnace could not touch his person or render him uncourageous. Daniel stands like a mighty rock or an old solid oak tree in the midst of a mountain plateau. He is beautiful to behold and his memory shall forever grace the pages of history with everlasting charm and fragrance.

Daniel, the Prophet

To the writer, Daniel shall never be placed in the category of minor prophets. He has a major writing, of major proportions, of major consequence, for the majority of mankind. His prophetic theme centers around the Nations of the World and the establishment of the Ever-lasting Kingdom. That is not a minor program: it is distinctly major in origin, scope, and destiny. In prophetic vision he sees the end from the beginning and passes the judgment of Jehovah upon the program of the nations. He builds a prophetic calendar which no man understands fully, but one which every believer will find interesting and challenging, if he chooses to investigate. Jesus said of Daniel's prophecies: "Let him that readeth understand." Matt. 25:15.

But also let the same readers hearken to the words of the Savior when the disciples questioned him, saying: "Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom of Israel?" He answered: "It is not for you to know times and seasons which the Father hath set within his own authority. But he shall receive power." The writer is a great deal more interested in that "power" than anything else. We cannot make, revise, or damage his calendar or even move the hands of his clock ahead or backward by the fraction of a second, yet we may receive "power" to carry on in the Christian life and "power" to redeem the dying multitudes who grope in the night of our twentieth century and fail to see the prophetic light. Let us point them sanely and safely to Daniel, Matthew, and the Revelation.

I THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Daniel.
2. When and Where Written? In Captivity. 607-534 B. C.
3. To Whom Written? To Captive Israel.
4. Object. To Contrast the Power of God with the Great World Power.
5. Authenticity. Dr. Robert Dick Wilson, the foremost world's linguist of recent days, and a teacher of the writer, together with scholars like Dr. Robert Anderson, Dr. Pusey, Dr. Urquhart. Dr. Boutflower, and a host of others point to the witness of Daniel, (8:1, 2), of Ezekiel, (14:14, 20; 28:3), of the movements, of the languages—Hebrew, Greek, Aramaic, etc., and also of Christ, as authentic proofs of the historicity and reliability of Daniel. An angel of Jehovah cared for Daniel while he was imprisoned in the lions' den; but what angelic grace it takes to watch the ways of Providence while Daniel remains in the critics' den! He was delivered once and shall be liberated again. History shall continue to still the wild ambitions and roaring mouths of Daniel's destructive critics.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. Daniel, the Sage: Public Gentile Prophecy: The Night Cometh. 1-6.
2. Daniel, The Seer: Private Jewish Prophecy: The Day Dawneth. 7-12.

III THE CONTENTS OF THE BOOK. (Analysis by Dr. West).

- "A. Development of the world-kingdoms.
- "Chap. i, Introductory—Nebuchadnezzar the king, B. C., 606.
- "Chap. ii, The image dream; Nebuchadnezzar's second year, B. C. 604.
- "Chap. iii, The fiery furnace; Nebuchadnezzar's twentieth year, B. C. 580 (about).

"Chap. iv, Nebuchadnezzar's mania; Nebuchadnezzar's thirtieth year. B. C. 570.

"Chap. v, Fall of Babylon, B. C. 538; Belshazzar regent.

"Chap. vi, Lions' den; Darius the Mede, B. C. 538.

"Chap. vii, The four wild beasts, B. C. 555; Belshazzar regent.

"B. Development of the conflict between Israel and the world-power.

"Chap. viii, Vision of the ram and he-goat, B. C. 553; Belshazzar regent.

"Chap. ix, The seventy weeks B. C. 538; Darius the Mede.

"Chaps. x-xii Final vision—the apocalypse; B. C. 534, Cyrus king."

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Vision. Judgment.
2. Key Verses. 2:22; 4:25; 7:2.
3. Key Chapters. 9, 5, 3.
4. Key Ideas. Universal Sovereignty and Judgment of God.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

1. Historically. The reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and Darius are given in Part I, whereas in Part II the prophetic light appears during the reigns of Belshazzar, Darius and Cyrus.
2. Prophetically. The course of prophecy is set forth from Nebuchadnezzar to Christ's Second Coming.

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

1. Christ put his imprimatur upon the book of Daniel. Matt. 24:15. The Savior's title "Son of Man" is based upon Dan. 7:13 He is, furthermore, the Stone cut from the mountain that shall dash to pieces the human government of the last days. He is the Ancient of Days coming to judge, rule, and complete the work of the centuries. Read the last chapters of Daniel.

VII THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

1. God's obedient servants are often blessed with success.
2. God's secrets are trusted to the upright in heart.
3. God's servants are given comfort and peace during trial and tribulation.
4. God's warnings against pride are final and authoritative.
5. God's word demands that men honor and glorify him.
6. God's sovereignty is universal.
7. God's program will be opposed by the Anti-Christ. Concerning him. Dr. Moorehead wisely lists the following:
  - "(1) He is still future.
  - "(2) He is a real person.
  - "(3) His appearance is at the "end," the day of the Lord. Dan. ii, 44; vii, 13, 22, 26; ix, 26, 27; 2 Thess. ii, 1, 2; Rev. xix, 11-21.
  - "(4) He will be the chief adversary and enemy of Daniel's people, the Jews, vii, 21, 25; xii, 1; Matt. xxiv.
  - "(5) He will invent a new object of worship and compel all to do it homage on pain of death, xi, 38; Rev. xiii, 14, 15.
  - "(6) He will perform miracles of some sort, 2, Thess, ii, 9, 10; Rev. xiii, 13.
  - "(7) He will exalt himself above all, xi, 36; 2 Thess. ii, 4.
  - "(8) He will be the antagonist of Christ, Rev. xiii, 6; xix, 19.
  - "(9) He will be destroyed by the personal appearing of the Son of God from heaven, Dan. vii, 13; 2 Thess. ii 8; Rev. xix, 11-21."

Every day of my experience as a church administrator increases my sense of value of religious journalism. Much well intentioned and serious-minded religious feeling is at the present time failing to make any strong impact for good, through sheer lack of religious information and education. The grossest misunderstandings abound, the most inadequate conceptions prevail, simply because the people are depending upon secular newspapers and magazines for information concerning religious matters. I would be the last to disparage the importance of such secular publications. They are doing an indispensable work, but their utterances are lamentably lacking in the realm of religious thought. Nothing has taken the place of the distinctly religious paper as a medium of imparting information and of creating sound religious understanding. If the religious press is not supported, we shall experience a great lack of religious effort—a lack which nothing but the religious press can fill.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

M. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. FUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

Archeological Findings at Kirjath-Sepher

By Dr. Paul G. Culley

A great experience it has been to live in the thoughts of ancient days and among people who are not far removed from ancient life and customs. We have lived for two months in southern Palestine, roughly equidistant from Hebron and Beersheba, and about six miles west of the highway between those cities. Although easily located on the map, our approach by automobile is more difficult, requiring a drive of about sixty miles.

No wonder they reported cities "walled up to heaven," for the remains of ancient cities are always on a high hill, and we ourselves frequently awoke in early April to find light clouds about us. We are located at the edge of the mountains among the lower hills, but still a good distance from the plain of a Philistia west and the great desert south. All supplies must be brought from Jerusalem. The people of this country are semi-Bedouin, and mostly troglodytes, for they live in their village two or three winter months, and spend most of the year near their fields and herds taking domicile in the best of the countless caves. A few wealthy men live in tents, instead of caves. A little further south, in the desert, everybody lives in tents, for there are no caves.

The city which I want you to visit with me is ancient Kirjath-sepher (Joshua 15 and Judges 1). Our only guide-book is the Bible, and the place is of minor importance historically. But we have an unparalleled opportunity here to learn, with comparative ease, and in a short time, much about the life of ancient days. The hill on which this city stood, or rather the succession of six cities, has been waiting untroubled for 2,500 years, to tell us its history. It is truly an archeologist's prize; there has been nothing deposited on the ruins left by Nebuchadnezzar, except enough soil to support a meager crop of wheat or lentils. The successive civilizations of Maccabean, Greek, Roman, Byzantine, Arabic, and Crusader times have not so much as disturbed a single wall, and only an occasional coin or broken vessel, perhaps dropped by plowman or reaper, gives any hint of the passage of two and a half millenniums.

How did one know that this ruin was Kirjath-sepher? For many years the maps of ancient Palestine have showed Debir Kirjath-sepher? For many years the maps village of Daheriyeh. This has been in accordance with the identification by Professor George Adam Smith, and so published in his Historical Geography. The fancied resemblance between the names Debir and Daheriyeh has not much to support it.

Dr. Smith's work remains the standard, although many identifications are faulty, according to Palestinian scholars of today. Once a thing is in print, however, and especially on the map, it is exceedingly difficult to change; another generation will doubtless pass before Kirjath-sepher or Debir, is located correctly by cartographers. The damaging failure to Daheriyeh as the correct site, is that there are no remains of civilizations earlier than Roman. Obviously our Canaanite and Jewish cities must have been elsewhere, for ruins do not disappear in the Orient.

In prospecting about the country, Dr. Albright (Director of the American School of Oriental Research, Jerusalem) was always on watch for mounds of ancient cities. Some years ago he discovered Tell Beit Mirsim, and immediately suspected that either it or a similar mound, eight miles further south, was Kirjath-sepher. Gradually all the data began to indicate, beyond reasonable doubt, that this was the site, and as soon as excavation revealed the nature of the stratification, the identification was complete. Dr. Kyle (President of Xenia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, and Chief of these operations) detailed the eleven features of identification necessary to satisfy our only guide-book, in the complete report of the first expedition (1926) given in the Bibliotheca Sacra, early in the following year. The salient points are its location in the hill country of southern Judah (the only point satisfied by Daheriyeh); its prominence for fortification; the water supply; "upper and nether springs" of Joshua 15:19 and Judges 1:15 (it is by the springs of Palestine that many identifications are possible; "changeable as water" is no adage here); and, most important, the stratification showing civilizations of Israelite and Canaanite times, with successive destructions corresponding to the Biblical record.

In 1926 Dr. Kyle and Dr. Albright directed the first campaign, and found their expectations surpassed in the opening up of the mound. The identification was completed, and some idea was gained of the life of the people. The engineering and building skill, especially of the Canaanites, was marked. A weaving and dyeing factory of Jewish times was found. A system of standard weights, found in the "tower of the gate," gave insight into the advanced trade and established government of the times. The second campaign was planned with enthusiasm. On the staff, in addition to Drs. Kyle and Albright and myself, were Professor Robert Montgomery of Pittsburgh; Dr. Aage Schmidt, Danish archeologist, who has been investigating the site of Shiloh; and William Gad, an Egyptian Copt, who was surveyor and draftsman for the expedition. Two Egyptian foremen were imported, and their presence enabled Dr. Albright to spend much less time in actual direction of digging, for he was the only one of us who spoke more than a few words of Arabic.

Tents were pitched on a threshing-floor, just south of the summit of the hill, and about thirty yards outside of the ancient city wall. Eight or nine acres are enclosed by these walls, roughly circular, and in a commanding position toward all sides. The northern exposure is over a precipitous slope, which becomes less abrupt as one follows around to the south. The walls average perhaps twenty feet in height, except on the steep side, where they are only ten or twelve feet. But the weathering of centuries has resulted in the concealing of most of the wall and its rampart, only a few courses of stones at the top outlining its position, as seen from a distance. There were two gates to the ancient cities on this site; a narrow passage on the west, and the main gate, wide enough for chariots, on the east. Both of these were built as winding passages, for better defense. A stairway of a sort gave a northern approach over the wall.

When a city was captured and destroyed, in olden days, it was rebuilt usually directly on the leveled-off ruins, new building material being brought in, and some of the larger old stones used again. A wall which had escaped the devastation might be incorporated into the new house, and many times was used as a foundation for new walls. A glimpse of the landscape will dispel any doubt about the supply of building material. There is enough loose stone on the surface to build a Washington Monument in every square mile of Palestine! Trees were doubtless more abundant then. In fact, in the lowest, the earliest city of this tell, building must have been largely of wood, for there are no stone walls in the small area that has been excavated so far. The stratification consequent to this manner of rebuilding is the book in which the archeologist reads the history of the place. It is frequently possible to separate sharply the successive strata, because of the line of burned debris which will appear beneath the floors of the subsequent city. There is an especially thick layer of burning at the time the Israelite invaders destroyed the city. Everything beneath this belongs to the Canaanite civilization; everything above is from the Israelite period. There is some mixture of poetry, from the digging of grain-pits, for example, but the general run of potsherds and other relics gives an unmistakable record of the time as well as the type of the civilization of each city.

It is by the pottery that the experienced archeologist knows with what period he is dealing. Detailed and comparative studies of pottery from various excavations have resulted in a definite chronology, which is continually being made more exact, enabling the expert to tell from a handful of potsherds almost the very half-century in which he is working. Tell Beit Mirsim has been rich in pottery, and of exact stratification, so that it is probably the best site in Palestine for this study. The yield of these eight weeks amounts to about 600 whole and reassembled pieces of pottery.

On April 4 the actual digging began, with about seventy men using pick, hoe and basket. Immediately the remains of an ancient Jewish civilization began to appear; the walls soon looked like a miniature Pompeii. Most of the pottery was broken into fragments, but a few perfect lamps and jars were found at once. All potsherds are collected by the workmen, to be examined by the staff for points of special interest. By keeping the fragments from a given area together, many a hopeless puzzle resolves into a beautiful bowl or pitcher. It is infinitely more fascinating than crossword puzzles.

Level with the top of the city wall, from which the parapet has been thrown down, is

(Continued on page 15)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

PROBLEMS OF THE MODERN HOME

(Lesson for October 23)

Lesson Text: Josh. 24:14, 15; Eph. 6:1-9;
Golden Text: Josh. 24:15

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Serving the True God. Josh. 24:14-18

There are few nobler scenes than this picture of the aged Joshua, bearing witness of the great things God had done for his host, and by his own testimony and courageous life urging the people to follow the God of their fathers. It is true, he urged them first of all to consider well, and count the cost, for God will have no half-way service; he bids us to "be perfect, even as he is perfect." Even as this spirit was essential to the well-being of the great family of Israel, so is it essential in our own great nation, and in our individual homes. The home where every member determines to follow the Lord of love is a blessed spot, a "foretaste of heaven." God give us more such homes!

TUESDAY

Sharing the Home Life. Eph. 6:1-9

Without Christ in the individual life and experience, such a life as that taught in this passage is impossible. Children are commanded to obey their parents in the Lord. Some commands of some parents should not be obeyed by Christian children. The fathers must themselves have learned of Christ if they are to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Servants are to render their humblest tasks as unto the Lord. Each has his part in the life of the family, and if each has the vision of Christ as the motive and reward of service, he will share his part in the life of the home, and it will become the "fairest, sweetest spot in all the earth."

WEDNESDAY

The Sanctity of Marriage. Mark 10:2-12

In these days of quick marriage and easy divorce and remarriage, this passage is indeed a "hard saying." Yet it seems clear and unmistakable—too much so, in fact, for many. To quote from the marriage ceremony commonly used: "We are here in the presence of God and his holy angels, as well as in the presence of one another, to solemnize the joining together of this man and this woman in the sacred bonds of marriage. This holy estate is not to be entered into unadvisedly, or lightly; but reverently, soberly, and in the fear of God." Without God there is no marriage—only a civil contract. If there is marriage, it is "till death do us part"—and what God hath joined together let not man put asunder! Help us all to realize the sanctity of marriage, for upon it hangs the well-being of the home, the church, and the nation!

THURSDAY

Setting a Good Example. 1 Cor. 8:9-13

Few things speak so forcefully as example—whether for good or evil. Wherever people dwell together there are certain individual rights that each must give up, for the good of all. For any one of us to insist on all of our own rights only means that some one else must lose a part of what is rightfully his. Let us not forget this principle: In honor preferring one another.

FRIDAY

Forgiving One Another. Matt. 18:21-27

In any group of people, occasional offences must unavoidably occur. In Christian homes there should be sorrow for the offence on the part of the offender, and forgiveness on the part of those offended. Christian forgiveness is without limit as to the number of times, and also as to the extent. We must forgive ALL—even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven us.

SATURDAY

Family Worship. Acts 10:30-33

In the preceding days of this week we have already seen how Christ must be the center of all things if the home life is to be according to God's pattern. There is no better way of making and keeping Christ the center of the home life than by gathering around the family altar. It is not easy to get up from your knees and give place to bitterness and bickerings, but it is easier to forgive, to bear and forbear. May there be a family altar in every Brethren home!

SUNDAY

The Blessed Home. Ps. 127

"Except the Lord build the house"—O God, do thou use us as tools in thy hands to build a house that shall endure, a house that shall speak of joy and happiness to those within, and that shall show forth thy glory and peace to those without. So shall our homes be truly blessed.

E. M. RIDDLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
---	---	--

J. D. WHITMER, 117 E. DuBail Ave., South Bend, Ind.

Organize a Junior Society

Take Good Care of the Children of Your Church

By Mildred Dietz, National Junior Superintendent

Do you have a Junior Christian Endeavor Society in your church? If not, you probably should.

As this is the month for organization, we are making an appeal for churches which do not have a Junior C. E. to organize one. Surely there is some one in your church who is willing to take this responsibility. This is a fine field and great good can be accomplished for Christ and the church.

In Junior work separate meetings are held for the Juniors with some older person in charge and to supervise their work. Fine programs and lesson helps are printed each week of special interest to Juniors. Dramatization and memory work are important parts of the program.

If you organize a Junior C. E. Society, and I hope you will this month, send the name to your Junior Superintendent to Miss Mildred Dietz, 312 Cumberland Street, Berlin, Pennsylvania. And if you have any questions regarding Junior work, I will gladly attempt to answer them. If you have a Junior Society and have not sent in the name of your Junior Superintendent, will you not kindly do so soon?

We are hoping to have a number of new societies reported during this month. Remember the Christian Endeavor work in your prayers, and pray for the building of young lives for Christ and the church.

Berlin, Pennsylvania.

Helpful Plans for Juniors

Some Thoughts on Personal Devotions

(From the Junior Bulletin of the Wisconsin Christian Endeavor Union.)

Many societies give the Juniors copies of "Junior Prayer Meeting Topics and Daily Portion" in place of topic cards or in addition to them.

tion to them. These will help to "encourage and fix the habits of daily Bible reading and prayer." The superintendent will use pictures, stories, and personal suggestions to help make seem equally real to the boy and the girl. The Junior may be encouraged to "look for a personal word from God, to turn his thoughts at once to prayer, and to read with a view to action." Then indeed will he read reverently and happily.

WORLD GOD'S WORKS WORDS

Of the sixty-six books in the Bible forty-two can be read in one-half hour each. Then let us encourage the habit of reading larger portions at one time.

The Junior's promise to "pray and read the Bible every day" may be reinforced by the Quiet Hour covenant. The Quiet Hour may be presented to the society by concrete illustration and personal testimony, but the covenant should never be signed except individually, when the superintendent is assured that the girl or boy understands its significance.

If the Junior's Quiet Hour is to be truly helpful, the leader will need to give definite instruction in the "what" and "how." If some such plan as that given in "A Child's Quiet Hour," by Emily Williston (to help the Juniors keep this pledge and to ensure the value and practical helpfulness of their devotions) could be developed cooperatively for two months, independence could then be encouraged.

The family altar and grace at table are two of the proved achievements of Junior Comrades.

The Quiet Hour Covenant as recommended for Juniors follows:

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will make it the rule of my life to set apart at least fifteen minutes every day, if possible in the early morning, for prayer and Bible reading."

It would seem unwise to introduce the added covenant if the time standard were minimized. Mistaken habits of Juniors bring failure to Intermediates. The average Junior can not read, think, and pray to any purpose in a shorter time. Nor can he memorize a verse to carry with him.

Worship in the Home. (Collected material from various sources.) Parents in this new generation are finding new means of worship in the home, changing it from the set Scripture and prayer by the father to ways that fit the family needs and life more admirably.

A recent letter from a Junior superintendent informed us that as a part of their efforts to make personal devotions more effective to their Junior society the Juniors had set about suggesting family devotions, with the result that two families were proceeding with this plan. One family consists of five. On school mornings the children take turns presenting a bit of Scripture that they have memorized at the Junior meeting or elsewhere, reading or saying an appropriate poem coming from their school work, and offering a brief prayer. On Friday morning the mother takes charge of the family devotions, contributing her thoughts of the week. On Saturday morning the devotions are in the form of two hymns, sung without accompaniment, one of which is a prayer hymn. On Sunday evening the family gathers at bedtime, reviews the affairs of the week, and makes plans for the next week; and the father leads in a worship service as he thinks it should be. This gives each person expression.

Another plan that has been suggested is that of a Sunday evening vesper hour of hymns to which each member of the family contributes his choice and into which a friend is sometimes invited.

Another family that can not find time on Sunday has set aside a family hour in the middle of the week in which nothing is allowed to interrupt, and the hour is spent in helping to make the home a happy Christian one.

These thoughts are suggested because through the superintendent the true relationship of the child may come by suggestion of either or both the development of personal devotions that may be of great benefit, not only to the child, but also to the home. Many homes are looking for readjustment in the matter of the religious life and worship today, and Junior Christian Endeavor should be able to do its part. A Rescue Party—For Lookout or Prayer

Meeting Committees

General Noble attempted to fly to the North Pole and back. On his way back his airship was wrecked, and several rescue parties went out in search of him where he was marooned on the ice.

The plan now suggested is a contest. Give points representing miles to be traveled by each side, if there are two sides, or by each group, if there are more than two sides, to reach the lost persons. Points may be given for attendance for being on time, reading the Bible daily, giving a recitation in the meeting, giving a short talk, offering a sentence prayer, and so on.

Suppose the distance to be traveled is 500 miles. When that goal is reached, the party will still have to rescue the lost fliers. For each 50 points made beyond 500, one marooned flier may be considered rescued. The group or side that rescues the largest number of fliers in a given number of weeks is the winner in the contest. The losers may give the winners a supper.

A chart may be used showing the position of the marooned men, and small pasteboard aeroplanes, one for each group, may be pinned on the chart to show the position of the groups in their search.

One Hymn Writer a Month—For Music Committees

It will pay a Junior society to spend enough money to buy a book that tells the story of the lives of hymn writers and use the book in the meetings. Thus the superintendent might give the book to one Junior each month and ask him or her to study the life of a certain hymn writer, come to the meeting prepared to tell the story, and to give some facts about a certain hymn that the society will then sing. When we know the story of a hymn, that is, why it was written, that hymn means a great deal more to us than it otherwise would mean. Such a plan would help us to "sing with the understanding," and would interest Juniors in the hymns.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

MISSIONS

A Great Woman of China

By Geraldine Townsend Fitch

From earliest times, scattered throughout the pages of Chinese history, the names of illustrious women may be noted. The Han dynasty had its Pan Chao who helped her historian brother compile the records of the Han period. It was Li Chi, daughter of a tribal chief, who during the same dynasty wrote the old lines beginning:

"In the white day up the mountain, we scan the sky for a war torch,

At yellow dusk we have watered our horses in the boundary river,

While the throbbing of the watchdrums hangs in the sandy wind,

The guitar of the Han princess tells her lasting sorrow,

Ten thousand li and not a city, nothing but camps

Till the snow joins the low sky to the wide desert,

Where barbarian geese, crying sadly fly from night to night

And children of Han are shedding many tears."

China has her beautiful women, her gifted women, her women who ruled the empire. Today the children of Han are shedding many tears again, for from their midst has passed one of the great pioneers in the field of service to humanity.

In a humble home in central China nearly sixty years ago, a baby girl was born. There was nothing remarkable about that. But this baby girl was the sixth child born to the Kungs, a family highly respected because of their direct descent from the great Kung Fu-Sze (Confucius), but much too poor to feed another mouth. There was one fitting solution: let her become betrothed in infancy and live in the home of her future mother-in-law. This was done, but without consulting the child's horoscope first. When it was discovered by tardy reference to the blind old astrologer that the girl had been born under the dog star, while her infant fiancé could boast only of the inferior cat star, the child was sent back home.

About this time Miss Gertrude Howe, who had come to China as a missionary teacher, was starting her second school. The first had been torn brick from brick in a riot. Gradually the superstitions of the people who believed she took the eyes of little girls to make telescope lenses and their hearts to make medicines were being overcome. Miss Howe took the Chinese baby into her own home, legally adopted her, and changed her name to Ida Kahn. Gertrude Howe was then young, beautiful, and witty. Her friends love to tell how she accepted the invitation of a young American missionary to attend the evening church service after putting her infant charge to bed. But in those early days the men and women had to sit on opposite sides of the church, well separated by a high partition. Came ten o'clock, time for baby's bottle, and Miss Howe slipped out of the church and hurried home—her young man forgotten!

In the home of her missionary mother, Ida Kahn was the first girl in all central China, not a slave, to be allowed to grow up with unbound feet. A precocious student, she was also an inveterate reader. Sometimes she buried herself in a book for the entire day. As she herself has expressed it, "No pangs of hunger did I suffer! For me the passage of time did not exist, for had I not feasted on the wisdom of the ages?" One would be surprised today to see a Chinese child of ten reading Harper's or other foreign magazines. Fifty years ago it must have been little short of incredible.

Often helping in the mission hospital as an interpreter for the foreign doctors, Ida Kahn became possessed of a great desire to be a doctor herself. But what an innovation this in China! Foreign medicine was bad enough, but in the hands of a Chinese woman—what folly! There was no place in all China at that time where one could take a medical course, or even the undergraduate work. Miss Howe prepared her for matriculation, and with her, Mary Stone, who was to become equally famous, and took them to America to be enrolled in the medical department of the University of Michigan. Four years later, in 1896, they graduated with honors, the first two Chinese women to receive medical degrees from the University of Michigan.

That was the beginning of a long and illustrious career. Not without honor, even in her own country, Dr. Kahn was welcomed home by the firing of sixty thousand firecrackers. She began her work in the simplest way, first under a foreign missionary doctor in Nanking, then in a small dispensary in her native city of Kiukiang. It was after the Boxer uprising that Dr. Kahn was invited by the gentry and prominent citizens of Nanchang, the provincial capital, to open up hospital work there. A gift of six thousand dollars was presented to her to purchase the site and erect a dispensary. Later a hospital building and its entire support would have been added, had she been willing to accept the stipulation that she break with the church and give up the teaching of religion therein. But Dr. Kahn was not the compromising type. She preferred to earn her own hospital to sacrificing her principles. At one time, when finances were low, she left everything in the hands of her staff, went to Tientsin in North China, and entered into private practice, hoarding her earnings as a miser hoards his gold, but doing much good among the officials' wives to whom she ministered.

During the troubled years of 1927-28 the Southern forces took Nanchang, but could not hold it. When the Northerners recaptured this wealthy old city, which had long made its boast that no enemy had ever been able to enter its walls, they slaughtered and looted the people. It is said that when the city was at last in the hands of the government troops, an emissary of the occupying general came to Dr. Kahn to commandeer rice. This military messenger she fearlessly faced, saying: "What! you come to a woman to ask rice? Why, you can take rice anywhere, while I must pay for mine! Tell the great general that my wards are full of his wounded soldiers, and I must feed them!" She was not troubled again.

At this time Dr. Kahn was asked to help organize an emergency Red Cross. A wealthy Chinese woman offered fifty-eight hundred dollars as well as her services for the new society. Mr. Zu of the Salt Gabelle gave ten thousand dollars. The Methodist Mission offered the use of their new hospital, still unfinished, for the use of the Red Cross in caring for the wounded and ill. There were dozens of cholera cases among these. Ten of Dr. Kahn's nurses were lent for the work. Her own compound was full of refugees. They came in through the gates, over the wall; hid in the cellars and rooms and hallways; swarmed under the trees. With the city under siege for more than three weeks, food was scarce, and shops closed. Somehow Dr. Kahn managed to feed those who came to her. Perhaps her coolies were safer on the streets than any others, for her name was a talisman both within and without the war-torn city.

I have two memories that with her passing have become more precious. One is of magnolia blossoms! I had stood in her garden, that beautiful garden in the hospital compound—her delight and her expression of the inherent artistry of her race. There were roses, of infinite variety and exquisite beauty. Camellias were there, pink, white, and red; and larkspur and forsythia and peonies. But over our heads, just ready to burst into glorious bloom, was a huge magnolia tree. With her own hands Dr. Kahn cut a number of the great buds, for I could not remain to see the tree in the magnificence of full bloom. On the train next day, during my monotonous and desolate journey from Nanchang to Kinkiang, the buds opened, a miracle of beauty and waxy whiteness. Even Solomon in all his glory could not have seemed more out of place, or a greater contrast to the drab dreariness of that dusty day-coach!

Another memory is mine. Dr. Kahn in my living room in Shanghai, her ample lap full of Chinese slippers—daintily embroidered slippers for little feet—her gift to my first-born son. When those of more somber shades were outworn, my baby's feet had grown too large for the pair of bright red satin. And so I have them still, and shall always keep them, for memory's sake.

Her spirit was radiant and gay as those bright shoes. She was one of the most forceful, and, at the same time, one of the kindest persons I have ever known. Loving life and people, she was generous to a fault. Intensely patriotic at a time when national feeling ran high, she was nevertheless fearless and outspoken against anti-foreign and anti-Christian prejudice. With her "lantern in hand," she has shown the way to thousands who have come under her healing ministry.—Classmate.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

FROM GRAFTON-TERRA ALTA, W. VA., TO WARSAW, INDIANA

Sunday, September 25, closed a very pleasant pastorate with the Brethren at Grafton and Terra Alta, West Virginia. Although our work together had not been of long duration: twenty months altogether, or one full year and two summers following school terms, yet the fellowship was such that life-long friendships were formed. The members of these two churches showed a great willingness to work, and to cooperate with their pastor in everything that was attempted. They had the Lord's work on their hearts. The Lord blessed us very greatly in his work in these places. Although great numbers were not added to the churches: five new members in each place, by baptism, yet there was a very great evidence of spiritual growth which will bear fruit in numbers in the future. There was a very gratifying interest in the study of God's Word, which was instrumental in bringing about the growth. May these churches soon come to the place where each one may have a pastor instead of dividing the time of one between them. May the Lord richly bless them in the continuation of their work.

Sunday, October 2, began the new pastorate at Warsaw, after a delightful (?) week of moving and getting settled in a house. The welcome received from the Brethren at this place was very encouraging and helpful, and forebodes a pleasant work with them. They fulfill the expectation of a pastor in that his congregation "should be his force and not his field." We ask the Brethren everywhere to pray the Lord's blessing and continued guidance in his work here, that our testimony for him may be true and strong, and that he may be glorified in all things.

L. E. LINDOWER.

MILLEDGEVILLE, ILLINOIS

On Sunday, October 2, 1932, the Sunday school observed Rally Day. The enrollment of the school is 209 and on that day there were 223 present. The study period was spent with the lesson for the day. At the morning worship hour the time was given over to a well-planned and splendidly presented program. Nearly every class of the school was used in some part of the program, though the Primary grades presented the major portion of the numbers. We have heard many remarks of commendation of the Rally Day program.

Some of the Brethren thought it would be well to have a Basket Dinner and afternoon program, so it was decided to have the day as sort of Homecoming and plan an afternoon program. All who know the ability of the women of this congregation along culinary lines know that the dinner was a success of successes.

At the three o'clock hour a program was planned. Rev. Geo. E. Cone was asked to plan the afternoon program and preside.

Promptly at three o'clock Mrs. W. S. Bell began to play the beautiful piano prelude. It was a chimes number that is highly praised by all who hear Mrs. Bell play it.

The ladies' quartette then sang a short number as a vocal prelude. "Faith of Our Fathers" was then used, the congregation singing. The 96th Psalm was read as the Scripture lesson for the hour, after which an instrumental duet by Joe Allison and Robert Foltz was enjoyed by all. Miss Leone Wallace accompanied at the piano. The boys play clarinet and cornet.

The Rev. Z. T. Livengood of Lanark, had been invited to be present with us and present a short historical sketch. It follows:

"The Brethren church of this county was organized by Elder H. R. Holsinger, July 14, 1884, at the Church of the Brethren at Dutchtown. There were 30 charter members as follows: Z. T. Livengood and wife, Belinda, Daniel Fike, Abraham Livengood, Olive Holloway, Abraham Lichty, Henry Meyers and wife Mary, Samuel Hoover. Joseph Blough, Abraham Brand, and wife Sophia, Elias Fike and wife Lizzie, Henry Livengood, John Schrock, Silas Fike, James Coleman and wife Della, A. L. Livengood, Joseph Livengood and wife Susan, Henry Walker and wife Mary, Wilson Miller and wife Anna, Rose Brand and wife Frances, Amanda Meyers and Ellen Gnagey. (Of this number 11 still live and 7 were present to rise when asked to do so.)

"The Bethlehem church, four miles northwest of Milledgeville was built the same year, 1884, and dedicated in December by S. H. Bashor. A revival meeting followed with 33 additions. Gradually the membership grew in Milledgeville and the necessity for a building was apparent, and the church was built in town in 1889. It was dedicated November 3rd by S. H. Bashor.

Z. T. Livengood was pastor all during this time, preaching at Bethlehem, Milledgeville and Lanark. This was too much for one pastor. Elder Bashor took charge of Milledgeville and Bethlehem, March 1, 1890 and Livengood took charge of the Lanark mission point, which consisted of the following persons: W. Herrington and wife Sadie, D. S. Lichty and wife Kittie, Samuel Swigart and daughter Rettie and Mrs. Carrie Thompson Wagner. She was buried about a month ago and the obituary written by her daughter stated she always kept her faith and membership in the Lanark Brethren church. J. O. Talley followed Bashor and remained 6 years. R. R. Teeter came after Tally left. M. A. Witter took up the work when Teeter went away. Z. T. Livengood came again to the pastorate after Witter left. After six and one-half years Myles J. Snyder came and took up the work and he was followed by D. A. C. Teeter and he in turn was followed by Geo. E. Cone who has served the church for 7 years and is present at this time.

During the revival following the dedication of the Bethlehem church the following persons from Lanark united with the church: W. H. Herrington and wife Sadie, Dan Lichty and wife Kittie, Samuel Swigert and daughter Rettie and Carrie Thompson Wagner. These were the charter members of the Lanark church. This church now numbers about 350 at Lanark. The present pastor there is C. C. Grisso, who was preceded by H. D. Fry, before whom was Chas. W. Mayes, who followed B. T. Burnworth, who followed Smith, who followed Knepper, who was preceded by Livengood, who followed Welty, who was preceded by Livengood, Furry having been before him, Livengood before Furry, and Beer before that, and Livengood the first pastor. Z. T. Livengood was the first pastor of both the Milledgeville Brethren church and the Lanark Brethren church."

You will see that the Lanark church was served by 10 different pastors during her history to the present. Upon second thought we believe Brother Livengood has missed the name of one pastor of this church, namely C. E. Beekley, who served a few months between Brother Burnworth and Brother Mayes.

The Milledgeville church has had to date eight different pastors in her 48 years of history.

Following this historical sketch we listened to a vocal duet rendered by Miss Vivian Fike and Noel Hawkins, Jr. This number was much appreciated.

Taking his text from Luke 21:36, Dr. W. S. Bell presented the audience with a forceful and very helpful message from the Word of God and for the present times of distress through which we are passing.

The ladies' quartette composed of the Mrs. Schell, Straka, and Livengood and Miss Dessa Hanna, accompanied by Mrs. W. S. Bell, sang beautifully the closing number.

Dr. W. S. Bell was asked to pronounce the benediction. Those who had attended the various meetings of the day were ready to pronounce the day a grand success and are looking forth to the time when this church will celebrate her Semi-centenary in 1934. If the Lord tarry we predict a wonderful time in July, 1934 in this Milledgeville Brethren church.

Requested written by GEO. E. CONE.

CONEMAUGH, PENNSYLVANIA

While the industries in this vicinity seem to be at a standstill the First Brethren church of Conemaugh is not following their example. Considering the local industrial conditions our church is in a healthy condition.

All of the organizations are active. Our Womens' Missionary Society meetings are well attended and the interest taken in the cause of missions show that our women have an earnest love for the work. A few weeks ago our pastor offered on slips of paper to any one willing to receive one and comply with the request the name and address of a foreign missionary. The request was that in the next few days a letter was to be written to the name drawn. Most of the names were drawn and many of the letters are now crossing the ocean. The replies are then to be read as they return to the prayer meeting group. Each week we select one missionary and offer special prayer on their behalf.

Both our sisterhoods, Junior and Senior, are in a commendable state of activity. The church, the Missionary Society and the Senior Sisterhood had representatives at our recent National Conference. These delegates brought back interesting and encouraging reports while our pastor reviewed the general conference activities.

Since our last report our pastor has been superintendent of the Conemaugh Community Daily Vacation Bible School for his third successive year. Commendable work was accomplished most of which was Biblical in nature. The Sunday school had its largest average attendance during the summer months in its history and has just held its largest Rally Day. The church during the summer months received some much needed repairs, the work being done by volunteer help and much of the material furnished at cost by one of our members.

A special effort is being planned to revive and encourage a deeper spiritual life among the church members this fall. Stress will also be made for salvation of lost souls. Our weekly prayer meetings are well attended and our studies in the Scriptures are interesting and are of mutual benefit to both pastor and people. We are convinced that the prayers of our brethren are being answered as we see the evidence thereof. We can testify to the efficacy of earnest, sincere prayer. As we present special petitions at each prayer, service it seems to make the cause more real to us.

With a bright spiritual outlook before us we hope to do great things in the name of our Lord and Savior in the near future. We covet your prayers also.

MRS. GEO. C. WYKE,
Corresponding Secretary.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN CANADA

By W. M. Rochester, Editor of The Presbyterian Record

What proportion of The Presbyterian Church in Canada as at June 10, 1925, united with the Methodist Church and Congregational Churches to form the United Church of Canada? This is an important question for upon representation in that regard legislation was passed, properly distributed, and the world estimate of Church Union in Canada based.

At the time it was difficult to determine with exactness that proportion, but it was claimed by the United Church to be very large and so overshadowing the body remaining Presbyterian as to warrant reference to the latter as but a 'remnant,' reduced, in some reports abroad, to 'a few parishes' and even 'a few families.' As high as 85% was publicly claimed for the uniting section, but a definite proportion was adopted by the Federal Commission, appointed to distribute the general property of the Presbyterian Church, namely 64%, and division was made accordingly.

Now the Dominion Census, 1931, compels a revision of that estimate for it gives the number of Presbyterians as 870,482. At the previous census, 1921, the number was 1-409,407. Therefore the number in 1931 is in excess of 50% of that in 1921 by 165,792. Allowing for growth between 1921 and 1925, in keeping with the previous decade, a larger proportion than 40% cannot be conceded as the part of the Presbyterian Church entering Union. Two able analysts of the census, a former minister of the Crown, and the Deputy Registrar of a provincial Supreme Court, support this conclusion, the former fixing 38% as the proportion of Presbyterians who went into the Union. Thus the Dominion Census has turned the tables, demonstrating that the general property should have been distributed in almost reverse proportions, that is, instead of 64% to the United Church and 36% to the Presbyterians, 38% to the United Church and 62% to the Presbyterians.

It is contended, however, that the large number of Presbyterians reported by the census is explained by the fact that Presbyterians in the United Church registered as Presbyterians, having been taught before Union that they would remain Presbyterians in the United Church. This is incredible in view of the extraordinary precautions taken by the United Church in carefully instructing its people in this particular a year before the census; and was impossible under the requirement of the Chief Census Commissioner that:

"Owing to the organization of the United Church of Canada since the last census, persons calling themselves Presbyterians, Methodists, or Congregationalists, should be asked if they are or are not members or adherents of the United Church, and the answer should be recorded as given."

Be it noted that in the Dominion Census we have an independent official declaration of denominational standing, made by the State, and based upon an authoritative and exhaustive individual canvass.

What misapprehension therefore has prevailed throughout the world about Union in Canada, and how great the injustice done the Presbyterians outside the Union both in repute and in the distribution of property!

BALANCING THE SINGING

"Yes, we've got a good preacher and a good pastor," said an enthusiastic member of a large church, "but he is more than those two words imply. He has an eye for details and a mind to execute them. Why, he is the only man we've had for years who could or did balance the singing." Then the satisfied member went on to explain that they had had elderly pastors who were determined to use only the standard, well-known hymns; young pastors who took up with all the jingling tunes of the Sunday school to the exclusion of the dignified hymns; musically inclined pastors who were satisfied with nothing short of the most finished productions from the choir and who had as little congregational singing as possible; pastors who let the music "run itself," so to speak; and pastors who frowned upon anything but old-fashioned congregational singing. The present incumbent tried to please all his people in a musical way and really succeeded in doing it. In the morning, when many elderly people were present, at least one hymn like "Rock of Ages" or "Nearer, My God, to Thee" was sung; while in the evening, when the congregation was made up of younger folks, the lighter hymns and the newer selections were used. There were holidays and patriotic occasions when special singing for and by the children pleased the little folks, and there were other occasions when the best singers in the town delighted critical audiences. In short, the pastor tried to make the music all things to all people, and he succeeded.—Hilda Richmond.

"PERSONAL LIBERTY" AND MEDDLING MAJORITIES

By a Certain Mr. Sarcasm

I stand for personal liberty, first, last, and all the time. I resent every invasion of my personal liberty. I consider such invasion an insult and an injury to me. I simply will not stand for it. Along with Nicholas Barry Nutler I will not submit to the meddling of majorities with my personal liberty.

I drive an automobile. I am a good driver. I can drive at sixty or eighty miles an hour on either or both sides of the streets. I enjoy it, and I deny any person's right to interfere with my enjoyment. I dash past stop-signs and across through-streets, for the fun I get out of it. Driving is stupid and dull if halted by stop-signs and other controls. How I drive, where I drive is my business.

I enjoy cocaine and opium. I feel glorious after I have hit the pipe or had a shot or two, and I don't want any meddlesome majority passing any law to interfere with what I want to do. I resent it. I never get ugly or quarrelsome through dope or drink. I just enjoy myself. If folks don't like me when I'm drunk or dopey let them keep their hands off till I do some real harm.

I like to fish. And I want to fish where I want to, and when I want to, and how I want to. I can get more fish with less work using a net. I'm for efficiency in fishing. I resent any snooper called a fish-and-game warden watching around to see what I catch and how I catch it. I mind my own business. All that I ask is that fish wardens leave me alone.

I like to gamble. Moreover, I am going to gamble, law or no law. If I lose so much that I can't pay my debts that's my business. If I gamble with my employer's money and lose it, he will fire me. Well, that is my lookout, and I don't want any law infringing my personal liberty. That isn't all. I can make my living running a gambling joint, and I don't want any Puritanical majority passing a law telling me what I may or may not do. I resent it. I do as I please. It is my right. It is my personal liberty.

I like whisky. I hate these beer liberty hypocrites who demand personal liberty to have the beer they want, but will not defend my personal liberty to have whisky, brandy, rum, cocaine, and opium. They are pikers and hypocrites. My rights and liberties are as sacred as theirs. And it is great sport to keep a saloon. And I have a right to do as I please. If I want to use my building on my land for a saloon, that is my business. The antics of the drunks amuse me. It is my way of enjoying life, and I have the right to enjoy life as I want to. Who are these huzzies and busybodies called a majority that interfere with me? I resent it.

I admit our Revolutionary fathers did quite well, considering the age in which they lived, when they wrote the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. But I am right when I say that they did not have even a faint glimmer of the glory of personal liberty which I adore! They prated about political liberty, civil liberty and religious liberty, but no syllable of adulation of personal liberty.

They were strong for the dignity of law, and for the observance of and reverence for law made by the will of the people. I have little respect for law, for it destroys personal liberty. When I observe, reverence or obey law, I surrender my personal liberty to it. I will not have law control or hamper me in my self-expression. I will drink what I want, sell what I want, make what I want, do what I want. I am for personal liberty.—Adult Leader.

THE RAIMENT OF THE SOUL

(Matt. 6:25-34.)

*Oft do we say, "I have nothing to wear,"
 When asked to go into God's house of prayer.*

*So easy for us to remain away
 And do our own will on God's Holy Day.*

*We clothe our bodies in the "latest style,"
 And let our souls go bare all the while.
 God pity us who are too blind to see Beyond this life to God's eternity!*

*One seamless robe the Lord of Glory wore
 As in and out He passed in days of yore—
 He little cared about the body's dress,
 For He was clothed with God's righteousness.*

*Clothe us, dear Lord, with Thine humility.
 And righteousness and peace and Holy Love—*

*That we may be in measure like to Thee
 Who dwelleth on the Throne of God above!
 —Mary Holden Willingham.*

PEOPLE DON'T WANT SHOWS AT CHURCH

People are tired on Sunday. They have seen enough shows through the week. They have had all the entertaining they care for. What they want on the Lord's day is a quiet conversation with an earnest-minded man who is interested in the high things of the spirit and who knows how to interpret the words of Jesus and the signs of the times. Declamation is a bore, oratory is an offense, fireworks of every sort are an impertinence, but a quiet talk on the deep things of God is always strengthening and healing. A preacher who is content to speak in everyday language to his people Sunday after Sunday about Jesus Christ, and the application of Christian ideas to their personal experiences and to the problems of their generation, can be interesting and fresh at the end of thirty years.—Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.

SHALL WE?

The "Chicago Tribune" press service prints this news item under a Montreal, Quebec, dateline of February 15:

"The provincial legislation of Quebec tonight passed a bill imposing a tax of 5 per cent on all meals costing thirty-five cents or more. The tax must be paid by the customer."

This, indeed, is interesting and surprising. The Wets on this side of the border are advocating licensing the liquor traffic as a means of reducing taxes. They point with much satisfaction to Quebec, where, they tell us, liquor revenue is filling the government exchequer to overflowing. This news item surely must be a mistake, then, since Quebec has solved the revenue question with a liquor tax. Certainly the provincial government would not be so penurious, rich as it is with liquor revenue, to think of putting a tax on the shop girl's thirty-five cent lunch.

Shall we drink our way back to prosperity, too?—The American Issue.

A word of kindness,
Such a little thing,
Yet how far it goes,
Once we give it going.—Sel.

ARCHEOLOGICAL FINDINGS AT KIRJATH-SEPPHER

(Continued from page 10)

stretched the flat surface of the mound punctuated by great heaps of stones, presumably the ruins of large buildings. Over the surface of the area a meager crop of wheat and lentils has to be destroyed, and the owners compensated. Cultivation is rather haphazard anywhere in this land of

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

COME TO THE BRETHREN HOME

In writing this little article I want to urge you to come and see, and some of you to come and live with us.

You have provided such a lovely home here for those who need a home and it is a pity that it is not full and others waiting to come in. With the opportunity we offer, there ought really to be a waiting list. The building is steam heated and it costs almost as much to heat empty rooms as full ones.

Some of you husbands who have worked hard all your lives and whose wives have cooked you three square meals a day ever since you were married, ought to take a winter off and come and board with us. You really owe it to your wife to let her take a rest one winter. You might shut up your house and come here where there are no fires for her to make, no coal to carry and no ashes, no meals to cook and no washing and cleaning for her to do.

If you are ill and don't feel like getting up in the morning, you don't. Your breakfast will be brought to you and you can get up when you please. And all for $20.00 a month each. So come and stay with us this winter, if you can, and thus make "The Home" an asset instead of a liability.

We have a large reception room where you can visit all day and we'll do everything we can to make you happy. The fewer people here the less we have to do and so the easier for us, but we would rather work than worry about expense any time.

Remember this is your Home, everyone of you who is a member of the Brethren Church. You all have a share in the responsibility for this home. So, help fill it up. It is an ideal place for men and women who have grown old and want a rest.

I am always willing to give you any information I can.

MRS. CYRUS MEYER, Matron.

stones, and almost nil on this spot, where wheat stones project at close intervals, marking the ancient Jewish houses. It is common to see four or five weathered rocks in a straight line, possibly four feet apart; removal of from three to six feet of soil will reveal the plan of the building. These projecting nubbins are great roughly squared stones, used evidently as pillars for the support of upper story and roof, all burned and destroyed.

After three weeks, the excavated area of approximately a half acre was restored to something of its appearance 2,515 years ago, when Nebuchadnezzar had his little picnic there. Along one edge of the uncovered city is a street wide enough for a chariot, starting from the main gate on the east; and tributary to this street are several alleys, by which all the houses of our sector communicated. One alley widens out into a nicely paved plaza, and in the midst of this a cistern was found, covered by a large square stone, with a hole large enough to lower vessels for drawing water. A small depression next to the hole was evidently used as support for a water-jar with narrow base, while filling it from the cistern. Water supply was a vital problem in times of siege. We know of no well nearer than the "nether spring," one mile south, from which we drew our own good drinking water, a well easily, 4,000 years old. Rain-water, stored in cisterns, was probably the sole supply of the beleaguered populace. But the cisterns were plentiful. This one and another in our sector would each accommodate possibly 75,000 gallons on a guess. Outside the wall one stumbles frequently on a broken-in cistern, with its mouth inside the wall. Some of these are enormous, reminding one of the great subterranean reservoirs of old Constantinople. It is probable that the entire city is undermined by a system of passages and chambers. We followed this from two approaches, taking out quantities of debris from our eastern "grotto." It is quite possible that the earliest inhabitants placed their dead here, although we found no bones; other mounds have a similar tomb. But in later centuries a more utilitarian purpose was served, from the evidence of grain-pits found, with a few potsherds.

It was a pity to tear out the excellent walls and pavements of the last Jewish city, but it was necessary to go deeper. The houses of the next two strata were rather fragmentary. Evidently there had been more thorough destruction of these cities, and since they had been fattened by subsequent rebuilding, it was more difficult to make a connected survey and map. The small objects found, however, were numerous, and showed the similarity with contemporaneous cities elsewhere in Palestine. Two lower strata represent, respectively, the period of the Israelite Judges and the last Canaanite settlement. When we reached the fourth stratum, again there was a well-preserved city, of greater depth of debris than any except the first, and which bids fair to be the most productive and most interesting period of the mound. It was interesting to see that many of these walls were of brick. Whether such is true of the entire city remains to be seen. It is probable, for the burning of brick was made possible by the more abundant wood supply. Of the two cities still earlier we had a mere glimpse in the last few days, by sinking a shaft down to the bed-rock of the hill. The earliest settlers seem to have built largely of wood, for there were no walls in the small area of burned debris examined. A few broken objects of pottery served to establish that the earliest settlement was not later than the 21st century, and probably even 2200 B. C. That takes us back to the time when Abraham's forebears were still living in Mesopotamia, when only God knew that this was a land destined to belong to his specially chosen people.

What are the results and permanent values of the time and money expended in moving stones and dust? Archeology affords the only factual means of evaluating the history of the Old Testament. Critics of the Book may talk themselves blue, but one fact is worth a thousand fancies, and two facts will put ten thousand guesses to ridicule. Does it not behoove God's people to insist that objective data rather than whimsical guesses be used as criteria of criticism, in dealing with the relation of God and man? We may not need scientific data to support our faith, for we have had a personal introduction to our Savior through the Holy Spirit, and can read with a Spirit-opened eye. But these data are the only means for establishing the historical and geographical facts of the Scripture. What can be the answer of an honest mind, when one finds a mounting mass of supporting evidence, and not a shred of suggestion of Scriptural inaccuracy in the monuments of the past?—The King's Business.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE FIRST HALLOWEENS

By Bertha Wood Godshall

The bright-red flames of the bonfire lighted up the night. It was Halloween, and the Grover family were celebrating by having a huge bonfire in their back yard.

Suddenly Donald looked up and asked, "Daddy, why do they always have bonfires on Halloween night?"

"Well," said daddy, "many, many years ago there were some people living in the world who were called druids. They did not worship God as we do, but they worshipped idols, instead. They thought that the sun god made their plants and crops grow; so every year, about this time, they made great fires in honor of him. It was their autumn festival to give thanks because he had made their crops so plentiful. And so, because these druids had been doing this for so many years, other people began to follow their custom, until now we do it just because it is Halloween!"

"Did the druids believe in witches, too?" asked Donald.

"Yes," replied daddy, "they thought that all wicked people had to live in the bodies of animals after they died. And they believed that on Halloween night, Saman, who was the god of death, called all these wicked spirits together. That was how witches were first supposed to be abroad on this one night of the year. Aren't you glad that you are a little Christian boy, and that you don't believe in wicked spirits? Don't you think it must be terrible to think that there are witches who do harm?"

"Indeed I do!" answered Donald, with a little shiver.

"Perhaps the aruids would have been Christians if only they had known about God, because they were grateful for blessings or they wouldn't have had their fires of thanksgiving!" said Bob Grover, who had been listening.

"Yes, just think how fortunate we are to be Christians and know all about Jesus," smiled Donald contentedly, watching the firelight dancing about. "It is wonderful to know that there is a heavenly Father who loves us, instead of believing that a bad idol can make us live in animals' bodies after we die!"—The Sunbeam.

TWO PENNIES

TWO bright, new pennies were in Jamie's pocket, and two just like them in Tom's pocket, when they started for Sabbath-school. Each boy was to put one penny in the offering basket and do as he pleased with the other. On the way they stopped for Claude.

"I'm not going today," said Claude, sorrowfully.

"Why not?" cried the boys.

"I can't," said Claude, shaking his head.

"Are you sick?" asked Jamie.

"No, he isn't sick," said Claude's mother, "but I haven't a penny for him."

"Is that all?" cried Jamie; "I have two pennies, and he can put in one of mine. Please let him." A few minutes later two happy boys ran off together.

When the basket was passed around, Tom noticed that the little girl in the next chair put in two pennies. "I guess you aren't the only one that has two pennies," he whispered. Then, as he dropped his in, he said to the teacher, "My father gave me this bright penny to keep, but I'm going to give it to Sabbath school."

"What a generous boy you are," she said.

Jamie quietly dropped his penny into the basket and Claude's turn came next. Jamie said nothing about having had two pennies, too, but the One looking down from above knew all about it.—Exchange.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

LINWOOD, MARYLAND

The Brethren church of Linwood, Maryland, will hold their semi-annual communion, October 30, beginning at 7 o'clock in the evening. All Brethren everywhere are invited. The communion service will be preceded by a week of preparatory services.

J. L. BOWMAN, Pastor.

VOL. LIV
Number 41

October 22
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Beneath the Cross of Jesus

Beneath the cross of Jesus

I fain would take my stand,
The shadow of a mighty Rock

Within a weary land;
A home within the wilderness,

A rest upon the way,
From the burning of the noon-day heat,
And the burden of the day.

Upon that cross of Jesus

Mine eye at times can see

The very form of One

Who suffered there for me;

And from my smitten heart with tears,

Two wonders I confess,—

The wonders of his glorious love

And my own worthlessness.

I take, O cross, thy shadow

For my abiding place;

I ask no other sunshine than

The sunshine of his face

Content to let the world go by,

To know no gain nor loss,

My sinful self my only shame,

My glory all the cross.

—Elizabeth C. Clephane.

Eve Interviewed

By G. M. Anderson

You blame it all on me—you down there on Earth. You blame it all on me—this being cast out of Eden. And all the sorrows that followed down there on Earth. My ears have burned and burned these thousands of years and more. I'm a very unpopular woman away down there, I know; and the worst of it is it's true; I cannot disown my deed.

But would you yourselves have done much better? I resisted—resisted till I couldn't; fought strenuously against that something in me that wanted the forbidden thing. Oh, it was not just a thoughtless, godless wanton deed I did; I fought it, I tell you, struggled against it with all the power I had.

First, I looked at it afar, without intent of tasting, but found that the looking had started a craving as big and determined as I.

I sidled up to it, the craving driving me bit by bit; but, of course, I'd be master of craving if it threatened to go too far. I'd say NO in tones emphatic, and make it know it had a master.

I put out my hand. Just a touch would do no harm, and drew it back with a sense of guilt, and walked away to end it—a step or two—stopped, looked back. Oh, the luscious beauty of the thing! Safety was in flight; I knew that. But I didn't fly. Instead, I stood as one riveted to the spot, looking this way and that, wanting to flee yet fleeing not, hungering to taste but tasting not. Civil war was at its height in my insides.

I might have won—I do not know—if I hadn't stood there wavering, parleying, uncertain, wanting to do, wanting not to do, afraid I would, afraid I wouldn't; for, while I was parleying, craving found reinforcements and, thus strengthened, took control, shouted the word of command, and marched me back face to face with the forbidden thing.

Oh, 'twas so entrancing then, so charmingly charming then that all the powers of earth or heaven couldn't have held me back, it seemed. Will abjectly surrendered, leaped over on the craving's side. Judgment abdicated, reason was dethroned, caution flung to the winds. All my senses left me—swallowed up in one great passion, till I swear I'd have done it if the heavens had rained down fire.

One short moment! But for that moment I sold my soul. Ecstatic moment! Followed by ages of agony. For craving, now sated, relinquished command, gracefully retired; judgment, reason, sanity came back with a rush; I was myself again, and saw what I had done. Shame overwhelmed me. All my better self revolted at what I'd done.

I went and hid myself. Every tree and bush and bird, every living thing, all nature were hurling accusations. In the darkest recesses I hid. I heard a sound and crouched, and was still, and scarcely breathed. Something touched me. I trembled. There was a voice. I was afraid it might be God.

Now I am cast out. I cast myself out. My deed cast me out. I felt it in my soul. The thundering guilt of it, the accusing shame, the sense of dropping out of heaven swift as a falling star, and I covered my face with my hands and wept and wept and wept. And the flaming sword! I saw it. I tell you I saw it the moment my soul went down, that flaming sword that guarded the gate, I like a felon trembling outside, shut out of Paradise.

But strange—strange that you—you down there on Earth—should talk—talk as if Adam and I were the only ones ever cast out—talk as if it were an experience impossible except to just us two; for, to us, it seems that everyone into Eden comes, as did we. And there's the forbidden fruit the appealing, sensuous thing staring you right in the face, and you're caught in the spell of it, as we were, we, and fight and waver, as did we, afraid you will, afraid you won't, knowing it's wrong yet craving it still—until in one cataclysmic moment, the will is overwhelmed, and all defenses fall. You pluck the forbidden thing. You fall. You lie where you fall, rubbing your dazed eyes, and know you're out, with a flaming sword guarding the entrance between. Yes, you've had your Garden of Eden test, just as had Adam and I, and it ended, just as it did with Adam and me.

Oh, you—you down there on Earth—you might not be so critical of us I'm sure you wouldn't if only you'd think. And if you're back in Paradise, after your sin had cast you out, you're there by the grace of the Keeper, and not by your own smartness.—The Christian Evangelist, Riverside, California.

A Selfish Threat

A recent action that deserves to be remembered is the resignation of Admiral William S. Sims as an honorary member of the American Legion, with his stinging rebuke of the selfish demand for immediate payment of the bonus. Here are the straightforward words of this brave veteran:

"When the national organization of the American Legion did me the honor of making me one of its honorary members I was assured that its governing body would maintain the patriotic ideals expressed in the preamble of its constitution; that it would continue to 'inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, the state and nation.' As it now appears that the action on the bonus taken by the Legion in its recent national convention, at a time of national distress, is in direct repudiation of these ideals, I feel that I can no longer retain my membership. It is with great regret that I am obliged to tender my resignation, for I had hoped that this great organization would take advantage of its political power to promote the benefit of the nation; that it would carry out its declared intention to 'make right the master of might.'"

It is surprising to note the unanimity with which the most responsible organs of public opinion have condemned the action of the Portland Convention in making "booze and bonus" its major platform—a pitiful plea indeed for supposed patriots in an hour of grave peril. It is significant that an organization of veterans of all wars is now being organized, which is emphatically opposed to immediate cash payment of the bonus, and in the Legion itself we believe a growing number realize how the prestige and power for good of that organization have been damaged by the unfortunate demands of the Portland convention. In a scathing editorial the Christian Century refers to the Legion demand as "a vote to raid the Federal treasury" and as serving notice upon the nation of their intention "to demand from the taxpayers of the country the utmost farthing that can be extorted by resort to political terrorism." Denouncing such brazen indifference to the public welfare, the Century calls for a public uprising against "further exploitation in the name of a bogus patriotism"—a challenge that must be met. "The time for temporizing with this soldier racket has passed, concludes the Christian Century.

Such sterling political leaders as President Hoover and Hon. Alfred E. Smith have boldly pointed out the menace to the nation involved in this proposed "raid," and yet not a few Congressmen and newspapers declared that, no matter what the outcome of the Presidential election, the bonus bill will be passed as soon as Congress convenes and that no Presidential veto can stop it. If the "terrorism" above referred to has really reached such proportions, the peril of the nation is exceedingly grave. We are not among those willing to concede such a result.—Reformed Church Messenger.

WHAT SERVICE MAY MEAN

A poor widow woman walked five miles in a terrible night to get a doctor. He hesitated to make the unpleasant trip for which he would receive no financial remuneration. True to his high ideals, however, the physician went, and the life of the little child was saved, and there seemed to be little hope that he could ever amount to more than just a poor laborer. Years after, that same child became the great Lloyd George of world history, and the doctor said, "I never dreamed that in saving the life of that child on the farm hearth, I was saving the life of the national leader."

William W. Hamilton in Sermons on Books of the Bible; Doubleday Doran & Company.

Few books can stand three readings. But the Word of God is solid; it will stand a thousand readings, and the man who has gone over it the most frequently and the most carefully is the surest of finding new wonders there.—Hamilton.

IN THIS NUMBER

Christ Our Passover is Sacrificed—Editor, .....	3
A Secular Paper on Church-Going—Editor, .....	3
Laymen's Missionary Movement—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
Prohibition and the Christian—E. L. Miller, .....	5
Why the Eighteenth Amendment Will be Repealed—R. R. Haun ..	6
Studies in the Book of Revelation—R. I. Humbert, .....	7
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	8
Bible Study—Frank Gehman, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	10
C. E. Program, 1932-1933—E. M. Riddle, .....	11
News from the Field, .....	12-14
Our Little Readers, .....	15
Announcements .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Christ Our Passover is Sacrificed

This is the primary reminder of the communion service and the foundation truth of religion. There is nothing about which we need to be more certain than that. If Christ be not sacrificed, if he be not our Passover, then are we yet in the bonds of iniquity and our yearning hearts have found no solace, no peace. The atoning death of Christ stands at the very gateway of Christian faith. If that be not accepted, then there is nothing else about which we need be greatly concerned. The Lamb of God, slain from the foundations of the world is the beginning of the new life. Until he be appropriated there is no life in us. It was even so with the Hebrew Passover. It marked the birthday of the nation. It was the first national institution, the first sacrifice by direct divine command. Nothing was more significant in all Hebrew ritual than the Passover, nothing was more fundamental to Jewish faith than that. So is it necessary that we believe and know that "Christ, our Passover is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5:7).

Christ is our Passover, the Lamb slain for our deliverance. And every sincere partaking of the communion bread is a memorializing of that deliverance, that passover. Death is abroad in the land, as it was in Egypt, and now as then there is provided a way of escape. Then they were to take the blood of the lamb and sprinkle the blood upon the cross-beams and sideposts of the doors of their homes. When the destroying angel should see the blood, he would pass over that home and all within would be safe. So the blood of Christ must be applied to our hearts, or the wrath of God abideth on us. Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins. The calamity came that night in Egypt, as it was predicted, and the homes on which the blood-stains were found were passed over, and even so shall the judgment of God come upon a wicked and disobedient generation and only when he sees the blood stains of the Lamb will he have mercy and deliver us free from guilt. The blood is the visible token of the life that has been sacrificed for our sins. That makes atonement.

The passover of the Hebrews was to be eaten with "bitter herbs," reminding them of their days of bondage in Egypt, so is the Christian to partake of his Passover, Christ Jesus, with humility and sorrow in contemplation of his sins and the habits of evil by which he was bound. No one can boast or be proud of his past life, when viewed in the light of Calvary.

The passover was to be eaten only after all leaven was put out of the home. Leaven represented corruption and that must all be put out so that they might be clean. Even so all evil must be put out of our lives. We must confess our sin, acknowledge our separation from it and no longer have fellowship with it.

The passover symbolized the presence of Jehovah in the time of darkness and distress. From that day on they believed that God was present with them and able and willing to care for them. They set out from Egypt with the feeling that he was with them; they saw his presence manifested to them as they waited before the Red Sea; they realized his providing presence in the wilderness; they depended on his presence as they went into their battles. As they progressed from point to point, they grew in understanding of his spirituality and power. His presence became ever more real and effective. And so does the presence of God become steadily more real and vital to us as we partake of the emblems of his precious life.

The Hebrews were to eat the passover in the posture and garb of travelers, for on that night of their deliverance, they must needs be ready to go at a moment's notice. So we are to serve Christ as those who watch for the Lord's coming, ready at an instant to depart and be with him. Watch, we are admonished, for we know not when our Lord may come. And as oft as we eat the bread and drink the cup of the communion we show forth our Lord's death till he comes.

A Secular Paper on Church-Going

Secular papers are not given much to preaching, but we find some splendid exceptions, and one is brought to our attention by an exchange which quotes from the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer an appeal for church-going. It appeared in a Sunday morning issue on September 11, 1932. There is, of course, a certain inconsistency in an appeal for church-going on the part of a Sunday morning paper that comes into the home and demands attention at a time when the occupants of that home ought to be starting to church. Nevertheless, the following editorial gives some wholesome food for thought—for church members as well as non-church members:

Charlotte is Church-going. A visit to any of the houses of worship on any Sunday will convince one that the city ranks high in this. But there are many who do not go to Church. For one cause or another they have gotten away from the custom.

The strenuousness of the times demands a portion of rest to offset the week of toil that is behind and prepare one for the tasks ahead. The rest that comes with Church attendance benefits mind and body. It stimulates courage through personal contact with a great number of people connected in many ways with the upbuilding of a city or community.

Going to Church is like ascending a hill and there resting, take a broader vision of life about us. In the valley of toil one loses sight of what is going on beyond his personal affairs. This tends to brooding and discouragement. There is little wonder that there is so much self-destruction when men's thoughts are continually wrapped around their own affairs. Many a life would be saved by a change of viewpoint. The rest that the churches offer changes the viewpoint. Within the sacred walls one is in touch with the forces of construction. For the time the mind is freed of fear and the forces of destruction. Thus one can make a surer survey of the situation, and in the confidence that comes with this calmer outlook upon life strength is gained for the battles ahead.

Going to Church may consist, outwardly at least, in merely following the words as hymns are sung and Scripture read. But these bring memories, and memories lead back to those days in life that meant more than toil for material gain—days when the desire to do right was uppermost in thought, and when faith in men and principles overcame all obstacles.

Men need more than anything else today to get back to those starting places, and take the road again. Many have lost the way because they are not looking ahead, and have limited their vision to their own environment. Those engaged in service for others seldom lose the road. They are of that great Church-going body of which Charlotte is proud. To attend Church once a week and get in touch with people interested in other things than their own affairs is worth while. The beauty of the sanctuary itself is restful. The discourse, the music, the human touch, vie in changing the viewpoint, and change of viewpoint is what is needed, if one is not satisfied with things as they are in the valley of toil.

Laymen's Missionary Movement

The Laymen's Missionary Movement is rapidly completing its plans for the fall and winter and enlisting the lay and ministerial leaders all over the United States for the execution of them in a thousand communities.

Under the direction of the executive committee of the Movement a Committee of One Thousand is being formed which contains laymen prominent in the national councils of all the major Protestant denominations. Clergymen and missionary board officers are giving cordial cooperation in this effort.

Men and Missions Sunday will be observed this year on November 13th. On the Tuesday evening following, November 15, there will be a series of inter-denominational men's dinners held in every part of the world. In the United States alone such suppers are planned for in at least a thousand towns and cities. Chairmen and committees for these events have already been appointed in nearly 500 towns and cities.

Give the best you have to your church. Even your very best will be miserably small compared with what Christ gave for it.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The editor and his family were privileged to be present at the Rally Day services of the Mansfield, Ohio, church on October 9th, when there was an attendance of 97 at the morning merged service. Brother Herman Hoyt is the faithful and sacrificing pastor of this church.

Brother H. M. Oberholtzer of Sidney, Indiana, offers himself for evangelistic work during the fall and winter. Churches not yet having made arrangements for a meeting will find him willing to serve. It is an important admonition which he offers: "Let no church be without a revival this year." We must all become enthusiastic evangelists if the church is to go forward and measure up to the opportunities of these times.

Brother George E. Cone, secretary of the Illiokota District, which failed on account of the financial depression to have a conference this year, provides us with a list of the new officers of the district. We are sorry that it seemed necessary to dispense with the conference, for such gatherings mean very much to the success of the work, but we trust, as do also their own leaders, that they shall be denied this privilege next spring.

Christian Endeavorers will find in their department this week a well planned program for the entire year, offered them by their president, Brother E. M. Riddle of Waterloo, Iowa. We have arranged it so as to be suitable for clipping and hanging in your Christian Endeavor meeting room where it will be convenient for reference throughout the year. Clip out the department heading along with your program and you will have the names and addresses of your officials right before you when you want to write them.

Brother George C. Pontius, pastor of the church at West Alexandria, Ohio, informs us in a personal communication that their work is "progressing nicely and the outlook for the year is encouraging." He goes on to say: "Our people have of course felt the 'depression' and find that it takes faith and courage to carry on." The same can be said of many congregations, perhaps all of them. But God bless those who have the faith and are willing to make the sacrifice that the circumstances demand in order that the Lord's work may be kept going and growing.

Brother R. I. Humbert writes that Dr. L. S. Bauman favored his congregation at McKee, Pennsylvania, with four nights of services following National Conference. A visible result was two reconsecrations, which made a total of seven since last report from that field. There has also been one baptism. His Sunday school has been growing and the missionary spirit has been increasing among his people. In a revival Brother Humbert conducted at Ruggles Gap in the Church of the Brethren twelve souls took their stand for Christ.

From Elkhart, Indiana, we learn that the work is going forward under the leadership of Brother H. F. Stuckman. He had been on this field only six weeks at the time of this report, but he was well received and was rapidly finding his way into the hearts of the people. The prayer meetings of this church have been noteworthy features, and they continue to be well attended and sources of much inspiration. The Sunday school also continues to grow, as do the other auxiliaries. They will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the dedication of their new church on November 6th, which will be Homecoming Day.

The October program of the church at Gratis, Ohio, where Dr. W. H. Beachler is pastor, included a fine Rally Day service with a special Sunday school sermon on the first Sunday in the month; a big Homecoming and Harvest Home festival on the 16th, when a pageant featured the Sunday school and a Church of the Brethren minister was the principal speaker at the afternoon service. On the 23rd the fall communion service will be held. Brother Beachler says his work is moving along in good shape. We note that he and Brother Claud Studebaker of the Pittsburgh church are to exchange revival meetings, the Pittsburgh meeting being announced for November 6th to 20th.

We call the attention of our Ohio churches to the Prince of Peace Declamation Contest being conducted in almost every community throughout the state, beginning with Armistice Sunday (Nov. 6, 1932) in the local churches and closing the last of January with the run-off contest in Columbus. It is a splendid opportunity to build up sentiment in your community in favor of peace and against war. Especially important is it as an opportunity to enlist boys and girls in the cause for peace. Ohio boys and girls 14 to 18 (inclusive) years of age may participate. Six cash prizes, the highest of which is $250 and three free tuition college scholarships are to be given away.

The church at Fort Wayne, Indiana, has experienced a revival under the evangelistic leadership of Brother R. Paul Miller resulting in twenty-two confessing or reconsecrating themselves to Christ, eight of which number are expected to unite with the church. This is a mission church and was thriving until the depression came, when heavy losses in membership were suffered. Under the leadership of their pastor, Brother Samuel J. Adams, they struggled on with courage and sacrifice, until now they have received a blessing from the Lord and have much cause for encouragement. This was the first meeting Brother Miller has held in the new tent and it served the cause well, enabling them to get in touch with larger numbers of people than could have been possible by means of their church building.

We have an interesting report of the work at Sergeantsville and Calvary churches in New Jersey, where Brother J. Milton Bowman has completed his first year as pastor, and where one new member has been added to the church during the year. This is Brother Bowman's first report to the Evangelist, as we now recall, and it is his first pastorate he is now serving. We like both the earnestness in service and the comprehensive loyalty to the interests of the church, as manifested in this communication and we believe our readers are going to enjoy his good reports in the future. We welcome him into the Evangelist, as we do also, and have, other young ministers. It will be a matter of information to many for us to say that he is a son of our long honored and faithful pioneer preacher, Brother I. D. Bowman.

Brother William H. Miller, as secretary, gives us a brief report of the proceedings of the recent Indiana District conference, held at Flora, Indiana, which opened under the moderatorship of Brother Fred C. Vanator. The new moderator is Brother S. M. Whetstone, his assistant is Brother R. F. Porte and the new scribe and treasurer is Brother Frank Gehman. The reports of the attendance, program and spirit all indicate a successful conference. The most noteworthy feature was the response the conference made to the recently published appeal for an emergency offering for the aid of the Brethren Home. Brother Henry Rinehart, the treasurer of the Home, reports the amounts received. You will find the figures in the Brethren's Home Corner. The Indiana folks did fine and are to be commended on their prompt relief of the situation. Now, what are the other districts doing?

Prof. Alva J. McClain, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, in addition to his many other duties as Associate Dean and Professor in the Seminary, is helping to correct copy and to read proof on Dr. Gribble's new book, "Undaunted Hope," and finds that he will be unable to provide copy for his page in the Evangelist until he has finished with the book. We are sorry, as our readers are, to be denied having him with us even temporarily, but we ourselves well know that there is a limit, not only to time, but to strength to endure, and so we must relieve him for a few weeks. That leads us to say also that if you have not yet placed your order for a copy of Sister Gribble's book, you should do so immediately. And it will be sold, at least the first 1,000 copies, for as low as $1.60 postage paid, which is just what the book costs. That is much different from the originally proposed price of $2.50, at which many of you placed your order. It is being published right here in our own Publishing House. No one can afford to be without this gripping missionary record at that price.

Prohibition and the Christian

By E. L. Miller

It is with great difficulty that one can hold himself down to decent language and exercise any charity regarding the mighty effort that is being made to undo all the good that has been accomplished along liquor control lines. I have time and again challenged congregations of people to prove to me one real good that liquor has done for anybody and I would cease agitating against the dirty business. I have not yet had any one to show me that letting liquor alone has worked to the hurt of those so doing, while at the same time we have all manner of evidence that the use of it as a beverage has done incalculable hurt to millions of folks, especially to children and women. This has all been so well proved, and so many millions of people are now living who saw the saloon in action and the liquor business at its worst, that we feel no evidence along this line need be introduced. But I will say that I grew up in a community where liquor flowed like water and poverty was evident on all sides, with work for everybody and fair wages at that. Why the poverty? The answer is the saloon and John Barleycorn. I was a news carrier for years in the old home town, delivering papers to all the saloons, and saw that the Brooks higher license law, considered one of the best license laws in the states, was broken with impunity. Sunday selling, selling to minors, and about everything that was contrary to the law was done. The booze business was never law-abiding and never can be made so. As the Rev. Wm. A. Sunday used to say, "You can just as well control the liquor business as a powder mill in Hell." And I know from the experience of those "good old days" that "Billy" was and is correct.

Then knowing that this awful business is rotten, and no other word will properly describe it, why can we as Christians sit idly by as the forces of evil try to put intoxicating liquor across on us again? I try to hold myself, as I think of Christians (?) consenting to the terrible thing. Of course Paul consented to the stoning of Stephen, but how he repented of it afterwards! Maybe some want to have something to repent of. But what about the souls that may be destroyed in the meantime? In short, I am all out of patience with Christians (?) who are straddling the question just now so as to be regular in party affiliations. I have long since come to the place where I question the sincerity of any professing Christian who will do anything to break down liquor control and thus help put the bottle to his or her brother's lips. Why is the church membership so flannel-mouthed now when they were so vocal four years ago? And there is far greater danger now than then. Political leaders are advocating the repeal of the Volstead law in whole or in part. And to that extent they take the federal government out of enforcement. And woe betide the states and people who have no state enforcement laws, and there are several such states. The Eighteenth Amendment is in no immediate danger of repeal but taking away the enforcement law or any part of it, simply makes the amendment of no effect that far. It is beyond me to see how any self-respecting Christian can vote for any man or party who will advocate such man-handling of the constitution of these United States. But when we are actuated by forces other than the Spirit of God we can and will do things for which we will later be terribly sorry.

It has been said that the amendment will be repealed, or at least the Volstead law will be weakened or repealed, and such condition will continue for about six or eight years and the people will have become so disgusted with things by that time that the laws will again be tightened up never more to be let down. Well, why have six or eight years of Merry Hell in our land to learn a lesson that has already been learned at such great cost? I must either be "dumb" or something is radically wrong with such foolishness.

Friends, it may be true that "the wicked fleeth when no man pursueth," but I am of the opinion that he maketh better time when some one getteth after him. I am in for the general onslaught against the enemies of church, home, school and state. The liquor business has long since been proven to be just such an enemy. No person and no nation has yet drunk itself healthy, wealthy or wise. It is all in the other direction that liquor works. Great advances in the public health, education and wealth have been made since the hobbles were put on the booze business. So let us do what we can to give the thing the death blow, and God and our fellows will have been served in the act. Shooting "revenooers" and running "blind pigs," along with all other kinds of lawlessness, were carried on by the liquor element long before the Eighteenth Amendment was put into the constitution. And now the friends of the foul business try to tell us that if beer and light wines are given them they will see that the business is run decently. 'Tis to laugh. They remind me of the couplet:—

"When the Devil is sick, a saint he would be,
But when the Devil is well, a Devil is he."

No, we must not let them put that sort of blarney across on us. To the Christians, members of the Brethren and other denominations, I would say, Up and at 'em! They show no quarter and should be shown none in return. They have even organized under the name of Crusaders, God save the mark, and at the same time are do-

DR. HAVEN EMERSON

Former President of the Board of Health, and Commissioner of Health, of New York City, Professor of Public Health Administration in Columbia, etc., describes the character of alcohol:

Alcohol is a depressant habit forming narcotic drug.

Alcohol is a protoplasmic poison.

Alcohol is drunk to get the drug effect and whenever it is so taken in whatever amount it exerts to some degree its depressant and toxic effects.

Alcohol causes disease: psychoses, multiple neuritis, gastritis, cirrhosis of the liver.

Alcohol causes deaths: from acute and chronic poisoning.

Alcohol reduces resistance to infection.

Alcohol diminishes likelihood of recovery from acute infections, such as pneumonia.

Alcohol increases liability to accidents, and delays recovery.

Alcohol reduces endurance, accuracy and rapidity of muscular action of all kinds even when used in such small amounts as to show effects inappreciable subjectively by the user.

Alcohol decreases expectation of life.

Alcohol reduces chance and survival of offspring.

Alcohol deteriorates emotional and nervous control, as expressed in unreliable judgment and self control and hence contributes to the incidence of venereal diseases.

ing all in their power to break down the very things for which the Cross has always stood. To your tents, O Israel. Put on the whole Gospel armor and cut them down, hip and thigh, and may the Lord of Hosts be with you. Surely you could not and would not expect any exponent of Repealism to make such petitions regarding their aims. No prayers, no Scriptures, no appeal to the Almighty accompany any of their meetings and efforts, and maybe there we should give them a back-handed compliment in that they recognize the evil of their cause and dare not ask Divine benediction on any of their efforts.

I have tried hard to write with charity, but it is hard to handle some things without disgust, as Johnny said when he caught the little nocturnal animal with the white stripe down its back. I have no use for the liquor business, nor for liquor in any way, shape or form. The biologist, economist, physiologist, welfare workers and all who have to do with those afflicted with the liquor habit agree that under prohibition, even as it has been enforced, we are far better off than ever. Why take a backward step? Why give ground in the face of the present attack? I am in for a forward movement all along the line on the part of all Christians, and other folks too, who are really concerned about the welfare of their fellow human beings. The best defence against the attack being made is a general offense. Yours for holding all that we have gained and pushing forward to better things.

Maurertown, Virginia.

Why the Eighteenth Amendment Will be Repealed

Prof. R. R. Haun, Ph.D., Head of the Department of Physics in Ashland College

The Eighteenth Amendment was placed into the constitution of the United States by the God-fearing, home-loving, socially-conscious people of this country who hated sin and drunkenness and crime and indecency but wanted sobriety and sanity and safety in the home and community. That it should now be in danger of repeal brings humiliation and disgrace to those people but there are reasons why such repeal may be effected.

Without a doubt most of the agitation for repeal comes either directly or indirectly from the brewers and money-loving capitalists who want to realize large financial gains by the production and sale of alcoholic beverages. No more profitable industry ever existed. It has been estimated that two billion dollars worth of liquor was retailed to the public in 1909. What figures this would run into now, if the saloons were open, can not be imagined. In view of this, who would not want to invest in an industry with such possibilities if he had no conscience about the damaging of men's souls as well as their minds and bodies! Of course, the unscrupulous liquor interests are going to fight for repeal. It is a money making proposition to them. And the money is unlimited which they have in the past and will in the future invest in propaganda to attain that end. Advertising has shown itself to pay too well for the liquor interests not to recognize its value. The money they have spent in buying out almost the entire press in the past few years is beginning to show itself as another good example of profitable advertising and propaganda. The movie is being used now in an effort to make drinking appear common and desirable. Every source imaginable will be used to break down the hold that prohibition has gotten upon the people. They can be counted on to fight to the last and to make a good fight of it.

Which leads us logically to the second reason why the Eighteenth Amendment may be repealed and that is because we have stood idly by and allowed their vicious lies and misrepresentations concerning the effects of prohibition to go unchallenged and uncorrected. This has continued so long that our neighbors, our merchants, our fellow-employees and business associates are beginning to believe and repeat the statements made by the liquor propagandists and we, as though we half believed it ourselves, have remained mute and given consent by silence when we should have informed ourselves and corrected them.

In the next place the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed because the church is withdrawing its forces from the prohibition cause. Only occasionally do we hear anything from the pulpit or in our Sunday schools about prohibition. We used to hear about it continuously. The old spirit of enthusiasm and fight for the cause is almost gone. To be sure this is due to the fact that the feeling has arisen that it is no longer necessary but just as surely as that idea continues to prevail just that surely is it going to be one of the major causes of repeal. The church led by the Women's Christian Temperance Union gave prohibition to the people of the United States and now they are about to lose their child because of lack of care for and concern about it. Ira Landrith, a noted prohibition speaker made the statement recently that if he could just make the women mad again he would have no fear for the cause of prohibition. If alcohol flows in the country again it will be because the women and the church refuse to continue their fight against it.

Another reason that may be given to account for the decline of prohibition is that we have ceased to teach it to our children. The majority of young men and women just now coming to their first privilege of voting have never seen a saloon nor even many drunken people. They do not realize what drunkenness means, the danger that it holds to themselves, nor the menace to society. They are therefore indifferent to the whole matter and if they have any inclination at all, it is towards liberalism towards others which is characteristic of the youth of today.

And finally, the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed because the Christian people of this fair land of ours fail to go to the polls and vote for the best dry men they can find among the candidates. Many men and women of our churches are saying these days that they do not know for whom they should vote. That need not be, if they will inform themselves concerning the candidates in their localities and vote for those who have in the past made the best dry records. In general, if a man is dry he is more likely to take the better side of any moral issue that comes up. Pick the best and do not fail to vote. We all make mistakes and pick the wrong ones at times, but we would need have no fear for the moral character of our government if every Christian man and woman in the country would just simply try to pick out the best candidates from a moral standpoint and vote for them. The trouble is that we do not try.

How are our political representatives to know what we want in our government if we stand back and refuse to tell them? Especially if we refuse to tell them by votes which seem to be the kind of communications that they hear best. Many a candidate in the coming election is running on a wet or modified program because that is all he hears and therefore thinks that is what the people want. We are letting the wets do all the talking and make all the noise. Fifteen years ago the prohibition forces were organized, fighting, talking and telling their candidates in no uncertain terms what they were expecting of them. Now the wet propagandists are telling them and they are going to have their way this time because we do nothing but give silent consent. That is the reason why the Eighteenth Amendment may be repealed. The people who want alcohol to drink and the people who want to make it and sell it for financial gain are a pitiful minority in this broad land of ours but the church people of this country can and will repeal it by refusing to uphold it by their words and actions in the communities where they live and to the government officials who represent them.

Ashland, Oho.

Studies in the Book of Revelation

By R. I. Humberd

Study No. Seven

Individual Application

As a drop of sea water contains all the salts and chemicals that are found in the great ocean, so the different elements which these messages reveal in the churches are indeed the condition of individual members. Thus it is well that we study them with an individual application.

In these messages great stress is laid upon practical Christianity and upon this, Christ's censures and commendations turn. True faith will produce right fruit. Correct theories and right creeds are good, but faith without works is dead. Loud professions and pleasant moods will not take the place of their labor, endurance and resistance of evil. The church most satisfied with itself was indeed farthest from perfection.

Salutation and Introduction

Each message begins with a salutation, "Unto the angel of the church of Ephesus, Smyrna, etc."

The speaker then introduces himself. To Ephesus he is the One who holds the seven stars and who walks in the midst of the candlesticks; to Smyrna, he introduces himself as the One who is first and last, who was dead and is alive; to Pergamos, he is the One with the sharp sword with two edges; to Thyatira, he is the Son of God with eyes like a flame of fire and feet like unto fine brass; to Sardis, he introduces himself as the One with the Seven Spirits of God and the seven stars; while to Laodicea, he is the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God.

Information

Next we have "Information." Although unseen, he is in their midst and can say, "I know thy works." It is well that we as individual Christians, practice the presence of our Lord, for nothing in our daily lives is hid from him.

Inspection

He knows their works, BUT—closer inspection reveals carbon on the wick, something is there that hinders the light. Ephesus has left her first love and her light has become dim; Smyrna is poor in this world's goods but rich in faith. A poor persecuted church cannot do much and nothing is said of its shortcomings. Pergamos has allowed error to exist in their midst and their Lord blames them for allowing it. They should have judged the evil and removed it. They should have done everything they could to remove anything that would have hindered their light from shining before men for the only light this old world has, is what it received from the Lord through his candlesticks—the church.

Thyatira has permitted spiritual adultery to find a place of repose among them and they are blamed for allowing it. (Spiritual adultery is worldliness. James 4:4).

Church Discipline

But what is wrong? Did not Christ teach that the wheat and the tares should grow together? Has he changed his mind and now demands church discipline? Let us remember that wheat and tares look so near alike that they can hardly be distinguished. Certainly if a drunkard, or a fornicator, or an extortioner (1 Cor. 5: 11-13) cannot be distinguished from a true Christian, there is something wrong. We might call these "weeds." Paul demands separation and Christ blames them for allowing such to remain in the church. The tares look like wheat but they do not have a true heart of love for their Lord and since only God can see the heart, it is impossible for men to judge them rightly. They are in the church and indeed they may think themselves saved but alas, they will hear that fearful word "depart" (Matt. 7:22). But with open sin it is different. By their fruits we are to know them and certainly no one need mistake an open sinner for a Christian. Scripture demands discipline of ungodly church members. May the reader of this article give diligence to make his calling and election sure.

More Inspection

The inspection of the Lord reveals defects in Sardis. They have a name but their works are dead and imperfect. They are called Christians and partake of the ordinances but they lack in love. Philadelphia has allowed her devotion to decay until she has but little strength left. Laodicea is so taken up with erecting buildings and mortgaging future generations to pay for them, that she has no time to really love the Lord. She has her great organizations and systems but does not really rely upon the Holy Spirit for her power. This is so disgusting to the Lord that it is like drinking luke-warm water—it gives him an "upish" feeling.

Although Laodicea has great outward glory, she is nevertheless practically worthless as a light in the world. If Laodicea has reference to the rule of the people, as some would take the meaning of the word, it might be a warning to our own church with our much boasted congregational rule. There is danger when power gets into the hands of the people. Daniel, chapter two, sets forth democracy as "miry clay." The writer of these notes sometimes wonders if a strong arm, from the outside would not solve the problem that arises in some churches, when a "bellweather" takes it upon himself or herself to rule or ruin.

Admonition

Let us remember that the giver of these messages is none other than our Lord himself and that he is speaking to any individual that has ears to hear. He is in the midst of the candlesticks and knows their works and labors. He finds something worthy of reproof in each one excepting the poor persecuted church at Smyrna. After he reveals the result of his inspection, he gives them an "Admonition" and this admonition is in view of his second coming.

Importance of Second Coming Truth

How sad that so many ministers of our day neglect the great and blessed hope of Christ's near return. The New Testament connects this doctrine with almost every incentive to holy living and in this book we find no exception.

Let us remember that we are also making a personal application of these messages. Ephesus was cooling off. How sad that such is the case of so many in the churches today. Because iniquity abounds the love of many has grown cold and they have become lovers of pleasure more than of God (Matt. 24:12); (2 Tim. 3:4). They have neglected to build themselves up on their most holy faith by reading the Bible and praying in the Holy Ghost and have thus not kept themselves in the love of God (Jude 20, 21). To such, the warning to Ephesus should bring a firm resolution to remember from whence they have fallen and turn back to the old time fervor and love of the Lord, or he will come suddenly and they will suffer loss.

Crown of Life

Although Smyrna was a poor and persecuted church, yet they were rich in faith and our Lord encourages them to be steadfast and faithful to the end, for, at his coming he will sit in judgment upon their works and crown them for their faithful service. The Bible offers five crowns for faithful Christian service. The crown of Life is not salvation. It is a definite reward for enduring temptation (James 1:12). Anyone interested in this subject can get my booklet "The Rewards of Christians," price ten cents.

Martinsburg, Pennsylvania

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

BIGOTS

Odd McIntyre, one of the country's best known columnists, recently expressed his increasing irritation over the constant efforts of novelists, playwrights and scenarists to picture the religious folk as smug, crude, disagreeable and bigoted, playing at martyrdom, and "sickled o'er by the pale cast of thought." On the contrary, Mr. McIntyre nails such perversion of truth with this uncompromising tribute: "I am fortunate in knowing a number of earnestly religious people. They are the healthiest, happiest, and most prosperous of my acquaintances. Certainly they are the most tolerant. I have always found the greatest bigotry among non-Churchmen."

To be sure, we have long suspected this to be true, but our modesty has impelled us to say little about it. We may confess, however, that it sounds rather good to have a metropolitan journalist size up the situation so admirably, and especially to have him admit that the campaign of the supposed sophisticates and intelligentsia to paint religious folks as a sad combination of knave and fool is at least beginning to give thoughtful writers a pain in the neck. This particular libel has pretty well petered out. Yes, there are bigots in the Church; but those outside are not only more numerous, but also more lawless, cruel and unjust.—Reformed Church Messenger.

RELIGION IN BUSINESS

John Moody is the head of Moody's Investor's Service, a corporation that has much to do with many lines of business. Recently Mr. Moody spoke on the depression. Unlike most such speeches, he didn't outline an economic plan of salvation. Rather, he outlined a religious plan of salvation. "What is needed," he declared, "is a return to the principles of Christianity and Christian morality. Only then will there be a real and lasting peace and prosperity. There may be a temporary recovery, but it can't last until there is a real return to the old-fashioned practice of honesty and justice." Big business, he pointed out, has for fifty years been proceeding on a program, not of peace and prosperity, but of progress and profit—which translated, meant personal material gain. It is, in the opinion of Mr. Moody, this wild scramble for profits that "has put us where we are today." Business, he said, was once called "business"; later it was called "the game"; more recently it has been referred to as "the racket." In any case, it stands, today, in need, not of higher efficiency, but the discovery of spiritual values.—The Christian Herald.

HITLER THE LATEST ANTICHRIST?

Coming events cast their shadows before. This is particularly true in the case of the Antichrist who some day shall appear. Every once in a while excited persons who think the Church will pass through the Tribulation, point him out in the person of one or another of our political or governmental leaders. During the World War Kaiser Wilhelm was their Antichrist, and within this decade Mussolini in their opinion has met the requirements, and last of all comes Adolf Hitler. Press service from the continent this past summer declared that so intense had the campaign in Germany become that it had taken on the proportions of a religious struggle. We quote:

Describing Hitler as a new messiah is not a rhetorical figure of speech. In Hamburg and in Mecklenburg Hitler's name actually is substituted for that of the deity in many printed death notices. Though the notices usually start, "In faith in God," in these districts Nazi death notices have been seen to read, "In faith in our leader Adolf Hitler."

Do not be deceived, dear readers. All these men may be pointing toward the Antichrist, cultivating the thought of him in the worldly mind and thus preparing his way before him. But if you will carefully read Paul's Second Epistle to the Thessalonians, and especially chapter 2, your fears will be quieted so far as concerns the Church which is the Body of Christ. In other words, the Church is not waiting for the Antichrist, but for Christ himself, "who delivered us from so great a death and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us" (II Cor. 1:10).—Moody Monthly.

LUTHERANS FAVOR MOVIE CENSORSHIP

Federal supervision of motion pictures is proposed in a resolution to be introduced at the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, to be held in Philadelphia, October 12 to 19. After stating that the present system of censorship has shown itself to be ineffective, the resolution, sponsored by the Committee on Moral and Social Welfare, declares that the proposed supervision, "to be of real worth should be applied by Federal inspectors before the proposed pictures are filmed, and should extend to interstate and foreign commerce." The report states that "the great commercial producing companies persist in forcing, through the block booking system, upon the communities of our land, a dangerously high percentage of pictures that are salacious and inciting to crime, and in pushing the sale of these in Europe and Mohammedan and 'heathen lands,' to the shame and injury of our American civilization, and to the great hindrance of our missionary work."—Certainly the block booking system should be prohibited.—Methodist Protestant-Record.

DEPRESSION CUTS COLLEGE ATTENDANCE

A survey of twenty-four colleges and universities of the country shows that the average enrolments are about ninety-six per cent of those of last year. Out of nineteen colleges reported, only six showed a gain over last year's enrolment. The statistics showed a trend away from technical education and toward cultural subjects. The schools most seriously affected were those of the Middle West. The Southern schools included in the nineteen, Vanderbilt and the University of Virginia, both showed small decreases.

The chief effects of the depression on college life, according to the answer of the college officials, are a modulation of the carefree campus life and a focusing of the students' attention on books and blackboards instead on automobiles. The 1932 students are buying books and looking for low-priced rooms and board.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Hosea

And now we turn to a consideration of the Minor Prophets! That expresses exactly the sentiment of the student of the sacred Scriptures as he leaves the field of the Major Prophets. But they are not to be left behind and forgotten, for the teachings of the Four are only illustrated by the Twelve. For instance, an outline framework will convey the meaning of the writer:

- (1) Hosea, Amos, and Micah illustrate Isaiah.
- (2) Obadiah, Habakkuk, and Zephaniah illustrate Jeremiah.
- (3) Joel, Jonah, and Nahum illustrate Ezekiel.
- (4) Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi illustrate Daniel.

Why Minor Prophets?

Among the ancient Jewish peoples, it was sometimes customary to list the Minor Prophets together in one volume. Like the number of the disciples of the Lord, these twelve seers carried the message of God to the Jews and Gentiles in a day of prosperity and apostasy. They are called lesser prophets only in the sense that their writings are less voluminous than those of the Major Prophets. Certainly it is not true that theirs was a message of inferiority, fraught with mere preachments or spiritual expostulations, but rather real prophecy of the same high order as that of the best Old Testament worthies. We have great reason to believe that these Twelve spoke as much as the Four, if not much more, but they did not write under Jehovah's guidance as voluminously as those we have just studied.

Who is Hosea?

Hosea was a contemporary of Amos, Isaiah, and Micah. His father's family is unknown, but his name, Beeri, is preserved in the history (1:1); his wife, Gomer, was a daughter of Diblaim, whose family is also veiled in obscurity. The ruling monarchs of his time were Uzziah, Hezekiah, and Jereboam II. His life's work—seventy-two years seems a judicious estimate—was spent in Samaria for the most part. In his declining days Judea was the country of his choice. He lived to see the passing of nearly one century of time and knew something of domestic tragedy and the anguish of mental suffering. His children, Jezreel, Lo-ruhamah, and Lo-ammi, were unfortunate in their birth and bore names which were associated with national events in Israel.

The Character of Hosea's Prophecies

Bishop Horsley brilliantly characterizes the utterances of the "weeping prophet" of Israel after this fashion:

"He wanders not, like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, into the collateral history of the surrounding heathen nations. He meddles not, like Daniel, with the revolutions of the great empires of the world. His own country seems to engross his whole attention—her privileges, her crimes, her punishment, her pardon. He predicts, indeed, in the strongest and clearest terms, the ingrafting of the Gentiles into the Church of God. But he mentions it only generally; he enters not, like Isaiah, into a minute detail of the progress of the business. He alludes to the calling of our Lord from Egypt; to the resurrection on the third day; he touches, but only in general terms, upon the final overthrow of the Anti-Christian army in Palestine, by the immediate interposition of Jehovah; and he celebrates, in the loftiest strains of triumph and exultation, the Saviour's final victory over death and hell. But yet, of all the prophets, he certainly enters the least into the details of the mysteries of redemption. His country and his kindred are the subject next to his heart. Their crimes excite his indignation; their sufferings interest his pity; their future exultation is the subject on which his imagination fixes with delight."

Dr. Keil adds to our Old Testament opinion the following words concerning the style of Hosea: "His profound sympathy gives to his language the character of excitement, so that, for the most part, he merely hints briefly at the thoughts, instead of studiously elaborating them—passes with abrupt changes from one figure or simile to another, and moves forward in short sentences and oracular utterances, rather than in quietly rounded discourse."

I THE HISTORICITY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Hosea, a Northern Kingdom prophet.
2. When and Where Written. In Samaria and Judah between 785-770 B. C.
3. To whom Written. To the Ten Tribes.
4. Purpose. To Save and Deliver Israel.
5. Authenticity. Internal and external evidence point to Hosea as the author of the Prophecy.

II OUTLINE OF THE BOOK (General)

1. Sin Revealed in Israel. 1-4.
2. Judgment Revealed before Israel. 5-10.
3. Love Revealed to Israel. 11-14.

4. The Prophet's Private Ministry. 1-3.
5. The Prophet's Prophetic Ministry. 4-14.

III THE STORY OF THE BOOK

The book opens with a picture of the marriage of Hosea and Gomer. She betrays her marriage vows and seeks another paramour who treats her with harshness and ultimately sells her into slavery. The undying love of Hosea purchases her back, and, after a period of desolation and proving for many days, eventually restores her to her former home. The prophetic parable depicts the condition of Jehovah and his people. They have engaged in spiritual adultery and are to be received back through the grace and mercy of their God.

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Return. Whoredom. Ephraim. Israel.
2. Key Verses. 4:1; 3:4, 5; 6:1-3; 14:1-4.
3. Key Chapters. 4 and 14.
4. Key Ideas. Sin, Judgment, Love.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The value of this writing is seen in the Divine Method of Jehovah in dealing with the heart and mind of Hosea. A great Bible expositor has put the case succinctly: "Out of his communion with God in the days of prosperity he was able to see the true condition of his people. He was conscious that on account of their sin, the judgment of Jehovah threatened them; that on account of their obstinacy, mercy was not obtained; and that the issue of all could only be that they should be a people cast out from their place, power, and privilege.

Out of his own heart agony he learned the true nature of the sin of his people. They were playing the harlot, spending God's gifts in lewd traffic with other lovers.

Out of that personal suffering he came to an understanding of how God suffered over the sin of his people, because of his undying love.

Out of God's love, Hosea's new care for Gomer was born; and in the method God ordained for him with her, he discovered God's method with Israel.

Out of these processes of pain there came a full confidence in the ultimate victory of love."

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

This prophecy has Christ for its Personal Center and Israel as its National Center. Israel is Jehovah's Bride and the Church is the Lamb's Bride. Let us carefully make that distinction. Israel grieves, slights, and dishonors Jehovah, while the Church, the Bride, dishonors the Christ, the Bridgroom. Yet how full of mercy and grace he is in receiving his ecclesia back without spot or wrinkle! Read 6:2; 11:1; 13:4, 14. Also 1 Pet. 2:10; Rom. 11:25, 26.

VII THE LESSONS OF THE BOOK (In Modern Life).

"He drew a circle that shut me out—
Heretic rebel a thing to flout:
But Love and I had the wit to win—
We drew a circle that took him in."

—Edwin Markham.

"For life, with all its yields of joy and woe,
And hope and fear,—believe the aged friend,—
Is just our chance o' the prize of learning love, How love might be, hath been indeed, and is."

—Browning.

"The night has a thousand eyes,
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying sun.
"The mind has a thousand eyes,
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of the whole life dies
When love is done."

—Bourdillon.

"He calleth his own sheep by name" and distinctly remembers them all, with their several respective cases, of which no two in the world are strictly and absolutely alike. ... Now Jesus Christ does not remember one and forget another; nor doth his intercession run upon generals only, as if he did no more than commend his whole Mystical Body to God, but he takes notice of every part. "I have prayed for thee, Peter"—so he does for you and me, and all that commit themselves to him, not only strong but weak believers; not only those that are worthy of greatest honor, but such as are least esteemed in the Church.—Timothy Cruse.

W. I. DUKER,
President

Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER

Vice-President

Maurertown, Virginia

M. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary

Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,Treasurer

Ashland, Ohio

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

Bible Study

By Frank Gehman, Osceola, Indiana

Text: 2 Tim. 2:15—Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

Enlightenment rightly belongs to the Christian. No one should be more keenly interested in the obtaining of legitimate information than he. This is his Father's world. Who among men has more right to an obtainment of the truths concerning it than the Christian? Seldom are we so fortunate as simply to fall into the possession of facts. Usually they must be obtained by the dint of much labor. A vast amount of studying is involved in the acquisition of them. Studying is not itself devoid of effort. It is a systematic, and sometimes laborious process of application to a thing such as a fact or truth until it is made one's own. By the use of this process we secure knowledge. Studying is rewarded by knowledge. Knowledge, properly utilized and applied, is itself wisdom.

Whatever matter interests the Christian, whatever facts claim his attention, none should have so prominent a place as those contained in the Holy Bible. It is a veritable treasure mine of the richest truths of life. Here again studying must be brought into use. The truths of the Bible are not seen with unsympathetic eyes. Its riches are not laid open to the unappreciating gaze of curious but insincere inquirers. We must be sincere in such studying. We must be willing to dig below the surface, which requires effort on our part. Above all we must enter such study with spirits quickened by God's Spirit, with leaden eyes opened by him, with hearts and consciences stirred by his hand; we must be Spirit-led. If we are not, all searching will be vain of appreciation and devoid of eternal benefit. Our eyes might read that Christ died, but our spirits, empowered by his Spirit, not our eyes, must read to understand why he died. In all such study we are dependent upon him.

Paul exhorts the young man Timothy to "study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." He is exhorted to study as though it were something for which he would be amply rewarded. He was not to study just any chance thing that came his way, not to study aimlessly. He would be studying things of God if he were seeking God's approval. The force of this exhortation is not at all nullified in our case. It is obvious that there is a need for such studying on the part of God's people today. It is also beyond point of contention that abundant opportunities are at hand for the study. It naturally follows that valuable results accrue as a result of the studying of the Word. It is finally evident that our standing with God is influenced and affected by diligent searching of the Scriptures.

There Is Need for the Studying of the Scriptures

There is ample need for the studying of the Scripture. There is altogether too little knowledge of the Word on the part of God's people. We all contribute to this condition; some more, some less. It is an occasion for reproach to ourselves. We boast of our literary attainment and talk of our culture, and all the while we are neglecting the greatest literary and cultural treasure of all. We find Ezra confessing before God, "We have forsaken thy commandments" (9:10). Viewing the result he adds, with a keen sense of justice, "Thou our God hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve" (9:13). How should our forsaking of the Word deserve any less serious consequences? God preserve us from thinking ourselves secure until we are safe within that Word, practising the written and abiding within the Person. Jeremiah indicates that men must explain the destruction of the great city "because they forsook the covenant of Jehovah their God" (22:9). Is there less need today for a knowledge of God's spoken will? Unless we maintain a constantly growing knowledge of the Word we are in imminent danger of forsaking the New Covenant which our God has established.

Without a knowledge of the Word we cannot hope to be "ready always to give answer to every man that asketh you a reason concerning the hope that is in you, yet with meekness and fear" (1 Peter 3:15). Failure to be ready (which means not only willingness but ability also) to give such answer brings Christ and Christian things into disrepute in the eyes of the world. The Psalmist groans within himself, "My tears have been my food day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?" (Ps. 42:3). Thus taunted by his enemies he realized that his separation from God was become a means whereby they reproached God. Can you fancy the bitterness of such a draught? Then beware that you bring not Christ into similar disrepute in the eyes of his enemies. We can only avoid that thing through a prayerful Spirit-filled knowledge of the Word. Study is necessary on our part to attain that end.

The Church can be returned to its pristine glory and apostolic purity only by such study conscientiously pursued. That is our part. The rest will be the direct workings of God. In what way were the Bereans more noble than the Jews of Thessalonica? Simply, "in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, examining the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so" (Acts 17:11). There is the formula; not disbelieving, but searching the Scriptures to discover the truth. Note that the Scriptures are the final authorities in all things before we can get back to the apostolic church's standing. We can't thus rely upon the Scriptures without having a knowledge of them. To have a knowledge of them we will have to apply ourselves diligently to their study.

There are Abundant Opportunities for Studying the Bible

Our opportunities of studying the Bible are vast. They are limited only by circumstances ability or willingness. A sentence in a prayer of a certain Christian lady has stuck closely to the memory of the writer. She is accustomed, in her public prayers, to occasionally thank God that we live "in a land of open Bibles." Not all people have such splendid and free access to the Bible as we have. A young man, not so long ago come from a foreign country, was quite surprised when the writer produced a Bible from his pocket, and had another surprise when he discovered that it was in English and that he could read it even though his English is poor! There is no doubt of it,—we do not fully appreciate the liberty and freedom that is ours. Not all people enjoy it. We ought to be more ready to share our blessings with them.

We have excellent educational facilities. Most of us have had better educational advantages than our fathers had. That, however, is no assurance of bettered ability to obtain the spiritual truths of the Word. It is not even an assurance that we will use our privileges and advantages toward that end. It does make the process easier for us, though, if we are but willing to capitalize spiritually our material advantages. These things broaden the opportunities for Bible study.

Too, we have abundant freedom for the pursuing of these studies. As a nation we are not bound to so long hours of labor as were our fathers. We have more leisure. Now leisure is a curse to any people who does not know how to properly invest it. We Christians need to be constantly setting before the world examples of properly invested leisure time. To what better advantage can we invest it than in a perusal of the Scriptures, in a search after the truth? The Church,—i. e., the organized Church, needs the fruits of that perusal; the world needs the pattern of such wisdom. Perchance many of its citizens will even be led to join hands with us as the result of an example of this kind. Open Bibles, books, commentaries, magazines on spiritual subjects are ours in abundance. Schools are within our reach by correspondence if by no other way. Through any or all of these channels wisely chosen and carefully followed, we may reap a rich harvest. We

(Continued on page 15)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE CHRISTIAN AND LAW OBSERVANCE

(Lesson for October 30)

Lesson Text: Rom. 13:1-7; Gal. 6:7-10;

Golden Text: Gal. 6:7

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Obedience to Rulers. Rom. 13:1-7

It seems scarcely necessary to say anything concerning the Christian's obligation to obey his rulers in all points. It is so obvious, and the teaching so plain. Governments are often corrupt, yet the most corrupt of governments is productive of good, and should be obeyed by every Christian. In our republic every Christian ought to do all in his power to improve the government, and then ought to obey ALL the laws enacted by that government. Let us not forget, too, that we have a positive command to PRAY for those in authority. By so doing we may affect a change IN government without a change OF government.

TUESDAY

The Law of Recompense. Gal. 6:6-10

Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. This is a universal law in all nature. If we sow disobedience to some law which we consider trifling and unimportant, we are nevertheless law-breakers and are guilty in the sight of God. Furthermore, our example may influence another to disregard a law which interferes with his pleasure, though we consider it is fundamental, and we "reap the whirlwind" because of his disobedience. Even if we can "get away with it," men need to remember that God is not mocked!

WEDNESDAY

Simple Living Leads to Success. Dan. 1:8-16

All are familiar with the story of Daniel and how he prospered mentally, morally, and physically by his simple living: it is not less true today. Athletes cut out their excesses and sumptuous foods in order to achieve the best physical condition and mental alertness, and we do ourselves untold injury by over-eating even healthful foods. Much more would we harm ourselves if we indulged in "light wines and beers," or other intoxicating beverages. The principle of simple living was one of the cardinal principles of the Brethren; may the Brethren of today be not forgetful of its benefits!

THURSDAY

God's Law in National Life. 2 Chron. 34:29-33

We scarcely need to be reminded of the depths of sin into which Israel fell in the days when the law of the Lord was forgotten and neglected, and even lost. In beautiful contrast with all this are the blessings that prevailed during those periods when the king and his people all kept the laws of God and man. Now these things happened to them for examples, and are as true today as then. The Pilgrim fathers founded a nation of which God was the center, and on this foundation America has risen to her greatness. The Brethren Church has achieved much because of her faithful adherence to the whole Gospel. May the Brethren Church keep her vision, and may our country return to the principles of the Pilgrim fathers!

FRIDAY

Subject to Law for the Lord's Sake. 1 Pet. 2:11-17

Every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake—that with well doing we may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. If all who OUGHT to be walking according to these precepts were so walking, the whole story of law observance in our land would be a different one. The leaven of disobedience and disrespect for law has so leavened the lump today that the problem has become a very complex one. Let us pray for increased wisdom for ourselves and for all our rulers, that we may know how best to meet this problem. And in the meantime, let all Christians see to it that they honor their Lord in this regard.

SATURDAY

Keeping the Law of God. Ps. 119:49-56

When we keep God's law we need not worry about the law of the land, for God's law includes all other laws. Our only hope as a nation is in keeping God's law, even as our only hope as individuals is in him. May his statutes be our songs while we are in these houses of our pilgrimage!

SUNDAY

Justice and Judgment. 1 Pet. 4:12-18

God is a God of justice and of judgment. His unspeakable love has mercifully supplied a way of escape for those who will accept it and walk therein. It seems almost beyond human reason that he should pardon those of us who repent and follow him: how shall any escape who refuse him? We have a duty to all such and have been taught to pluck them as brands from the burning. May many be won through the preached word today!

E. M. RIDDLE,
President
1117 Randolph St.,
Waterloo, Iowa
F. C. VANATOR,
Associate
Peru, Indiana

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK

J. U. WHITMER, 717 E. DuBail Ave., South Bend, Ind.

GLADYS M. SPICE,
General Secretary
and
Treasurer
2301 13th St., N. E.,
Canton, Ohio

BRETHREN CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PROGRAM 1932—1933

October, 1932—ORGANIZATION MONTH

Organize in all departments
Report New Organizations to Secretary

November, 1932—STEWARDSHIP MONTH

Stewardship Instruction
Enrollment of Tithers

December, 1932—MONTH OF SERVICE FOR OTHERS

Plan Christmas Service
Visitation Campaign
Gifts of Clothing or Toys for Orphanage or Mission School

January and

February, 1933—QUIET HOUR AND BIBLE READING

Plan Special C. E. Program
25 per cent of Membership Observing the Quiet Hour—at least 15 Minutes spent in Daily Devotions.
Special Courses in Bible Reading Directed by Pastor.
List of Devotional Books for Reading.

March and

April, 1933—EVANGELISM AND MISSIONS

Urge Regular Church Attendance
Co-operation in Pre-Easter campaigns
Missionary stories or short messages in regular meetings
Definite prayer for Brethren Missions
Reading of Dr. Gribble's Missionary Book
A Missionary Social

May and

June, 1933—CONVENTIONS

(Local, County and State)
Mass meeting with other nearby Brethren Societies

July and

August, 1933—SUMMER ACTIVITIES

A representative at C. E. Sessions of National Conference
Gift sent for C. E. Work during the year to C. E. Secretary, Miss Gladys Spice, before Conference Report.

(Endeavorers: Please keep this program in a conspicuous place on the walls of your C. E. room for ready reference.)

REV. E. M. RIDDLE, President.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

HOMEcoming AND RALLY DAY

First Brethren Church Holds All Day Service, Large Crowd In Attendance

The First Brethren church and Sunday school held a very successful Rally Day and Homecoming last Sunday. The weather was ideal for the occasion and a large number from a distance were in attendance. The Sunday school showed a record breaking attendance for the last year, and all classes were full to the overflowing. The Young People's Class taught by Mr. Vern Stoffer claimed the honors of having the largest attendance.

The morning sermon was given by the pastor, Rev. Henderson who used for his theme "Other Gods." At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served in the church basement and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. At 2 P. M. the crowd again assembled in the church auditorium. The afternoon was devoted to a short program and addresses by the visiting ministers. Rev. B. F. Smith of the Roanoke United Brethren church brought greetings from his congregation and gave a timely talk upon "Present Day Situations Demanding Christian Loyalty." He was followed by a short address by Rev. Mark Spacht, pastor of the Brethren church at Mexico, Indiana. Then Rev. Huddleson of Indianapolis gave a short temperance talk and sang one of his humorous songs. The guest speaker of the afternoon was Rev. Gilbert of the Clear Creek Church of the Brethren who emphasized the value of the Christian Home and its influence upon our social life. Several special numbers of music were given during the day that demand special mention. The Young People's Choir in charge of Mrs. Myrtle Boise, rendered several special numbers, a Ladies' Quartette composed of the following ladies; Mrs. J. E. Zent, Mrs. Chas. Young, Mrs. Vern Stoffer and Mrs. Myrtle Boise. Miss Charlotte Humke gave a pleasing violin solo, and a duet was sung by Lorena Zent and Howard Zent. All these numbers were highly enjoyed. Mr. Glen Spencer gave a short recitation.—The Roanoke (Indiana) Review.

McKEE, PENNSYLVANIA

Following National Conference, we were privileged to have Brother and Sister L. S. Bauman and son Paul with us for a four nights' meeting. Although a very short time was allowed for advertising, yet people came from far and near and we closed with part of the audience sitting on the platform. There were two reconsecrations, making a total of seven since last report. Also there has been one baptism.

It is written that "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment (Matt. 12: 36)." Certainly this verse reveals a terrible responsibility for our every action, and justly so, for words influence lives. As I look back over my ministerial life, I can well see the truth of this statement. It is far from exaggeration to say that Brother Bauman has meant more to me than any living man. The Lord will reward him.

Brother Bauman writes for the King's Business, the monthly magazine of the Los Angeles Bible Institute. We were glad for the visiting ministers, Brother E. S. Flora, Charles Ashman and son Robert, and Hubert Hammond.

July 17 was Homecoming day. Dinner was served at noon and Brother Ashman gave a fine message in the afternoon.

One Sunday the Holy Spirit seemed to definitely lead in a special offering for Foreign Missions and over $100.00 was raised in spite of the depression. This church gave their largest Foreign and Home Mission offerings this year.

The pastor spoke at the Altoona Rescue Mission and also at the Gospel Hall at Nevada, special music being furnished by a group from the church. I also held a two weeks' meeting, with my Bible Chart Lectures, in the Church of the Brethren, at Riggles Gap. No converts or reconsecrations had been recorded at this church for several years and it seemed that this meeting might close the same way, but on the last night, twelve came forward. As preparation for their communion service, I gave my Bible Chart Lecture on "The Tabernacle" in the Church of the Brethren at Juniata.

Our Sunday school has increased over past records. We are using a book entitled, "Major Bible Themes" by Lewis Chafer, as a guide to our Bible studies. The names of the missionaries were divided among the members and twenty-four letters were promised. When an answer is received from a missionary it is shared by the whole congregation on Sunday morning. Also a chapter is read from a "Little Girl's Four Years in Africa" which is a collection of letters written by Sister Gribble some twelve to fourteen years ago.

Many entered into a New Year's resolution to read the Bible through in 1932. The first to report was Brother Will Wertman, who completed his Bible in April. Some proved the Lord by promising to tithe for five months. Layman tracts on tithing are sent to the members by mail, from time to time.

Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. R. I. HUMBERD.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

We have closed one of the most successful revivals in the history of our church. Having lost a number of our families and being faced with the industrial depression of the city we were made to realize that God must surely work a miracle. The church has had no easy time in Fort Wayne and it seemed the more we planned for our meeting the greater were the efforts of the enemy. But we found that "he that is for us is greater than he that is against us."

On the night of September 6th we began our revival in the NEW TENT made possible by individual gifts, and the splendid gift of the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha. Happy were we to be the first to use this outfit. May God use it to save many souls and strengthen many of our churches.

Our evangelist, Brother R. Paul Miller, labored faithfully for four weeks bringing to us those truths which still win and hold folks. Night after night new faces would enter our meeting, faces that would never have entered our church. The meeting proved again that the message of the Brethren Church has a place in the world, for many were there who said, "I never knew these are the things the Brethren Church stood for." Not only did the messages received from night to night prove to be a great inspiration, but the earnestness of our brother gripped hearts. In home and in pulpit there was that pleading presentation of the truth which was used by the Spirit of God to lead twenty-two out in confession or reconsecration for the Lord. Of this number we expect eight to unite with the church, which will make up in a measure for the loss of the year.

The music of the meeting was faithfully supplied by our choir. Every night they not only sang but supplied special numbers for us.

Our services were greatly strengthened by delegations from Roanoke, Huntington, Berne and the City Rescue Mission of Fort Wayne. We were pleased to have Brother and Sister Vanator visit us from Peru. The Church of the Brethren folks attended our meeting very faithfully.

We closed our services asking that the Holy Spirit shall lead us into greater fields of service for the glory of our Savior. Beyond measure have been our blessings during these services; may we be found worthy of them. Pray for us as a church that God shall use us as living witnesses for his Name Sake. SAM. J. ADAMS.

THE REVIVAL AT FORT WAYNE

Fort Wayne is a mission point. It was begun by Brother J. L. Kimmel and after some time of uncertain fortune it was given help by the Home Mission Board and also by the State Mission Board. The building was erected at the very start. About $3,000 remains of the original debt on the building. This was being paid off at a good rate so long as the people had steady work, but for the last couple of years things has slowed up quite a bit. However, in spite of the difficulties, they paid off nearly $500 on this debt this last year.

Things were going fine here until the depression struck the city and closed most of its factories. Last year about half of the congregation were compelled to leave the city, due to the lack of employment. This was a serious blow and greatly discouraged the people who remained. But they held on and in spite of everything kept the church and Sunday school going.

The tent meeting began September 6th and continued for four weeks. It was a hard, uphill battle all the way, but it ended in a real victory. Some very fine families were added to the congregation, and the members of the church were greatly revived and encouraged. Many new people were gotten acquainted with and there are many things to indicate a real future for this work.

Brother Samuel J. Adams is the pastor of this people. He and his wife are most efficient and tireless workers and they would, in a more favorable situation, have accomplished unusual things. But they are good soldiers of Jesus Christ and he always puts his best soldiers in the hardest places where the battle is hottest. These folks have proven their mettle and have held a hard place in a trying time. They will yet live to see the harvest of many of their labors which to date have not brought forth fruit.

We made our home with the pastor and his wife and a happy home it was indeed. For years they were members of the church in Philadelphia where we held the pastorate. We saw them give their lives to Christ, had the privilege of training them, ordaining them and sending them forth for Christ's service. So you can readily understand what contributed to our pleasure in their home.

The people here were very hospitable and we greatly enjoyed the pleasant hours spent in their homes.

There is a tremendous opportunity for our church in Fort Wayne. It stands in the midst of religious confusion in that city of extremes in religion—cold formalism on one side and hyper-emotionalism on the other. The Brethren church, free from the extremes of either system, is a light that shineth in the darkness of uncertainty. We are aware of the great opportunity, for many are now seeking for just what the Brethren Church holds. We are praying that God will enable us to enter in and take the field for the truth of Christ.

It will mean many changes, and much sacrifice and work, but we believe the Brethren Church will stand by us as we go forth to claim the field for him.

R. PAUL MILLER.

SEARGEANTSVILLE AND CALVARY CHURCHES

We have just completed one year of service at the Sergeantsville and Calvary charge. Upon our arrival on the field, we found a faithful minority group splendidly carrying on, in spite of difficulties. The situation is a challenge to an inexperienced pastor and makes it an absolute necessity to trust our Lord for definite guidance.

Sergeantsville is a small village containing only about forty homes and yet there are two churches right in the village and a Church of the Brethren about one mile out of town with a resident pastor living right in the village. In addition to this, the surrounding country is rapidly being swallowed up by a foreign Catholic element.

The Calvary church is located twelve miles from Sergeantsville by good road. It is likewise completely surrounded by a similar foreign element as well as being located out in the country, not even in a village. It is truly "A Church by the Side of the Road." So much for the introduction!

Progress for the Year

1.—One Confession—The fact that there was only one confession grieves us and we are going to redouble our efforts to save souls this coming year, "the Lord willing." Plans are taking form for a revival meeting at the Calvary church this fall.

2.—Increase in Foreign Mission Offering—Our little churches are giving three times the amount per member as the denominational average, to foreign missions, in spite of the depression. Although we are not on the Honor Roll, we are giving more per member than most of the large churches on the printed Honor Roll.

3.—Increase in Home Mission Offering—There was a substantial increase in our Home Mission Offering—although all of it did not go through the regular channels but was sent as designated by the individual.

4.—We are Zealously Teaching Stewardship and the people are beginning to get a vision of their financial obligations to God.

5.—There were only four children under thirteen years of age in the Sergeantsville Sunday school. This age group has been increased to twelve, which is just a 200% gain.

6.—There was no prayer meeting at either church. We have organized one at Calvary and very nearly one-half of the membership attends. Some come as far as fifteen miles every week to prayer meeting. This is the spirit that wins! The Sergeantsville church is now considering the idea of organizing one. We shall give you the testimony of a young Presbyterian ministerial student from Philadelphia, who visited our prayer meeting. He said, "The Spirit here tonight is the nearest I have found to the New Jersey Victorious Life Conference, which I attend."

7.—We are having some success in our effort to prove to the Calvary church that by re-locating the house of worship in an unchurched town four miles away from its present location, there is a greater opportunity for growth.

8.—Special Speakers During the Year—

- (1) A. V. Kimmell, of Philadelphia.
- (2) I. D. Bowman, Leesburg (N. J.) three times.
- (3) S. E. Christiansen, Allentown, Pa.
- (4) A group of ministerial students from Princeton Seminary (twice).
- (5) Dr. O. C. Engle, a special Prophetic Chart Lecture.
- (6) Edwin Boardman, Torresdale, Pa.
- (7) Russell Taylor Smith, radio speaker for Prophetic Testimony League of Philadelphia. Rev. Smith is also to be our main speaker at the all day meeting of the Sergeantsville church, October 16th.

9.—We had a full delegation from both churches at General Conference. Everyone expressed joy for having attended!

10.—The people are responding nobly to a definite effort to keep them informed upon the entire work of the denomination, including its various organizations both at home and abroad.

11.—We have organized a successful Junior Choir at the Sergeantsville church. The children practice one night a week and sing nearly every Sunday. Another is in the process of organization at the Calvary church.

12.—We have just launched an extensive Bible Memory Verse Campaign in the Sunday schools of both churches. This includes the memorization of approximately four hundred verses of the Bible. The children are responding nicely to the process of Hiding the Word of God in their hearts.

J. MILTON BOWMAN, Pastor.

ELKHART, INDIANA

Six weeks of Brother Stuckman's pastorate is gone—these have been weeks of blessings and thanksgivings. The Father does lead his people in his work when his leadership is recognized and the work goes on without interruption when changes come. This has been the happy experience of our people. Under Brother Stuckman's leadership we are going forward. In his own words, "In my twenty years in the ministry, I have never become so much at home in such a brief time. Everyone has shown a desire to make us welcome and to cooperate with us. There seems to be no thought of giving up or even hedging our work because of outside difficulties."

This spirit will urge us on to victory—may we never lose sight of the fact that we are servants doing God's work. Willingness to serve and a willingness to be led is a true condition of Christian service. Our people do respond happily to leadership.

Our prayer service has long been an outstanding service of the church. Our interest in this particular service is a source of inspiration. Truth taught in simplicity does attract.

The Sunday school is steadily increasing in numbers and interest. While our Rally Day service was not as large as last year, yet our year's work shows a marked increase.

The Christian Endeavorers are at work and going strong in numbers and spirit. Young people can and will work if given a place. Let them use their energy and strength. Not only do our young people work in Christian Endeavor, but they are in Sunday school and they make up a very large part of our prayer service on Wednesday evenings.

We are proud of our choir. Through the untiring efforts of both director and singers it is recognized as one of the leading choirs of the city. A well trained choir dignifies the services and good music is uplifting.

Our fall communion service is the last Wednesday evening of October—the 26th. These services are always largely attended by our people—young and old.

We are planning to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the dedication of the first unit of our church November 6th. It will be a homecoming service—a day of worship—a day of social contact and good will. A basket dinner will be served. Come, be one of us for the day.

The church program is not being put over without work and sacrifice, but there is determination that the work must go on even in days of stress and uncertainty. Unity in effort and loyalty to a cause is enabling us to go forward. Working together, pastor and people going forward under Divine leadership, we shall know no defeat. May God keep us humble, that we may be of service to him.

MRS. EDNA NICHOLAS.

ILLIOKOTA DISTRICT OFFICIARY

(Dear Illiokota Brethren: The Conference being postponed in June, the time for it would have been early in October. It did not seem possible or advisable to try to hold it then. The Officers of the Conference who were present at the National Conference at Winona Lake in August met and filled up the necessary vacant offices caused by removals from the district. The Officiary is herewith put in your hands. The time planned for the Conference is June, 1933. Place and exact time will be arranged and announced later.—Geo. E. Cone.)

Moderator—A. R. Staley, Dallas Center,

Iowa.

Vice-Moderator—Miles Taber, Leon, Iowa.

Secretary-Treasurer—Geo. E. Cone, Milledgeville, Ill.

Statistician—A. L. Moyer, Udell, Iowa.

National Conference Executive Committeeman—A. R. Staley, Dallas Center, Iowa.

Sunday School Officials

S. S. Supervisor—Lulu Mosier, Waterloo, Iowa.

Iowa Council Representative—Mrs. F. A.

Wisner, Waterloo, Ia.

Illinois Council Representative. Mrs. John

Livengood, Lanark, Ill.

Adult Department Supt.—John F. Garber,

Weldon, Iowa.

Young People's Department Supt.—Mr.

George Garber, Lanark, Ill.

Children's Division Supt.—Mrs. John Livengood, Lanark, Ill.
Administrative Division Supt.—E. M. Riddle, 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Ia.
Citizenship Superintendent—Ray A. Emmert, 507-508 Iowa Natl. Bank Bldg., Des Moines, Iowa.
Home Department Supt.—Etta Lichty, Waterloo, Ia.
Educational Department Supt.—C. C. Gris-so, Lanark, Ill.
Missionary Department Supt.—Mrs. Dale
Campbell, Dallas Center, Ia.
Christian Endeavor Officers
Christian Endeavor Superintendent—A. L.
Moyer, Udell, Ia.

College Trustees

Ray A. Emmert, Des Moines, Ia., 1932.
G. T. Ronk, 1920 Grand Ave., Cedar Rapids,
Ia., 1933.
H. Bryce Putterbaugh, Lanark, Ill., 1934.

District Mission Board

H. Bryce Putterbaugh, Treasurer, Lanark,
Ill., 1932.
Miles Taber, Leon, Iowa, 1932.
G. T. Ronk, Cedar Rapids, Ia., 1933.
A. A. Bontrager, President, 829 West 4th
St., Waterloo, Ia., 1934
Geo. E. Cone, Secretary, Milledgeville, Ill., 1934.

District Ministerial Examining Board

C. C. Grisso, Lanark Ill., 1932.
Geo. E. Cone, Milledgeville, Ill., 1933.
E. M. Riddle, Waterloo, Iowa, 1934.
District Board of Trustees of Property
President, wB Jo Waterloo, Iowa,
A. R. Staley, Dallas Center, Iowa, 1934.
D. F. Hoover, Dallas Center, Iowa, 1933.
J. F. Garber, Weldon, Iowa, 1932.

District Evangelists

Eastern Division—Illinois Churches—C. C.
Grisso, Lanark, Ill.
Northern Division—Northern Iowa—E. M.
Riddle, Waterloo, Iowa.
Southern Division—Southern Iowa—A. R.
Staley, Dallas Center, Iowa.

District Ministerium

A. R. Staley, President; Miles Taber, Vice-president; Geo. E. Cone, Secretary and Treasurer.

Woman's Missionary Society

President—Mrs. Geo. H. Garber, Lanark, Ill.
Vice-President,
Secretary and Treasurer—Mrs. J. Myers of North English, Iowa.

Sisterhood of Mary and Martha

District Patroness—Mrs. E. M. Riddle, 1117
Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa; Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Esther Hartman,
Milledgeville, Illinois.

Acting Secretary, GEO. E. CONE.

INDIANA STATE CONFERENCE NOTES

The 45th Indiana State conference convened at Flora, Indiana, October 4, 5 and 6, 1932. with F. C. Vanator as chairman and
Wm. H. Miller as secretary.

The reception and entertainment were of high class and all were received with much appreciation, and all felt at home after the address of welcome by the pastor, Brother Ankrum. The sermons were: on Tuesday evening by Brother R. Paul Miller, subject
"Fig Leaves" and on Wednesday evening by Brother Whetstone, subject: "The Message of the Church."

The Bible lectures at the 11 o'clock period were given by Brother Lindower.

The Sunday school address was given by Brother K. M. Monroe.

The Christian Endeavor address was by Brother C. D. Whitmer.

Publishing interests were represented by Brother R. R. Teeter.

The Ministerium, the W. M. S. and the Layman's organization each had two special sessions from 8:00 to 9:30 Wednesday and Thursday mornings. The secretary of each can furnish items of interest to the church at large.

Conference Organization for Coming Year

President—S. M. Whetstone.
Vice-President—Robert Porte.
Secretary-Treasurer—Frank Gehman.

The statistician reported: 36 churches, 38 church buildings, 7,355 members, 39 elders.
$544,475 property valuations; $54,648 paid out last year.

District Missions

President—A. Glenn Carpenter.
Secretary—W. I. Duker.
Treasurer—C. G. Wolfe.

Budget for year, $1,580.
Assessment per member, 40 cents.

Treasurer's report:

Receipts all services .....	$1,422.86
Total expenditures .....	1,215.52

Balance on hand .....	207.34
State Trustees report (per treasurer for Shipshewana):

Balance last year plus receipts ..	$ 680.11
Shelter house fund:

Receipts .....	$ 115.00
Paid out .....	109.55

Balance .....	$ 5.45
Amount due on lots .....	$1,497.96

Needs per president's address: Rostrum for open air meetings; Painting; Well and Drainage; Ovens for picnics; Enlarged lot sales; Erection of Group Buildings.

Motion prevailed to appoint a committee to consult with the national ministerium relative to revision of hand book. Committee named—S. C. Henderson, Freeman Ankrum, Leslie Lindower.

Treasurer's Report:

Cash on hand and receipts .....	$ 210.21
Paid out .....	39.04

Balance .....	$ 171.07
---------------	-----------

Brother Lowman spoke on behalf of the needs of the Old Folks' Home, especially referring to coal and food stuffs. The result was:

Pledged in money, $35.00; Tons of coal,
14; Collection $22.84.

Motion prevailed to vote $150 to be divided equally between the Old Folks' Home and the Superannuated Ministers' fund.
Same to be paid to the proper officials by the Secretary-Treasurer.

Voted to hold the 1933 conference at Shipshewana.

Visitors present: Brethren Pontius, King,
Monroe, and Teeter from Ohio, and R. Paul Miller of Berne, Indiana.

Letters of dismissal to other conferences were given to Brothers Riddle and Sands.

Ministers received into the Indiana conference this year were: Sylvester Whetstone, Leslie Lindower, Frank Gehman and Delbert Flora.

Delegates: Ministerial, 19; Lay, 89; Total, 108.

The Resolutions follow:

Resolutions

Inasmuch as God our Heavenly Father, through his Divine Providence has permitted us to assemble at Flora, Indiana, in this, the 45th Annual Conference of the Brethren Church:

Be It Resolved:

That we as a Christian body, in the midst of this universal depression, brought on principally by man's disobedience of God's Divine Law, do recognize God's continued blessing on us and do hereby urge our people to put forth every effort to get the world back to the simple teachings of Jesus Christ.

That we urge our churches to continue maintaining their regular church services, including mission interests and benevo-lences of our beloved church, that the cause of Christ may be recognized, and the church may put forth her message according to the Word of God.

We also exhort our churches to loyalty to the doctrinal principles of the Brethren Church and to maintain the spirit of love and Christian fellowship among themselves.

We urge the church to maintain her historic position on non-resistance, and temperance. We maintain that the Eighteenth Amendment is the best solution of the liquor problem yet devised, and we urge the voters in our church to take a firm stand in support of it and other instruments of civic and social righteousness.

We thank the Flora church for their hospitality displayed in the entertainment of this Conference.

We urge every Brethren to stand true to God and his Church, that we may be included in that Church triumphant when, at the coming of our Blessed Lord, he may say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord."

Respectfully submitted,
C. D. WHITMER,
S. C. HENDERSON,
MRS. EDNA NICHOLAS.

Thus came to a close a conference filled with the best of good will, and a spirit of love for the church and her work, and a prayer for the welfare of all.

WM. H. MILLER, Secretary.

THE PURPOSE OF THE PRAYER MEET- ING

By Harold Singer

First. This is an opportunity for young people to share in a worship experience.
The whole Sunday night meeting should carry the spirit of worship, with a special emphasis on worship during the first few minutes of the meeting. The songs should be carefully selected to carry out the theme or subject of the evening. Scripture verses, readings, special numbers, and prayers should all lead to the subject.

Second. The second purpose of the Sunday night meeting is the exchange of ideas through the discussion of the subject. General participation is essential to a good meeting. The sharing of thoughts makes us richer. Some one has said: "You have a dollar; I have a dollar. We change, and neither one is better off. You have a thought and I have a thought; we exchange.
Now you have two thoughts and I have two thoughts. We are both richer."

I should like to term the third purpose of a Christian Endeavor meeting as dedication. The worship, the discussion of the subject, should lead at the close of the meeting, through a spoken or unspoken commitment, to a higher purpose in life.

Plan your society meetings to include these three great purposes.—C. E. World.
Kansas City, Missouri.

BIBLE STUDY

(Continued from page 11)

dwell in the midst of opportunities. Does our knowledge of the Word match the opportunities that are ours? Remember 2 Tim. 2:15.

Valuable Results Accrue as a Result of this Studying

Valuable results accrue to ourselves as a fruit of this studying. Our reason for such study is not primarily toward these accrue-ments except as they enable us the more successfully to serve him who is our Lord and Master. For the moment we will refer to Dr. Charles F. Yoder's book entitled, "God's Means of Grace." He speaks of the Bible as being a means of Regeneration (1 Peter 1:23), as a means of Faith (Rom. 10:14, 17), as a means of Justification (Rom. 4:3), as a means of Sanctification (Jn. 17:17), and as a means of Spiritual Growth (Matt. 4:4; Psa. 119:11; Eph. 6:17; Heb. 4:12; Phil. 4:8). What Christian can dispense with these things in his life? To give them up means to give up Christ. Not one of those things can be left out and a man continue a Christian. They are vital, elemental to the new life. Do away with them and you have no new life. They are fundamental doctrines. The first (regeneration) is the beginning of our Christian lives, the whereby of our existence as sons of God. The second (faith) is the very foundation upon which our lives in Christ rest. The third (justification) is the judicial statement of our holiness and thereby acceptability with God. The fourth (sanctification), in its present progressive state as well as more completely in its final consummation, is the actual realization in fact of the judicial statement of our justification. The fifth (spiritual growth) is our necessary advancement toward the "stature of the perfect man in Christ Jesus." Which will you strike out? Well, the Bible is a means toward all these. Without the instrumentality of the Bible, then, we would be rather poor Christians! Friends, we can't afford to neglect our Bibles. It is spiritual suicide to do so. On the other hand, think of the richness of the above-mentioned blessings coming to us from the hand of God and through the divine Word. God grant that we may be busied in its study, not for selfish ends, but for the glory of him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith.

Our Standing With God is Influenced by Our Attitude Toward the Bible

Our standing with God is directly influenced by our attitude toward the Bible. Timothy is to study to show himself approved unto God. No low aim in itself. No, it is not Paul's approval. It is not the approval of the churches. It certainly is not to gain the approval of outsiders, that he might entice them to think him a jolly good fellow. It is to show himself approved of none less than God himself. What are your motives in the things toward which you direct your mind? Here is a good test: Does their showing forth demonstrate you as approved of God? Jas. 1:18 tells us that we are brought forth by the will of the Father through the Word, into the new life. Then our very existence as Christians can only be upon the basis of his approval. We need diligence in the maintenance of that approval. We might be Christians, and still a strong part of our actions and thoughts be without his approval (see 1 Cor. 4:10-15). Shame to us if such be the case. Henceforth let your aim in all things be to obtain his approval. We learn from the Bible what he approves.

The young man Timothy is to show himself also a workman who needeth not to be ashamed. Toward this end he was to study. Would it not be glorious to stand before God unashamed of our work! Paul says that we can and should study toward that end. You may have seen some workman in a factory or elsewhere who had cause to be ashamed of his work. He tries to hide it from the sight of any eyes which might see the inferiority of it. In 1 Cor. 3:13 Paul says "each man's work shall be made manifest." It is folly to try to hide poor workmanship. It only delays the days of detection. It may even lead to an earlier detection. How different it is, though, when one is a workman who needs not to be ashamed! Toward that end we shall direct our studies. The Bible tells us of the standards of Christian workmanship. From it we can learn the needed information to make us unashamed workmen. Oh, yes, we will have need to study the Bible to find out.

We are continued in close relationship to God when we come to the third part of Timothy's aim. It is that of "rightly dividing the word of truth." We are dealing with that which is God's when we are dealing with the Word of truth. It is a serious responsibility, one not to be made light of or to be lightly regarded. It is a responsibility fraught with serious implications. It is not nearly so serious, and not nearly so fraught with danger, however, as is any course which constantly stands aloof from God and his Holy Writ. We are not at liberty to juggle Scriptures and texts as the comedian does jackstones and balls. We are trading neither in silver nor gold but in life values, and that life in the fullest and richest sense. We are to divide the Word aright, divide it justly, divide it in keeping with itself, divide it in accordance with its nature as the Word of truth. Men's opinions cannot hold the floor here. We are dealing with facts and not with vain imaginings. While a man's opinions may be in accord with facts, that is no surety that they will be. Even if one of his opinions is compatible with facts that does not augur that the rest will be. There is only one way that we can attain this last aim of Timothy's enjoined study. That is conscientiously to study the Word that we might prayerfully know it, that, Spirit-led, we might divide it aright.

Finally, brethren, let us give diligent consideration to this Word, studying to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. To that which we earnestly and sincerely sow in the Spirit, the Lord himself shall give the increase.—The King's Business.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE GREAT STONE FACE

From Hawthorne's Story

By Rev. Jay S. Stowell, M. A.

Little Ernest lived in the eastern highlands. At a distance from his home over on the side of the mountain the rocks took on the form of a great stone face. It was a beautiful, kindly and noble face and the children often paused in their play to look away to it. Sometimes they spoke of the face in hushed and reverent tones as the "Old Man of the Mountains."

In the evening little Ernest would sit by the fire while his father and mother talked of the great stone face and of the legend which had long been related how that some day a man would appear in the valley who would look just like the great stone face. Then little Ernest would sit quietly and wonder when the man would come who would look like the face, and when he climbed into bed it was often to dream of the face of the man who was destined to look like it.

In the morning Ernest's first thought was of the face, and at night, after his work was done, he would sit in reverent silence by the side of his cabin, looking away in admiration to the face which radiated so much of benevolence and strength.

Each time that a great man came into the valley Ernest hastened to meet him, lest perchance the man who looked like the face should come and go unrecognized and unhonored. Each time Ernest was forced to turn away in disappointment. None of the great men looked like the face.

The years passed and Ernest was no longer "little Ernest." He became "Neighbor Ernest," the man who was the friend of

THE BRETHREN'S HOME
EMERGENCY
CORNERINDIANA CONFERENCE COMES TO RESCUE

What Will You Do?

Flora, Indiana, October 5, 1932

Report of pledges of churches, Sunday school classes and individuals made at Indiana State Conference to buy coal for the old folks' Home made by the good Brethren and Sisters:

J. Wesley Miller and wife, Goshen, . . . $	5.00
S. M. Whetstone, Goshen, . . . . .	5.00
Mrs. Delbert Price, Nappanee, . . . . .	5.00
Ladies' Bible Class, Warsaw, . . . . .	5.00
Mrs. Frantz, North Manchester, . . . . .	5.00
Eph Culp, Goshen, . . . . .	5.00
John Becknel, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
U. J. Shively, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
Mrs. H. B. Richmond, Nappanee . . . . .	3.50
W. M. S., Nappanee, . . . . .	7.00
Men's S. S. Class, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
Men's S. S. Class, Mexico, . . . . .	3.50
Loyal S. S. Class, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
Loyal Workers' Class, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
Sylvester Lowman, Oakville, . . . . .	3.50
Mrs. Rosa Harry, Oakville, . . . . .	3.50
Ladies' Bible Class, Mexico, . . . . .	3.50
Bible Class, Muncie, . . . . .	3.50
Y. P. S. C. E., Oakville, . . . . .	3.50
Class 13, Flora, . . . . .	3.50
Mrs. Melvin Walters, Nappanee, . . . . .	3.50
Loyal Workers' Class, N. Manchester, . . . . .	3.50

Cash Collections, . . . . . $22.84

These are the cash collections and pledges made by the good people at the Indiana State Conference to buy coal for the old folks' Home at Flora. I am making this report by request of conference. We were sure needing it, and many thanks to you, kind people for the district.

HENRY RINEHART,
Treasurer of the Home.

everyone and whom every one trusted. The very spirit of the stone face seemed to be working itself out in Ernest's life. Each year found him a little more thoughtful, a little more kindly and a little more unselfish although sometimes he was a trifle sad because he had begun to fear that he would never live to see the man who looked like the great stone face.

One day, however, good news came to Ernest. There was to come into the valley a man who was greater than any man who had ever been there before. "Surely," thought Ernest, "this must be the man who looks like the great stone face," and he hastened to see him. But Ernest was doomed again to disappointment; the great man did not look at all like the face.

Quietly and humbly Ernest started homeward; his last hope was gone. No one could come who was greater than the visitor whom they had entertained that day, and yet he bore no resemblance to the face. It was while Ernest was lost in such thoughts as these that almost instinctively he turned to get another view of the face on the mountains which he had come to love. As he turned, the setting sun fell full on his face and the neighbors, who had known him so long, pausing suddenly discovered that it was Ernest himself who looked like the great stone face. While he had been waiting and wondering when the man would come who would look like the face, he had himself grown into its likeness.

This little story is more than a story for us; it is a parable of what is continually happening in our own lives. We are continually growing into the actual likeness of the things which we think about, live with and admire. Lives are not made strong and beautiful in an instant. It is a slow and steady process. They are built out of individual actions day after day, and the actions in turn grow out of the kind of thoughts which we think and the kind of friends which we have, until we actually come to look like the things and the people with whom we associate.

It is a sobering thought that our very appearance ultimately depends upon the thoughts which we think and the friends which we cultivate, and yet it is an encouraging thought after all. We go to the church school and we study about Jesus and the things which he said, or we learn about Paul or one of the prophets and we go away and it doesn't seem to have made much difference. But we go again next Sunday, and the next, and the next and so on, and finally we discover, or our friends do, that it has made a difference that we have been building the very best materials into our lives and the very lines in our faces reveal the fact that we have been living in the presence of the best.—Courtesy Geo. H. Doran Company.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ROANOKE, INDIANA

The First Brethren church at Roanoke, Indiana, will observe their fall love feast and communion service Sunday evening, October 30, 1932. All of like faith and practice are invited to share in this service of the Lord's house.

S. C. HENDERSON, Pastor.

FLORA, INDIANA

The Fall Communion service of the First Brethren church of Flora, Indiana, will be held Tuesday night, November first, commencing at 7:30. Every member is expected to be present for this inspiring and spiritual service; others are welcomed and invited. FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

LANARK, ILLINOIS

The First Brethren church of Lanark, Illinois will observe its semi-annual love feast on Lord's day evening, October 23, beginning at 7 o'clock. All isolated members and others of like precious faith are invited to come and share in this feast of spiritual blessings with us.

C. C. GRISSO, Pastor.

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

Our communion service will be held Sunday evening, October 30th. A cordial invitation is extended to those of like precious faith in and around Pittsburgh to partake with us. The church is only one block off Pen Avenue—not Pennsylvania Avenue. The church is easily reached by street car from all parts of the city.

Our evangelistic meetings begin November 6th and close November 20th. Rev. Wm.

H. Beachler of Gratis, Ohio, is the evangelist. We ask an interest in your prayers and remind you to send names and addresses of Brethren people in the city who may have an interest in the church but are out of touch with the work.

CLAUD STUDEBAKER.

TO CHURCHES WANTING AN EVANGELIST

I wish to announce that I will be available to hold evangelistic meetings this fall and winter. This is an opportune time for such endeavor. We must not be terrorized by present economic conditions into a decrease of effort or cowardly retreat. Let us press the battle bravely. I shall be glad to hear from pastors or churches needing my assistance. Write soon, suggesting dates desired, so that arrangements can be made with the least conflict. Traveling expenses, entertainment and an offering is all the remuneration required. It is not our object to make money, but to win souls to Christ and to edify the church. Let no church be without a revival this year.

H. M. OBERHOLTZER,
Sidney, Indiana.

"HOLD THAT LINE HOLD THAT LINE"

chanted the Rooters' section

THE PASTORS FORM THE LINE OF DEFENSE AGAINST "DEPRESSION'S" FORCES

Hold like the stone-wall against
Pessimism and build up the morale.

Let's Push the Opposition Back Toward the GOAL of

MORE SUBSCRIPTIONS

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 90 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor Church now renewing its list

$1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscriptions

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscription is one not now getting the paper.)

VOL. LIV
Number 42

October 29
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

MONUMENT OF WASHINGTON AT BRADDOCK, PA.

United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission

This statue by Frank Vittor, of Pittsburgh, Pa., shows Washington as the aide-de-camp to General Braddock. It was dedicated by Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon on July 9, 1930, at the ceremonies of the 175th anniversary of Braddock's defeat by the French and Indians. Besides Secretary Mellon, the United States was represented at these exercises by Senators David A. Reed and Millard E. Tydings, Congressmen R. Walton Moore and Henry W. Temple. Congressman Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, representing the city of Braddock, presided at the dedication.

WASHINGTON was not a nullificationist—

---

"The constitution which at any time exists, until changed by the explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all." — Washington's Farewell Address.

---

Vote for no National or State legislator or executive who does not stand for the faithful observance and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

---

As Washington wrote to a church convention, "Act the part of pious Christians and good citizens."

A Family of States

By Frank R. Shields, Supt. Anti-Saloon League, New Jersey

Once upon a time there was an old shepherd who watched his flocks upon the mountain. His cottage was down in the valley close to the timber line. Here he and his wife had lived for a quarter of a century or more. They had reared a large family of boys that had now grown to full manhood.

The night had come on, the sheep were safely in the fold and the family surrounded the dinner table before the blazing fire upon the hearth.

In the midst of the festivity, the old shepherd, trained in the sounds of the mountains, was seen to lift his head and listen. He rose, walked to the door, opened it, stood there but a moment when he turned, put on his coat and hat, took his gun and started for the open door. The mother said, "Father, where are you going?" He replied, "The wolves are gathering from all parts of the forest, and I must go to the protection of the fold."

Instantly, every boy at that table rose from his chair, put on his hat and coat, took his gun and disappeared with the father into the darkness, all save one, Ritchie, who never lifted his head, but went on eating his soup, gormandizing upon the good things provided by the common family. Having eaten to the full, he rose leisurely, sat down in a chair before the open fire, picked up a book and began to read. But the Spartan mother had become concerned and troubled, and confronted her son and said: "Ritchie, why didn't you go with your brothers to help your father defend the fold?" to which he replied casually, "Oh, I am under no obligation to go and I don't care to go. It is more comfortable and to my liking here."

"But, Ritchie," said the mother. "Look me squarely in the face. Have you not been the recipient of all the comforts of this home from your childhood—its shelter, its food, its clothing, its warmth and protection? Is not the fold for which they have gone forth into the darkness the resources of this home? Have you no sense of responsibility, no gratitude left?"

And there wasn't anything for Ritchie to do but to say, "Well, my sympathies are with the wolves."

After a pause, the mother said, "Ritchie, you're my son, but I'm ashamed of you. 'How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is, to have a thankless child.' Were it not for the love that a mother bears her son, I would open that door and say: 'Go live with the wolves.'"

The United States is a family of commonwealths or it is nothing. The protection of the constitution is over every state in the union in a thousand ways, and any state that repeals a law enacted in the interest of upholding and defending the constitution is in sympathy with the wolves of the federal government that would tear the constitution to tatters.

A Lesson in Christian Courtesy

In a hamlet in a Western state lived two pioneers. One kept Saturday as the Sabbath; the other, Sunday. They often met and discussed the subject with such warmth that their controversies made them almost hate each other. The Sunday-observing man owned a meadow near the church to which the Saturday-observing man belonged. One Saturday forenoon, just about sermon time, the Sunday-keeping man began to cut hay, and made all the noise his mowing machine could stand when he passed by the church. The next day, about sermon time, the Saturday-observing man, who owned a threshing machine, drove it by the church of the Sunday-observing man, and stopped by the open door; but the machine did not stop emitting mournful and nerve-racking groans. The Sunday-observing man came out and remonstrated in no specially mild language, about the intrusion. But his opponent in religious views said there was nothing wrong with the machine, and he could not proceed any further. The two men were almost fighting when some church people came out and separated them, the local constable requesting them to

(Continued on page 15)

"HOLD THAT LINE HOLD THAT LINE"

chanted the Rooters' section

THE PASTORS FORM THE LINE OF DEFENSE AGAINST "DEPRESSION'S" FORCES

Hold like the stone-wall against
Pessimism and build up the morale.

Let's Push the Opposition Back Toward the GOAL of

MORE SUBSCRIPTIONS

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 90 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor Church now renewing its list

$1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscriptions

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscription is one not now getting the paper.)

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Personal Preparation for Soul Winning

Soul winning stands out in the Christian life like fruit in a tree. Nothing is more important, and nothing should be more prominent. It should occupy the first place and be one's chief characteristic. In fact, he who does not do what he can to win men and women to the Lord Jesus is lacking in that vital element which gives him likeness unto Christ. To save men was his chief concern. Compassion for their distressed and sinful state was the burden of his heart. Jesus came into the world to save sinners, that was his supreme aim and mission, and when a man is saved from his sins and becomes a disciple of Christ, he must enter into fellowship with that supreme aim and share that mission. Evangelism should become the motivating, dominating, moving spirit of his life. The church that has members of that sort has life and promise.

But before one can be a really successful winner of souls, he must needs make preparation for it, and the preparation that is of first importance is personal preparation. He himself must be a fit vessel for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, for it is the Spirit that worketh in us both to will and to do his good pleasure.

First, his life must be pure, and no one is more keenly aware of the necessity of personal purity than the personal worker himself. That was the urge that came upon the conscience of Isaiah when he saw the Lord and knew that he faced a divine commission. Before he could say "Here am I; send me," he must first say, "Woe is me! for I am undone; for I am a man of unclean lips," and he must experience the cleansing power of the fire from off the divine altar. And nothing does more to keep men pure than the sense of fellowshiping with Christ in the responsibility of winning souls to him. It makes for wholesome, happy relationships between men and women. It keeps the mind busied with lofty thoughts and the heart set upon spiritual qualities. And it takes a life that is so set apart from, and above, the unworthy things of this world to make an appeal to the life that is in sin. Such purity is the best answer to, and reproof of, the low levels outside the church.

Second, the life of the personal soul winner must be honest. He who is dishonest is handicapped by an insurmountable barrier when he approaches an unsaved acquaintance about his soul's welfare. If a person is known to be given to false speaking, to cheating, to deception, to shirking work, to failure to pay one's debts, it would be utter folly for him to attempt to intervene in behalf of the soul of a friend. All the words he might speak would prove as empty and ineffective as his own life. A person must be genuine to have the power of the Spirit. He must be sincere to be accounted worthy to be a conveyor of heavenly truth. Duplicity and dishonesty simply do not go along with spirituality and evangelistic fervor. That may be one reason why it is hard to move so many people out into active soul winning—they are disqualified for such service.

Third, the soul winner must be unselfish, if he would have the greatest success. Selfishness and a fine and powerful spiritual influence over others do not go along together. Selfishness does not bend itself to service, does not deny self and give another the preference, does not give as kind and genuine consideration of others as is demanded by self. Selfishness is jealous of the rights and positions of others, allows prejudice to assert itself against those of different rank or station in life and refuses to yield to the wishes of others. Selfishness is unappealing, unwinsome and cold. You can no more make selfishness into successful soul winning than you can use ice to bring out the beauty and fragrance of the rose—it takes sunshine. And to the extent that selfishness inheres in our natures—and it does in all of us far too much—we will be thwarted in our efforts at personal soul winning, or else we must seek the grace of God to banish it from our lives.

And finally, the soul winner must have sincere love in his heart for all men. That is the most unique and outstanding characteristic of the Christian, and the most difficult to attain, and yet it takes such genuineness to win men. There are people who may appear repulsive to us, but they must nevertheless be the objects of our love. We must be ready to give ourselves in solicitation and loving service to those who are unlovely as well as to those who are wholly congenial. That is the kind of love that gives radiance to our religion and makes our words have weight for the glory of God and the saving of souls.

Prayer is absolutely essential to the winning of souls, but until we have given ourselves in all sincerity to preparation in such ways as these, our prayers will not be very effective. Personal preparation must come first.

The Thing to Remember

On the Prohibition question let us be frank to say that neither party's platform is satisfactory. Both call for repeal in the end; though there is sufficient reason for this democratic editor to prefer to trust the Eighteenth Amendment in the hands of the Republican candidate rather than the Democratic, yet there is not enough difference in the platform statements to stage a big fight over. The thing to remember is that the election of dry congressmen and state legislators is the all-important task at this election. That is the biggest thing that matters, from a Prohibition point of view, but that is really important. Don't let any one say that Prohibition is not an issue at this election. It makes a vast difference whether men are elected to state and federal legislative halls who are wet or dry. In some districts the electors really have no choice, from the wet and dry angle, but where one party nominee is wet and the other dry, we urge Brethren electors to vote for the dry candidate regardless of party.

The Christian people must guard in every way possible against the vicious suggestion that Prohibition be thrown back upon the states. It was there and proved unsatisfactory, and all talk to that end is playing right into the wet program. The only way state handling of the liquor traffic will work is to make the whole country soaking wet again. It is easy enough to talk about federal protection of the dry states, but how is it going to be done? If Uncle Sam has been unable to protect his national border lines satisfactorily, how under the sun is he going to protect the multiplied number of miles along the state lines. It will take a standing army to hold back and search the vast streams of automobiles. Who is to guard the state lines, or pay for the cost of it? Are the dry states to be forced to pay to protect themselves against the wet states?

The fact is that all talk about state control is mere camouflage to conceal the real end—the re-legalizing of the liquor traffic and the return to the free-flowing of rum. No state will be dry. The entire country will be at the mercy of the wettest state.

Religion of the heart is the heart of real religion.

If we love Christ with our whole heart we will serve him with the whole life.

We shall never have a high appreciation of the communion service as long as we have no relish for things spiritual.

He who would know Christ well must know his Word.

In the long view of things it may be said that the sole of man's improvement is the improvement of his soul.

The first step toward getting a bad man made good is to show him that he is bad.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

The members of the Brethren church will never be fully consecrated to the task of building the kingdom of God until they have been made willing to give to God at least a tithe of their income.

If the soul works with nature and God as the trees work together with the soil and the sun, he will ripen all those beautiful fruits named happiness and the blessedness that comes from hope and faith and love.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

Brother M. L. Sands, who, as per recent announcement, has taken charge of the church at Clayton, Ohio, and has his home in Brookville, informs us that they are having Rally Day and Homecoming on Sunday, October 30th. He will conduct his own revival meeting some time in November.

The Fort Wayne, Huntington and Roanoke, Indiana, Women's Missionary Societies have for several years had annual joint meetings, and this year the fellowship was extended to include North Manchester and Sidney societies. It is a good idea and we congratulate them on the wisdom and worth of it.

From a newspaper clipping that came to our desk we learn that Brother B. F. Owen was recently received by ordination into the Baptist ministry by a Baptist council in the First Baptist Church in Elkhart, Indiana. Brother Owen has rendered a worthy service in our church and we are sorry to have him leave us, but we wish him God's blessing in his new field.

Dr. Martin Shively, in the Brethren's Home Corner, reminds us of our Christian obligation of caring for the aged and poor and of the church's inclination to be not unmindful of that responsibility through the centuries. Our own church shared that conviction and undertook its duty in faith and sacrifice. At this particular time there is a special call to sacrifice to that end.

On the Sunday School page conducted by Prof. M. A. Stuckey, we find an article this week by Brother N. V. Leatherman, and a very thoughtful and suggestive article it is, on "The Pastor a Teacher." Due to its length we are unable to publish it entire in this issue, but it is worth waiting till next week for the second installment.

Our sympathies go out to Prof. A. L. DeLozier, who received word on Sunday morning, October 23, of the sudden death by accident of his father, who had been struck by a car, and whose home was Duncanville, Pennsylvania. May the God of all comfort be very near to him and those who mourn with him in this sad hour.

Brother W. R. Deeter reports as secretary for the Mid-west district conference recently held at Portis, Kansas, under the moderatorship of Brother James S. Cook, who is also pastor of the entertaining church. The program is said to have been very much worth while and a good spirit prevailed. The services of Dr. Bell and Prof. Stuckey were greatly appreciated. Brother H. H. Rowsey was elected the new moderator and Brother L. G. Wood the second in command, while Brother W. R. Deeter was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Brother W. H. Schaffer, the secretary, favors us with a report of the recent Pennsylvania District Conference, held at Johnstown First church, of which Brother Charles H. Ashman is the pastor. Brother Claud Studebaker was moderator of the conference, which proved to be both instructive and inspirational. Prof. McClain and Dr. Bame were the out-of-the-district speakers, Brother McClain giving a series of Bible lectures. Brother A. V. Kimmell is the newly elected moderator and the next conference is scheduled to meet at Berlin, in October of 1933.

Brother H. F. Stuckman writes of his change of pastorates from Goshen to Elkhart, Indiana, concerning which we have previously made comment. He is not merely one who believes in long pastorates, but he practices his belief, as is evidenced by the fact that he has spent the past twenty years in but two pastorates, and it has been a fruitful ministry. His nine years at Goshen have witnessed the erection of a beautiful and commodious church building, the addition to its membership of over two hundred souls, the uniting in marriage of four hundred couples and the conduct of nearly two hundred funerals—an unusual record. He is now at Elkhart, as you know from previous report, and has begun his new pastorate under auspicious circumstances.

President Jacobs reports the receipt of generous gifts that have made possible the redecoration of the College chapel, an improvement that was much needed and which has made the chapel now quite attractive. The Saturday student enrollment, now standing at 102, is another encouraging feature of his report. There are times when conditions seem discouraging from a financial point of view for our college, because of the depression, and it is indeed going to be a time of real testing, yet we have faith that somehow God will continue to cause the spirit of loyalty to prevail in the hearts of the many friends of Ashland College to such an extent that its needs will be met.

We have two contributions to "Our Readers' Views" this week, both of them timely communications. In the case of the one we wish to say, not as a defense for extravagance but merely in fairness as an explanation. The amount that the Senate allows the President is not an addition to his salary, but a sum to help defray the enormous expense incident to the office of President. He is compelled to entertain ambassadors, other noted guests, senators, congressmen and many other official and social functionaries, besides maintaining innumerable servants and secretaries in addition to those on the government payroll. When he travels he must take his retinue with him and must travel after a manner in keeping with the chief executive of the nation. I believe it was Mr. Coolidge who undertook to travel alone on a train as an ordinary citizen and the papers made so much over it that he was compelled to return to the more elaborate mode. So great is the outlay of money required by the President's position, but it is a matter of common knowledge that the President usually leaves office with less than he entered, having found it necessary to use practically all his salary in addition to the expense allowance to keep up the big show. That, of course, is not a partisan or political affair; the same situation obtains with a Democratic president as with a Republican. We make this statement merely as a matter of information.

Dr. R. R. Teeter, the business manager, is in his "Corner" again, and is telling you about the Evangelist subscription campaign. He is right when he says we must depend on the pastors and other church leaders to help us pass on the word about this campaign to those who do not take the paper. He is right also when he suggests the need of more denominational loyalty in promoting the circulation of our own church literature. We believe our people are at heart loyal, and will, if we are able to reach them, respond with the support that is needed to give our publications that larger reach and greater service that we covet for them. Our Evangelist family has held out against the forces of depression with commendable loyalty in many sections. We have been cheered by the expressions of appreciation and faithfulness that have reached our office, and the sacrifices that many subscribers have told of making rather than be denied the weekly visits of the Evangelist and lose the inspiration of its fellowship. But there are many members of the Brethren church out of touch with this fellowship and do not realize what their loss is. We want to reach them and we need the help of every present subscriber to help us do it. We are asking every member of the Evangelist to be a missionary to tell of the good things to be found in the Evangelist and of the very special efforts being put forth to enlarge our circle or friends. The campaign begins the first of November. Tell others about it and loan them your paper or send for sample copies.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER THIS WEEK—

For revival services to be held at the church near Garwin, Iowa, in the near future, Brother Raymond Blood, pastor.

Brother I. D. Bowman requests prayer for the Brethren cause in Delaware, where the going will be hard due to the depression.

The Who, Why and What of the Present Temperance Situation--As I See It

By William H. Beachler, D.D.

I have been invited by our Editor to write down some of my thoughts relative to the present Temperance situation. Others doubtless could have made better use of this space. But he asked me and I have consented. I shall try to do my best. I am using the subject as stated because it seems to serve my purpose best.

If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed it will mean the removal of the whitest part of the Constitution, and the disavowal of the symbol of the greatest moral advance in our nation's history. It will mean retreat and retrogression. It will mean that "the sow has returned to her wallow, and the dog to his vomit." No sincere and loyal supporter of truth and right can view the possibility of such a thing with indifference and complacency.

But the Eighteenth Amendment has not yet been repealed. I do not believe it will be. If it is, it will not be either quickly or easily accomplished. If it is, then the Constitution of the United States is not the dignified, impregnable instrument we have allowed ourselves to believe it is. But if it is repealed, and if it takes a long time to do it, Satan knows how to wait, and he will be content with even the slightest advances when he can see in the future, ultimate victory. At all events, the man who expects to see in bold headlines next morning after the coming election that the Eighteenth Amendment has been repealed is doomed to sorry disappointment. It won't be that simple, and I do not believe it will be at all.

But if it is, WHO will be responsible for it? Well first, old Satan himself. Old Satan doesn't like the Eighteenth Amendment—he never did. And people who stand squarely for the Eighteenth Amendment are of no use to him in the present conflict. Next to Satan, you will find the men and their wives who want to reopen their breweries and distilleries and who want to go back to building fortunes out of blood. We mention next that big class of men who will identify themselves as retailers—we used to call them saloon keepers, but to be more specific they were social liabilities and leaches. Next, the owners of great daily papers and even smaller ones, as well as the owners or editors of monthly or weekly periodicals—the men who have sold themselves at a price to studiously misrepresent, and agitate, and mislead, and falsify, and cover facts. What a mighty factor the printed page has been in producing the present moment and the present attitude! And there is the politician who stoops to anything and stops at nothing, to gain his measures—how well he and all of his flag-defiling brothers remember the advantages that came to them under the legalized liquor business. These all want the Eighteenth Amendment repealed. And the man who will have work, if breweries and distilleries reopen. Nor must we forget those men and women (they may be sincere) who have been bamboozled into believing that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will mean greatly increased outlets for the farmers' grain, and at the same time substantial reduction in taxes. And the men and the women who "want their booze," and they want it regularly, and plenty of it; and they want it elevated from the low level of outlawry to respectability which government license and sanction would inevitably and certainly contribute to the vile and dirty business. They want "Uncle Sammie's" sanction. It eases conscience. And the low-down bum of the gutter—he belongs in this list too. In brief, IF THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT IS REPEALED, all these classes whom I have mentioned as well as those who have, on every possible occasion, in public or in private, either by written or spoken word belittled or spoken slighingly of the Eighteenth Amendment, with multitudes of others who remained tongue-tied and silent when they should have spoken—if the Eighteenth Amendment is ever repealed these represent the people who will have done it. And don't forget, old Satan heads the list. "His servants ye are whom ye serve."

I shall use very little space in dealing with the "WHY" of my subject. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, WHY will it have been repealed? In fact, I have already quite largely answered the question by indicating those classes who are most eager to gain the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Seeing "Who is Who" in this great struggle for repeal, it becomes surprisingly easy to determine "Why is Why?" And yet, we feel under obligation to go deeper. I wonder if I am harsh and mistaken if I say that, if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed it is our confession before God, ourselves, and the world that our nation is morally degenerate, that we are in a state of decay, and that the prohibition of our most demoralizing, destructive, and ruinous evil among us is too white and too decent for the majority of our people? It may sound harsh, but I believe it represents the actual answer to the WHY? And yet, I am by no means overlooking the fact that standing in the ranks of this vast booze-thirsty, money-thirsty, power-thirsty army of "repealers" are many people too good and too decent to be in such company. They may be sincere (many of them are), and many of them are churchmembers—even preachers. Think of it! Therefore in enlarging a bit more on my answer as to the WHY? I must insist that there are many who, in the last several years, have done their thinking with other people's minds—not their own. They have looked at this whole situation through the eyes of others who had them see just what they wanted them to see. They have chosen to believe falsehood rather than truth. They have shut their eyes to facts, and chosen to make themselves the victims of propaganda, misrepresentation, and deceit. In the presence of a grave moment and a burning challenge, many (I will say good people) have been inveigled and stampeded into a state of mental confusion, delusion, and fog. And that was the purpose of the whole scheme. With multitudes of people the scheme has succeeded. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed it means the scheme did the trick, and that, as I see it, answers the Why?

IF

The Eighteenth Amendment is Repealed

Who will be to blame?

Dr. Beachler says, Old Satan first of all, but with him a large crowd, mottled and strange in its mixture, having in its number even many respectable church members.

What a distressing anomaly—church members in the service of Satan!

And now for the "WHAT" of our subject. I must condense thought. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, the liquor business will at once step from a status of outlawry to a status of legitimacy. The whiteness of our flag will once more become besmirched when Uncle Sam identifies himself again as a partner in the liquor business. There will be some form of "attempted" control. I say "attempted" because that is all it can amount to. The liquor business never has been controlled—it never will be. PROHIBITION is the only solution of the liquor problem. If, under control, it shall become a matter for each state to decide, anybody knows, that knows anything, that some states are foreordained to be wet, while others will forever remain dry. If those wet states could be moved to some unapproachable, inescapable island in the Pacific Ocean and kept there, it would not matter so much. But anybody knows, who knows anything, that just one wet state in the midst of neighboring dry states becomes a constant menace, and annoyance, and source of trouble to the dry states. So that if no nation can long exist half slave and half free, neither can any nation successfully cope with the liquor problem on a basis of part of the states wet and the others dry. Let us refuse to be "kidded" at this point. And then there is the possibility ultimately of the open saloon, JUST AS WE USED TO HAVE IT. Have you heard this? "No, I would never consent to have the open saloon again, but I do favor repeal." Have you heard it, Oh, yes you have. Well, go tell all such good folks to jump in the well. If this becomes a matter for each state to settle for itself what "say" will you have as a resident of a dry state as to whether New York or Illinois shall or shall not have the open saloon? And anyhow, what difference is there in a drunken man whether it be served over the bar or in some other place where it is dispensed? If he can get all he wants in either place, he will get just as drunk as he can, and he will reel, and stagger, and vomit just the same. Oh, God, open our eyes before it is too late!

I have merely touched the fringes of "What" will follow if the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed. How it will affect weak men who want to be sober, and can be, if it is out of their reach. Women who will go back to the washtub to make an existence—not a living! Children dropping out of school by the thousands because Dad has gone back to drinking! The cause of religion and the church set back very surely and definitely. Debauchery, poverty, crime! Ruined lives! Young people finding new evils in their path, as if they did not have enough already! The nation's economic system disturbed! All legitimate lines of business taking a jolt! Where does the story end? And there will be the awakening, when it is too late, to the fact that it is just one more victory of darkness, and intrigue, and low-downness over right, and truth. Oh, how dangerous to tamper at all with the Eighteenth Amendment! A small opening is made in a great dam, and who can guess what may follow? The champions of repeal know this well enough.

I close, with more in my heart unsaid than I have tried to say. But I must say—What a tragedy that the matter has ever been mixed up with politics when it ought to be a distinctly moral question! And what a tragedy that when this sublime Amendment was born it had to fall into so many wet, unfriendly hands who tried to strangle it rather than have it live! And what a tragedy, if repeal succeeds, that any professed child of God shall have to confess that he or she helped!

Gratis, Ohio.

A Basis for Christian Optimism

By President Edwin E. Jacobs, Ph.D.

There can be no denying the fact that there is a very great deal of pessimism abroad in the world today, nor that in America it is very acute. This spirit manifests itself in our business affairs, in our social organizations and conditions, in education, and to a greater or lesser extent, in religion.

In business, we blame the present ill conditions upon "unavoidable world-wide conditions", an "aftermath of the world war." You certainly have heard these expressions over the radio, made by many a candidate for political office. Whether, however, this is the case or whether our condition here in America is due rather to evil-minded men who have been in control, is a matter of debate.

In our social life, bad conditions are often blamed on the financial situation, coupled with the general depravity of the people, especially the young. People want luxuries, leisure, and are restless under any sort of moral restraint.

In education, so the argument runs, the spirit of pessimism is related to several things among which are the fact that old moral precepts and maxims are no longer stressed, students will not study as once they did, religion is banished from our schools and there is nothing else to take its place, and that our graduates are by no means the leaders in morality and the finer things of life. We are told that if education had been on the right side, all of the above evils would have been stemmed, but, alas, it is only giving an impetus to evil forces. The colleges still preach an idealism which neither they nor their graduates are willing to follow.

While in religion there is a veritable babble of voices from the ultra-orthodox to the ultra-liberal, all claiming that if their mode of life and belief had been followed, all things would be better. And it must be said that in many cases there is a modicum of truth in their claims.

Now every thinking person must admit that there is room for pessimism. Business is bad. Our social relationships are far from perfect, nor are they speedily righting themselves. Education is in many cases going up a blind alley, while the religious life of the nation is somewhat paralyzed. What is the relief?

Far be it from the purpose of the author of this article either clearly to analyze the cause, or to proclaim a cure. I can not read the signs of the times with the certainty or the clarity of vision which some claim to possess. I do see, however, that in the long sweep of human history, there have been ups and downs, but that history in any way "repeats itself", is, of course, only poetry and has no relation to the present situation. But it must be true that natural causes coupled with human causation, have brought us into our present morass, and I still firmly believe that if human efforts had been wisely directed, we would not, by the acts of nature alone, be in the situation in which we now find ourselves.

Man, I believe, could so command the forces of nature as to make life in the here and now, much happier than it is at present, and than it ever has been. The good earth with its wealth, climate, and nature in general, have not changed and will not soon change. Nor does man rapidly change. The greed, avarice, and selfishness, as well as the charity and altruism, which have marked his earlier history, are here today much the same as centuries ago. And with our advancing civilization (sic) both of these elements of character have a better opportunity of showing themselves.

Now what do business, society, education, and religion rest back upon, any way? Certainly upon some degree of character. This can not be denied as touching the first three and if the latter does not effect character, then it is worthless. Now we must admit that there have been certain improvements in business, involving better standards. In society, some advances have been made, while in education we are as far advanced in methods as the automobile is ahead of the ox-cart in transportation, but about its content, I am not so sure. But with it all, that there has been an equal advance in human welfare and happiness, is a matter that is open to serious question. Edison was right if and when he said, that the next great advances ought to come in the field of our social relationships, in spiritual values, or morals,—call it what you will.

Will this soon happen? Not, it seems to me, unless the spirit of Jesus grips men more profoundly than it does today. But there is a way out. It would seem as if in the very nature of the case, that truth and right are stronger than evil and error, but it takes a great deal of heroism to put the former forward. No one can read the New Testament today and not be struck by the aptness of Jesus' teachings to this very hour. In fact, this is true of the moral teachings of the whole Bible, written as it was in times of national adversity as well as in times of prosperity, in war as well as in peace.

Will the world soon accept the spirit of Jesus and act upon it? That presents a grave hazard but the duty of the church is plain,—keep right on in the straight and narrow path of right and righteousness. Its mission is to set a bright and shining light in the world, one that can not be hid. Personal righteousness after all, is the one and only basis of any kind of righteousness. There is no use talking about the righteousness of a city, state, or society, if there is not an abundance of personal righteousness. City councils, houses of representatives, and senates can be righteous only in so far as their members are righteous. The expressions "the social mind," or "the social conscience", have no meaning apart from individuals, for there is neither mind nor conscience without the existence of the individual head and heart.

If Jesus points the way out, as many of us believe, then the church should continue to "preach Jesus," and if he does not point the way out (because people will not accept him), he still does point the way out of pessimism to those who do believe him, for to them he is the "living water", springing up eternally, the "living bread," of which if one eats he shall be satisfied. Conditions may be hard, but the Christian has both a star of light and a hope that ought to be invincible, no matter how dark the night. He feels within his own breast the burning of that divine spark set on fire by Jesus. That is the one privilege accorded to the Christian and to the Christian only.

Nothing in these lines should be taken as an admonition to the good people of the land, to let things go laissez faire, but quite the reverse. But I do insist that no matter how evil the days may be, the believing Christian has a hope even in the here and now, that others do not and can not, in the very nature of the case, possess. And if the world should come to be actuated by the teachings of Jesus, which seems to me to be most unlikely, in business, society, education and religion, so much the better, but if it does not so happen still the Christian has this precious hope.

And I regard this as the one supreme antidote for pessimism and a far better one than the preaching of an approaching world doom could possibly be, for this challenges, not my morbid wishes, but my best efforts.

Ashland, Ohio.

Henry Grady's Indictment of Liquor

It is interesting to note that the men who have stood out as really great among the leaders of men have been keen to sense and strong to denounce the forces that work against human welfare and the building of character, such as the liquor traffic. Among such outstanding men was Henry Grady. The Evangelical Messenger says:

The name of Henry Grady will live long in American history as one of her most gifted sons. He was a most distinguished journalist and a leader of southern thought. In a prominent place of Atlanta, Ga., where he lived and labored, a fine monument stands as a tribute to his greatness, erected by the people who knew him best and by the city with which his name will be forever linked.

Not only was Grady a powerful writer, but a great orator as well, adding to his fame and value to the nation by his leadership in the South in that critical period of our national life following the Civil War. His appeals carried with them tremendous influence and power; and his voice was one of the forces which helped to quiet the turmoil of the South.

In 1888 he delivered an address which has become famous on the liquor traffic. His audience was electrified and when he had concluded a great ovation was given him. In his peroration he thus described that damnable business which forces are now seeking to again make lawful in American life. Read this, and then vote for the repeal of the prohibition law of the land—if you can with self-respect:

"Tonight it enters a humble home to strike the roses from a woman's cheek and tomorrow it challenges this republic in the halls of Congress. Today it strikes a crust from the lips of a starving child and tomorrow levies tribute from the government itself.

"There is no cottage humble enough to escape it, no place strong enough to shut it out. It defies the law when it cannot coerce suffrage. It is flexible to cajole, but merciless in victory.

"It is the mortal enemy of peace and order, the spoiler of men and terror of women, the cloud that shadows the faces of children, the demon that has dug more graves and sent more souls unshriven to judgment than all the pestilences that have wasted life since God sent the plagues of Egypt and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho.

"It comes to ruin, and it shall profit mainly by the ruin of your sons and mine. It comes to mislead human souls and crush human hearts under its rumbling wheels.

"It comes to bring gray-haired mothers down in shame and sorrow to their graves. It comes to change the wife's love into despair and her pride into shame. It comes to still the laughter on the lips of little children. It comes to stifle all the music of the home and fill it with silence and desolation.

"It comes to ruin your body and mind, to wreck your home, and it knows it must measure its prosperity by the swiftness and certainty with which it wrecks this world."

I firmly believe that the moment our hearts are emptied of pride and selfishness and ambition and self-seeking and everything that is contrary to God's law, the Holy Ghost will come and fill every corner of our hearts; but if we are full of pride and conceit and ambition and self-seeking and pleasure and the world, there is no room for the Spirit of God; and I believe many a man is praying to God to fill him when he is full already with something else.—D. L. Moody.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

CHARLES H. GABRIEL PASSES ON

It was Wednesday, September 4, 1932 that Charles H. Gabriel (78) passed on to meet his Lord whom he had so beautifully glorified in song, and by whose inspiring words and music many will continue to give praise to our great Savior. It is said that Mr. Gabriel was the author of more than 8000 hymns. There is scarcely a song book published in the last generation that does not contain a goodly number of his hymns. They are found in foreign language hymn books as well as English. Following are a few of his very popular hymns which will cause his name to be long and graciously remembered: "O That Will be Glory," "Oh, It Is Wonderful," "My Savior's Love," "He is so Precious to Me," "Growing Dearer Each Day," "More like the Master." These will preserve his memory for many generations.

REDUCING PREACHERS' SALARIES

I notice that the salary of the president of the American Tobacco Company will pay $1,000 to each of 2,383 ministers, and Babe Ruth, of baseball homerun fame, receives a salary that will pay seventy ministers, $1,000 each. Maybe some church members who are voting to reduce the pay of their pastor are helping toward the big incomes of the president of American Tobacco Company, and swelling the gate receipts at baseball parks, so Babe can get his usual roll.—Religious Telescope.

UNDERWORLD FORCES TWO MINISTERIAL RESIGNATIONS

Two Denver ministers have found themselves in great difficulty and resigned from their pulpits under pressure. The first is the Rev. C. H. M. Graves of the Clayton Community Presbyterian church, who has been engaged for some time in combating the alleged gangsters of Denver. For several months he was escorted by the police to protect him from his gangster enemies. The second is the Rev. McMurdo Brown, rector of the Episcopal church in Park Hill. His vegetable man turned out to be a bootlegger, who kidnapped him. He resigned his pulpit soon after being released.—The Christian Century.

SIGNS OF RECOVERY SEEM GOOD

One has to pussyfoot a good deal when he asserts that business is feeling better. Nation's Business, which is an able magazine, that generally has a reason, states this guardedly but with assurance. It compares the recovery of business to the convalescence of an invalid. "No sick man was ever propped up in bed with a pillow behind his back without wondering if he couldn't take a chance and walk across the room." The writer of that paragraph thinks the patient has been well dosed with tonics and stimulants and that he is beginning to think of solid food and believes he can digest. He may stagger along through September and begin to step lively in October. Let us believe that it is so.—The Christian Evangelist.

RURAL CHURCH MERGERS INCREASING

The trend toward union in the rural church field is continuing, says Dr. Benson Y. Landis, executive secretary of the American Country Life Association, according to the Associated Press.

Dr. Benson, who is also secretary of the committee on town and country of the Home Missions Council and the Federal Council of Churches, says that the migration from the city to the farm is a puzzling factor in any attempt to survey church conditions in the country. "Department of Agriculture estimates indicate that the farm population gained 648,000 during 1931," he said, "and the increase, which began in 1930, is continuing.

"A major development," he reports, "is the 'larger parish plan' or the organization of 'rural cooperatives.' There are perhaps 100 of these at the present time, and the number is growing.

"The plan is a device to bring to the rural church the city church's experience in organization work. Under it, several churches, sometimes of one denomination, sometimes of several, band together to finance the work of a minister, a social service director, and perhaps an educational director. Such action brings benefit that no one rural church could afford.

"This may mean more rural churches, or it may mean larger ones, but it is impossible to forecast with certainty because no one knows how long the city-to-farm drift will continue, nor whether those who go back are likely to stay there.

"About all one can say at the present is that the movements of the past decade from country to city and from city to country constitute one of the major migrations of people in modern times."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

JEWS INCREASED 500% IN CENTURY, SAYS EXPERT

The Jewish population of the world has increased from 3,000,000 to nearly 16,000,000 within the last hundred years, an increase of more than 500 per cent, while the combined population of Europe, North and South America, South Africa and Australia, the immigration countries, has increased only three and one-half times, according to figures prepared by Jakob Lestschinsky, Berlin statistician, and made public recently by the Menorah Journal.

"The Jews show everywhere a relatively smaller number of births than do Gentiles," Herr Lestschinsky points out, "because the Jews were urbanized earlier, and also because they included a higher percentage of the middle class and the intellectuals. Nevertheless, because of a decrease in mortality far greater than among the other peoples of the world, the Jews have increased both absolutely and proportionally in almost all countries, except in a few smaller ones of Western Europe.

"This unprecedented increase seems all the more remarkable when we recall that during the last half century, the West European Jews were engulfed by three large pogrom waves with 2,000 massacres in which approximately 100,000 Jews were murdered and from 200,000 to 300,000 prematurely died of epidemics."

Herr Lestschinsky said that the two Americas now have 30 per cent of the Jews, although in 1825 they had only 3 per cent. The 5,000,000 Jews on the American continents have a natural increase of 75,000 yearly, he said.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

MAKING LIQUOR PARAMOUNT

People who have been accustomed to decry making the liquor question a political issue can go just as far as any Anti-Saloon Leaguer in seeking liquor legislation. A shining example is that of Mr. Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, in announcing that he will not support the candidacy of William G. McAdoo, democratic nominee for United States senator from California. Replying to Mr. Shouse, Mr. McAdoo says that he will never vote for the return of the saloon in America, which he claims Mr. Shouse is seeking. He says, however, that he will vote in the senate for submission to the states of a repeal resolution in exact conformity with the democratic platform. To many, that will appear as leaving a wide open door for the return of the saloon in many states. Prohibitionists in California cannot be criticised if they take their prohibition sentiments as seriously as Mr. Shouse takes his anti-sentiments, in which case Mr. Shouse might have a—for him—less desirable senator from California than Mr. McAdoo.—The Presbyterian Advance.

WOMEN IN SALOONS

The sham argument that prohibition has made women drink and that we must repeal prohibition to stop women drinking, meets a jolt if we go back in the newspaper files of the bar-room era. For instance, in November, 1902, thirty years ago, we read:

"The recent order of Inspector Shea, of Chicago, barring women from the saloons of a certain district on the west side, has caused consternation in the saloon ranks where, it is declared, without the presence of women patrons, saloons "could not afford to remain open a week."—The Presbyterian.

TOO MUCH PRAYER

One of the great weaknesses of those who engage in public prayer and one of the hindrances to real prayer upon the part of Christians is the disposition to make long prayers.

It is not that these good souls hope to be heard for their much speaking; they have no such heathenish idea of God. They do not all engage in vain repetitions. It seems rather to be the result of an effort to prove a zeal for prayer by the quantity of it—the length of it. There are actually some zealots who would prove their faith in prayer by the amount of time they spend consecutively upon their knees. There are, without doubt, occasions that demand such wrestling with God, such night-long seasons of intercession. But it is not the Scriptural teaching that the power of prayer is to be measured by its quantity.

Above all, it must be manifest that, in public prayer, he defeats his own purpose who so prolongs the prayer that the audience comes to be restless and, not only indifferent, but antagonistic. No people can be easily taught to pray who are repeatedly subjected to public prayer drawn out to unnecessary length. Even fervent and heartfelt petitions lose their force and fail to carry the assembly along if they are stretched out too far.

As we understand it the one who offers the prayer undertakes to lead the audience in prayer. Unless he does so, much—very much—is lost. Certainly the average audience is not led very far after the prayer has been much prolonged.—Christian Standard.

JOINING A CHURCH

Clarence A. Darrow has joined a church. As we view it, it is not much of a church, being one of the sporadic expressions of humanism. But really we are surprised that Clarence A. Darrow would be enrolled in any organization that claimed, truly, or falsely, to be a church at all. He must be improving.—The Presbyterian.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Joel

There are at least thirteen distinct characters in the Old Testament bearing the name "Joel." It is a Jewish word signifying "Jehovah is God." Not all of the above characters did credit in their actual living to the lofty significance of their names. With accuracy and authority we may aver that the majority of them were good; a few were sinful. Let us glance hastily at the list:

1. The Eldest Son of Samuel. 1 Sam. 8:2, 1 Chron. 6:33; 15:17.
2. A Simeonite Prince. 1 Chron. 4:35.
3. A Reubenite Chief. 1 Chron. 5:4, 8.
4. A Gadite Chief. 1 Chron. 5:12.
5. A Levite, of Kohath's Family. 1 Chron. 6:36.
6. A Chief of Issachar. 1 Chron. 7:3.
7. A Warrior of David. 1 Chron. 11:38.
8. A Gershonite Levite. 1 Chron. 15:7, 11, 12.
9. A West Manasseh Ruler. 1 Chron. 27:20.
10. A Kohathite Levite. II Chron. 29:12.
11. A Son of Nebo. Ezra 10:43.
12. A Benjamite. Neh. 11:9.
13. A Son of Pethuel. Joel 1:1.

Little is known of the history surrounding the prophet's immediate family. He is Pethuel's son and perhaps a native of Judah. He may have known Elijah in his youth and, if so, no doubt, Elisha his successor. Some think he prophesied under the reign of Joash. (II Chron. 22-24).

I THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Joel.
2. When and where written. 800-700 B. C. in Judah.
3. To whom written. To the Jews of Judah.
4. Occasion. The Locust Plague and Jehovah's Revelation.
5. Authenticity. The History is literal in its import; it is not an Allegory.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. Present Things: The Locust Plague: Devastation. 1:1-20.
2. Imminent Things: The Coming Army: Exhortation. 2:1-3:8.
3. Distant Things: The Final Conflict: Prediction. 3:9-21.

III THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

Dr. Schofield has listed the order of events appearing in Joel's prophecy after this fashion:

"(1). The invasion of Palestine from the north by Gentile world-powers headed under the Beast and false prophet. (Joel 2:1-10; "Armageddon," Rev. 16:14, refs.);

"(2). The Lord's army and destruction of the invaders. (Joel 2:2; Rev. 19:11-21);

"(3). The repentance of Judah in the land. (Joel 2:12-17; Deut. 30:1-9);

"(4). The answer of Jehovah. (Joel 2:18-27);

"(5). The effusion of the Spirit in the (Jewish) "last days". (Joel 2:28, 29);

"(6). The return of the Lord in glory and the setting up of the kingdom (Joel 2:30-32; Acts 15:15-17) by the regathering of the nation and judgment of the nations. (Joel 3:1-16);

"(7). Full and permanent kingdom blessing. (Joel 3:17-21; Zech. 14:1-21; Matt. 25:32.)"

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Jehovah (RV); "Day of the Lord."
2. Key Verses. 1:15; 2:1; 3:14.
3. Key Chapters. 3, 2, 1. (Selection is difficult).
4. Key Ideas. Repentance and Revival.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The prophetic nature of the book of Joel has been noted in the above section (IV). Its literary structure is superb, reminding one of the longer sweeps of a Lyon and Healy harp. There is almost a perfect blending of judgment and grace. Law and mercy bend lowly to greet and kiss each other in one everlasting embrace.

"Jeremiah's style," Fausset writes, "is pure, smooth, rhythmical periodic, and regular in its parallelisms; strong as Micah, tender as Jeremiah, vivid as Nathan; and sublime as Isaiah. Take as a specimen (Chap. 2) his graphic picture of the terrible aspect of the locusts, their rapidity, irresistible progress, noisy din, and instinct-taught power of marshalling their power for devastation."

This writing is also of great value in that it points out the fact of the outpouring of the Spirit of God on all flesh. Read Acts and the events of Pentecost.

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

The Day of the Lord is the Day of Christ. Every day is Christ's day in one sense or another. The present is his, the near is his, and the ultimate is his. He breaks up the present with worms or insects and teaches man invaluable lessons; he dwells in the shadowy, imminent events and scenes and leads, guides, and directs his own; he will be the transcendent and coming Lord in the end time—in the last days of the church-age and in the last days of Israel's trouble. Read Joel 3:16, 17.

VII THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

The cardinal message of Joel is wrapped up in those immortal lines of Charles Kingsley. They are reproduced in full below:

"The Day of the Lord is at hand, at hand:

Its storms roll up the sky:

The nations sleep starving on heaps of gold;

All dreamers toss and sigh;

The night is darkest before the morn

When the pain is sorest the child is born,

And the Day of the Lord is at hand.

Gather you, gather you, angels of God—

Freedom, and Mercy, and Truth—

Come! for the earth is grown coward and old,

Come down, and renew us her youth.

Wisdom, self-sacrifice, daring, and love,

Haste to the battle-field, stoop from above,

To the Day of the Lord at hand.

Gather you, gather you, hounds of hell,

Famine, and plague, and war;

Idleness, bigotry, cant, and misrule,

Gather and fall in the snare!

Hireling and mammonite, bigot and knave.

Crawl to the battle-field, sneak to your grave,

In the Day of the Lord at hand.

Who would sit down and sigh for a lost age of gold,

While the Lord of all ages is here?

True hearts will leap up at the trumpet of God,

And those who can suffer can dare.

Each old age of gold was an iron age too;

And the meekest of the saints may find stern work to do.

In the Day of the Lord at hand.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.
MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Bertin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Pastor a Teacher

By Rev. N. V. Leatherman, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association

What may we consider the principal ministry of the pastor to be, is quite frequently discussed among pastors today. And we believe we too can discuss this subject among ourselves with profit. For the people of our churches have come to think of the pastor all the way from errand boy for the bazaar, to general manager of God's soul saving station, the church. Some people want a mixer. And their idea of a mixer varies from a fellow who stands on a street corner and salutes every Tom, Dick and Harry who passed by, to a man who will be considered the most popular after-dinner speaker in town. Some want a man on hand to marry off their offspring and bury their dead. Some take the pastor as a necessary nuisance, indispensable, yet regrettable. Others may take him as a first rate collecting agent. While others, let us be thankful, and we would like to think they are in the ascending majority, like to think of their pastor as the man of God.

It might be interesting to speculate as to where our people get these notions. But let us not go too far into such prospecting, lest we discover the real origin in the old adage, "Like people, like priest."

Certainly in these days when many things are expected of a pastor, it is well for us to consider what it is to which God has called him, and what is his first function in this high office. A few years ago in one of the ministerial association meetings, in one of our large cities, a pastor on the program, read a splendid paper on the subject, "The Purpose of the Ministry" in which he emphasized the sacred phrase, "Preach the Word." There were a goodly number present who took exception to this as the first function of the minister, and proclaimed instead that a pastor's first mission was, to live the life. Certainly no one will quibble about the necessity of a pastor living the life. To be sure, and, in this he ought to set the example. But we took opportunity on the occasion referred to, to state that, we had many good men in the church we were called to serve, of whom we were willing to concede, that they lived just as good a life, as did their pastor, and yet they wanted a pastor around. This old world of ours is blessed with a good many laymen, who live the life, according to their ability, saints of God are they, yet who have no calling at all to preach. Yes when it comes to living the life, how fine is the practice for the pastor to commune with these adorable saints. They can refresh our souls when we allow. However, our calling as a pastor, in playing the role of our office, in order that we may do our part in really living the life, is a specific responsibility, that does not rest upon every one that lives the life.

We revert then to our question. What is the pastor's chief role? And we make simple to reply. He is primarily a teacher. In Ephesians, the fourth chapter, where Paul exhorts the church to unity, and referring to the descending and ascending Christ, he says of him in the eleventh and twelfth verses, "And he gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Here we have five offices for the church given by the descending and ascending Christ: apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers. They were all given for the self-same purposes; to perfect the saints, for the work of the ministry, and for edifying the body of Christ. Likewise it may be said of these offices that their manner of procedure or methods of accomplishments, can most certainly not be sharply separated one from another. However, by our study of the exercise of the apostles we have come to a general accord, that this particular office in the church was for the few specifically chosen by Christ, as foundation stones, in the beginning days of the church, known as the Apostolic Days. We do not think of the office or apostle, as one intended to be continued through the church age. And today we do not elect, or call, or ordain men to the office of prophet. God alone can make a prophet. And this he continues to do for us today by his Holy Spirit. A prophet is also a teacher given by Christ. He explains the past and portrays the future. The attention given to prophecy in our own day is most certainly conducive to the creation of prophets. What shall we say for the office of evangelist? An evangelist is one who bears particularly the evangel message of salvation to the lost. He is the teller of good tidings. One who spreads the joyful glad news concerning the Saviour to win men to Christ. He too is a teacher; yet of a peculiar type. "And some, pastors and teachers;" are the last named offices in this scripture. Certainly not all teachers are pastors, nor evangelists nor prophets, nor apostles. But it is inconceivable of any of these offices functioning without being emphatically, A Teacher. Even the Chief Cornerstone of his church; the Master himself, accomplished wonders through the process of teaching. How frequently do we refer to him as the Master Teacher. Doubtless the best text book ever written, exemplifying the best methods in teaching, is none other than the New Testament and particularly the gospels which so clearly portray how Jesus taught.

Christ's entire life was an appeal to the curious. His manner of annunciation was excellent. Before one of the world's greatest and most important classes we read of him: "And when he was set, he opened his mouth and taught them saying." He interested the people with his stories. He went from the known to the unknown. His thought was clearly expressed. He spoke with authority. He taught folks. He caused them to know. He directed their attitudes.

He developed their conduct. And that made them His disciples indeed. So we exclaim, what a teacher!

Surely then it is not preposterous nor incongruous to conclude that the high offices given by Christ to and for his church are exercised principally by the process of teaching. And if we will, we may consider that each office is given for a peculiar manner of teaching, as well as for specific ends and purposes to attain.

Let us discuss our subject in general just a little further. Doubtless the most impelling Scripture, which the church has always taken as her commanding orders, with a more or less degree of seriousness, is that so frequently referred to as the great commission. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen." This commission we know was given to the disciples, and repeated by our Lord and theirs in slightly variant forms on several different occasions just prior to his ascension. This form has been accepted by the church and emphasized by the church through the centuries somewhat more than the other forms because it expresses practically all that is contained in all of the others. This we have come to believe is the commission of the church. And so far as the Brethren church is concerned, the pastor is the elder, the bishop, the highest office the church gives by her Lord. It is not too much to conclude then that the pastor of today is a teacher and a teacher of TEACHERS. For when our text is reasonably analyzed we learn that the emphasis is placed upon the one word TEACH. We are to go. But for what purpose? To teach. To teach all nations, or peoples. We are to go baptizing the people, but not until after they have been taught. We are to go, "teaching them to observe." Thus we are not merely to go through the motions of teaching; but teaching with a purpose and for results. For truly we do not teach until some one is taught.

From A. S. Hobart's book, "Pedagogy for Ministers," we quote these lines, "Beyond all exemplifications of the teaching habit of great leaders, and beyond all the suggestions that may come from the word 'teacher' or 'teaching,' there lies in the very nature of the pastor's work the necessity for teaching." It might be profitable to make inquiry into the thought of the nature of the pastor's work with a view to observe whether or not teaching is the best means of accomplishing the task assigned. Let us take the commission, "Teaching them to observe," and we will find it embraces pretty generally what we as pastors are trying to do. We want our people to observe, the commandments of Christ; to receive him; to be led by the Holy Spirit; to worship God and to serve him continually; to be loyal and faithful to his church; to appreciate their privilege of fellowshiping with the saints here and hereafter, to understandingly enjoy the benefits of God's grace as manifested through their justification, their sanctification and coming glorification, and in fact we want them to observe all of God's means of Grace. Peter expresses his desire for his people, which every pastor can well afford to make his own desire for his people, in II Peter 3:18, in these words, "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." We wish our people to observe and to grow. How can we pastors best accomplish this end? And our answer is inevitable. Teaching, is that answer. The nature then of the pastor's work calls for a teacher.

(To be continued)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE CHRISTIAN AND WORLD PEACE

(Lesson for November 6)

Lesson Text: Ps. 72:9-17; Eph. 2:13-19;
Golden Text: Matt. 5:9

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Reign of the Prince of Peace. Ps. 72:7-17

Glorious indeed are the promises here. How our souls look forward from the oppression of men and the greed of corrupt politicians, to the coming day when "he shall spare the poor and needy," and the whole earth shall be filled with his glory! As we look about us, the world today seems far away from that ideal; yet, praise God, the Christian may here and now experience those blessings if he permits the Prince of Peace to reign in his heart! Outwardly he may have trials, misunderstandings, and loss; but within, the blessed peace of the Son of God. Truly, it surpasses human understanding.

TUESDAY

Fellow-Citizens in Christ. Eph. 2:13-22

He preached peace to those who were afar off—even to you and me. The peace that we find in him is a bond which unites us to all others who have found their peace in him, whether they be of the circumcision or of the uncircumcision, black, yellow, or white. There have been many moves by men of the world to promote a feeling of fellowship among the people of all nations; the church has made some effort in this direction, but assuredly not to the extent she might have. Help us to realize more fully. O God, that, in the words of the poet, "Who owns my Father as a son, Is surely kin to me."

WEDNESDAY

Pursuing Peace. 1 Pet. 3:8-12

Our message for today is intensely practical. It comes right down to the every-day relationships of a man with those of his own household, his own shop, and his own church. The only hope of world peace is for the people of the world, all over the world, to live in accordance with these principles, for the world is made up of individuals. Let us read each phrase slowly, meditating as we read whether or not we are living up to these instructions as we should; whether or not there is anything we can do that will enable and encourage those about us to live up to them more closely. In short, in our own everyday lives, let us seek peace, and pursue it!

THURSDAY

Counseling for Peace. Zech. 6:9-13

The Jews at this time were greatly discouraged by the untoward conditions about them, and the prophet Zechariah, by the word of the Lord, encouraged them with this pageantry, setting forth that in the days of the Messiah, the Branch, the glory of the Lord shall fill the temple, and he shall reign as priest and king over his people. Amid the discouragements of the present day, it is still a blessed hope to which the whole creation looks forward. Let us pray God to bless our efforts to hasten the day when Jesus shall reign.

FRIDAY

Strangers to Peace. Rom. 3:9-18

These are plain words, but they exactly describe the man without Christ, however beautiful his character may appear in the minds of men. Governments have been largely influenced by their Christian subjects, but there is as yet no such thing as a truly Christian nation in the world, so governments of earth are still strangers to peace. Our best hope of peace is to make more disciples in every nation, and for this we have been commissioned. But let us not forget to pray for our rulers, and for all in authority.

SATURDAY

The Promise of World Peace. Isa. 2:1-4

In recent international events we again have evidence that treaties of men can never bring about world peace. Whenever it is to their advantage to do so, they reward the most solemn treaty as a scrap of paper. But the promise is that in that day when the Lord sets up his government on the earth there shall be peace throughout its borders. Let us pray for the soon-coming of the Lord, to set things right in the earth.

SUNDAY

The God of Peace. Ps. 46:1-11

In these days when there is no peace in the world about us, we must find in God our refuge and strength, our peace. Surely, a God of peace would have us bend every effort toward preventing war as far as is humanly possible, here and now, that we might make the world as peaceable a place as possible in which to spread his Gospel. But let us not forget that the hope of nations, even as of individuals, is in the presence of the God of peace. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!

Prayer is the wireless between your heart and God's. He is always listening in. Are you?

E. M. RIDDLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICK, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
J. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuSable Ave., South Bend, Ind.

My Prayer

By Vivian Adler, a South Bend Endeavorer

I pray, dear Lord, that I might be Always humble, more like thee.
When temptations come my way
Help me, Jesus, not to stray.

Let my tongue no evil speak
Of those I know, just keep me meek,
May the words I say and the deeds I do
Glorify thee the whole day thru'.

Cleanse my heart, just make me pure.
So many times I'm not quite sure
Which way to turn, the step to take,
Guide me in the decisions I make.

I thank thee for thy loving care,
And all my burdens help me share.
I pray thou'll hear this earnest plea.
Mold me, Savior, more like thee. Amen.
South Bend, Indiana.

Using Ritual in Christian Endeavor

The young people's Christian Endeavor society in the community church (Congregational) of Lakeville, New York has made several departures from the customary form of weekly meeting. These have been worked out by the young people with the suggestions and cooperation of their pastor, Rev. George E. Haynes.

In the meeting-room each officer has his stated place, the chairs being so arranged that the officers sit in the form of the letter E, while the other members sit in a semicircle that forms the letter C. A typical order of service in this society follows:

1. Processional Hymn. "We've a story to tell to the nations."
2. Call to Worship, by the president. "The Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before him."
3. Moment of Silent Prayer.
4. Hymn. "Jesus Is All the World to Me."
5. Officers' Roll-Call (responding with appropriate verses of Scripture).
6. Responsive Service by Officers and Society. Bible Gems.
7. Hymn. "Wonderful Words of Life."
8. Prayer Service. President, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace that we may find grace to help in time of need." Pianist plays softly obligato of prayerful hymns. Sentence Prayers.
9. Hymn. "What a friend we have in Jesus!"
10. Presentation of Topic by the leader.
  - a. Topic announced and briefly explained by the leader.
  - b. Scripture lesson read by one selected by the leader.
  - c. Hymn chosen and announced by some one selected.
  - d. Three worth-while thoughts about the topic, presented by A. B. and C.
  - e. Open discussion of the topic, led by some one selected.
  - f. Conclusion, by some one selected.
11. Business Session, conducted by the president.
12. Hymn. "Give of your best to the Master."
13. Responsive Benediction. (Num. 6:24-26).
A copy of the order of service is furnished to each person attending. Hymns used are being memorized. Prayers of appeal, of thanksgiving, of penitence, of forgiveness, of resolution, of intercession, and of fellowship have also been memorized. The topic, of course, is different each week, and its presentation is so planned that the leadership is not too much centralized.—C. E. World.

When the Congregation Sings

In the First Baptist church, Syracuse, New York, Dr. Bernard C. Clausen has made experiments in choral singing by the entire congregation that could be followed in many churches and also in mass-meetings and conventions of young people.

Dr. Clausen, in "Tested Programs for Special Days," a handbook published by Fleming H. Revell Company, writes:

"Choral numbers are notoriously the portions of the service where there is a lack of that fine intensity of interest which makes for good worship. The mood of the service escapes control here if anywhere. But we have found that precisely the opposite effect is obtained when the congregation itself becomes a great choir, trained in the simple technic of choral singing and participating in the anthems. With a good quartette of solo voices to give the leads.

"A large number of the simpler anthems are available, the congregation taking the choral passages. These they will easily learn through a few rehearsals on the harmonies involved; and these rehearsals can themselves be the most interesting part of a service of worship, taking place on several Sundays in advance of the special day, at the regular time for anthem-singing. They can be taught by rote through several repetitions, or by the inclusion of mimeographed music sheets within the regular hymn-books.

"To meet the needs of such congregational choral work we have arranged special anthems for special days, which utilize the solo voices for introductions, recitatives, and narrative passages, and call for responses from the congregation in stanzas of well-known Easter or Christmas hymns. The effect is electric.

"No one who hears two thousand voices joined in a mighty congregational anthem would be satisfied thereafter with the ordinary listless response to a choral program. We are pressing on with new experiments in this wide and inviting field."—C. E. World.

we labored with them in some mighty undertakings over a long period of time, and left them with not a ripple of discord or misunderstanding. They are all our friends, and we hope they always will be. We plan to use them as such, because we have left but ten miles intervening between them and us. They have chosen in our successor a mighty builder and leader. He will plough deeper, and wider than we could have hoped to do. The finest reports come to us from his leadership, and we sincerely feel they are deserved.

Feeling it best to change our location, it was but natural to look close home for a field. This is quite possible, when one has had such pleasant relations with a church, such as was had at Goshen, and in those years we had fraternized much with the folks at Elkhart. It was a great pleasure to me to become Brother Duker's successor here at Elkhart. What a pastorate he has had here! Over a period of ten years they have had a marvelous growth in numbers and physical equipment. Brother Duker has the faculty of getting a church to help him in his undertakings. He has done everything to make our coming here a success. Strangely our lives have been woven together. Boys together in the old home community near Nappanee, students in the same country school, and now for nine years neighbors together in the pastorate, I now become his successor. May the Lord bless him in his new work. When his health is restored, we are hoping he can do for some other church what he has done for Elkhart. We find the church here a bee-hive of activity. We are trying to adjust ourselves to changes, and lead them on to goals of still higher attainment—they are ready to be led.

H. F. STUCKMAN,
Elkhart, Indiana.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

On the receipt of several fine gifts, we undertook to redecorate the College chapel; hence we have had no chapel exercise now for two weeks. The room was repapered, painted, varnished, and otherwise improved.

On last Saturday night, Ashland high school played Mansfield high school on the College field. The crowd was estimated according to the ticket sale, at just short of five thousand, a large part of which were young people of school age. This is doubtless the largest crowd ever on the College grounds.

I recently spoke before the Mansfield city teachers. There are over 200 teachers in the system.

The enrollment in the Saturday classes is now 102, a few more than last year.

At the first meeting of the Faculty club, which was held at the J. L. Clark lodge in his woods, Dean Mason read a paper upon certain recent criticisms of the federal constitution. Dr. Bixler is president this year.

Last week Professor Puterbaugh spent several days at Northwestern University in connection with his work there. He reports satisfactory results.

I have just filed my annual report with the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. There has been no let-down on standards.

Dr. Shively recently gave his illustrated lecture on the early ministers of the church at Dayton.

Men's and Girls' glee clubs have already been formed.

The College lost recently to Wooster and to Muskingum. Also to Baldwin-Wallace, 6 to 0.

It is with regret that I record the death of the father of our Professor Arthur DeLozier of Duncansville, Pennsylvania. Professor DeLozier was called home suddenly last Sunday morning, and will be absent for the greater part of the week.

E. E. JACOBS.

A CHANGE OF PASTORATES

The past twenty years of our ministry have been spent in but two communities. To such an one moving is somewhat of a novelty, and takes on some interesting aspects. All these however were overshadowed by the sadness that comes from breaking away from a long pastorate. I am a believer in long pastorates, even so it seems better after a time to go into some other field of labor. This was my feeling regarding my recent change of pastorates.

Nine years at Goshen were history making ones for both pastor and people. To say they have been interesting ones, would be putting it mildly, for who could pass through such stirring times without seeing the interesting side of what is taking place with us. Not the least among the pleasing features of my work at Goshen was the erection of the new church, and the apparent leading of God to remain on. Not once in the years that have followed has there been reaction to that program, even though we have often been sorely disappointed, owing to general conditions. Not once has the pastor suffered because he was their leader during that period of the erection of the new church. I cannot take the space to speak of all the things that took place in this period, always without any serious disturbance among us, and with great ease, because the people had a mind to work harmoniously with us. More than two hundred were baptized, and united with the church. Four hundred couples were united in marriage and nearly two hundred funerals were conducted. Each quarter I gave a report of my activities, and not once did the church doubt our willingness to be used. We came,

JOINT MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING

Sixty-five people attended the joint meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies held in Huntington, Indiana, recently according to a newspaper clipping sent to The Evangelist office. Representatives were present from Fort Wayne, Roanoke, North Manchester, Muncie and Oakville and the local society. This is an annual event, according to Brother S. C. Henderson, pastor of the Huntington-Roanoke circuit, and the next year's meeting has been scheduled for Fort Wayne. The following is quoted from the Huntington News:

The forenoon was spent in a social time together with rolling bandages for the African Mission work, and sewing for the church home at Flora, Indiana.

A potluck dinner was served at the noon hour in the basement of the church. The dining room was in charge of Miss Pauline Heiney and Mrs. Belle Witter. The room and tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and Halloween motifs. The guests were seated at long tables.

The program included a playlet entitled "Stewardship," by the Roanoke ladies. Mrs. S. J. Adams of Fort Wayne led the singing and presented a solo "A Thankful Heart." Mrs. Marie Enyeart and Mrs. S. C. Henderson gave topics on "The Child, His Nature and his Nurture." Rev. S. J. Adams of Fort Wayne gave an interesting and instructive address on "The Future of the Child." Mrs. Belle Zook spoke on "The Origin of the Joint Meeting."

MID-WEST DISTRICT CONFERENCE

of the Brethren Church, Portis, Kansas,
October 11 to 13, 1932

We Brethren people of Mid-west District feel very much elated over our recent Conference which convened in the beautiful city of Portis, Kansas, situated in the Solomon River Valley in north central Kansas. To say the least, the program was of a high order, and each number was rendered with credit to the participant, and with approval of those who heard. Rev. James S. Cook, the host and pastor of the church, did some commendable things in looking after our welfare and entertainment. That makes us think a whole lot more of him for so doing. He filled his mission in that respect in a very fine and sweet spirited way.

Rev. Cook was the Moderator when the Conference began on Tuesday evening, and after the preliminary worship period he delivered his address on "A Challenge for This Hour." He told how all worth-while service was accompanied by sacrifice and fidelity to the cause. He used as a Text, Esther 4:14—"Knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" The words of this text were spoken by Mordecai in one of the darkest hours of Hebrew world's history. We like to read the book because it gives faith in dark days. One cannot remain spiritual very long in an ice box. There never was a time when the world needed Mordecais and Esthers more than today.

After the address of welcome by Superintendent D. G. Lemon, the courtesies of the Conference were extended to Dr. W. S. Bell, and Prof. Stuckey of Ashland College. The session closed by singing "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Wednesday

Moderator Cook opened the session with an appropriate hymn of praise, and Rev. L. A. Meyers read the Scripture from Matt. 13:1-9, 18-22, the readings of which constitute one of the Parables of Jesus. This was followed by prayer. Business consisted of elections and reports. The Credential Committee reported 11 ministerial and 18 lay delegates. Informal balloting resulted in the election of the following: H. H. Rowsey, Moderator; L. G. Wood, Vice-Moderator; W. R. Deeter was elected to succeed himself as Secretary-Treasurer, in which capacity he had served for a number of years. H. H. Rowsey was also elected as a College Trustee; J. G. Dodds, Director of Church Schools; L. G. Wood, Member Executive Board; L. A. Meyers, Member of Mission Board for 3 years. W. R. Deeter, Ministerial examining Board; * * * The District Mission Board decided to pay to Mulvane, Kansas, five dollars per month to apply on parsonage and acreage debt. Apportionments for the coming year are lower than for years and are as follows: Falls City, $60.00; Carleton, $40.00; Portis, $40.00; McLouth, $5.00; Morrill, $10.00; Ft. Scott, $5.00; Mulvane, $5.00; Hamlin, $5.00.

The Standard of Regulations for Ordination of Ministers as proposed by the National Ministerial association, was adopted, by the Mid-west District.

***Prof. Stuckey did himself proud in the delivery of three masterful addresses. This was his second visit to this church and he has fond memories of his first "jack rabbit hunt with hounds," the vast expanse and stretches of clear blue sky, moonlight nights and sunny days. The people who heard him will not soon forget his helpful and inspiring messages. Large audiences heard him two evenings, and they will always welcome his return in the future, if the Lord tarries.

Dr. W. S. Bell, of Ashland College, seemed at his best, being full of hopefulness for the Church and her sacred institutions. It is always encouraging to hear his reports on the College, the Publishing House, and the work they are doing. May they long live to serve his Kingdom.

Dr. Bell is one of the most optimistic ministers we have in the church, and his messages increased our faith and gave us courage to take a new hold on our work. He is more than a "jingle bell." He preaches with a vigor and enthusiasm that arrests attention, and when he is through he has left you something that grips and stays. His sermon on "What's the Matter with America" made the folks sit up and take notice, and they shall not soon forget.

L. G. Wood gave a splendid report of the work at our Mission in Fort Scott. That church proposes to have "no Debt" unless it may be the pastor's salary, to carry on its many channels of activity. We presume, if facts were known, one preacher and his good wife are making a heavy sacrifice in helping that station to be a front liner. They deserve the appreciation of the whole brotherhood. May the Lord bless them with good.

The special numbers in song were as follows: two sisters, Emogene Wagner and Leona Tetlow, in a duet, "The Path the Savior Trod"; Misses Cook and Moore, a duet; Rev. and Mrs. Deeter, "I Saw My Mother Kneeling There," and the Portis Male Quartette, rendered three numbers. These men of the quarter are among the busiest fellows you can find, yet they used time to a good profit in singing for us. One man drove forty miles to do his part, and 40 more to get back home—he is a school superintendent, Prof. Wimmer, of the Agra, Kansas, Schools; Prof. VanGundy, Portis schools, Editor Kissell, Portis Independent; and Carl Caldwell, large farmer. Thanks to these willing workers.

The 1933 Conference will go either to Beaver City, or Carleton, Nebraska. Decision will be made later on.

After the last session on Thursday evening, Rev. Cook invited all the ministers and delegates over to the Manse for a social hour and watermelon feed. It was time well spent and the parsonage family have our sincere thanks for the fellowship of that hour.

May the blessings of God be with you all, is our prayer.

W. R. DEETER, Secretary-Treasurer.

HIGH SPOTS IN THE PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Held at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, October 3-6, 1932

To truly report all the "High Spots" of the recent Pennsylvania District Conference would require us to publish every address. We hope, however, that in the coming year the pages of this paper will be graced with some of those splendid addresses and reports heard at this past conference. We shall, however, mention a few of the outstanding "High Spots" and try to offend none if we fail to report all. The writer feels like the little boy who upon returning from his first party came panting to his mother and with gasping breath said, "Oh, mother, it was so good I don't know where to begin to tell you all about it."

After a splendid organ prelude by Mrs. Wm. Barron who substituted for the regular organist, Mrs. Harry Darr, unable to be present, and with the Conference singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," Moderator Claud Studebaker led the assembly in prayer. The main feature of the evening was a message from Vice Moderator Wm. A. Steffler who challenged the opening session of conference with the question, "Why Should the Work Cease?" His question remains unanswerable. In view of that fact the Brethren Church with her full gospel message must press on.

Following the address of welcome by the entertaining pastor, C. H. Ashman twenty-one congregations responded expressing their appreciation of the hospitality of the "Friendly City."

Moderator Claud Studebaker in his address before the conference reviewed the Brethren Church "Retrospectively" and diagnosed her "introspectively" and appealed for her "Future." The District Evangelists reported favorably concerning the churches in their respective districts. The District Mission Board reports were all accepted with approval of conference.

The Christian Endeavor session on Tuesday afternoon was both inspirational and informational. Miss Dora McCoy of the Third church of Johnstown told what Christian Endeavor offered young people. Her address challenged our youth to a constructive Christian fellowship such as the world cannot offer. Her speech was so effective that she was later elected Vice President of the District C. E. The President of the District Christian Endeavor gave his annual report from the societies of the Pennsylvania District. Watch for this report on the Christian Endeavor page of the Evangelist.

The Sunday School Session was favored with two addresses. Willis E. Ronk spoke in an educational way, "How the Church has taught—a Review." He reviewed the religious education as given in Old Testament days, Christian Education in the early days of Christianity, Christian Education during the middle ages and the Sunday School of Today. This address was followed by "How we ought to Teach," a constructive presentation of teaching in the Sunday school by Prof. A. B. Cober of the Berlin public schools.

After a devotional Bible study on "Discipleship, its Marks," by W. C. Benshoff the conference was delighted with the fascinating address of Dr. A. J. McClain, "The Bible and Science, an Introduction to the Problem."

A new feature of the conference was the combined devotional period before the simultaneous sessions, each morning—a song, a prayer, Scripture quotations, or testimony and praise and sentence prayers.

The Wednesday morning conference session heard with delight the address by A. V. Kimmell on "God has a Plan for your Life." His address centered around the Brethren's Home and Superannuated Ministers. Since the Conference Treasury was not so flush this year Brother Kimmell could not draw another $200 check like his speech did last year!

The Statistician's report showed a commendable gain in most of the items during the past year. The district reports a net gain in membership of 20 percent. The Ministerial Examining Board recommended

J. Milton Bowman, pastor of Sergeantsville and Calvary, New Jersey churches, to be ordained to the Eldership. Also it reported the examination of W. Bertram King for Eldership, whose ordination took place at the last National Conference. An important recommendation which the Conference adopted was: that the conference adopt the Standard and Form for Licensing and Ordaining of Ministers which was adopted by the National Ministerial Association at the 1932 National Conference and that the Conference in turn urge its adoption by every local congregation within the Pennsylvania District.

A change was made in the Constitution and By-Laws, Article 3, Section A, to read as follows: "Upon request of Church or Pastor, he (District Evangelist) shall visit the church or its organizations submitted to his care."

As a result of the election Wednesday morning the following officers were elected: Moderator, A. V. Kimmell; Vice Moderator, W. C. Benshoff; Secretary, W. H. Schaffer; Assistant Secretary, E. S. Flora; Treasurer, D. C. White; Statistician, R. D. Crees.

Wednesday afternoon the Conference heard from Dr. A. J. McClain the present conditions of the College and Seminary and also their future prospects. Following this was the District Missions Session at which time the president, Claud Studebaker, addressed the Conference on "The Importance of District Missions." The Secretary of the Board, J. L. Gingrich, spoke on "The Administration of District Missions."

Following a devotional Bible Study on the "Self-Emptying of Christ" by N. V. Leathernman, Dr. McClain gave his second message on "Physical Science as contained in the Scriptures."

Among the items of business transacted Thursday was the motion that this conference recommend to our churches that the book membership of the congregation be reported and that the per capita for District Missions be reduced to 50 cents for this year. The total number of delegates were 184—30 ministerial and 154 lay. Motion passed by conference that the $500.00 loan made from the District Conference Treasurer to the District Mission Board Treasurer be considered a gift and the note burned.

At the eleven o'clock hour Dr. McClain delivered a very instructive discourse on "Discipline in the Church."

The afternoon sessions were devoted to Foreign Missionary and publication interests. C. H. Ashman brought a message on "Why Hold We Our Peace?" impressing our minds and hearts with the zeal necessary to carry on the Foreign Missionary Work. Dr. McClain spoke a few words concerning Dr. Gribble's book, "Undaunted Hope." Dr. C. A. Bame, editor of our Sunday School Literature, presented the publication interests and problems relative to our publications. In an open forum discussion many questions were answered concerning problems in local congregations.

The closing session of the conference listened appreciatively to "The Educational Task of the Church" as presented by Wilis E. Ronk. Dr. McClain then brought the closing message of the conference, "The Bible and Its Relation to Medical Science, Which Has to Do with the Body and Its Healing and Care."

The conference for 1933 will meet at Berlin, Pennsylvania, October 2, 3, 4 and 5. Special music was furnished by the Choir of the First Church, Johnstown; A trio from the Third church, Johnstown; and several solos by Miss Pauline Seitz of Philadelphia.

The meals were served in the Social rooms of the church by the Women's Missionary Society.

A splendid fellowship supper was held Wednesday evening, sponsored by the Alexander Mack Brotherhood of the First church for all elders and laymen delegates.

The Resolutions Committee made its report, which was adopted as follows:

Resolutions

We the Committee on Resolutions, beg leave to submit the following report to the Forty-fourth Pennsylvania District Conference of the Brethren Church.

I. Hallelujah

We believe this conference has been peculiarly blessed by the power and love of Almighty God; by the grace and mercy of the Lord Jesus Christ; and by the wisdom and guidance of the Holy Spirit, therefore be it resolved that we express our praise to our Triune God for all his wonderful manifestation of abiding interest in his world, in his church and in the Brethren.

II. Appreciations

a. Whereas our conference officials have so faithfully and conscientiously performed their duties in provision of a most excellent program and in the execution of the same: Therefore be it resolved, that we most heartily commend them for their part in making this conference a great success. Particularly do we wish to mention our appreciation of the address brought by our moderator and the excellent manner in which he conducted this conference.

b. Whereas we have been so graciously entertained by the untiring efforts of the pastor and members of the First Brethren church of Johnstown, and the neighboring Brethren churches: Therefore be it resolved that we thank them and pray God's blessing upon them that the church may grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord.

III. Messages

Whereas the messages of this conference were consistent with the "Message of the Brethren Ministry," and these messages were received with good grace on the part of this conference: Therefore be it resolved that we recommend that continued emphasis be given in our churches in this conference district, to these outlined doctrines, and fundamental teachings.

IV. The Christian Family

a. Whereas there is a growing indifference on the part of the Christian parents, shown by their neglect, of the Family Altar: Therefore be it resolved, that we urge greater attention be given God's Word and prayer in the home.

b. Whereas today we see many broken homes working havoc in society, Therefore be it resolved: that we deplore the prevailing worldly and unchristian attitudes toward divorce and re-marriage.

V. Institutions

We believe in the Institutions of the Brethren church; Ashland College and Seminary; The Brethren Publishing Company; Th National and District Conferences; The Home Missionary Board, and the Foreign Missionary Society; Therefore be it resolved:—

a. That we commend the faithfulness of the Board of Trustees, of the president, and of the faculty of our Ashland College and Seminary, that we rest our confidence in the personnel of our College and Seminary; that we refrain from yielding from prejudice regarding this institution based upon statements without any proven foundation; and that we recommend to the trustees of this institution from our district to lend full, complete and sympathetic cooperation with the other members of this Board of Trustees, and that they do all within their power and wisdom, to promote our continued confidence in the splendid work our College and Seminary are doing for our church.

b. That we give our hearty support to the Brethren Publishing Company, that we encourage and urge a more earnest effort on the part of our pastors in seeing that the Brethren Evangelist is placed in our Brethren homes; That our Sunday schools be asked to use Brethren publications; That we encourage a greater cooperation in all our publications, and particularly discourage any of our publications being printed in any other than our own publishing house.

c. That we seek to aid the work of our various National and District Conferences as a means to develop and promote the whole work of the Brethren Church.

d. That the National Home Mission Board be commended for its aggressiveness in its interest to open and develop new fields within our scope.

e. That the Foreign Missionary Society be given all the consideration due the purpose of this society and that we as individuals and congregations actually, "Go," in spirit, if not in body, consistent with our Lord's commission.

VI. Auxiliaries

Whereas this conference reveals the importance of the auxiliaries of the Brethren church: the Sunday school; C. E.; The Women's Missionary Society; the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha and the Layman's organization, therefore be it resolved: That we lend our spiritual and moral support to them.

VII. Non-conformity

Whereas the Brethren church since its inception in 1708 has always emphasized nonconformity to this world along with the practice of Christian ordinances: Therefore be it resolved that we recommend and renew our allegiance to God and his teachings as set forth eight and nine section three of the Message of the Brethren Ministry.

VIII. Citizenship

We believe, "The powers that be are ordained of God," and that we should be, "subject unto the higher powers," therefore be it resolved that insofar as we can intelligently do so we exercise our right to vote that we recognize as well that the Christian is also a citizen, subject to another world and thereby has a right to consistently refrain from bearing arms of warfare between the forces of this world; and that we at the same time discourage the spirit of lawlessness that is so prevalent today.

IX. The Lord's Day

Whereas there is a growing indifference toward the Lord's day; Therefore be it resolved that we renew our allegiance as expressed in last year's resolution which reads as follows: "That we deplore the growing disregard for the Lord's day and urge loyalty on the part of every member of the Brethren church to fully appreciate the importance of this day being observed as a day of service to our Lord and not a day of recreation, neither of business."

X. Church Extension

Whereas the chiefest need of the hour in the Brethren church is the exercise of church extension. Therefore be it resolved: that we commend our district mission board for their faithfulness and recommend that they continue to give their untiring efforts towards the propagation of the Gospel through the church, in our beloved district.

Respectfully submitted:

Committee—N. V. LEATHERMAN,
WM. GRAY.

Reported by W. H. SCHAFER, Secretary, Pennsylvania Conference.

A LESSON IN CHRISTIAN COURTESY

(Continued from page 2)

meet him at the office of the justice of the peace the following morning.

That justice of the peace was not a member of either church, but attended both, and was interested in personal religion. After listening to the men's stories, each of which was highly colored by the sense of personal grievance, the justice took a Bible from his desk and read to them the story of Elijah in Horeb, laying much emphasis on these words:

And a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind.

Then he passed on to Proverbs:

In the multitude of words there wanteth not transgression; but he that refraineth his lips doeth wisely.

Then the justice brought in words from Paul:

Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a feast day or a new moon or a sabbath day.

"Now," added the justice, "I am not a preacher, but I am going to give you this for my 'lastly,' and will suspend a fine and sentence if you shake hands right here and promise to be Christians in your dealings with each other":

One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let each man be fully assured in his own mind. . . . Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge ye this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block in his brother's way, or an occasion of falling.—Rev. J. A. Derome in "Daily Argus-Leader," Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The little girl was reading laboriously: "See Mary and the lamb," she read, slowly. "Does Mary love the lamb, button-hook?"

"Why do you say 'button-hook'?" asked the teacher.

"Picture of a button-hook here," replied the child, pointing triumphantly to the interrogation mark.—Woman's Journal.

Faithful prayer always implies correlative exertion. No man can ask, honestly and hopefully, to be delivered from temptation unless he has honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.—John Ruskin.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

OUR READERS' VIEWS

Dear Editor:

I read in The Evangelist in the "Reader's Views" department what H. M. Lichty has said. He quotes some one who feels sorry for President Hoover. I do not see why. In 1931 his salary was $75,000. The Senate gave him $308,780, making a total of $383,780, which is $1,279 per day for 300 working days in the year. In 1932 the Senate offered him $272,000. He accepted, making his salary $347,000, less his gift of $17,000, equals $330,000, which is $1,100 per day for 300 working days.

The Eighteenth Amendment is in the Constitution, and in there to stay, as it is a part of the Supreme Law of the land. The Eighteenth Amendment is not up to be voted on at this election of November 8, 1932. It was voted in by the people; it will have to be voted out by the people, if it is ever done. The Democratic and Republican platforms both call for a submission of it to the people to be voted on sometime in the future, but not November, 1932.

I think we had better have our officers pay their own expenses out of their salaries.

J. M. HARRELL, SR., Florida, Indiana.

NOT FOR PROHIBITION ONLY

By J. S. C. Spickerman

Christians are called to observe Sunday, November 6, as a day of fasting and prayer for the success of the prohibition cause in the coming election. It is right that we should pray for all that are in authority (which, in this country, includes all citizens of voting age), that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty (1 Timothy 2:2); but if we pray only for the triumph of some political cause, however righteous, we are not reaching the root of the matter. We need to pray that all Christians may seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and that many, not now believers, may accept Christ. When this is done, all needed reforms will naturally follow. Prohibition would not now be in danger, were it not for the depression and unemployment which cause men, in their desperation, to snatch at any proposal that promises relief. The depression is the result of rash speculation and reckless extravagance. Speculation was a result of the love of money. Men sought to become rich quickly, not by producing wealth, but by somebody's else loss. Extravagance was an effect of the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life (1 John 2:16). As long as these things rule men's minds to the extent that they do now, no reforms are possible.

You vote every two years for men who will enact and enforce righteous laws. That is good, but you can do much more good by working every day to advance the rule of Christ in men's hearts. You are anxious to prevent the return of the saloon. That is right, but what about other evil institutions? Are you patronizing the picture show? That is an evil comparable to the saloon; worse than the saloon in one way, for it corrupts some who could not be tempted with booze. It poisons the minds of children with suggestions of impurity and crime. What kind of magazines do you bring into your home—those that inspire pure and upright ideals, or those that exalt the beast life and spoof Christianity and Christian morals? You contribute regularly to the Anti-Saloon League, believing it would be a calamity if the League should go broke. True, but how much are you giving to support the churches, without which there could be no Anti-Saloon League?

Let us be fruitful in every good work (Colossians 1:9), but let us remember that the greatest of all good works is winning men, women, and children for our Savior. Maryville, Missouri.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

MAY-PHILLIPS—Mr. Stillwell II. May and Mrs. Frances B. Phillips, both of Washington, D. C., were united in Holy Matrimony on the morning of September 26th at 10 o'clock at the home of the undersigned. Mrs. Phillips is a member of the Washington church, while Mr. May is a Baptist. Both live faithful Christian lives and the blessing of God will surely rest upon the home they are establishing. A host of relatives and friends join in wishing God's best for this union.

HOIMER A. KENT.

WALKER-MINOR—On August 30th, 1932, occurred the wedding of Alana Lee Minor to John A. Walker. Miss Minor is a member of the Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Md. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The pastor read the service in the presence of some sixty guests. Following the service a beautiful wedding dinner was served. The young couple are at home to their friends in Greencastle, Penna.

FRANK G. COLEMAN

CALHOUN-BROWN—At the First Brethren church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30, before a church filled with people, occurred the wedding of Irvin Calhoun and Miss Faye Brown, both of the Florida Community. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Webster Brown, and with her people is a member of the First Brethren church. They will make their home on a farm southwest of Florida. Ceremony by the undersigned.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

IN THE SHADOW

FICKEY—The writer had charge of the funeral service of Mrs. Vernie Eleanor (Freeland) Fickey, on Sunday afternoon, September 18, in her home at Terra, Alta, W. Va. She was

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

When Jesus came into the world, there was no institution for the care of the aged or poor. Out of the influence of his ministry, and the establishment of his church, such institutions were born, and from the church they derived their support, and the church received and merited all the credit. Later the state took over much of this work, levying taxes for their support. It is not too much to say that the church still furnished at least the major part of the support, and does now, but the change has eliminated the religious and personal element so completely that the church receives no credit, and the name of our Lord receives no recognition. From the first, all Brethren were pledged to care for their own, even though they had contributed their full shares in taxes for the support of the state institutions. Very early in the history of our own denomination, it was in the mind of some of our people to establish a home for the aged, and also for orphaned children. It required some years before the idea took form, but it finally did so, and now near Florida, Indiana, there stands a beautiful building, both commodious and comfortable, the dream materialized. Ultimately. It is hoped that it may be entirely self-supporting, since a considerable acreage of the best Indiana land belongs to the plant. That, however, can only be when the institution is out of debt. Even now the conditions of entrance are not onerous, and the care offered is all that Christian love and service can give. If you need a home even temporarily, only for the winter, it offers to give it at the nominal cost of $20.00 per month. If you wish a home permanently, that can easily be arranged. The Home is thankful for your gifts, and earnestly covets an interest in your prayers, both for its managers and its Board of Directors. If any reader is interested, address born March 23, 1884, to John M. and Eleanor Freeland, both deceased. She died September 16, at the age of forty-eight years, five months and twenty-four days. She is survived by her husband, three minor children, Paul E. Fickey, John M. Fickey, Martha Eleanor Everly, Margaret Marie Fickey, Louise Buckner Fickey, Lolita Elisen Fickey, Catherine Lucille Fickey, David Donald Fickey and William Lynn Fickey—the latter and youngest being ten years of age; two sisters, Mrs. Sadie Parsons of Terra Alta, and Mrs. Laura Fraley of Underwood, Washington; her step-mother, Mrs. Mary Freeland of Terra Alta and three grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, one sister, two brothers and one grandchild. She was a member of the Whitelake Brethren church at Terra Alta. Her family and her friends will miss a charitable and sacrificing Christian spirit. L. E. LINDOWER.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME,
Florida, Indiana.

ROWE—Mrs. Etta Snyder Rowe, the daughter of Daniel Z. Snyder, was born June 29, 1860, and passed to be with her Lord on Aug. 30, 1932. Sister Rowe was one of the most faithful members of the Hagerstown Brethren church, a member of a large family all of which are members of the Church.

The funeral services were held September 1, by the pastor, assisted by the Rev. A. B. Miller, pastor of the Church of the Brethren, Hagerstown.

FRANK G. COLEMAN.

JOHNSON—Lena Myers Johnson, daughter of Henry and Barbara Myers was born in Adams county, Sept. 11th, 1870, and died Oct. 5th, 1932, at the age of 61 years and 24 days. She was the wife of Rev. W. Frank Johnson, living six miles east of Berne, Indiana. She had been ill for more than ten years and critically ill since Sunday.

During the years of her illness, she had been, practically invalid and blind. She has not been able to leave her home for years.

She united with the Bethel Brethren church during the pastorate of J. H. Swihart in 1890 and she remained a faithful member until death.

She was united in marriage to W. F. Johnson on March 31st, 1892. He survives her. To this union were born ten children, three having preceded her in death, namely, Ora, Hohart, and Lola. The remaining seven are: Jack, Char- tanooga, O.; Dora, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Herbert, Ind.; Mrs. Frank Wise, Wabash, Ind.; Arler, Harlan and Mennie at home; also four grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services for Mrs. Johnson were held on Saturday at the home and at the Brethren church. The Rev. Bruce officiated. Burial was made in Mount Hope cemetery. JOHN PAHR.

HOLSINGER—On last Saturday morning, October 1, 1932, Mary Katherine Holsinger, widow of Jerry T. Holsinger and daughter of David and Mary Graham, quietly slipped away to be with Jesus. She was born October 20, 1849, near Fairmont, West Virginia, and had reached the age of 82 years, 11 months and 12 days at the time of death. She came to Henry county, Indiana, some 72 years ago, settling near Laray and about 60 years ago Mother Holsinger came to Oakville, Indiana to live the rest of her life. She was married to Jerry T. Holsinger, Oct. 18, 1872, to which union they bore three children—Mrs. Eva P. Metzler, of Oakville; Mrs. Rosalie Garrett, Muncie, Indiana; and Media Blanch, who died in infancy. In addition to these she leaves to mourn her departure two sisters—Mrs. Fanny Conwell and Mrs. Coleman Waters, and six grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. In 1880, under the preaching of Elder J. H. Swihart, she and her husband joined with a large number of others to establish the Brethren church of Oakville. She was faithful to her church till death and to every department of its work, having been a member of the W. M. S. for thirty-six years, ever since its organization, and for many years taught a Sunday school class. Funeral by her pastor, the undersigned. S. LOWMAN.

KEESLING—Jacob Keesling was born in May, 1843, and departed this life on Oct. 5, 1932. He was born and reared near Oakville, Indiana, and when 17 years old he joined the army and fought during the Civil War. In an engagement in Tennessee he was wounded in the right shoulder and was paroled out at the close of the war. He had in early life been an active worker with his wife in the Christian church near Oakville. Funeral service conducted by the writer. S. LOWMAN.

ACKER—William A. Acker, son of Christian and Margaret Acker, was born Oct. 14, 1860 and passed away Sept. 26, 1932, aged 71 years, 11 months and 12 days. He was born on a farm southeast of Oakville, Indiana, where he lived until about twenty-two years ago, when he, with a brother and sister, moved into Oakville, where he joined the Brethren church and remained faithful to it until death. On May 15, 1927 he was united in marriage to Mariah M. Priddy. This union was not for long, however, as his wife died two years after their marriage. He was a member of a large family, having had four brothers and two sisters, but all preceded him in death except one brother, Jacob Acker, who was ill and unable to attend his funeral. Brother Acker was of a quiet disposition, a good, honest and true friend, and was always faithful to the services of his church. Funeral services conducted by the writer at the Church of the Brethren, northwest of Muncie. S. LOWMAN.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

GARWIN, IOWA

The Carleton Brethren church at Garwin, Iowa will hold their semi-annual communion service on Wednesday evening, November 2, at 7:30 o'clock. We invite all of like faith to join us in this service.

RAYMOND BLOOD, Pastor.

LYDIA, MARYLAND

The Brethren church of St. James, Maryland, will hold their semi-annual communion, November 6, beginning at 7 P. M. All neighboring Brethren are invited.

W. S. BAKER, Pastor

AN EXPLANATION

To Whoever May Be Concerned:

Possibly some of my friends and my Brethren in the ministry are wondering why I have written for the Postscript. It was done, primarily, to rightly encourage the editor at what I felt was a critical moment in his life. It was done, secondarily, to furnish publication material in keeping with the meek nature and envisioning spirit of our Lord.

I make this statement freely of my own accord, and without suggestion by the Editor, and it is given out by way of explanation alone; it is intended to cast reflections upon no one.

FRANK GEHMAN.

Business Manager's Corner

A NINETY DAY TEST

Last week this page contained the announcement of a special rate for subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist for the next ninety days. Four different propositions were made in order to meet practically any situation that might arise in any congregation as this campaign for new subscriptions and for renewal of old subscriptions is launched.

The necessity for launching this campaign may not be realized by some of our members and even by some of our pastors; but those of us who have been connected with the publishing interests of the church do realize it. The political parties and the political candidates realize how important it is to carry on both an intensive and an extensive campaign if they would realize their ambitions, and why should a church or a church institution be any less zealous for the cause it represents than a political party or candidate.

Just this morning the business manager received from Cleveland a little coupon book of twenty-five coupons, with the request that he sell these coupons at one dollar each for membership in the "(—)" for Congress Club." The candidate said he needed the money to carry on his campaign until election. It is needless to say the Business Manager is not going to endeavor to raise any money for the campaign expenses of this candidate for Congress; but we do need money to carry on the work of The Brethren Publishing Company. That is one of the purposes of this special ninety day offering for subscriptions. Of course we want to increase the circulation of the church paper for the service it may render to the church; but we also want to increase the income from it.

A Test of Loyalty

The success or failure of this campaign will be a test of the loyalty, not only of the membership of the church, but of the pastors as well. Party loyalty is made much of in a closely contested political contest. Why not make as much of a test of Christian or even denominational loyalty in an active campaign to increase the circulation of its own literature? Any one who listens in on any of the political addresses given by either one of the presidential candidates of the two major political parties must be impressed with the enthusiasm manifested by their audiences when their favorite candidate is introduced from the platform. Is there any reason why Christian people should be so cold and indifferent as to the success of the Christian work in which they are supposed to be interested?

"How Shall They Hear Without a Preacher?"

That was the question the apostle Paul raised as he considered the plight of the unevangelized portions of the world even in his day. We can ask the same question in regard to the spreading of the knowledge of this special offer for subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist. There are at least FIFTEEN THOUSAND members of the Brethren church that do not see the Evangelist. How can they hear about this special offer unless some one tells them about it? Of course the one who has the best opportunity to do this is the preacher, and on his shoulders will rest the main burden of the campaign. Brethren, will you assume this burden?

A good brother who for a number of years acted as Evangelist agent for his home church wrote us that he felt he must be rather a poor salesman as he had such a hard time persuading the people that they ought to take their church paper, and then he added, "But what can you expect when the pastor never mentions the paper from the pulpit?" "In all the years our pastor has been here I have never heard him mention The Evangelist from the pulpit." Somebody must take the responsibility of telling about this campaign to the other fifteen thousand members of the church. We can not possibly reach them through our columns. So who will do this for us?

Field Work

While most of our different organizations in the church have done considerable field work among the churches during recent years and have received support largely according to the field work done, The Brethren Publishing Company has done little of that and we believe we feel the effects of it. An endeavor is now being made to do more of this kind of work to get our needs set before the people in a practical way.

Recently Dr. Bame attended the Pennsylvania District Conference to represent the publishing interests of the church, while the same week the business manager attended the Indiana District Conference. In both cases a very respectful hearing was received.

It remains to be seen how much practical good was accomplished.

Over the last week end the business manager visited the Dayton church and preached to Brother Barnard's splendid congregation in the morning and then held an after meeting with a splendid attendance at the close of the morning services when we had an opportunity to talk plain business in a manner that we believe will produce results.

Should there be any other churches within convenient driving distance of Ashland that would care to have us visit them in the same line of work over a week end, we will be glad to arrange for such a service at no more expense to the church than the cost of gasoline. The one thing we desire to achieve at this time is the SUCCESS of our ninety day campaign for subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist.

R. R. TEETER, Business Manager.

VOL. LIV
Number 43

November 5
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

And Joses, having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the Apostles' feet.

But Ananias sold a possession, and kept back part of the price.

Which will we line up with at this Thanksgiving time, those who give the whole offering, or those who keep back part of the price from the Lord's treasury?

HOME MISSION OFFERING—SPECIAL NUMBER ONE

Armistice Day Meditation

By S. C. Henderson

"He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth;
He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder;
He burneth the chariot with fire."

The words of the text is a cry of war-weary man for peace. The psalmist lived in a war-ridden land. Little Palestine has always served as a buffer state between the great rival powers in the near East. Over its soil have passed the great armies of Egypt, Nineveh, Babylonia, Syria, Macedonia, Rome, the Crusaders, as well as the armies of the world war.

It is no wonder that the Psalmists and the prophets longed for a day of peace when every man might rest secure under his own vine and fig tree. We hear the prayer wish from many peasant hearts echoing the words, "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot with fire." Isaiah longs for that happy time when men shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks and men shall learn war no more.

The first Armistice day came as a day of mad joy to a war-weary world. From August, 1914, to the eleventh day of November, 1918, and the whole world lived in a continuous nightmare of destruction, devastation and death. The flower of the world's best manhood was laid upon the blood-reeking altar of the Moloch called, "War." Then came the armistice bringing the war to an end. The roar of the incessant guns ceased, and the world went mad with ecstasy and joy. How well we can yet recall that memorable day! The whistles shrieked, the bells pealed out the glad tidings, and the people shouted, "The war is over, the war is at an end." And not only on this side of the Atlantic but throughout all of England, France, Belgium, and even in Germany and Austria hearts beat with thanksgiving that the war was done and that the boys might return home. Never was there a day of greater thanksgiving since the angels sang their glad hosannas at our Saviour's birth above the hills of old Bethlehem. Never had a war closed as this great war—with an armistice.

But Armistice Day is not only a day on which men and women went wild with joy, it has come to be a day of sacred memories. Here in America, we only saw the glorified side of war. The flying flags, the martial music, the bravely marching men going "OVER THERE," and the patriotic sentiment that had been kindled into a burning flame of indignation. But there was another side to the gigantic conflict. When the tumult and the shouting died away, then I began to dawn upon us, something of the awful carnage and suffering in which we had participated. Then we saw the sad faces of the fathers and mothers whose sons did not return. Later came the broken bodies of the wounded men coming home disabled for life—some bore frightful scars of the battle line, others were shell-shocked, gassed and blinded, and some were with blank minds. And finally there came the long rows of black metal caskets containing the remains of the lads who sacrificed their youth, their loves, their ambitions, and young lives to the monster of modern warfare.

As the president stood at the dock and watched the ship bearing the long, long rows of black coffins to those who were the nearest and dearest to the slain, it is said that his eyes filled with tears and in choked sobs he said: "IT MUST NOT BE AGAIN—IT MUST NOT BE AGAIN." On two occasions we stood at the grave side and saw two of these boys lowered to their final resting places to await the Judgment Day, and we cried "O GOD, IT MUST NOT BE AGAIN."

We must not forget the vast army of the dead. If the ghosts of those who died were called into a grand review, and they would march ten abreast in regular formation from dawn to dusk, it would take 162 days to pass the reviewing stand of Mars or anyone else who would care to see the shadowy forms of those who paid the supreme sacrifice. And even more impressive might be the scene of the coffins of the 13,000,000 dead soldiers, and the 24,000,000 others who died of disease and other causes, it would reach twice around the earth at the equator. We must not forget—The poet tells us:

"If we forget that blood-red Flanders sod,
Or forget where their feet unwavering trod,
Forget us, God!"

We must keep in mind their great ideal—that they were in a war to end war.

That fact brings us to the fact that Armistice Day stands as a day of dedication. A dedication to the cause of peace, and good will to all men. War is a pastime of the savage and the barbarian, that we have carried up from our heathen ancestors. Slavery, duelling, the subjection of women, polygamy, cruel and inhuman punishments of criminals, and the exploitation of childhood, have in a large measure been eradicated from the more enlightened portions of the earth. True, there may still be some dark spots in the remote corners of the earth where men practice cannibalism, head-hunting, human sacrifice and slavery. But thanks be to the Gospel of Jesus Christ for the change! In the balmy days of Greece there were only five million free men to 12 million slaves. Old Rome butchered men and women in the arena to afford a free show for her populace. Nordic ancestors often resorted to human sacrifices, and cannibalism was not unknown among them. Religious wars and persecutions where men resisted unto blood for their faith were common in days of old. History will bear us record.

But why should those nations whose citizens are largely followers of the Prince of Peace resort to warfare to settle their disputes. Savages may continue to do so, but why Christians? Why burden the over-taxed people with great navies and standing armies, arsenals and forts?

We celebrate Armistice Day not as a glorification of war. If that be our reason, why pause to make it a great international holiday? It would best be forgotten. If it be a day for the rattling of muskets and the clashing of sabers or the perpetuation of hatreds, it ought never more be remembered. I can still remember the revulsion of feelings that came to me as a mere lad attending a Memorial service in one of our village churches and seeing a tripod of muskets stacked upon the rostrum of that village church. To me as a lad the whole thing was out of place and a sacrilege against the Prince of Peace to whom the house of prayer was dedicated. Muskets meant death and the taking of human life and out of keeping with him who said, "Love your enemies and pray for them that despitefully use you."

We must disarm more than our forts and battlehips. These are mere engines of carnage. We must needs disarm the heart. If we do not disarm our passions, men will forge new swords and gattling guns out of the scrap heaps of discarded armament. Disarmament must spring from deeper sources. It was St. James who said,

"From whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?"

The sources of war are in the heart and have psychological background.

On this Armistice Day let us disarm our hates. No war was ever waged without first there was hatred engendered in the hearts of the people. It has been some "Hymn of Hate," or slogan like, "Remember the Maine" or "Germany over all," that the jingoistic and rabble-rousing press has used to work up the angry passions of men and set one nation against another. Tales of the most dastardly deeds were recited to create war propaganda. Men grew vindictive, as the old Psalmist when he said, "Happy shall he be, that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones" (Psalm 137:9).

We must disarm our hates. Recently the supreme court of Belgium ruled against the inscription placed upon the University of Louvain, by an American architect and approved by Cardinal Mercier that read, "DESTROYED BY TEUTONIC FURY; REBUILT BY AMERICAN GENEROSITY." The judges felt that it was keeping the fires of hatred aglow. War is not only to be condemned because it kills and maims men but because it creates such deep chasms in human brotherhood. Said an old brother who had been reared below the Mason and Dixon line, "You are trying to remember the things, we want to forget." Let us forget our hates. Time has eradicated

(Continued on page 15)

IN THIS NUMBER

Armistice Day—A Memorial of a Hope—Editor, .....	5
Why and How to Vote—Editor, ..	5
Editorial Review, .....	5
The Depression and Church Extension—C. L. Anspatch, .....	5
The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel—H. W. Koontz; F. C. Vanator; L. G. Wood; Grant McDonald; Frank Gehman; S. J. Adams, ..	5-
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	1
The Pastor a Teacher—N. V. Leatherman, .....	1
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	1
Old Things and New about Missions—Rowena Kessler, .....	1
The Little Black Motherless Babies of Africa—Edna Patterson, .....	1
News from the Field, .....	13, 1
Announcements, .....	1
The Brethren's Home Emergency Corner—Henry Rinehart, .....	1

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Armistice Day---A Memorial of a Hope

The hope is universal in the human heart where Christianity is known that there will come a time when war will be no more, a time when men shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks. It is grown out of the essential nature of Christianity, which inspires men with the privilege and charges them with the duty of loving God with the whole heart and the neighbor as himself. Love is diametrically opposed to hate and war, and the two cannot abide together in the same heart. In the measure that love permeates human hearts and actuates human conduct hatred is dispelled and war is made impossible. The widespread sway of the power of love may be a long look ahead, but it is an element of our Christian hope and an item of our faith. Such hope is kept shining and growing brighter by the zeal with which the church is seeking to carry the Message of the Prince of Peace to the ends of the earth. For the more widely the Message is spread and the more thoroughly it is made known, the more difficult is it to carry on carnal warfare and to maintain hatred in the human heart, and the more earnestly do men long for peace and insist upon it.

Armistice Day has been seized upon by the churches as a fitting time for the preaching of the spirit of peace and the marshalling of sentiment against war. And fitting is it indeed, for it is a day that memorializes the close of a great world-wide and terribly tragic effort to end war. The men in the trenches and the men in the shops and on the farms were told that we were engaged in a war to end war. The very morale by means of which the conflict was continued was maintained by the hope that when the fighting would cease, we should see the dawn of world peace. We were miserably mistaken to think that peace could be gained by fighting, nevertheless it was the longing for peace, permanent peace, and the hope that we would gain peace that, more than anything else, kept up our fighting spirit and made us willing to give, to sacrifice, to suffer and even to die to win the war. It is well therefore that we should keep the day as a memorial of that vain hope, and be continually reminded of the wickedness of war and of the folly of seeking peace by means of it. The fruitage of war is everything else but peace.

We should be reminded by this memorial day that we can never hope to effectively settle disputes by means of war. War never really settles anything. It delays settlement and multiplies the difficulties. We were told that the World War would make the world safe for democracy, but instead it increased its jeopardy. Industrial selfishness and greed, as well as national rivalries, were at the foundation of the great conflict. War did not settle but rather accentuated the difficulties connected with these problems. Some thought the war would bring the world into a condition and a state of mind that would make for peace, but it only threw the international alignment more completely out of proper form and increased the fears and suspicions of nation for nation. Nothing is more foolish than a resort to war for the settlement of international disputes.

This Armistice Day leads us to think beyond the formal peace it brought, to the destructiveness of war. It reminds us that war is the world's most terrible instrument of destruction. It is ruthless in its destructiveness, and never was it more shockingly demonstrated than during the last great war. It hesitates before no treasure of time, no work of art, no institution of culture, no temple of religion, no accumulation of wealth,—nothing stays its hands; nothing is too sacred or too precious to be destroyed in the prosecution of war.

This Armistice Day reminds us, as we think of the terrible debacle that it brought to a close, that war is inhuman, and the most inhuman thing in our modern world. We have tried to regulate it. We have ruled out certain forms of war, the most barbarous features of it, the most unfair and wanton practices of it, but when war is on men ignore the restrictions placed upon it. They will let no weapon stand in the way of victory. The fact is, war is inhuman in its very nature,—both to those who engage in it and to those who are the objects of its wrath, and no amount of regulation can make it otherwise.

We are also reminded, as we think back upon the terrible melee that ended with Armistice Day, of the injustice of war. War regards no right but the right of might. It is not justice that is sought when men are ready to fight for the thing they want; it is rather an advantage over another that they seek. When war settles a problem, it settles it in the favor of might; the strong is the dictator. It was so in the case of the World War,—justice was not secured, but injustice. Peoples did not have their rights before that war began, but conditions were not improved any by the Peace of Versailles.

And finally, we are reminded of the sinfulness of war. War is wrong,—wrong for many reasons, but most of all because war is murder done on a large scale. Murder has always met with divine disapproval and condemnation. Christ has taken no new or lenient attitude toward it. It is the very antithesis of all that he is and taught. War is hatred and hatred is the essence of murder. Jesus said that men should love their enemies and pray for those who use them spitefully. But those who believe in war will not accept this divine injunction. They do not hold to the wickedness of war. It may be an evil—a necessary evil, in fact,—but not absolutely wrong. And so they tolerate it. But when men get the Christian view of war, they see the sinfulness of it and they turn against it as against the enemy of all righteousness, which it really is. May God help men more and more, especially Christian men, to recognize the awful wrongness of war and to refuse to have anything to do with this agency of the Evil One.

Why and How to Vote

The Christian man and woman has no more important duty to the state than voting. It is the one way in which they can make their influence count, and certainly there is need of Christian influence being brought to bear upon the political situation these days. We are told in the Word that the powers that be are ordained of God, and if that be true we should expect God's people to be taking a most active interest in those powers and doing their very best to make them conform to God's will. Yet we are faced with the record that less than one-half of the eligible voters of the country go to the polls, even in presidential election years. And we are told that the people who more than any others are neglecting the polls are the good people, the Christian voters. The voters who can be counted on to exercise their right of suffrage are those representing or supporting some selfish interest or vicious institution or policy.

For example, in a certain city the movie operators had brought on an election to legalize Sunday shows. It was determined by canvass a few weeks preceding the election that a majority of the electors were opposed to Sunday shows and it was consequently expected that the movie interests would lose. But much to the surprise of all the good people their cause was lost, and it was due to the fact that too many of their crowd remained away from the polls.

It seems to take a personal interest in the outcome of an election to bring out the voters, and in most cases such personal interest is selfishly motivated. Why cannot men and women who believe in high ideals and are actuated by lofty principles take a personal interest in elections? A few do. But why are they not in such numbers as to insure the triumph of righteous causes? The reason is that so few Christian people take their religion seriously, so far as actual practice is concerned. It is time we were bringing the men and women of God face to face with their duty in such relationships. And this paper is disposed to do that very thing. We cannot look lightly upon carelessness or indifference with regard to one's voting privileges. We shall charge those who willfully stay away from the polls with wittingly or unwittingly conniving with the forces of unrighteousness.

The Christian voter faces an unpleasant situation this fall, but let no one think there is nothing at stake. There is very much. Most important is the election of dry law makers, both state and federal. One-third of the United States Senators and all of the House of Representatives, besides a President and Vice President are to be elected. It will make a vast difference whether Congress and the state legislatures are dry. And while neither the Republican nor Democratic platforms are satisfactory regarding Prohibition and we make no public plea with regard to presidential candidates, we do not hold that it makes no difference which is selected. If a voter believes one of the presidential candidates will take the prohibition question more seriously than the other, as we do, it is his duty to support that man with his vote. Every Christian should vote conscientiously, whether he votes with his party or not. It is important to consider the candidate's character, his degree of seriousness of purpose, the direction of his sympathies, his record, his associates and his competency. For after all the type of leadership counts for more than party declarations.

Let every Christian remember when he goes to the polls that first of all he is a Christian and that he must vote as a Christian. "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." If Christian voters will go to the polls with that thought in mind, it will not be possible for politicians to herd them together and vote them in blocks. Such independence in voting makes trouble for party wheelhorses, but it is the patriotic and righteous thing to do.

Remember, then, to vote. By all means vote. Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. And when you vote, vote as a Christian should.

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

We learn that the church at Louisville, Ohio, where Brother A. E. Whitted is pastor, will have their Homecoming celebration with an all-day service on Sunday, November 20th.

This week appears the first of the two special Home Mission numbers of The Evangelist. Next week will appear the second. We acknowledge the fine cooperation of the Home Board in arranging for these special issues.

Dr. Charles A. Bame, editor of our Sunday School Lesson publications, has been using his Sundays for several weeks proclaiming the gospel of temperance, lending the weight of his effective message to the wide-spread effort to save the land for sobriety in this hour of testing. On Sunday, October 30th he spoke in the Congregational Christian church of Columbus, where Dr. F. G. Coffin is pastor.

Dr. C. F. Yoder reports his visit to the churches at Huinca Renanco and Realico, in the southern part of our mission field in the Argentine, where he conducted special evangelistic meetings. In Huinca Renanco twenty confessions of faith were received and thirteen were baptized into the church and partook of the communion. Brother Yoder says this is a great work and asks the prayers of the home people in its behalf.

We urge our readers to send in their order at the earliest opportunity for a copy of Dr. Florence N. Gribble's missionary book, "Undaunted Hope," which can now be had at $1.65. This price holds until the first 1,000 copies are sold and then the price will be advanced. The book is being printed by our own publishing house at Ashland, Ohio and will soon be off the press. Send orders to Dr. Bauman, treasurer of the Foreign Missionary Society, as per his address in the announcement in this issue.

Brother Henry Rinehart, treasurer of the Brethren's Home at Flora, Indiana, reports some of the recent money receipts given for that institution. This indicates that members of the brotherhood are coming across with the needed funds to enable the Home to make good its obligation in the care of the aged who are dwelling within its walls. Doubtless others will yet make the proper kind of response, for the need is not yet met. But this first report of this emergency offering gives cause for encouragement.

From Africa comes a report of a type of service that is most commendable and a service that goes along naturally with missionary work in a land where conditions are such as prevail in French Equatorial Africa. The feeding and care of motherless and starving babies is a common humanitarian service in the homeland, but it is not known in those parts where Christ has not been preached. Such a response to human need is distinctively Christian. The report is supplied us by Miss Edna Patterson, one of our faithful missionaries to Africa.

Brother E. M. Riddle writes of his change in pastorates from Warsaw, Indiana to Waterloo, Iowa, which took place the first of September. His five years at Warsaw, as he himself states, was "a happy and successful pastorate," and a period of steady building up of the Lord's work in ways that were calculated to give abiding results. And the service of himself and his efficient help-meet were much appreciated by the church and community. "As pastor of Waterloo he has been well received by that splendid people and found himself very promptly in the midst of a 'Billy' Sunday revival meeting. Five are reported baptized into the church and one awaits the rite.

Dr. W. S. Bell reports his travels in the interest of Ashland College, his attendance at gatherings of Brethren, east and west, makes some pertinent observations regarding maintenance of church support locally and generally. Dr. Bell is absolutely right, every effort possible ought to be made to keep the local church program going and not let the preaching of the Word be discontinued because of hard times. Pastors ought to be kept busy, and we are but repeating what we have said on previous occasions, when we say that churches will find our preachers willing to share their hardships with them. And regarding the support of our brotherhood interests no one knows better than Brother Bell the tendency of people to ease up at that point in these times and also the grave danger of such a tendency. It is indeed a time that calls for sacrifice, that the kingdom of God be not hindered.

Thanksgiving is the time for a Home Mission Offering. Make it the biggest offering you can possibly give, and give it in the name of the Lord Jesus, who loved us and gave himself for us. God is blessing the work of Home Missions within our church, and considering the amount we are giving, splendid results are being realized in the building up of the Home Base. Remember that the work is of the Lord and that he is directing it through the agency of his chosen servants. It is his will that every member of the church should do his or her part. Cooperation and united effort will make for success, and success at this point will make for success in every other line of our church's activity. And in the field of Home Missions never was there a time when the difficulties were greater and the prospects were brighter. God is testing our faith as he tested the faith of the Israelites on the border of Canaan. Let us heed the call of the Home Board as we would the very voice of God and go forward and possess the land. Give an offering that will be a glory to God and a demonstration of your faith.

WHAT OUR PREACHERS ARE PREACHING

With the thought that it may be of interest, and possibly suggestive and helpful, we are starting this new department as a subdivision of our "Editorial Review" and we invite pastors or church correspondents to send us lists of sermon subjects being used or having been recently used, that may be worthy of special note. As the initial list we are publishing the following from the First church of Philadelphia, now being preached by Rev. A. V. Kimmell, the pastor, as a series of Sunday evening sermons, closing December 18th. They are: "The Revelation of Jesus Christ," "Church History Written by God," "Christ Crowned King of Kings," "Tribulation Judgments," "Tribulation Salvation," "The Devil and Anti-Christ," "Babylon—Is Fallen," "The Last World War," "Christ Takes His Throne," "Eternity—Where?"

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

The Depression and Church Extension

By Dr. C. L. Anspach, President Home Mission Board

Dr. C. L. Anspach,

For a period of years, the average American has held the philosophy of the rich man described by Jesus in Matt. 12:18-19: "And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." The depression has taught us that the experience described in verses 20 and 21 is valid. "God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

The first part of this parable of Jesus illustrates well the materialistic ends of our society. We have been obsessed with the idea of possessions. We have torn down our barns and builded larger: forever dominated with the idea of bigness; the real values of life have been forgotten. Many possessed in order that sometime they might say, "Soul, take thine ease." The possessions have gone and with them the delusion that the material guarantees security and safety. For the first time in years we are forced to realize that after all, there are values in the world much more fundamental than the material conception.

This new attitude developed by the depression can be turned to advantage by the church if she wills it. One writer in a leading magazine article predicts that "happy times will come again" and that people instead of saving will spend. The church can have some part in determining how that money will be spent, if she sets forth her appeal in a forceful manner. If people spend rather than save, and if that spending is for selfish purposes motivated by the baser passions we will be as bad off as before the crash. If we spend more and if that spending is for the attainment of Christian ends, then the depression has been of value.

We have always believed that the church, if Christ centered, possesses the real values of life. It now appears that one of the opportune times has arrived—a time to set forth the real values of Christianity. The success of the movement depends upon the leadership of the ministry. St. Paul upon arriving at Athens took advantage of his opportunity. He immediately told them about the "Unknown God" to whom they had erected an altar. Now is the time to preach The Truth, for the Truth shall make them free.

I have presented three ideas; first, the depression and crash of our financial structure has taught people that the real values of life are not bound up in material possessions; second, the coming of happy days may mean reckless spending; and, third, the church can help to determine how that money shall be spent by launching out on a program of Truth preaching. The background for the appeal of this short article has been given. Granted the conditions mentioned above, the time is right for an appeal for Home Missions. In presenting Home Missions, our ministers are presenting an appeal which is not only worthy but one essential to the very welfare of our denomination. People will give if the appeal is made. The amounts given may be smaller this year than in previous years, but if given in the spirit of the widow who gave her all, they are more acceptable to God than those given out of the abundance. To you has been given, not only a responsibility but an opportunity. An opportunity to lift up Christ, for if he be lifted up all men will be drawn unto him. OUR HOME MISSION OFFERING APPEAL DESERVES THE CONSIDERATION OF EVERY BRETHREN CHURCH.

Ypsilanti, Michigan.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By H. W. Koontz

Recently an evangelist of some note in the south began in Roanoke a city wide campaign of Bible teaching and evangelism. His supreme purpose was to bring lost men to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. It would seem natural that in such an effort every religious leader would gladly line up his respective forces that through the united efforts of all many lost might be saved and brought into the fellowship of the churches of the city. Instead, the greater portion of religious leaders either ignored his efforts or openly opposed his every move.

But having had some knowledge of the apostate conditions prevailing within the churches of this city, it was not a surprise that such a deplorable situation should arise. When every worldly pleasure receives a welcome within the church, it is not strange that an evangelist who unreservedly condemns sins within the professing church should arouse the bitter opposition of many religious leaders. When the great Biblical teachings about eternal judgment, salvation by grace, the resurrection, the second coming of Christ are not preached by religious leaders, and then an evangelist comes preaching these truths with such great power and conviction that people who have been church members for years are converted—well, it is not hard to see why opposition would arise.

The above is related just to show the prevailing conditions of our city, which possibly is not an exception in these last days. But no matter how great the apostacy there will be those who will sincerely seek the Lord to be counted among the called out Church of Christ. Such a condition makes an open door of opportunity for the Brethren church in Roanoke. It has the whole Gospel that the world needs, and God will assuredly see that seeking souls will be led to the place where they shall find that which their souls need for life and growth.

H. W. Koontz

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

We believe that the Brethren church of Roanoke is on the verge of greater things for Christ. Even though the church is but two years old in this section of the city, more and more people are being led to her doors. A number have been saved and brought into the church's fellowship. As the whole Gospel message of the church becomes better known, we believe that a steady and substantial growth will be the future story of this work.

Our members believe the mesage of our church and are making an effort to tell it to others. The growth of the past year can be attributed largely to this one fact. Cottage prayer meetings held weekly as one activity of the recently organized Men's Evangelistic League speaks for the sincerity of effort on the part of some of our members. Interest and assistance is being given to the pastor in Bible extension classes in other sections of the city where opportunities are ripe.

The church seems to be in a fruitful field for working among children who do not have another church as close. Many parents who as yet are not attending services are sending their children. These are taking an active part in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. An excellent opportunity seems to be present to build a large summer vacation Bible school.

To accomplish things for Christ this church has had to face and will continue to face many problems that seem mountain high and as hard to surmount, but they have their value in binding the membership together in one beautiful spirit of unity; they have sent the church to her knees in absolute dependence upon the supplying power of Christ; they are preparing this people to be strong and go forth by faith, and conquer in the name of the one who said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Roanoke, Virginia.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By Fred C. Vanator

As we face the facts with regard to such a need as our subject suggests, we are astonished to note how the Word of God is being fulfilled in our time. We read in Paul's letter to Timothy, words that, had they been written but yesterday, would seem to be a page out of present history. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables." Not only are people turning away from the "truth" unto "fables", but moral conditions are such that on every hand among better citizens of our community, we hear the urgent call for the organization of Purity Leagues, Citizen's Welfare Committees and even a suggestion of a Law and Order organization. Gangland seems to have its hand on the very throat of the public and is using its terrible influence in attempting to take the very moral existence from the community. The unsaved are becoming harder and harder to reach. The ratio of those interested in the work of the Master is about 1 to 9. In a recent meeting of the ministers of our community it was discovered that the church attendance for the day under discussion was approximately one-tenth of the population of our city. Truly Jesus could come among us and say again with much emphasis, "Where, O where, are the other nine?" Why this falling away?

Fred C. Vanator

I believe it is because there is so little emphasis placed on the challenge of the REAL CHRIST. We must preach the realities of the faith; we must teach the penalties for failure to repent and accept; we must pin our faith on him, realizing that the "fields are all white unto the harvest." Where shall we begin? At the old, hardened, sinful life, or, with the plastic, easily moulded child? The child is our fruitful place of ministration. Children drink in the Gospel in its purity. Children delight in a loving Savior for whom they can look and watch and wait. And too, Christian children grow up into Christian men and women. Truly the child life is the real challenge to the church. Most of our time here is spent in working with and for the children and young people and we have never felt it to be time wasted or lost. The growth of the present work is largely around the young life of the community.

The need of the Whole Gospel is great, not only in this community, but in every community. As a Whole Gospel Church we are placed in a position of trust and confidence. May we never violate that trust or confidence.

Peru, Indiana.

"He who calls evangelism antiquated is a novice as regards life. When the destiny of mankind as a whole is considered, we must acknowledge that Christ made no mistake in his passionate effort to save."

SOME FINANCIAL SURPRISES

Dr. W. J. Dawson tells of seven surprises which will come to the man who begins to tithe his income:

1. The amount of money he has for the Lord's work.
2. The deepening of his spiritual life.
3. His ease in meeting his own obligations.
4. The ease in going on to larger giving.
5. The preparation this gives to be a faithful, wise steward over the nine-tenths that remain.
6. That he did not adopt the plan sooner.
7. That every Christian does not adopt it.

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By L. G. Wood

The moral condition of our community is far from encouraging, and yet I am of the opinion that it is about an average community in this respect.

For some time I, with others, have been trying to discover the source or cause of this moral laxity, in character, which seems to be dominated by dishonesty, a disregard for law and political corruption. Hence, I have arrived at this question: "How much of this condition is traceable to the failure of preachers to live and preach the Whole Gospel of the Son of God, and churches failing to stand for such a Gospel?"

The President of the United States, in his speech accepting the renomination for that high office, was frank to acknowledge this universal apostasy, and pointed toward its solution, by saying: "The problems of the next few years are not only economic, they are also moral and spiritual. The present check to our material success, must deeply stir our national conscience upon the PURPOSE OF LIFE ITSELF ... underlying every purpose, is the SPIRITUAL application of moral ideals which are the fundamental basis of happiness in a people."

We also frequently read from great leaders, both in and out of the church, who are saying that the way out of this moral corruption and unrest is "Back to Christ," which really means back to the "Whole Gospel," even to the teachings of the "Sermon on the Mount." With this I agree, for certainly God's remedy for sin, is the only way to successfully deal with it. Christ said: "I am the way," therefore, there is nothing that can lead us out of our moral depravity, but a personal consciousness of the crucified and risen Lord.

It is not unusual to have in our services here, visitors from other churches, who will say to some of our people: "We do not get messages like that at our church." Well, it is not the preacher, but it is the Whole Gospel message.

This is quite an evidence of the need of the Brethren church in this city. Nearly all of our adult members, are those who have come into the church for that message, and their lives are ever witnessing to their appreciation of that message. Therefore, my position is, and I don't think it a selfish one: No city, town or community is fully church-ed, until there is a Brethren church in it.

I am sure that a serious realization of the importance of the content of the Word of God, justifies that attitude.

Modernism in the pulpit, means worldliness in the pew, and these mean the breaking down of the moral fiber of community life, and we are seeing this in operation here right now. Not long ago, in a Sunday evening message I had occasion to mention, the personal coming of our Lord, and there was a lady in the audience from another church. After the service this lady said to me: "I am glad that you believe the Bible." "Yes," I said, "the Whole Bible." Then she said to me: "Last Sunday evening I heard a pastor make this statement: 'There is not a word in my Bible that indicates that Christ is ever coming back to this earth, except as he comes into the heart of a believer.'"

Now some of these people believe in the Coming of the Lord, but certainly they are getting no food, nor encouragement for their belief, in their own churches.

Is it any wonder that many people in this city have no regard for the church and therefore are not being reached?

These things indicate the vastness of our field of operation, and by his grace, and the cooperation of true believers we have been able to reach some of them.

While we are reaching adults and heads of families, we see our greatest opportunity in the children and young people. Our church school and Christian Endeavor society are doing fine work among their class.

Are not these the real hope of the future in any Christian work anywhere?

There are many of the older people who have not had a real chance to appreciate the Whole Gospel or to know the real Christ and it is our responsibility to give them that chance.

When we came to this field this time, we found a small group of members, who were woefully discouraged, and most of them moved to other States during the first 18 months we were here. This left a still smaller group which was almost hopeless, as a nucleus around which to build, and the cause was held in reproach in the minds of the people in the city and community, because of the disastrous administration of the two years previous.

Now we have a fine group of people of whom any pastor can be justly proud, because they are loyal Brethren and living in peace. Among these we have 32 members between the ages of 10 and 21 years. And the Whole Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, here and elsewhere.

Fort Scott, Kansas.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By Grant McDonald

The title of this article and the oft repeated statement, "Christian America," would seem paradoxical. We often hear the phrase "over church-ed communities," but if we are close observers and students of the Word, we are well aware of the appalling need of the "Whole Gospel in our Community." It is true that there are many churches about us, but we need only to observe the activities and spiritual temperature, and we can readily see a spiritual dearth. Something is lacking. The whole Gospel is not being preached.

Many of our neighboring churches closed their doors on Sunday evening because it was impossible to get a hearing. They had only their morning service because the mid-week service was dispensed with also. Why? Because of the lack of a whole Gospel message. As a result of this situation, a tremendous indifference and lethargy prevails among members, and there is an amazing outcropping of "isms."

L. G. Wood

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

I believe that we have been here long enough to give the results of our experience in preaching the whole Gospel. Our church did not need to close its doors on Sunday evening for lack of a hearing. Our auditorium was nearly filled each evening. There was no special entertainment put on to keep up the interest as many churches around us were doing. Neither did we dispense with the mid-week prayer service and Bible study. In fact our attendance increased through the summer months. I take no glory or praise to myself, but attribute it all to the faithfulness in preaching the pure Gospel with no compromise whatsoever. As a result of teaching the Word, the lives of our people have been deepened spiritually, a greater interest is stimulated in the individual study of the Word; there is greater loyalty in attendance to services and the giving of a tithe on the part of many. For this reason alone we were able to go through the year without a deficit in our current expenses, for other means of raising funds were dispensed with.

Another result of the whole Gospel preaching, is that many souls were won for Christ. This is an inexhaustive field and on all sides of us are folks who need to take Christ as their personal Savior. Our Sunday school with its many children, affords a fine opportunity of approach to a number of these homes.

By no means is this field without its problems and difficulties, for the more faithful one is, in preaching the Word, the greater will be the attack of the Adversary. He does not rest easy. We covet your prayers in behalf of this field, the messenger, and that the whole Gospel message will bring mighty results to his glory.

Ellet, Ohio.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By Frank Gehman

On every hand we are let know that this is a day of need. Charitable organizations, needy individuals, and social workers unite in keeping us reminded of the needs of the multitudes of today. Even those able to live in full and free comfort join the conspiracy to let us know that this is a day of need. At least one fact is kept constantly before us with a devotion that is well worthy of any deserving cause. But if it be a rest-disurbing thought, there is another that had ought to be disturbing to a Christian's peace of mind and ease of soul. That is the fact of the appalling need of the Whole Gospel in most American communities of today. In this need ours is no exception. Each day brings new realizations of the extent of that appalling need.

A WHOLE GOSPEL is needed today. This is no time for a namby-pamby, willy-nilly, wishy-washy Gospel of pink teas, of socially inclined aspirations, or of ethical platitudes. It is a day for the sure mercies of God and his promises, for the Gospel of the Blood Salvation through grace, and for the daily sustaining power of the Word of God. The Gospel of Christ is challenged with a test today. Are we going to aid its success with our freely devoted and fully consecrated lives and testimonies? Or, are we going to hinder it with our half-heartedness, our world-loving and deadening indifferences to its finer truths? I address this to Christians. An unbeliever's life does not shame the Gospel. It only challenges that Gospel and the followers of Christ. That life shames only the race of unregenerate man, and points to the shamelessness of Satan. With a Believer's life it is different. His life by its many weaknesses may many times shame the Gospel. And how many times is it done, alas! Brethren, this had ought not be so. This is a day for a whole and powerful Gospel. Let us, at least, give it a free course.

MORALITY, what need I say of it? Conditions are much alike the world over. To be sure, there are local colorings, but the picture remains much the same. Paul snapped that picture in the first century on the camera of inspiration and sent it to the Church at Rome. You know where to find it. Read it for yourself. As a matter of course, worldliness is rife. Our community has been somewhat insufficiently churchied. This reflects in the lives and attitudes of many who really should know better, but who either do not know or do not care. Young folks have grown up without the supervision of the church and its teachings. They appear to be sincere in their desires to find something worthwhile in life, but how they are deluded and blinded by the god of this world as to real worths. They are caught in the foil of worldliness and are pierced with the blade of fleshly desires. Let the Brethren Church to their rescue. Oh, that their eyes might be opened and their understandings enlightened to receive the pure Gospel, a whole Gospel, to their everlasting satisfaction and to God's glory.

SALVATION is neglected of many. They look after other needs but forget that. When thought of at all by many they experience a careless hope that the Good Lord will be so "good that he will let them into heaven out of pure pity for their state. As if the justice of God were a less worthy trait than his mercy. People need to know that it cost God much to be free to forgive us our sins. They need to know that he died on the Cross in the Person of the Son that he might be at liberty to forgive the sinner his sins and still not be a violator of his own supreme justice. God has gone far, he has done much, and then men are scornful of or indifferent to the salvation provided. The Whole Gospel presents to men not only their need of a Savior, but it brings as well to men that same Savior whom to see and to know aright is to love. Many here are unsaved; the giving of the Whole Gospel is their hope—and our commission.

APOSTACY is on every hand in the churches today. When one is obliged to sit and listen to the platitudes of modernism in any of their phases, it makes one wonder how the multitudes will ever find the Real Christ in whom alone there is salvation. The Brethren Church has committed itself to the preaching of the Whole Gospel. Let it do that faithfully and devotedly and there will be no lack of opportunity for that church. To make known the Real Christ to the world, the Christ of the Bible, God's Christ, is the Church's task before the world. Brethren, let us not pride ourselves because of ourselves, but let us glory in our Lord Jesus Christ, and remember that the apostacy of many churches is keeping multitudes from knowing, loving and serving him. If we say we preach the Whole Gospel, if we say we know and make known the Word-of-God

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

Christ, let us exercise ourselves, and pray God, to enlarge the borders of our tent. We shall fight error with truth and with the Sword of the Spirit and shall prevail for it will be God who fights through us.

The CHILDREN are the hope of any church. No less so are they of ours. Our community offers glorious opportunities for teaching the children. If they hear of the Lord, many will honor him. How will they hear? It is up to us. Other communities also offer opportunities with the children. Are we going to let them grow up without reaching them with the true Word of Salvation? Shall baseball celebrities and prize-fighters be their heroes and themselves be Saviorless? Rather than their heroes being Abraham and Moses, and Christ being a Savior in reality to them? The challenge is ours. Will we reach them with the Whole Gospel of God before the innocence of childhood gives way to the worldly-wiseness of adolescence and in turn to the open corruption of worldly living? God has given us the opportunity, he will give us the means individually just as fast as he is sure we will use it rightly; is he finding us dependable?

Brethren, may God give us grace to back our Home Mission work as never before. The Gospel must go forward. If we fail to carry it, God must choose others.

Osceola, Indiana.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By Samuel J. Adams

Loud and long have we sounded forth the fact regarding our creed, the BIBLE, THE WHOLE BIBLE, AND NOTHING BUT THE BIBLE. This we should continue to do for the need of a "WHOLE GOSPEL" IS GREATER THAN EVER. In the religious life of our community we have found several classes of folks. Their cases are different, yet their disease is one, even as is their cure, THE WHOLE GOSPEL; which will bring them face to face with the Christ who is able to save.

The wave of past prosperity enabled many to secure for themselves luxuries that our forefathers knew nothing of. These have hindered rather than helped many in their religious life. One now feels as good sitting in the living room listening to a sermon over the radio as they did when they occupied the pew. If with the car we bring the family to church in the morning it is perfectly all right to seek rest elsewhere during the day. We have built up a soothing goodness to the starvation of soul. The "NEW BIRTH" which is given a place in the "WHOLE GOSPEL" will leave no room for self-righteousness, but will on the other hand make men "new creatures in Christ Jesus." The Gospel which warns against the, "forsaking of assembling", is ours to preach. Men must be warned regarding the misuse of God's time and day. What an opportunity is ours to tell the world of this great truth. Men are not their own, they have been bought with a price, "The Blood of Jesus Christ." In the "Whole Gospel" place has been given to these things.

The Church is obligated to carry out her Lord's command, to disciple and teach all folks. Failure to do this has resulted in Churchianity taking the place of Real Salvation. Long established churches by their methods have led thousands of folks to believe that as long as one is on the church roll all shall be well. To this they add a catechism, which when one fully learns its truth, their days of study end. Men under such conditions become only a religious machine that must be primed and started each Sunday morning for some church house.

Before God, what will become of those who have blinded others with such teaching? To care for such folks, we have the "Gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto Salvation to everyone that believeth." That failures resulting from a Gospel that is man made will not excuse we who know the "Whole Gospel" and its requirements.

Again we find scores of unsaved who need a Savior and a message that will transform their lives. Because man goes to church and even reads the Bible is no proof he is a child of God. In our recent revival we had such a man who was led into the light by the Holy Spirit. A church member he was, but after hearing the "Whole Gospel" he confessed the thing he was trusting in was nothing but a broken reed. Regardless of what men may say, and other churches may preach, we must be true to the WHOLE WORD OF GOD.

There is only one way in which men may know a REAL CHRIST—that is to hear a message from those to whom he is REAL. Many are they who want the Gospel which we preach. The BRETHREN CHURCH NEED NOT BE ASHAMED OF HER MESSAGE FOR IT IS GOD'S MESSAGE. The world is asking for bread; we have bread to give and even to spare; we have no stone for the world. In every community I am sure we have opportunity to win such folks as I have described. Is there not a great need that we let our light shine? Yes, the light of the "WHOLE GOSPEL" will lead men to a "HOLY GOD", one who is able and willing to save.

Let us be fervent in spirit, firm in our convictions, and wide awake in this hour of appalling need, that every BRETHREN CHURCH shall serve her community the spiritual food needed to strengthen Christian men and women and bring others who know not Christ to a saving knowledge of him.

Go and tell unto all the Gospel story,

They wait for the light of his Word;

They wait for the messenger of glory,

Of whom they as yet have not heard.

There is one who is standing, waiting, pleading,

He points to his hands and his side;

His wounds for the world are interceding,

Go save them for whom he has died.

May God give us Grace for this time of great need that we shall not fail him, for his name sake we pray.

Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Our pastors, our church school superintendents, and our teachers must be helped to gain a new ideal of the missionary spirit, and our church schools must teach that the question of missions is not a question of here or there, of home or foreign field, but an attitude of life, a normal expression of Christian thinking and living. The missionary spirit, when so conceived and so taught, will not be shown by an occasional or even by a regular gift; it will be the spontaneous response of the Christian to the needs of his brothers everywhere.—Selected.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Amos

The old claim that the farmers of a nation have a message for the inhabitants of the cities is highly justified by the doings of Amos, a rural herdsman from little Tekoa. He has sometimes been called "the Billy Sunday of the Old Testament," although the comparison is not such a happy one at that. Billy Sunday was a baseball player before his conversion and Amos was engaged in the lowly task of dressing sycamore figs. The one was playing for the howling multitudes, while the other was gathering food for the poor and tending sheep. After the conversion of each of these men we may see something akin to each other in their fiery, forceful, evangelistic denunciation of the sinful people.

Tekoa

Tekoa was a small village twelve miles from Jerusalem, and six miles south of Bethlehem. The place probably was a fortified stronghold of Rehoboam (2 Chron. 11:6) and had an elevation of 2,700 feet. Today the wilderness of Engedi presents a little Tekoa to the world—a ruined village with a castle of somewhat modern date. It is interesting to note that the common citizens of Tekoa aided Nehemiah in the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem. The nobles of the place showed the highest indifference towards that project and probably sat on their house-tops and watched the operations from that vantage ground. Jerusalem stands today—a monument of God's providential control, while the broad hill top of Tekoa is but the remains of destroyed houses with beveled stones.

Amos' Call

The prophet says of himself: "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was a herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit: and the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel." This is the divine commission of Jehovah to a man of Judah. He was called to prophesy in and against Israel and the surrounding Gentile nations. Incidentally, however, he had some words for Judah. 2:4, 5; 3:1; 9:11.

A greater question arises concerning his message to the world. It was one of condemnation mingled with mercy. It was stern, but compassionate. With Archbishop Newcome we may observe that "he borrows many images from scenes in which he was engaged; but he introduces them with skill, and gives them tone and dignity by the eloquence and grandeur of his manner. We shall find in him many elegant and sublime passages." Truly Amos is a foreign and home missionary who "into politics brings facts, into religion vision."

Let us witness how he pictures the operations of the Divine Government over the nations: how does he speak to the nations? Is his a message tamed or throttled? Plainly the evidence reveals that he charged:

1. Damascus with Cruelty. 1:3-5.
2. Gaza with Slave Operations. 1:6-8.
3. Tyre with Covenant Breaking. 1:9-10.
4. Edom with Perpetual Unforgiveness. 1:11-12.
5. Ammon with Wretched Conduct. 1:13-15.
6. Moab with Unmitigated Wrath. 2:1-3.
7. Judah with Rejecting God's Law. 2:4-5.
8. Israel with General Sinfulness. 2:6-16.

Little did Amos realize, perhaps, how adequately his utterances would be fulfilled in history. The accomplishments of Jehovah through his prophets will never be understood unless men are ready and willing to recognize the fact of the Supernatural and his Providential control over man.

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Amos.
2. When and Where Written? In Palestine, 800-785 B. C.
3. To Whom Written? To Israel, and others.
4. Purpose. To point out Jehovah's condemnation locally and his judgment universally.

5. Authenticity. Davidson avers that all critics accept Amos as reliable and trustworthy product. Thousands join him heartily.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK (Classic)

1. Declarations: Punishment of Nations. 1-2.
2. Proclamations: Judgment of Jews. 3-6.
3. Revelations: Visions of Nature. 7-9:10.
4. Restorations: Establishment of the Kingdom. 9:11-15.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

Aside from the items mentioned in the above section concerning the message to the nations and Israel, there are three remaining sections dealing with condemnation, visions, and restoration. Especially rich is the last section in its depiction of Israel's latter days. In sequential order (9:11-15) the history is this:

1. The Restoration of the Kingdom.
  2. The Ruleship of the Jews.
  3. The Fruitfulness of the Land.
  4. The Rebuilding of the Cities.
  5. The Permanence of the Blessing.
- These are the rich promises which await an obedient Israel!

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Punishment. "For Three Transgressions," etc.
2. Key Verses. 5:16, 24; 1:3; 2:3; 3:3; 4:12; 6:1; 7:1; 8:2; 9:15.
3. Key Chapters. 5 and 9.
4. Key Ideas. National Sin and National Judgment.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The highest values of the book of Amos rest in the following facts:

1. The Depiction of the Religion of the Prophet.
2. The Primacy of the Prophetic Message and Influence.
3. The Prevalence of the Law and Disobedience Thereto.
4. The Confirmation of Earlier Mosaic History.
5. The Wretched and Chaotic Social Condition.
6. The Godless Religious Situation.

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Christ is set forth in the book of Amos as one who invites Israel to "return unto me" . . . and "live." It reminds us at once of the Compassionate Savior who invited men in the Gospels: "Come unto me and I will give you rest." Read Amos 4 and 5. It will be the self-same Christ who will re-gather and restore ancient Israel.

VII. THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

1. Nationally. The sins enumerated against Israel are sevenfold: "Injustice, avarice, oppression, immorality, profanity, blasphemy, and sacrilege." America has, is, and will continue to specialize in these sins. What awaits our nation in the way of judgment or repentance, nobody knows. We need a modern Amos.

2. Dr. Lee has a splendid summary of the merits of the personal labor of Amos. He calls him a model worker for God and lists the points enumerated below:

- (1) His Humility. He makes no attempt to hide the bare facts of his past life and employment; he was not ashamed to make known his lowly birth and occupation. There was in him an entire absence of "side." His exaltation to prophetic rank did not spoil him.

- (2) His industry. Owing to his trade he often lived a solitary life, yet he spent it in communion with God, and in close observation of nature. The illustrations scattered through this book are all drawn from his every-day life, proving his keenness of sight and originality of mind.

- (3) His wisdom. He did not preach over the heads of the people, but employed terms quite familiar to all of them.

- (4) His cleverness. He caught the attention of the people right away by speaking first against their enemies.

- (5) His faithfulness. He was not a tickler of the popular ear, but dealt faithfully with the people, making straight tracks for their consciences.

- (6) His steadfastness. He refused to be turned off from the work God had given him, (VII 10 to 17.) He kept his eye on his Divine Master.

- (7) His message. He had a "Thus saith the Lord," a message direct from God. It was a timely one, too, suitable to that God-forsaking age.

- (8) His success. He was blessed with wonderful success, (VII 10.) He wielded an influence over the whole land."

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Pastor a Teacher

By Rev. N. V. Leatherman, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association

(Continued from last week)

Since the pastor is a teacher, what then is his school? Garfield, we believe it was who said, "Give me a pupil on one end of a log with myself on the other and we have a college." If this be true concerning our conventional ideas of a college, how much more true it is for the pastor to have his school set up wherever we have a listener. One of the advantages of the small college we continue to insist is, the personal contact and help to the pupil given by the professor. We talk a great deal about personal evangelism, and rightly so; but have we learned the real value of personal contact in pastoral teaching? There is no alert pastor in our day who in making calls does not find in the midst of conversation certain errors of thought and attitude that needs most earnestly to be corrected. For instance, we have not a few folks who express themselves through conversation on the subject of denominational loyalty, in a rather negative fashion. They say, "we are all striving for the same place," "there is good in all churches," "I don't see any difference." To all of which we must allow there is no little amount of truth, and yet in many respects far, far from the real and whole truth. Loyalty to one's denomination and church need not make one a snob or self-righteous Christian. And there is nothing that seems to need more emphasis among many of our people than a right sense of true loyalty which is closely akin to faith in Christ. By plain, tactful and graceful teaching in conversation the pastor can not only correct many such errors, but actually lead the individual into a fuller appreciation of their relationship to the church of Jesus Christ.

The question is sometimes raised as to whether or not the pastor should allow himself to become engaged as a regular Sunday school teacher. It is not to ridicule that we ask, why not? Perhaps the most virtuous reason given for the, why not, is that thereby the pastor could be free to observe or act as the super-superintendent of all the other teachers. Yet experience has taught some of us that this sort of thing is not appreciated by either the teachers or the classes to the extent that would be sufficient to offset his value as a regular teacher. Besides unless our schools are well enough equipped, so that the pastor is not called upon to teach, this, that and the other class any way, when some teacher is absent, the pastor will find such an experience far more disconcerting and disturbing to his nervous equilibrium than to have a regular class. This so called disturbing and disconcerting element is frequently given as a reason why a pastor should not teach, before going into the pulpit on Sunday morning.

The pastor should be one of the best teachers in the Sunday school. It may be offered that he limits his service by being a teacher of just one class. That may be more or less true. But he can be such a teacher as to set an example before the whole school. His class, whatever the age, should become a leading class. Personally we have never had a regular class but what was most responsive to real leadership. We have always considered the class we were asked to teach an excellent opportunity. And we have taught intermediate boys' and girls' classes, young men's classes, young married people's classes, and adult Bible classes regularly. The teaching of the Sunday school lesson has always been one of the enjoyable features of our ministry. The most disagreeable experience we have ever had was one year when we decided to give up teaching a young men's class in favor of another teacher. The result was disastrous to the class and most embarrassing to the pastor. Of course such an experience does not always result. That was one year we were free to see the school in theory but the practice was not so fine as presumption would indicate.

Then too in teaching a Sunday school class the pastor uses methods that ordinarily cannot be used in the pulpit. There are certain advantages and virtues in these various methods of teaching. It is our conviction and general practice that the pastor ought to reserve the preaching method of teaching for the pulpit. One good reason is, that few people really care to hear two sermons in succession from the same man. In the Sunday school class the methods can be varied. Briefly these methods can be summed up as the story method, the question and answer method, the lecture method and the topical method. Learn to use them all. Let no pastor ridicule methods because he does not wish to trouble himself about them. For our best teachers know how to teach. They know of whom they teach. They know why they teach, as well as what they teach.

And this leads to another very important consideration. The pastor should be a teacher of teachers. Our boys and girls attend secular schools where their teachers are prepared. Prepared not only in the subject matter they teach; but prepared as well in psychological principles of education. They are taught not merely to teach a text book or a subject. They are taught to teach their pupils. Many of these same boys and girls become unruly in our Sunday schools and sometimes they are actually lost to Christ and his church because some of our teachers do not teach. With all due respect to many of our faithful Sunday school teachers, there are those who feel themselves tremendously handicapped for a lack of training. There is more required of a Sunday school teacher than there is of a grade school teacher. The grade school teacher seeks to prepare a citizen. The Sunday school teacher seeks to prepare her pupil for God's Glory. There are three essential things every Sunday school teacher should know, to some degree of satisfaction at least. They are Christ and his Word, the subject matter; the pupil, the great objective; and the How to teach. And the pastor should not only be familiar with these fields of knowledge; but should be in a position to teach them as well. Herein let him gracefully demonstrate his ability. Let him truly be a leader of leaders, and receive that which is his right by virtue of his office, namely, the joy of an elder exercising oversight of his flock, by directing their thinking and very emotions in Christian training. How well do we remember the sparkle in a certain young man's eye, when he raised certain questions regarding God, while studying the Old Testament wars in a Teacher Training class. And we gave this major premise, with the words, "God is always right." This premise did not destroy this young man's freedom of thought, as some would have us conclude; but it did cause him to reverence and respect God the more. And the fine response on the young man's part we considered as part of our pay for teaching a splendid group of young people in a teacher training class. Then too, there is no better way of unifying the teaching in your Sunday school than by preparing your teachers yourself as much as is possible. Pastors if we want teachers whose hearts burn for the cause, to rise up and call us blessed, which experience to a humble pastor will never harm him, then let us somehow, someway, manage a class as large as possible to prepare them to teach.

And if we need a specific example of Teacher Training we need only to refer to the disciples at school with their Lord. We know the very term disciple means a learner, a scholar. We are, "to disciple the people." In order to disciple all the people, if we take it that way, then let us be assured we must disciple some of them. We must make disciples who in turn will make other disciples. And the key to it all is teaching. Pastors, let us teach teachers.

But neither the home, the Sunday school class, nor the Teacher Training class, is the place where the pastor has his largest and best school. The pastor's best school is where his pupils have gathered together to worship and then give attention to his sermon. The congregation has given itself to the Lord for this hour. The man of God has at least one-half of this time, according to most of our modern services, in which to write upon the hearts of his people that which will meet God's purpose in them.

And herein may we be bold to suggest is the field of the pastor's success or failure. And lest we be misunderstood in this suggestion permit us to make haste in also stating that, we believe it altogether possible for a pastor to be right in his methods, as well as the content of his preaching and yet not accomplish what he actually wants in terms of observance on the part of his pupils, mainly because, the pupils are like the Jews in the days of our Master who "would not." But all things considered, given a congregation interested in the things of Christ and his church, with a devoted pastor really teaching them spiritually, and not blocking his own efforts by tinkering too much with the machinery, there should result a beautiful observance on the part of the pupils.

(To be continued.)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

MAKING A LIVING

(Lesson for November 13)

Lesosn Text: Amos 5:11-15; Luke 19:16-23;

Golden Text: Rom. 12:11

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Justice to All. Amos 5:10-15

Amos prophesied against a people among whom there was no justice for the poor, either in the courts, or in their daily service for their richer masters. It often seems that this is the situation in our own land today, and that the present "depression" is primarily a means to further "oppression." If our country would escape the judgments of v. 11, she must repent, and change her ways (v. 15). If employers would escape the same judgments, they too must repent and establish justice for their humblest worker. And do not forget that the worker is equally under obligations to be just to his employer, rendering service as unto the Lord.

TUESDAY

Faithfulness in Duty. Luke 19:16-23

Faithfulness is one of the supreme requirements of God for man—faithfulness toward God and toward men. The men of the parable were rewarded or punished accordingly as they were faithful or faithless, and not according to their success or lack thereof. It is true that faithfulness leads to success, in more ways than one. The story of Joseph's success in Egypt is the story of his faithfulness. Referring to Prov. 22:29, Benjamin Franklin, in his "Autobiography," bears witness of its exact fulfillment in his own case, he having stood before no less than five kings, and even eaten with at least one of them. And above all material success is the answer of a clear conscience that comes with faithful service.

WEDNESDAY

Working to Live. 2 Thes. 3:6-13

The laborer is worthy of his hire, but the man who labors not is not even worthy of his food. From the day when man was first driven from the Garden it was decreed that he must work for his bread, and this principle remains unchanged. Occasionally there are those who claim to be living by faith, the Lord providing for their needs while they do no work; however, it seems that it is not so much the Lord who provides for these, as long-suffering friends, and our scripture calls them "Busy-bodies." Let us pray not for freedom from toil, but for strength for the day.

THURSDAY

A Life of Contentment. 1 Tim. 6:6-12

It would be well if all Christians would meditate more upon this passage. We become so concerned with the things of life that we forget life itself. Yet the things are but temporal, and must be laid aside at the close of life. The struggle for riches brings only dissatisfaction and sorrow. In the race to "keep up with the Joneses" and obtain luxuries, we pass our lives in ceaseless struggle and toil; if, instead, we were satisfied with the simpler needs of life (as food and raiment, v. 8), how much happier our lives would be! How much more time we should have for living! Let us pray that we may find Christian contentment—Godliness with contentment.

FRIDAY

The Teacher and Carpenter. Mark 6:1-6

What a wonderful Savior we have! That he might fully sympathize with the needs of the toilers of earth, he even became as a servant, and was here scorned as the "carpenter." By working himself at so humble a task, he forever sanctified and glorified all honest labor, and when we follow our daily tasks we follow in the steps of the Master. Pray that we may walk worthy of him in this respect also.

SATURDAY

The True Riches. Luke 12:13-21

In this parable Jesus draws the contrast between worldly riches and being rich toward God. In another place we are commanded not to lay up for ourselves earthly treasure that can be stolen or corrupted, but to lay up for ourselves treasure in heaven. May this be our desire and prayer. The lives of all such have not only been blessed to themselves, but have proved a benediction to all about them.

SUNDAY

Temperate Living. Prov. 30:7-9

Great riches and great poverty are, alike, sources of temptation and grief. The scriptural rule is, "temperate in ALL things." The struggle for superfluities strangles spiritual life as much as the possession of them. Let us remember the ideals of the early Brethren in this regard, and pray that we may never allow any of these things, or their lack, to come between us and our Savior.

E. M. RIDOLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 317 E. DuSall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2391 13th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio
---	---	--

Old Things and New about Missions

By Rowena Kessler

In discussing the society's missionary committee work many of the "same old things" need to be said. Though they seem old to some, they are not worn out, for too few of our committees have worked hard enough or aimed high enough.

1. Organization of the missionary committee. A chairman, with two other members having definite duties, is probably sufficient in many societies.

2. Qualification of committee members. The chairman must be interested and devoted to the cause of missions, must be consecrated to the task of interesting others, and must be willing to work and plan with zeal and purpose. Other members of the committee should be willing, efficient, and interested helpers.

3. Purpose of the committee. The outstanding purpose is to promote and supervise interesting and worth-while missionary meetings, as provided for each month in the usual plan of topics.

4. Committee meetings. Regular monthly committee meetings should be held for discussing plans and conducting vital business and assignments. Every meeting should be devoted to a real purpose. Follow a definite course of action. Budget the work to be done, follow it up, and examine results.

5. Duties. Each member should have a definite task or responsibility. Some suggestions are: (a) Secretary, to keep minutes and records of all accomplishments; (b) Librarian, to collect pictures and informational material for the bulletin-board and to collect books and pamphlets for a missionary reading-table; (c) Division of supervision over certain regular Christian Endeavor or missionary meetings; (d) Promotion of reading contests.

6. Plans. At the first regular committee meeting outline aims for the year. Plan toward them. Divide the work accordingly among the members, with the general always keeping closely in touch with what is being done and with the member who is doing it.—C. E. World, Sterling Colorado.

Spelling the Months with Bible Verses

(A suggestion for Juniors)

(These verses should be committed to memory by the Juniors, and may be recited by the society in concert, one or two being added at each meeting. By the end of the month all should be memorized. If possible the references also should be learned.)

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other.—Matt. 6:24.

O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles.—Ps. 43:3.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life.—John 6:47.

Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone.—Jas. 2:17.

My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God: when shall I come and appear before God?—Ps. 42:2.

Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name.—Ps. 103:1.

Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.—Jas. 5:17.

Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.—Rom. 12:15.—Junior C. E. World.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
 Financial Secretary Foreign Board
 1925 East 5th St.,
 Long Beach, California

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
 Home Missionary Secretary
 Berne, Indiana

MISSIONS

The Little Black Motherless Babies of Africa

Bellevue, French Equatorial Africa,
 August 29, 1932.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

Mrs. Sheldon has asked me to write and tell you about the little black motherless babies we have been feeding.

In September, 1931, almost a year ago, the first baby was brought to Mrs. Sheldon to be fed because its mother had died. His native name is Fieora, which means "death rests with us", but Mrs. Sheldon has named him Moise (which is Moses in English). She has been a real foster mother to him, having fed him with milk and cereal ever since. He is being cared for by a little girl in the same village.

The next baby was assigned to Miss Bickel two months later, also a little boy whom Miss Bickel named Joseph. He was nothing but skin and bones, but from the beginning he took the milk mixed with cereal from the bottle, just like a white baby would. He is certainly the first black baby in these parts to be fed from a bottle. He is now a bright little fellow with a very winsome smile for everyone. He is cared for by his little sister.

The third baby also came to Miss Bickel. We named her Miriam. She was real healthy looking and we tried to feed her milk from a bottle nor from a cup nor mly from a bottle nor from a cup nor spoon, try as we would to coax her into doing it. We then tried to get a woman who was a relative and who had just lost her own baby to take care of her, but she refused. An older woman in the convert's class cared for her, but she was too young for native food, she did not thrive on it and finally starved to death.

Then another tiny baby girl was brought to us whose mother must have died a long while before they brought her, for she was almost starved and much too weak to take food. We tried feeding her with a medicine dropper, but her father was not faithful in bringing her and in a short time she died also.

Then another little girl was brought to Mrs. Sheldon whom she named Louise. She is from a far distant village and it was necessary to find a home for her in our workman's village. This was a difficult thing to do, as one family after another refused, even those who had no babies of their own, to care for. This was because of the superstition that when a mother dies it is because the little one has an evil spirit which caused the mother's death and they do not want anything to do with the baby. Finally, however, the wife of a Christian workman who is a distant relative, consented to allow the baby and the little girl who cares for it to live in their house. So little Louise now has a home.

This past week a woman from a distant village brought her baby to be fed, because she herself was starving and unable to feed her baby boy. This woman was an entire stranger and upon questioning her found that she had never heard the Gospel. I gave her something to eat and then told her of Jesus and his love, and also had one of our young men who is training to be an evangelist speak to her. This woman's village was so far away that she could not travel the distance every day, and we have no room in the hospital at present, so we sent one of our boys to a nearby village to ask the chief if she might stay in one of his houses. The boy came back with the word that she had a relative in that village. This is no doubt how she heard that we feed starving babies. So she has been staying there and coming daily for food for herself and baby, but he is so thin and emaciated that we think it is going to be a struggle for him to live. We hope the mother will become a Christian before she goes back to her village.

It doesn't take long to tell this story, but it takes from our precious time every morning to prepare the cereal and milk for these little ones and get it ready for the little mothers to take back to the villages. Then too, we do not get enough milk from our goats for our own needs and theirs too, so we must feed them on condensed milk which costs 32 cents a can out here. But we are doing this as unto the Lord, and hope if he tarries and these babies grow up to be men and women that they will be valiant servants for him.

I must tell you of a sad incident which occurred a few weeks ago in one of the villages. I went there to give a Gospel message and noticed a crowd gathered around a fire. There was a very sick woman there who was the mother of a two weeks' old baby. I then noticed several men who were making queer motions with some sticks. Upon inquiring what they were doing the boys told me they were praying to the evil spirits to find out who had the evil spirit that was causing this woman's illness. They think all sickness and death is caused by someone with an evil spirit. I sat down and talked and prayed with them and told them that only God had the power to heal sickness. The woman was far too sick to take in what I said as she was suffering intensely.

I went to this village a week later and inquired for this woman. They told me she had died and I found an old woman caring for the baby, probably the grandmother. The next day Mrs. Sheldon went there and found the baby moaning and starving. The father is a polygamist, but the other wife refused to care for the baby and nurse it. One of the boys in the village told Mrs. Sheldon that twice they had dug a little grave beside the mother's and put the baby in, but both times it cried (no doubt the damp ground revived it) and they took it out again. The next morning one of her boys went to the village to bring the baby to our Station. He found that they had buried it, whether alive or dead we do not know.

Pray for these poor people, that the glorious light of the Gospel may shine in their hearts so darkened with superstition and sin.
EDNA PATTERSON.

Argentina

During the past few weeks it has been my pleasure to visit the churches in the southern part of the district, Huinca Renanco and Realico. I went at this time in order to meet Brother Luis Farre who came with the director of the seminary in Azul where he has been teaching during the year. The director came to see if he could arrange for Brother Farre to continue teaching but the Field Council has decided that if he is willing he may work in our district. The seminary is far away.

In company with Brother Farre we held meetings in Realico two nights and the rest of the time in Huinca Renanco, a rain having made the roads impassable to Realico. The attendance was large at both places and indicated faithful work on the part of the pastor, Brother Adolfo Zeche. In Huinca Renanco twenty converts made the good confession and thirteen were baptized and took part in the love feast following. Many of these had begun to attend the meetings at the time of the campaign with the tent last April. The tent is about ready for the summer campaign again but this time will probably occupy all the summer in the towns in the northern part of the district.

This is a great work and we ask the special prayers of the readers in its behalf.

C. F. YODER.

Almafuerte, October 6, 1932.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
 was a great correspondent

WARSAW, INDIANA TO WATERLOO, IOWA

A happy and successful pastorate of five years at Warsaw was closed September 1st. It was the privilege of pastor and people to pray and labor for some excellent things during that period. The activities of this church were reported at quite regular intervals, so in a general way, we want to say, a spirit of harmony and peace reigned in all our work. The church building was cared for, with decoration and repairs to the amount of about $2,000. Souls were led to find a Savior in Jesus the Christ. The pastor conducted every revival during the pastorate except one, when a neighbor pastor was summoned to help.

Our ministry was wide and varied in connection with this pastorate. Many Sunday school and Christian Endeavor addresses were given; we served as Dean of the County-wide Training school for Christian workers for four years; conducted funerals eighty-one in all, sixty percent of them being for people outside of my church.

The leaving was not easy. The neighbors, seven families came one evening and served in our home a community dinner, which will long be remembered. Then the church gave a beautiful farewell dinner and program. The musical organizations, choir and male chorus put on the cap sheaf by following us to our home and presented a very beautiful three candle table lamp.

Under the direction of the new pastor, Brother Leslie Lindower, there is no reason why this church cannot go on in remarkable service for our Lord in the community, which they claim.

During conference week, the possessions of the home were loaded on a truck and in less than twenty hours were located in Waterloo, Iowa. Thanks to the Brethren who assisted the truckmen in placing the goods and having our house so nearly in order at our arrival.

In a few words, we have been most graciously received in Waterloo. The Whetstones, now in Goshen, Indiana, have had charge of this pastorate for the past three years. Their work is appreciated. The church carried out a beautiful reception, then the following Sunday the pastor was installed before a very large audience. The service was conducted by Rev. W. H. Yoder of the Church of the Brethren.

Before our arrival, the church decided to cooperate in the (Billy) Sunday Campaign, which is at this writing in progress. We have had three weeks of cottage prayer meetings, the best I have ever known. This church is very active in the campaign.

At the time of the fall communion, we baptized five and since last Sunday another is waiting the rite. We expect to glean several more out of the campaign.

The music program adopted by this church is so unusual and strong, that it shall be reported ere long.

We are happy in our new work. In the midst of the tall-corn state, the children are pleased with their schools, the Lord is causing his work to grow and we are praying that we may be ever able to preach the Truth as it is in him, so that souls may be saved and his precious name glorified.

REV. E. M. RIDDLE.

BELL JINGLES

It has been some time since I made report through the Evangelist. I arranged with the College Board to give part of my time this year to the field work of the College, in looking after their outside interests. Since our Board meeting last April, I have visited in forty-one of our churches, interviewed some two hundred personally for the school and covered nearly ten thousand miles of roads.

I had the pleasure while in the East of meeting with the Brethren of Washington, D. C., Hagerstown, Waynesboro, St. James, Linwood and Winchester in their annual fellowship meeting at Rocky Ridge, Maryland. I have recently returned from the Mid-West Conference held at Portis, Kansas. Both of these gatherings were full of interesting things and well attended.

Some Observations

The present economic situation is having its effect on church work, it could not be otherwise. I am glad to find that most of our pastors are using good judgment in sharing with the people their burdens in these times and staying with their churches and making no unjust demands. I have found in several instances where the pastor in the face of no money guarantee has remained with his church and in every such instance they are being cared for with material supplies and comforts.

There are very few of our churches without pastoral care and I believe no church need be, if they are willing to go forward with the work, as we have men who are ready to serve as long as they can receive enough to live on, and this does not need be a money consideration alone. One pastor the other day took me into his cellar and showed me how his people were looking after him and his family. As I remember there were 250 cans of fruits and eats, 12 bushels of potatoes, 10 bushels of apples, pumpkins, squash and in the back yard 30 chickens waiting for the ax. Why can't our unoccupied churches follow the example and secure a man for their work?

There is danger as I see it, in many of the churches in not giving the needed support to our general work on account of the money stringency. This will be disastrous if carried too far. The College, Publishing House, Old Folks' Home, our Foreign and Home Mission work have been built up through the struggles and sacrifices of years and we must do our utmost to preserve them from failing. Dr. Jacobs for the College has already sounded a note of warning. Dr. Shively and Dr. J. Allen Miller have spoken of the danger confronting the Old Folks' Home. Dr. R. R. Teeter has written plainly of the situation with the Publishing house. It is a foregone conclusion that our Foreign Mission offering cannot suffer another shrinkage in the offering-like last year without injuring the work. The Home Mission offering is already too small to meet the needs of the field and should not be reduced. May the cause of Christ come first in the hearts of our people.

The greatest danger in our churches as I see it, is lethargy and indifference to the great opportunity that now faces us. Never in my recollections, have there been so many idle people, who have been brought to a sense of their needs. In other days we have been too busy they cannot go to church; they have plenty of time now. The world today needs Jesus Christ and his ministry. In the face of this situation we are laying down on aggressive evangelistic work and an organized, vitalized program of reaching the discouraged, worried and helpless multitudes who are looking for aid and something better. Money should not be the controlling factor of our work. This has been too much so in the past and it may be God is teaching us to look above material things, that we may see him and trust in his grace and power. May every church get busy with a program of evangelism and activity of service. May no Brethren church be without an evangelistic meeting this year.

The College, as you have noticed through the reports of the President, is feeling the effects of the depression. Parents are unable to finance their children in school and this is especially true with the farmers. Many of the boys and girls who graduated from high school, expected to attend college this year, but could not on account of means to pay their way, a number of these are taking extra high school work looking forward to going next year. It is remarkable that in the face of conditions our enrollment has not suffered more than it has. ALL SHOULD SEE the necessity of an endowment in such a time as this. We trust our people who have not paid their notes made to the endowment fund will take care of them as they are able, if you cannot meet the principle, see that you keep the interest paid up.

There are only two ways that we are now receiving new gifts, one in the form of bequests (wills), the other in annuity bonds. I am glad that some of our people are responding and others considering. I know of some whose annuity gifts are above $5,000.00 and are very thankful they made them, as all the rest of their invested money has practically been lost, but they have never failed to receive their regular annuity twice a year from the college. If you want to make yourself secure of a life income, write Dr. Jacobs, or myself for information.

In closing, I appeal to all our people and churches to stand faithful to the Gospel of Christ and the Church in these testing and sifting times. I will be able to take on two more meetings this Winter, as I have January and February open. DO NOT NEGLECT A MEETING ON ACCOUNT OF THE MONEY QUESTION.

W. S. BELL, Milledgeville, Illinois.
Box 112.

ABOUT THE DELAWARE WORK

I desire to ask through the Evangelist the prayers of those who have been greatly interested in the Brethren Cause in the state of Delaware. Because of the financial depression and a mishap to our state mission funds of Pennsylvania the Board has been compelled to cut down their obligations so that several of the mission points have been cut out entirely. The Delaware work has been one of the points. While this point is indeed a needy one, I have accepted it as of the Lord.

If the Board would have been able to give $25 a month towards this needy field for two years and furnished an evangelist for a three weeks' meeting I believe the problem would have been solved and by that time it would have become self supporting. I have earnestly prayed that the Lord may open up some evangelistic work for me that may help me to give the Gospel to the poor and worthy in Delaware. Already as a direct answer to prayer I have a call for a three weeks' meeting given to me in preference to others that I may be enabled to serve them who are unable to pay. Hence I write this little letter asking that all faithful Brethren may pray that the Lord will have the right of way in this work.

I want in this public way to thank the Board for the help they have given for several years, and especially for the use of the furniture of the Ridgely, Maryland, church for the Mt. Olivet church in Delaware.

We have a very needy place for another church at Ocean View, twenty miles from Mt. Olivet. We have about twenty members there and all the preaching they receive is in the homes there. I feel very sure we would have had a building there ere this time had it not been for the great financial depression. I expect to preach in a church about six miles from there next Sunday morning for the first time, then drive 130 miles to Camden, New Jersey, after the night service.

We received six into the church last year in spite of the fact of great handicaps. One of these was not reported to the Mission Board. While we have to walk by faith and not by sight we expect to do better service this year than ever before. If the Lord permits us to give the sincere milk of the word I am sure we will not "let the baby die."

ISAAC D. BOWMAN, Leesburg, N. J.

"THIS IS NO TIME TO FAINT"

Take to heart the words of him who had nowhere to lay his head, Be not therefore anxious for the morrow: Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. To these timely words of the Son of Man, needed today more than ever before in our generation, we may well add these of the Wise Man, If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small.

The sovereign preventive, the best prophylactic, for fainting in the day of adversity is religious faith. Hence, St. Luke gives as an introduction to a parable of our Lord's on prayer, Men ought always to pray, and not to faint. It was not a theologian, but the leading American psychologist, Professor James, who said, "The sovereign cure for worry is religious faith." David, while still a young man, found himself in a tremendously hard situation over the town of Ziklag. While he and his men were absent, the town was taken by the enemy, and the loved ones of David and his followers were carried away. When the hitherto devoted supporters of David discovered the loss, they turned against their leader and wished to stone him. It was a period of deepest rejection for the young man. But it is recorded, David encouraged himself in the Lord his God. What a superb example for us in our despondency! . . .

This is no time to faint. If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small. Put one hand in God's, the other on thy neighbor's shoulder; be patient and plod on.

Is the road very dreary?

Patience yet!

Rest will be sweeter if thou art a-weary, And, after night, cometh the morning cheery,—

Just bide a wee, and dinna fret!

The clouds have silver lining,

Don't forget!

And though he's hidden, still the sun is shining.

Courage instead of tears and vain repining!

Just bide a wee, and dinna fret!

—Rev. Edward R. Evans.

The only meaning the disciples could attach to these words was from what they had often seen when an evil doer who had been sentenced to death by the cross was led out bearing his cross to the place of execution. In bearing his cross he acknowledged the sentence of death that was on him. And so Christ would have his disciple bear his cross, the sentence of death upon himself and his evil, carnal nature.—Andrew Murray.

ARMISTICE DAY MEDITATION

(Continued from page 2)

cated much of the animosities of the civil war. Thank God for that.

We must not only disarm our hates, but our fears also. Hate and Fear are the twin servants of Mars. The nations of Europe before the days of the Great War lived in mortal fear of each other. They built forts, trained huge standing armies and tried to out-build each other in warships. . . . Some one has said that war may be analyzed by saying, "I am afraid, you are afraid, they are afraid, we are afraid."

The great war did not eradicate the fear complex of the nations. I recently read that France is completing a circle of forts to keep the Germans out in the next war. Hitler and others in Germany are busy working to rebuild up their standing army because they fear France and Italy. The western world lives in dread of Russia's "red" army. We hear the pleas that we must build up an army and navy second to none or as large as any two other powers. We fear that there will be a "next war," and we must be ready.

When men begin to distrust one another there arises a spirit of fear. This distrust destroys good will among the different nations. One suspects another of sinister motives. For example, we feel that European nations are plotting against us. We fear they would drive us out of the commercial markets of the world. Where men practice anti-Christian methods and dealings with their fellow-men, there arises a spirit of distrust that may spread the seeds of a future war.

Then we must disarm our prejudices. . . . Hates, fears and prejudices. A sage once said, "I don't like that man." "Why?" asked his student, "you don't even know him." The philosopher replied, "That is the reason I dislike him." We are so apt to differentiate the "WE GROUP" from the "Other Group". Those people who live beyond the mountains or the seas are different from us, therefore they have no good in them. In days past the word stranger was a synonym for an enemy. It would pay each of us to analyze our prejudices and see if they have any true foundation. When we meet some stranger we begin to study him for likenesses or differences. We begin to catalogue him after this manner.

His color—is he like us in color?

His language—does he talk like we do? —Many a war has been caused by a clash of tongues.

His religion—does he worship God as we do? We lose our tolerance with him if he does not.

Is he in our class, socially, financially, and culturally?

What about his forefathers and ours—were they friends or enemies?

The cure for our hates, fears and prejudices are to be found only in the great ethical principles of Jesus Christ. If man cannot love his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations. If we are to make disciples of them, they then must indeed be our brethren. The gospel knows no boundary lines. "God made of one blood all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth." Let us dwell in peace and goodwill unto all men.

But "lest we forget," as the poet challenges us:

"Who goes there in the night,

Across the storm-swept plain?

We are the ghosts of valiant war—

A million murdered men.

Who goes there, at the dawn

Across the sun-swept plain?

We are the hosts of those who swear

'T shall not be again.

—Thomas Curtis Clark.

Roanoke, Indiana.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

The Brethren church of Fort Scott, Kansas, will hold Communion service on Sunday evening of November 27th. All of like faith are kindly invited to attend. We will be glad to have as many of our isolated or non-resident members attend as can plan to do so. L. G. WOOD.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The First Brethren church, Washington, D. C., will begin its revival and evangelistic campaign on Sunday, November 6th, and close on Sunday, November 20th. The pastor, Homer A. Kent, will be the evangelist and Rev. Emerson J. Rohart, pastor of the Winchester Brethren church will be the song leader. For a week preceding the campaign there will be conducted an intensive Visitation Campaign of personal evangelism. Brethren, pray for us.

HOMER A. KENT.

HAVE YOU PLACED YOUR ORDER?

Dr. Florence N. Gribble's book, "UNDAUNTED HOPE," is now in the hands of the publishers, and promised to be off the press shortly after November 15th. This book tells the fascinating story of the founding of the Mission Oubangui-Chari in the heart of French Equatorial Africa by our pioneer missionary, James S. Gribble. The first 1000 copies will be sold at cost—$1.65 postpaid to any address in the United States. After this first edition is exhausted, the price of the book will be materially advanced. Get in on the first 1000 orders by sending us your name and address by return mail, accompanied by check or money order for $1.65.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY
OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH, 1925
East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

THE BRETHREN HOME RECEIPTS

Report of money received from Churches and Individuals since August 1, 1932

Mrs. E. L. Kilhefner	$ 10.00
Miss Emma Olinger	10.00
Mrs. Bernice Johnson	5.00
In memory of Mary E. Garber	5.00
Howard C. Williams and wife	10.00
A Friend,	1.00
Mrs. Lucy Barr	2.00
Claud Berkeleybile	1.00
Lee Myer and wife	5.00
Mrs. Floyd Sibert	2.00
Mary A. Laughlin	5.00
Woman's Bible Class, Mexico	3.00
Turah Frank Lock	5.00
Howard C. Williams	5.00
Mrs. C. M. Beachy	20.00

Total .....$ 79.00

Received from Churches

Washington Sunday School	$ 25.00
Falls City, W. M. S.	5.00
Hagerstown Sunday School	16.00
Bryan W. M. S.	5.00
Long Beach Church	63.01
Freemont Church	4.00

Total .....$118.01

GRAND TOTAL .....$197.01

HENRY RINEHART,
Treasurer of Home.

THE GREATER WE BUILD THE MORE FOUNDATION WE MUST LAY

We are building

A GREATER BRETHERN CHURCH IN THE WORLD

Therefore

We Must Build a Greater Foundation to Carry It

HOME MISSIONS ARE THE FOUNDATION BUILDERS

Of the Brethren Denomination

THE FUTURE

Of Every Pastor, Every Seminary Student, Every Missionary;

THE FUTURE

Of Ashland College, Our Brethren Publishing Company, Our Standard Theological Seminary, Our Foreign Missions

STANDS OR FALLS

With the Kind of Support the Brethren People Give to the

THANKSGIVING OFFERING!!

If Present World Conditions are Tragic to Our Economic Situation

WHAT WILL THE HARVEST BE IF WE ALLOW SUCH CONDITIONS TO ENTER AND DEMORALIZE THE WORK OF CHRIST? !!

The Walls of Jerusalem were Built in Troublous Times
But That Was the Time to Build

THESE ARE THE TIMES TO BUILD FOR THE FUTURE

When Others have Ceased to build, or Fear to Do So
Let Us Glorify Our Lord With a Greater Thanksgiving Offering

R. PAUL MILLER, Secretary-Treasurer,
The Home Mission Board of the Brethren Church

VOL. LIV
Number 44

November 12
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

THE WIDOW'S MITE

Hugo Meith

The Lord measures our gift by what we have left after we have given.
In our giving for Home Missions, dare we approach the measure of the WIDOW'S GIFT?

Who can tell what such consecration would mean for the church?

"Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

HOME MISSION OFFERING—SPECIAL NUMBER TWO

The Tobacco Evil

By J. A. Wm. Johnson, M. D., Newton, Ia.

Our cigaret advertisements seem to convey the idea that physicians recommend and advise the use of tobacco, especially in the form of cigarets, by man, woman or child. It is simply too bad that a noble profession such as that of medicine should be made the goat by commercial corporations organized to coin millions by taking advantage of man's uncontrolled appetites. The writer was asked a few weeks ago why so many physicians smoked. His answer was that a lot of fools had studied medicine.

It is pathetic to see a professing Christian get out of the choir-loft, and retire to the smoking-room, after the morning song service in our recognized churches. It is equally pathetic to see a young man light his cigaret on the church steps after the morning service. As a physician I am always downhearted to see the future motherhood of our society light her cigaret after the meal hour.

Tobacco is a plant, Nicotiano Tabacum of the order of Solanacca. It includes the deadly Nightshade family, henbane and bitter-sweet, all powerful poisons. It also contains the common potato and tomato, which are wholesome foods.

History: Prior to the middle of the sixteenth century, the use of tobacco was confined to the American Indian. The Spaniards began to cultivate it in 1560. Smoking spread rapidly throughout the world, although opposed by governments. In Russia the nose was cut off from smokers.

Composition: Tobacco contains a powerful narcotic poison, nicotine, which resembles prussic acid in rapidity of its action when a fatal dose is taken. The United States Department of Agriculture gives .94 per cent to 5. per cent of nicotine present in home-grown tobacco after fermentation. Aside from nicotine, tobacco also contains small quantities of related substances such as nicotianin, said to give the flavor peculiar to tobacco, and likewise a volatile oil during the preparation process. On heating, tobacco gives rise to pyridin (a substance often used to denature alcohol) picolin, collidin, carbonic acid, ammonit, marsh gas, cyanogen and hydrocyanic acid, carbon monoxide, coal gas and furfural.

Furfural is a constituent of fusel oil, which is so much dreaded in poor whiskey. The smoke of a single cigaret may contain as much furfural as two ounces of whiskey.

Pyridin and furfural are factors in the drug effect of tobacco. Painstaking experiments by high authorities have shown nicotine in tobacco smoke, and when we stop to consider that there is enough nicotine in one cigar to kill two men, it is not strange that enough is absorbed from the smoke passing over the mucous membrane of our nose and lungs to produce distinct physiologic effect. The United States Department of Agriculture found in tobacco smoke about 30 per cent of nicotine originally present in the tobacco.

The effect of chewing and smoking are the same identically: mild collapse, pallor of skin, nausea, sweating, and perhaps vomiting, diarrhoea, muscular weakness, faintness, dizziness, and rise in blood pressure, followed by lower blood pressure.

Effects on animals: A Russian investigator, Zhebrowski, compelled rabbits to smoke cigaret tobacco for six to eight hours daily. Some died after a month, others grew tolerant just as do habitual smokers. Those that died showed changes in the nerve ganglia of the heart. Some rabbits were killed after five months of smoking, and showed hardening of blood vessels just the same as if nicotine had been injected.

Nicotine in man shows brief stimulation of brain and spinal cord followed by depression. That a healthy man, who never used tobacco, can do better mental or physical work than one accustomed to tobacco is constantly shown in our football teams. The records of six leading institutions show 58 to 80 per cent of non-smokers successful in

"Have we become so soft that we refuse to sacrifice in a time of stress to hold the fort for Christ?"

"THIS THANKSGIVING OFFERING WILL TELL!"

R. PAUL MILLER
Secretary-Treasurer of
The Home Mission Board

(NOTE—Brother Miller's cut arrived too late to run with his article, so we give it space here. We are sorry not to have been able to secure the cuts of all special writers for the two Home Mission numbers.—Ed.)

competition, while of the smokers only 60 to 70 per cent are successful.

Prof. Fred J. Pack, of the University of Utah, has presented statistics in this connection, and his conclusions are as follows:

1. Only half as many smokers as non-smokers are successful in the tryout for football squads.
2. In the case of the able-bodied men, smoking is associated with loss of lung capacity amounting to practically 19 per cent.
3. Smoking is invariably associated with low scholarship.

Dr. W. J. Mayo calls attention to the fact that, according to his observation, research scholars who smoke cigarets have not done well.

In experiments on animals nicotine extract from tobacco and inhalation of tobacco smoke have produced hardening of the arteries. Clinical observation by some of the world's best authorities indicate that the same conditions are brought about in man by heavy smoking. Disturbance of blood pressure, rapid action of heart, pain in the region of the heart, are important effects.

Few people realize that so many ingredients in tobacco and tobacco smoke are deadly poisons. One drop of nicotine on the unbroken skin of a rabbit will produce death. Two drops on the tongue of a dog or cat will prove fatal. Babies have been killed from a bottle of milk mixture in which some tobacco had been accidentally spilled. Vital statistics show that diseases of the heart and circulation are increasing in this country, where our per-capita consumption has increased rapidly, while in the United Kingdom these diseases are decreasing and there is no material increase in the use of tobacco. In 1885 the United States used five pounds of tobacco per capita; in 1914 over seven pounds per capita. In England the per capita used was only two pounds.

For years we have been sympathizing with China because of her opium habit. We have in this country the tobacco habit, with all its poisons, equally undermining and destructive of character and morals as well as of body.

Charles I. expressed his opinion about tobacco smoking as follows: "A custom loathsome to the eyes, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and the black, stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

Fellow Christians, the data in this article are true and scientific. They are taken from "How to Live," by Fisher & Fisk, authorized by the Hygienic Reference Board of the Life Extension Institute, Inc., numbering among its members such men as Wm. H. Taft, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, Maj. Gen. Wm. C. Corgas, Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, at one time dean of the Medical School of the University of Michigan, and many others.

Why should we permit the tobacco inter-
(Continued on page 15)

IN THIS NUMBER

What Will Send the Church Forward in Missions—Editor, .....	3
New Zealand Sets An Example—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
What This Thanksgiving Offering Determines—R. Paul Miller, .....	5
The Dangers of Retrenchment—H. F. Stuckman, .....	5
Forward or Backward—Which—A. L. Linn, .....	6
Why Every Sunday School Should Have a Part—E. L. Miller, .....	7
The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel—A. L. Lantz, .....	8
Krypton, Kentucky—Lyda Carter, ..	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	10
The Pastor a Teacher—N. V. Leatherman, .....	11
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	12
November—Stewardship Month—H. W. Koontz, .....	12
News from the Field, .....	13, 14
Announcements, .....	15
Our Little Readers, .....	15
Our Readers' Views, .....	15
The Brethren's Home Emergency Corner, .....	15

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

What Will Send the Church Forward in Missions

And is this a time to talk about going forward in missions? Would it not be all one might rightly expect if the church should merely hold steady and prevent any slipping back? Undeniably, from a human standpoint, it is not a good time to talk about pressing forward, much less is it actually to go forward. But it is not man's work, but God's. Missions is not a humanly devised undertaking but one that has its origin in a divine commission. And its success is dependent, not upon human wisdom and power, but upon the power and wisdom and resources of almighty God. Is God's arm shortened, or his wisdom limited, by such obstacles as a financial depression presents? Nay, verily! He began his church in poverty; he can advance it in poverty. The only limitation is the limitation of the faith of men and their timidity in laying hold on the resources of God. What then, is necessary to progress? What will send the church forward in missions?

It would help wonderfully if the church could be brought to experience a more widespread faithfulness in stewardship. It is a lack of funds that is hindering the progress of the missionary enterprise in the homeland, as well as in the foreign, men are telling us. If we only had the money, what might we not do in the way of extending the cause of Christ and building new churches! And that there is a lack of funds indicates a failure at the point of stewardship. It is not that Christian men, members of the church, do not have enough of the world's store of wealth to finance the kingdom activities. More wealth is in Christian hands than in non-Christian. The trouble is that so small a portion of it is dedicated to Christ and used according to his will. Instead of using their possessions to the glory of God and recognizing the implications of divine ownership, all too many live and act as if their material possessions were their very own and they were never to be required to give an accounting. Faithfulness in stewardship would fill the mission treasuries with funds in abundance.

Church loyalty would count for much in missionary progress. The primary motive in home missionary effort is the building of churches, the extension of the denominational borders. Through the centuries Christian men and women have been desirous of extending the voice of organized Christianity of the type in which they believed, and to the extent that members loved their church sufficiently to help in propagating it, missionary effort has succeeded. The more rapid advance of Christianity depends largely upon building up a more vital spirit of loyalty in the hearts of church members for their church and the message it proclaims. The idea, prevalent in many quarters, that "one church is as good as another," never made for a strong home missionary movement. But conviction and devotion have done much. And today, where men and women really love their church, are strongly convinced as to the importance of its distinctive characteristics and are wholeheartedly given over to the promotion of its welfare, there progress is being realized; the call for missionary funds is not being sounded in vain and missionaries and evangelists are not required to sit in idleness and without appointment. Church loyalty helps greatly to advance the cause of Home Missions.

Prayer is an important factor in Home Mission progress, as it is in every undertaking for Christ. The very first thing the Christian worker must learn is that he is God-dependent, and can do nothing of himself. Prayer is the means of bringing to the Christian's aid the divine help of which he stands in need. Prayer was so important to the spread of the Gospel at the beginning of the church that Jesus would not allow his disciples to take a step toward the accomplishment of that all-important commission until they had spent ten days in prayer. And it is no less important to us in our task than it was to them in theirs. Pray, if you want to advance the cause of Home Missions. Pray for the conversion of souls, for the building of churches and for the giving of funds.

Pray; it is an effective means, and every earnest Christian can make use of it.

The cultivation of a larger appreciation of spiritual values as against material values would go a long way toward the advancement of Home Missions. Christian people generally place so large an estimate on the worth of material things that it is difficult to sacrifice them when spiritual realities are at stake. Covetous eyes are cast upon the comforts and luxuries of homes, upon houses and lands, upon stocks and bonds, upon automobiles and radios; these are all too precious to part with, even though some such sacrifice might seem necessary to the larger development and extension of the church. Our hearts are too much set on the material things of life. We have not begun to get the spirit of Jesus until we are willing to deny ourselves of some of these things in the interest of the larger growth of the church.

More outstanding still as a requisite for sending the church forward in Home Missions is the revival of religious zeal in the hearts of church members. Lukewarmness and indifference must give place to the heat of passion for saving the lost and giving the light of the Gospel to those who are sitting in spiritual darkness and neglect. Unconcern is a spiritual crime in view of the doom of those who are in sin. Those who have known the saving grace of Christ are responsible for seeking the souls of those who are unsaved. Every Christian is his unsaved brother's keeper and cannot evade his responsibility in the sight of God. That fact needs to be more generally realized and the hearts of Christian men and women stirred with a sense of their duty. The church must become aroused if its borders are to be enlarged. The missionary advance must begin with the revival of religious zeal in the individual Christian.

If there is to be a moving of the church with a new zeal for missions, there must be a separation of the individual from the life of the world. Only as a Christian lives the separated life, having his thoughts and affections centered in Christ and his spirit and conduct above the spirit and ways of the world, can he be an effective instrument for the saving of men and give power to the church in its effort to extend the borders of our Zion. It may seem to some like a far cry from the separated life to Home Missions, we are considering vital principles and not the superficial problems. The church that is filled with members whose lives are guided by the principles and practices of the world, who are involved in the world's schemes and ambitions, and who are seeking the world's pleasure and profit and power,—such a church will not be able to bear a faithful, fearless and effective witness before the world. Aggressive missionary endeavor by such a church would be folly as well as impossible. Only a spiritual church will seek and be able to achieve spiritual victory.

New Zealand Sets an Example

New Zealand has been passing through serious times and the sufferings from unemployment brought about such conditions as to cause grave anxiety.

It is interesting to note that the very conditions existing brought about a movement toward closer fellowship among the churches. It was proposed that a united Communion Service should be held as an expression of unity. The four leading Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches participated. The great service was held in the City Hall. Two thousand Christians participated in a holy, happy feast. At the conclusion an offering was taken up for the Mayor's Unemployment Fund. May the day come again when that Sacred Supper will manifest anew the unity rather than mark the divisions of the Church. Thus writes The Evangelical Christian.

We join our esteemed exchange in the wish, but add that when "that Sacred Supper" shall "manifest anew the unity rather than mark the divisions of the church," it will be when the churches have returned with childlike faith and obedience to the whole of that richly significant service in which our Lord engaged with his disciples on that last night before his crucifixion. And we dare say that if the divided body of the Lord Jesus knew the joy of full obedience, neither pride nor prejudice would longer keep them from the Feetwashing and the Love Feast.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

We cannot serve as Christ served until we learn to love as he loved.

PRAY AS YOU GIVE TO HOME MISSIONS. Pray for yourself, most of all. Pray that you may be enabled to match your love for your Savior and Lord with your gift of money for the advancement of his cause in the homeland.

Mrs. Orville D. Jobson gives us another chapter in her folk story series, and this time the character is very real, the story of a bright African boy who became a trusted missionary. We believe our little readers will be glad for the privilege of becoming acquainted with Luc Yamanenzi.

Brother A. V. Kimmell, a member of the Brethren's Home Board, writes of the encouraging response made to appeals in behalf of the home for the aged at Flora, Indiana, but indicates that the needs are not yet fully met and asks in a fine spirit of consideration for other causes, that Brethren people do not fail to remember the Brethren's Home with a share of their gifts.

Brother J. L. Bowman, pastor at Linwood, Maryland, reports some of the high spots in their church life in recent months—their Daily Vacation Bible School, Brethren's Day event nearby, Harvest Home and Homecoming. The most recent event of note was the week of preparatory services for the communion. During that series of meetings five adults were added to the church by baptism.

President E. E. Jacobs informs us in his college newsletter that Ashland College is to be "on the air" through the courtesy of Ohio State University. The date is November 19th, from 8:30 to 9:30 P. M. and the station is W E A O. President Jacobs is to give the address and Dr. Haun is to have charge of the program. College Homecoming Day was celebrated on November 5th with a football game, a dramatic program and the presence of a goodly number of alumni.

Christian Endeavorers will remember that, according to the program recently published on their page, that November is "Stewardship Month." Appropos Brother H. W. Koontz, Stewardship Superintendent, has a good message this week. Should Endeavorers begin tithing during this depression? He raises the question. Read what he says. And, by the way, we warn you that Brother C. D. Whitmer will be asking you for a report on "Organization Month," which was October. If you did anything, write him about it.

Brother L. G. Wood is finding his courageous and persevering leadership of years in the church at Fort Scott, Kansas, is bearing fruit, even in these hard times. We have learned previously of the gradual building up in unity and strength of his membership, and of the better outlook. Attendance at the regular services continues to be encouraging and the departmental activities are showing progress. One new member was recently added to the church by baptism and two others await baptism.

Dr. W. H. Beachler, pastor of the church at Gratis, Ohio, writes that the depression has visited his people, as it has many other churches, and he shows the mark of the genuine shepherd of God's people when he shares their hardships with them. This is the case with many others of our splendid pastors, we are glad to say, and we believe that God will cause their works to be crowned with all the greater success because of their willingness to sacrifice for the cause of Christ. The Sunday school and Intermediate Endeavor society are worthy of special mention because of their aggressive, faithful work. The training and development of the teen-aged young people is a work that is especially dear to the heart of Brother Beachler, and in it he has had marked success.

It was the fifth campaign that Brother R. Paul Miller as evangelist and Brother Freeman Ankrum as pastor have engaged in together, and as a result the church at Flora, Indiana, has been strengthened by a revival of its membership and by the addition of eleven new members, eight of which were received by confession and baptism. One person who accepted Christ will go to another church. It was two hard workers together and God blessed their efforts, even in the midst of conditions that were difficult. We suppose the political bombast that has been burning up the radios and resounding from the town halls during recent weeks has not been very conducive to religious revivalism. That, added to the spirit of worldliness, which, like the poor, we have with us always, makes success come hard. Brother Miller sees a great field at this place, and a fine work being done under the leadership of the pastor, especially in his care of the young people.

APPRECIATE THE CHURCH PAPER

"I do enjoy and appreciate your paper very much, and pray the Lord's continued blessing upon its ministry." These words were written in a recent letter to the editor by one of our readers who is most earnestly engaged in the Lord's work. A goodly number of other similar comments might be quoted, but we are not given to extensive quotations of the kind. We will venture to say that we have been encouraged more frequently this year by kind words from appreciative readers than any year for a long time. Even those who have been made to suffer so dreadfully by the depression that they have been unable to renew their subscription, have in many cases expressed fine appreciation of the Evangelist and keen regret at having to drop it. One sister wrote that she and her husband had dropped their newspaper, had their telephone taken out, were leaving their car stand in the garage for want of gas and had denied themselves in a number of other ways before thinking of stopping their church paper. From another home comes the word: "We are hard pressed, but we cannot do without our church paper." We have been glad for the expressions of appreciation we have received and have determined to attempt to make next year's paper still more widely appreciated. We cannot at this time tell you of all the things in store, but a few are definitely decided upon and may be announced. We have secured the consent of Dr. Louis S. Bauman of Long Beach, California to contribute weekly installments to our "Bible Study Department" and he has decided to write an extended series on "Spirits and the Spirit World." Professor Stuckey will continue his valued studies of the books of the Bible and Professor McClain will continue to favor us with his popular "Signs of the Times." A new feature which we think will prove of wide-spread interest is a page to be devoted to short editorials by ministers of the brotherhood. This will result in making the Evangelist more definitely and directly expressive of the thought of the brotherhood than we have ever been able to make it. Other plans are still under way.

We are confident that the Evangelist of 1933 will be not less but more widely appreciated and valuable as a church organ than it has been during the past year. We are passing on this word in advance in order that our present readers may be inspired to go out among their friends in the church (and out of it, too) and secure new subscribers. We want many new members to be added to our Evangelist family by the first of the year, and we must depend on our friends among the ministers and laity of our congregations to help us realize this ambition. The larger the circulation of the paper, the greater will be its service to the church. The more you help us the better we can help you.

Sample copies of The Evangelist will be sent on request to those who wish to try for new subscriptions. See our club rate offers elsewhere.

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

For a revival meeting at Fort Scott, Kansas, beginning November 15th with Brother J. S. Cook as evangelist and Brother L. G. Wood as pastor.

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

What This Thanksgiving Offering Determines

By R. Paul Miller, Secretary-Treasurer Home Board

FIRST, IT WILL DETERMINE IN A LARGE MEASURE THE FUTURE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH.

We are far from starting any new works. We are fighting with our backs to the wall to maintain what we have. Any recession at all from last year will mean the actual closing of some of these young churches. The closing of any of these may have a lasting effect on all. Often the pause that is planned to be but temporary, becomes a permanent check on the whole. It isn't the actual first loss, which may be small; it is the direction we take. That is what ruined Lot. It wasn't the first step he took, it was the direction of it. It is the first pebble that starts the landslide. Discouragement and defeat spread more swiftly than the spirit of victory! This Thanksgiving Offering must raise the shout of victory, not defeat.

SECOND, IT WILL DETERMINE OUR APPRECIATION OF THE NOBLE SACRIFICES AND SUCCESSFUL WORK AGAINST ODDS BY OUR MEN IN CHARGE OF THESE YOUNG CHURCHES.

Many a good man has been ruined by lack of appreciation and encouragement on the part of those he looked to for help. These men are fighting against heavy odds that never appear in print. Last year they fought so courageously and effectively that in spite of conditions our Home Mission work saw its greatest year of progress. Will we now desert these men by refusing to lay down our gifts of sacrifice alongside their lives?

THIRD, IT WILL DETERMINE HOW REAL IS THE LOVE OF BRETHREN PEOPLE FOR THEIR LORD.

Once it was that the needs of the church could be easily carried on without sacrifice. Today there are no profits out of which gifts can be made. Today it means sacrifice! These are the days that are showing up how real our love for Christ is. Many are going to pieces and refusing to sacrifice. Many are advocating closing up the church in order to save money. Numbers of those who have lost thousands of dollars in bank closings and other business failures are now trying to close up the church to make up for it! Some say because they have lost money they can not now give to the Lord's work. But when they had their money they did not give! In these days before our Lord returns there is a sifting going on. Trials are proving the genuineness of the faith of many. This Thanksgiving Offering will show the sacrifices of those who love Christ. It will also reveal those who do not. These days of testing are telling a tragic story!

FOURTH, IT WILL REVEAL THE KIND OF CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS FOUND IN THE BRETHREN CHURCH.

The sacrifice of money was a small item in the devotion of our fathers for their faith. It was quickly made. They were stood before magistrates and witnessed a good confession. They languished in hellish dungeons. They were driven from their homes and native land. They sailed the stormy seas to a rockbound shore that they might be free to hold the faith we love. They left their bones in an unfriendly land as a testimony to their love for Christ and loyalty to him. But, they preserved the faith. Now, are we worthy to succeed them with its trust? Have we become so soft that we refuse to sacrifice in a time of stress to hold the fort for Christ? This Thanksgiving Offering will tell!

EXPLANATIONS MUST BE MADE AT THE JUDGMENT BAR OF CHRIST!

Berne Indiana.

The Dangers of Retrenchment in Our Missionary Program

By H. F. Stuckman, Member Home Mission Board

It would be false assumption to say that nobody thinks seriously of the problems of our various church boards, excepting the boards themselves. Yet I have often wondered just how many do plan, pray and give with us in order that we may carry on our work of world evangelism. One of the hard things for a group the size of ours, is to rightly emphasize all our interests to the best advantage of all. A larger denomination would have some advantage over us in this respect. The more folks there are to help the various causes of a denomination the more apt all are to have proper assistance. Our history has been to swing more or less violently toward a few, and neglect the many. In one year we are inspired to buy a Publishing House, the next year a certain emphasis may be put upon education or missions. So we swing violently in behind these various movements, and for the time neglect the Old Folks' Home, Superannuated Ministers or whatever the case may be. It may be that some centralized authority will of necessity have to be established through which these interests will receive their support. It seems to me such a move would be a decided advantage, especially at such seasons of stringency, and too, with a group the size of ours.

I think that our Home Mission program has suffered at times, because of the over emphasis of some other need we may have faced at that particular time. This however must be borne in mind always, that not for a single moment dare we relax in the building and sustaining of churches at home. The moment we do this, that very moment we strike down the goose that lays the golden egg. (This figure to be interpreted literally). Whenever our work at home becomes anemic, we are powerless to do other than lose out in all directions. This vision of the very existence of things has not yet been held by any large number of our membership. There can be no time, now or ever, when we can do aught, but give our whole hearted support to Home Missions. THE CHURCH WHICH DOES SO WILL ACT AS UNWISELY AS THE NOVICE WHO WILL SAVE THE HIGH TENSION LINE, AND DESTROY THE POWER PLANT WITH THE IDEA THAT HE DOES NOT NEED IT, IF HE HAS THE FORMER. There are churches who in both theory and practice are doing this very thing. Only one end can come of this, that end will be swift and certain: THE SERIOUS CURTAILMENT OF OUR ENTIRE DENOMINATIONAL FUTURE. Any one who knows our brotherhood at the present time, will understand that we are at the parting of the ways. Some of us have plead through our publications, and otherwise for a re-emphasis of healthful Home Mission activity, until we are tempted to discouragement. WE, AS A CHURCH, LARGELY LEFT THE SOURCE OF SUPPLY NAMELY, THE HOME MISSION FIELD, TO TAKE CARE OF ITSELF, WHILE WE HAVE UNWITTINGLY GONE FORTH TO OTHER THINGS, WITHOUT MUCH SERIOUS THOUGHT ABOUT WHAT WAS HAPPENING. We now stand ready to have many of our churches which in former years contributed of life and money to our work, closed for want of proper self-sacrificing leadership and encouragement. If this should go on there will be no Foreign Mission problems, nor Educational problems, for we will have done away with the source of supply, and of necessity these activities will go down in death and decay.

H. F. STUCKMAN

Who resigned from the presidency of the Home Board at the late National Conference.

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

I have said all of this, that you may see that it is of the greatest importance that whatever else we curtail these days we dare not curtail our Home Mission program without suffering seriously thereby for another decade. IT'S A MATTER OF PUTTING FIRST THINGS FIRST. Members of the Brethren Church don't need superior intelligence to understand the above line of reasoning. Perilous times are at hand for our denomination; we must strengthen the hands of the only organization that can deal with these local church problems—OUR HOME MISSION BOARD—and this Board is prepared with a program as never before to carry our work on to a larger brotherhood, by building new churches, and giving wise leadership to those who need our counsel and help. This is our case. This Thanksgiving time challenges us to the greatest sacrificial giving we have ever done—will we meet it in valiant and willing sacrifice, or will we strike out the light that alone can guide and help us? It's for you to determine.

Elkhart, Indiana.

Forward or Backward---Which?

By Archie L. Lynn, Pastor, Laverne, California

The Brethren Church from its very inception has been unalterably opposed to the backward action. Her aversion to supineness is seen even in the way she baptizes. It is too late to start backsliding. If we start that kind of business, it is a sure sign that we have joined the ten spies in their God-dishonoring attitude and like theirs, our terminus shall be Kades Barnea. Retreat, no sir. Retrogression, stagnation. "Let it not be mentioned among you as it does not become the saints. "Let it not be mentioned among you as it does not become the saints. Progression, Expansion, Forward, these are the words that should characterize the speech of the Christian.

Don't forget Mrs. Lot, she suffered because of the backward look. Eli's backward movement was just as unsuccessful as Mrs. Lot's. The writer of the Epistle of Hebrews 10:38 reminds us that God has no pleasure in those who draw back. Like Paul, "So forgetting the things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before—I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

We are living in a time when we hear on every hand talk of curtailing expense. Reduction of budget, recalling missionaries. Lack of funds. We just closed the Los Angeles County Fair. 21,000 more in attendance this year than last. People seem to have money for the things they desire. Remember Brethren, now is the time to show our faith. Jesus is abundantly able. With Christ there is no crisis. Don't forget we are to follow the direction of the Holy Spirit,—Not the "spirit of the age."

Are we like Saul "hiding behind the stuff"? when the call for spiritual leadership is so insistent? Are we like Jonah running away from duty in time of need? Are we like Elijah under the juniper tree, discouraged ready to give up? Hear ye, the words of the Master again. "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

The book of the Acts is certainly a book of movement—Forward movement at that. Its threefold division is eloquent testimony to that fact. Acts may be summed up in three words. Ascension, Descension, Extension. The ascension of Christ, the descension of the Spirit, and the extension of the gospel. Christ has gone up, the Spirit has come down, our duty is to go out. The logical effect of the reception of spiritual power should be movement in the direction of world evangelization. With Christ at the right hand of the throne for us, the Holy Spirit come to live in us—bringing illumination, direction and dynamic—and with the world before us with its tragic need, what is there left for us to do but go forward?

If we are to go forward, from whence shall we start? It seems to me that Calvary is the logical starting place. The place of sacrifice. It cost God the best that he had to make propitiation for sins. He is the propitiation for our sins, also for the sins of the whole world. Here is the most cogent and persuasive appeal in the Bible for missionary enterprise. Other appeals are anemic and futile. Calvary is God's supreme achievement; his costliest, unspeakable gift. Do you know anything about his passion? He ransomed me, this is what is fundamental in the Christian religion, and it is this we must recover if we would recover its original expansive power. If you believe in Christ then you believe in missions at home and abroad. The only correlative of such a Christ is the whole world. "I am debtor to all."

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

How far shall we go Forward? To the uttermost parts of the earth. Figure this out for yourself. Are we doing a good job at home? Beginning at Jerusalem. Not stopping at Jerusalem. Regions beyond. Some job! But the Master precludes every excuse by saying, "I am with you always, even to the end of the age."

How Long shall we go Forward? Until he comes. Luke 19:13. Let us take Jesus at his word, "that we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming."

Finally, Forward Movements initiated by the Holy Ghost cost tremendously. It cost God his best. What has it cost you? Have we really made a sacrifice for Jesus? Even in this time of depression, have we really sacrificed to extend the cause of Christ? Are we laying it away, or are we laying it up? Remember the request of Alexander the Great. He asked to be buried with his hands hanging out of the casket. He wanted the world to know that he took nothing away with him. Neither are we. Invest in salvation of souls. Permanent and large dividends are assured. Now is the time for the Brethren churches to imitate the churches of Macedonia. No use to pray if you refuse to pay. Your prayer never goes heaven high, if it does not go pocketbook deep. These people gave out of their abysmal penury. Liberal, spontaneous, spiritual giving. Hey, Brethren, suppose we read 2 Cor. 8:1-15 on our knees. Then go on and read 1 Cor. 16:2, and let the Holy Spirit speak authoritatively through this portion of the word to our hearts. If so, I believe that the coming months if the Lord tarries, shall witness a magnificent forward movement in the Brethren churches in evangelistic and missionary enterprise. In spite of the financial depression, there shall be generous expression.

Our Master has given us a worldwide commission. Forward to the regions beyond, beginning at Jerusalem—the home field.

Why Every Sunday School Should Have a Part in the Thanksgiving Offering This Year

By E. L. Miller, Vice-President National Sunday School Association

I feel that it is a foregone conclusion that every church in the brotherhood will lift the best offering possible for Home Missions this year. There is great need on the part of the Board if they are going to hold what we have gained. But who is going to be satisfied with simply doing that? I am in for progress, and feel that a church that has been dubbed Progressive should want to live up to such a suggestive title. There are many places in this land of ours where the Brethren should move in and possess the ground for God and his Kingdom. But unless those of us who claim to be interested in doing that thing do it, it is not going to be done. Many of the older and larger denominations can hardly hold what they have gained, and anyhow, I never did feel that they were interested enough in us and our program to furnish us with the sinews of progress so that we might claim the places mentioned for the Brethren church. It is up to us to do it or it will not be done. So I feel that every church should do a real job of digging down, even though you do scrape bottom once for God, so that the offering may be encouraging to the Board and the workers who are out on the firing line sacrificing for the church and God.

But more yet, I would also like to see every Sunday school also doing its part for this offering. Where I have been pastor during the quarter century of my ministry, we have always had the Sunday school go the limit in making both Foreign and Home Missions offerings the best possible. I feel it is right to do so. There are many in the Sunday school who are interested in the program of the church who would have little or no opportunity to give in the regular church offering. This is because some do not remain for the preaching services, and in some places preaching services are not regular and the offering may be either neglected altogether or done in a half-hearted manner. This is because of the irregularity and not because of lack of interest altogether. Then too, in the Sunday school we say we do the teaching work of the church, at least in large measure. Well, is not missionary teaching a part of that done? And is there any better way to teach than by putting into action the things being taught? We all know that to teach a thing and then give no opportunity for expressing the thing taught is to say the least "Love's labor lost." The young people are all in the Sunday school and many of them are not in the church and to give them the opportunity to give to the cause that they are taught is so vital to the progress of the church is only right. Even the little tots in their classes in the Sunday school can be stirred up to real effort for missions while they may not grasp the idea as presented in the preaching services and surely they do not have the same enthusiasm as that which can be stirred up among them in their more closely knit together class. I feel that every soul connected with the church and Sunday school should be given an opportunity to show thanks to God for his benefits to them, and the Thanksgiving offering for home missions would be the finest way in which they could do this. As God has helped them so they should be taught they should help others and this is one of the great chances of the year to put this across.

I am also convinced that if the Sunday school gets back of this offering like it should there will be not only blessings for the other fellow, but there will also be blessings for that school. The Lord still loves a cheerful giver, for I have no record of that portion of Scripture having been repealed, and I am persuaded that the Sunday school as well as the church should want the blessing of the Lord pronounced on all who will cast their bread upon the waters. It surely will return unto them many fold, even though not always in material ways. The enthusiasm engendered in urging the Sunday school offering, advertising it among the classes, and even in reporting to both the school and church what has been done is worth more to all concerned than the money involved. It ties folks up closer with the program of church extension and gives them that feeling of interestedness that comes when one invests in a thing financially. They will want to see it go and will work and pray as well as give better and more freely to see it go. Indeed, by all means, have the Sunday school arrange its work so that a real rousing Thanksgiving offering for Home Missions will be given by them. They will thus have part not only in studying the Word but also in seeing that every creature gets the same opportunity as themselves, and especially those of their own beloved home land. Not only is the church the best friend of the young people today, but it also looks for them to be its strength tomorrow. And for this to be made true the young people must be given a very material part in the program of the church today and that means that they should participate in the missionary portion of that program. So let us through the Sunday school, the place where the young people learn most about God and his Kingdom, give these young people the urge and opportunity to present their portion of substance to the carrying on of Kingdom activities in the home land.

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

Maurertown, Virginia.

The Appalling Need for the Whole Gospel in Our Community

By Albert L. Lantz

We live today in a world of turmoil. To a great extent this unrestful condition is caused by the moral and spiritual conditions existing in each community. Some communities are better, and some are worse than others. If the spiritual is what it ought to be, the moral will be gauged accordingly. Immediately arise some questions.

What about communities in which Brethren churches are located?

Are the spiritual and moral conditions what they ought to be?

Are they wielding such an influence for good that are noticeable?

If not then we ought to awaken from our slumber and meet the challenge of the hour. This we are trying to accomplish. Progress has been slow, but steady.

The need for the "WHOLE GOSPEL" as taught by the Brethren church (in the city of Spokane) is the need of the hour. Truly, we have many beautiful and well organized churches with eloquent pastors. Nevertheless hundreds of souls are being lost, because, in many of our churches apostasy has set in, and people do not hear the full gospel, therefore, they do not know the real Christ of God. Hence the opportunity is great. "Why?"

Because in many of our churches the whole Bible is not being taught. Hundreds of boys and girls which are the hope of any Christian work are not in Sunday school. Scores of men and women and parents many of them church members, have no regard for the Lord's day or the church. (THIS IS CHARACTERISTIC OF THE NORTHWEST). Judging by the number of church members, and the number of pupils enrolled in our Sunday schools, not more than 18% of the population in Spokane are in church and Sunday school!

Brethren, do you not see the opportunity we have in a great western city? "I DO." Therefore, I am convinced that the Brethren message is such a message as will win, even in the great northwest.

The struggle will be hard and long. We know no retreat. Will the brotherhood help us with their prayers and means that we might continue on telling the story of the crucified, resurrected, and the ascended Christ?

The writer has come in contact with many hungry souls. They want to know what we believe and teach. When once they are led into the light of the Gospel and become ready to receive it, they become strong workers for Christ and the church.

A young lady became interested in the services. One day she asked the writer if she could unite with the church. This opened the way, as she was brought up in the Christian Science faith. The way of salvation was explained, as well as the teaching of the church. About two weeks later in a Sunday morning service she came and gave her heart to the Lord and made the great confession, was baptized, and united with the church.

Brethren, God is not slack concerning his promises.

His word will not return void. Therefore, a few extra dollars in the "THANKSGIVING OFFERING" will go a long way in helping Brethren Mission churches to deliver the whole gospel to many hungry, discouraged, and lost souls.

Spokane, Washington.

Krypton, Kentucky

By Lyda Carter, Missionary

It is a pleasure to send you a few words as a message from our work at Krypton. We are again here without a pastor. This situation, of course, has many disadvantages, and is far from being the ideal way of carrying on the work. But, since it cannot be helped, we are doing the best we can, and trusting God to work things out according to his plan. Things look quite hopeful in spite of conditions. There is an excellent spirit among our school children. They are interested in their daily Bible work. They ask questions and make remarks about scriptural points which inspires us to do our best in teaching them. There are several in our school who, we believe, will some day be useful in Christ's service if they could only remain a few more years under Christian training. Frequently the students are allowed to lead the chapel service. Some of them beg for the privilege of so doing.

Several of our young people have given special music for services. Last Sunday evening we had a mixed quartette. This was quite a thrilling event, for we have tried so long to have something of the kind. Two of our young ladies have pleased us very much by singing duets.

ALBERT LANTZ
Pastor, Spokane, Washington.

One Offering at Thanksgiving---and That to be for Home Missions

The continued interest since our pastor left is just another mark of God's blessing on his own work. Some day the seeds sown by Brother Gehman and other pastors will bear fruit. The Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and prayer meeting attendance seems not to have dropped. This seems to us remarkable—a work of God.

Our Sunday school at Lick Branch on Sunday afternoons is not largely attended, but those who come are fairly regular. That is what counts, and by the way, regularity of attendance is rare in this country. So we thank God for those at Lick Branch. Particularly do we praise him for one woman. She is the only married woman who comes. Her opportunities for Bible study have been meagre, but she always comes, always knows her lesson, and always nods and comments in commendation of the teacher's remarks. (You who are workers can understand what such an attitude means to us.)

Our Saturday afternoon Christian Endeavor at Chavies, four miles away, has greatly fallen in attendance since its organization a few months ago. But there, as at Lick Branch, are the faithful few. There are eight or ten down there that are worth working for. So unless something unforeseen occurs, every Saturday afternoon this winter will see me riding my good old "Bill" down to my little youngsters at Chavies. Last Saturday we started a scripture verse contact. I promised a C. E. pin to all who would learn a list of verses with their references. If only the Word of God can be planted in those little hearts! I know what a blessing it has been to my life, that one time I was encouraged to memorize Scripture, and was given a C. E. pin as a reward.

One of our great needs here is that of used clothing. We still try to help the people with what clothing we can get. Excepting for two good bags which came from California lately, it has been weeks and weeks since we received any clothing or any call for bags. Some of the people are in such straits that it will be very difficult for them to pass the winter if they cannot get things from us. Some of the clothing we exchange for food and coal and other necessities. We would appreciate it so if you could fill some bags for Krypton right away. They can use underwear (heavy), shoes, stockings, clothes for little boys, and dresses, mostly. Of course, the material things are not first in our minds, but often they help in accomplishing our ends.

Pray for us, please! We are so weak! Only God's hand can move things aright. May that Hand control. Best Thanksgiving cheer to you.

Krypton, Kentucky.

The Political Campaign Is Over

MILLIONS

Are Disappointed---But God Still Lives,

AND OUR CAMPAIGN FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

for the

Brethren Evangelist has just Started

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 90 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions.

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor

Church now renewing its list

$1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscriptions

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscription is one not now getting the paper.)

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Jonah I

The book of Jonah has been the center of as much discussion as the first four chapters of the book of Genesis. These two Old Testament writings have been misunderstood and maligned perhaps more than any others in the entire Bible. Yet, in spite of the varied opinions of men, the volumes remain inviolate. They are as new and as fresh as ever—still unimpaired and witnessing to the central facts of redemption and the reality of the spiritual life.

Who is Jonah?

The word Jonah means dove. From the beginning the conduct of the prophet reminds us of Noah's dove (Gen. 8:8, 9) seeking rest in vain, fleeing from Noah and then eventually returning to the ark of safety.

Jonah, as it has been intimated, was a prophet of Israel, a son of one named Amittai, and native of the city of Gath-hepher in Galilee. (Where are those Pharisees who alleged in Jesus' day: "Out of Galilee ariseth no prophet?" (John 7:52). Did they not remember Nahum and Malachi were from Galilee?). It was before the end of the reign of Jereboam II that Jonah foretold Israel's recovery of its borders from the entering of Hamath to the sea of the plain. (2 Kings 14:25; Jon. 1:1).

Is the Writing Historical?

The question of the historicity of Jonah is one which is easily settled for the average Christian. For the first thing, he reads the narrative and feels that the form of the book is historical and also that its characters are real flesh and real blood. For another thing, he concludes that Jonah is a real character living in the midst of real history. For yet another thing, he observes that Christ, the perfect God and the Perfect Man, is quoted as saying in Matthew's Gospel, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's (sea-monster's) body; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." (Matt. 12:39, 40; Luke 11:29, 30). Dr. Luke records the same statement. Apparently Jesus understood the writing of Jonah in historical terms. Finally, the Jews, including Josephus, accepted the narrative as an historic account. So also did the early and mediaeval church. Only within quite modern days have questions arisen relative to the historical reliability and authenticity of the book. However, these questions are easily answered.

The Fish Story

The fish or whale story, together with the other miraculous elements of the book, is magnified or minimized according to individual knowledge and judgment. The less informed make much of the incidentals, while the better instructed lay the major emphasis on the fundamentals. Among the incidentals are the ship, the storm, the sea monster, the gourd, the hot wind, and Nineveh, whereas the essential matters are the transactions between Jehovah and Jonah. The missionary message and universality of God's mercy are the major aspects of the book. Jonah needed to learn what Faber experienced when he penned:

"There's a wideness in God's mercy
Like the wideness of the sea.
There's a kindness in his justice
Which is more than liberty.

"For the love of God is broader
Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

But yet, in spite of the supreme importance of the major missionary teaching of the writing of Jonah, the fish story must be explained. Hundreds of attempts have been made to locate whales in the deep that have had a sufficiently large oesophagus to envelope and swallow a life-sized man, to say nothing of a Jew of abbreviated stature. These attempts have been successful in the main. They prove the possibility of what happened to the narrow visioned prophet.

We all remember the sailor who fell overboard from a frigate in the Mediterranean in 1758 and was swallowed alive by a shark—probably the Carcharias. When it was shot from the ship, it regurgitated its victim and he was taken up alive and without major injury. The fish was harpooned, dried, and presented to the sailor, who traveled over Europe exhibiting it and himself. It was twenty feet long. With me, do you wonder, was this man a Jew?

The Spermaceti whale is large enough in throat capacity to swallow a man as was evidenced in the article appearing in The Expository Times for August, 1906. The incident relates the facts concerning the swallowing and release of a sailor off the Falkland Islands in 1891.

Numerous other attempts proving the above point could be listed here, but they would serve no good purpose.

However, the Scripture says "The Lord prepared a great fish." The Hebrew word which Jonah uses—manah—signifies to "appoint" or "arrange," rendered "prepare" in the King James translation. In other words, the One Who "sent forth a great wind into the sea," "prepared a gourd," "prepared a worm," "prepared a vehement east wind" and likewise "prepared a great fish" to swallow Jonah. "A greater than Jonah is here."

How Did Jonah Live?

Moreover, some wonder how Jonah lived for three days and three nights in the fish's stomach. One group of expositors argue that the Lord prepared a fish with an air compartment large enough to enable him to breathe for parts of three days and three nights. They usually think of Sir Robert Anderson's observation: "It is a Jewish saying that 'A day and a night make an Onah, and part of an Onah is as the whole.' Even in England a prisoner sentenced to three days' imprisonment is seldom more than forty hours in jail, and sometimes only thirty-three—part of a day reckoning by law as a day." So much for that view.

Another class of expositors urge that Jonah died because of the severe action of the gastric juices upon his body and remained three days and three nights in the fish's stomach. Being a Jew, he was undigestable. This, they allege, is a sign of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ after three days and three nights of entombment.

Take any view you desire, gentle reader. Either one is good when properly explained. But don't you create a Sheol for yourself or anybody else who does not see eye to eye with you on the matter. Do not be a narrow nationalist like Jonah; get interested yourself in the cause of Foreign Missions; and remember God may have a plan for the heathen which you do not understand.

The duty of service to one's country is clearly taught in the Bible, but above country and every other claim is the claim of Christ upon the soul.

AMERICANS CALLED TO PRAYER

Federal Judge Buffington of the United States judiciary made a radio address on October 8, of which the finale was unique among the talks of the series of which his speech was a very interesting unit. He urged his listeners to pray to God, that divine power and wisdom may be vouchsafed to the "powers that be" in the United States and beyond its borders. "Pray tonight," he said, "with the intent that in these difficult days we may have the protection of him from whom all just government must eventually come and by whom all government is judged.

The sudden transition from a description of the higher judiciary of the United States government, the deep earnestness of his voice as the radio delivered it, and the simplicity of his exhortation that his fellow citizens invoke divine blessing were startling. Beyond question, the Judge sincerely believes that we need God's help for national as well as for individual happiness and peace. He does not hesitate to demand intercession where succor is required.—The Lutheran.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N.

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Pastor a Teacher

By Rev. N. V. Leatherman, General Secretary of the National Sunday School Association

(Continued from last week)

Without attempting to discourse on all the phases of homiletics, as our subject truly would allow, let us make brief inquiry as to the manner of the pastors teaching while in the pulpit. For expediency here, we say nothing about the pastor's devotion; his preparation; nor his materials, for all these are included in the very idea of his position in standing before his congregation ready to deliver his message. To be convenient we refer to the story of the colored preacher, who when asked as to his manner of preaching, made reply thus: "First I splanify, then I argufy, then I brings on de arousments." We submit the colored brother could have had no better method of teaching. For the method is in itself complete. To teach we must explain. When Philip led of the Spirit ran to the Ethiopian, he heard him read from the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah and asked him if he understood what he was reading. We all remember that answer, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" Philip knew his business and there and then explained that very scripture to his new found pupil. And we all know the result. During the midst of the excitement, when the church of Jesus Christ was being born on the day of Pentecost, when the people were curious and filled with wonderment. Peter explained the situation. And his explanation brought the first great harvest of ingathering into the fold of the Lamb of God. What is it that brought the church of the living God out of the dark ages of superstition and paganism? You will agree with me that it was the reformers giving themselves to an explanation of the Word of God to the people. When Nehemiah had gathered his 42,360 rebuilders of the city of Jerusalem together, we see Ezra the priest in his newly constructed pulpit standing up and then all the congregation arising, and after prayer with many Amens, "They read in the book in the law of God, distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading." Pastors we are teaching when we cause our people to understand his Word. We have our slogan with other denominations, "The Bible, the Whole Bible and nothing but the Bible." But really and truly the Bible is no more ours than that which we read and understand. After all we do not worship a book. We praise God for it for what it is and contains. And its value to ourselves and to our people is what we know and understand of it. The practice of the native Africans who were unable to read the Word, in coming to their missionary pastors each morning begging a word of God, meaning that a small portion be taught them, so they could have it to feed upon during the day is far more commendable, than a boasting about the Bible and at the same time allow an accumulation of dust to cover it on some back parlor stand.

Pastors, may our people never be able to say with truth and honesty, that they don't read their Bibles because they can't understand them. Let us so explain portions at least to the extent that they will understand, and appreciate and love.

But the giving of a Biblical exposition in explaining a text or chapter or book of the Bible does not fulfill all our obligations in teaching. We must press home the teachings with Christian grace by arguing the case. There is an idea prevailing in the minds of some that when they read the scripture, and give forth its meaning, the rest of the responsibility is up to God. A scripture frequently referred to by this mind is Isaiah 55:11, "So shall my word be that goeth forth from my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Surely this is a very fine text and ought never to be abused by using it to eliminate our full responsibility in forceful teaching. Then too we have a lot of folks today who say, Oh, well, I won't argue religion. Many folks have good reason for not arguing religion, because they don't know. But we pastors are supposed to know. And we most assuredly can prepare. Of course what a lot of folks mean by not arguing is that they don't want to make a fool of themselves as many whom they know have done. And for this they must be given credit. Argument is one of the most wholesome forms of speech when used wisely and discreetly. By argument we mean the giving of a reason for or against a certain proposition. God himself says to his humanity, "Come, let us reason together." The great apostle Paul so reasoned with king Agrippa that he was made to cry out, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." No one can read the gospel of John without seeing argument upon argument cumulating into a great heap as we read it in his conclusion in John 20:30, 31: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." The book of Hebrews is an argument to the Hebrew people reasoning with them concerning Jesus Christ to show his superiority of revelation over any other which God had yet chosen to make to mankind. Jude exhorts: "That ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." So too, may we learn, not to be less interested in the church triumphant, but more and more interested in the church militant. If we have learned to sing, "Onward, Christian Soldiers, marching as to war," we should also expect to reach the firing line and take at least a few prisoners for Jesus Christ by using the ammunition of argument with which God has equipped us. Perhaps with a little more of the right kind of firing we would have a little more of the right kind of intelligent excitement around our churches.

And this leads us into our third suggestion for successful teaching. Our people are not fully taught until their very emotions receive directions and guidance. There are certain religious movements within our land that make their appeal almost entirely to the emotions. The subjects of these movements are led to express their emotions with great emphasis, through contortions of the body, grandstand plays, and even obscenity. They are made to believe that thus the Holy Spirit needs to have his presence demonstrated. Far, far from the truth we say. Yes, but a more weighty consideration for ourselves would be how should we appeal to the emotions of our people? There are some who leave their churches for these purely emotional, brawling, scurrilous affairs because somehow the emotional strings of Christian being have not been made to respond with the harmonies of heaven and the tunes as they are played in the church of their choice. So far as the field of education and psychology are concerned little is offered on the science of directing the emotional life. And perhaps for this we ought to be in position to rejoice. Nevertheless, we believe we are not far amiss when we say that our Lord's first appeal was an appeal to the emotions of the people. The one true religion of God Christianity, is an appeal to the emotions of the people. Why do our people love to quote such passages of scripture as, "Let not your heart be troubled;" "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden;" "For God so loved the world," etc.? This is why, because therein Christ appealed to the heart and the seat of emotion.

The following quotation is taken from a daily paper concerning Billy Sunday's methods: "There can be no doubt that Mr. Sunday's methods, frequently attacked but almost invariably successful, are worked out to the last word of action, and that they have been reduced to a science long ago. He leads up to a climax with a series of, 'hell-roaring cries' as he describes them, and then begs his auditors to 'Come to God.' It is then, when there is a pause waiting for the advent of the 'trail hitters' that the evangelist's musical director begins playing a plaintive, appealing old hymn. Usually three or four old women, sobbing, rise and start down the aisle. They are 'trail hitting' and as they walk along the voices of the choir rise and men start down the aisle. To those who sit back, half fascinated, Mr. Sunday shouts, 'Are you coming?' 'Jesus is here, come to him.' Others stand and start towards the evangelist, and before many moments those who are still in their seats are conspicuous. It is apparent that they are determined to be wicked, come what may, and in a few moments—the most of them—join the throng on the trail. That is an appeal to the emotions of various kinds. First fear of future punishment is invoked; then the emotions awakened by plaintive music and a tender hymn; then comes that mysterious influence of sympathy with the sobbing women, while the music continues to influence the heart. Finally there is the appeal by the contagion of his own earnestness coupled with the unwillingness of men to have their unbelief made conspicuous by the public. They prefer to mislead him rather than to be labeled "hardened sinners."

Some of us have witnessed the scene as described by this newspaper writer. It is not the purpose of this discussion to criticize the methods used by Rev. William A. Sunday. But all this does emphasize the part played by emotion in Christian teaching. And perhaps that emphasis is as much as we may truly hope to do in an article within the scope of our subject. Successful pastors are those who teach by directing the emotions as well as the intelligence of his pupils. For our people to be edified they must be stirred and lifted up. It is not sufficient that they be led along always in the valleys or the canyons. They must see from the mountain tops as well. And happy are we if we can give them vision of God's glories and wonders. And this is teaching, too.

In conclusion let us revert again to our Lord's commission, "Teaching them to observe." We explain so that they may understand. We give argument to help them reason out their way with God. We move the emotions to give direction to right motives. And by this means of directing their knowledge and attitudes we have ground to hope for right conduct and observance.

Teaching should drop from the pastor in his ministry like honey from the comb; like the bejeweled dew drop from the leaf of the herb; and the fragrance from the flower. Ours is surely a great task and responsibility, a most glorious privilege with a heavenly opportunity. May God give us grace and wisdom to pursue our teaching, with faith, hope and love, awaiting the results in terms of observance of his commandments, with the assurance that he truly is with us always, even unto the end of the age.'

Berlin Pennsylvania.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

STEWARDSHIP OF MONEY

(Lesson for November 20)

Lesson Text: Deut. 8:11-14, 18; 2 Cor. 9:6-15; Golden Text: Luke 12:15

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Danger of Riches. Deut. 8:11-18

There is no one, perhaps, who has not seen among his own acquaintances some one who has struggled up through adversity, from poverty to comparative wealth; and having attained success, he has forgotten the God he served in his poorer days. It is against just such things that today's passage warns. Let us not suppose that because we do not possess thousands of dollars we are in no danger in this regard, but let us ever be mindful that it is the Lord our God who gives us strength from day to day, who enables us to earn even the small salary that may be ours, who provides for the wants of our bodies and—still more important—for our spiritual wants and our soul's salvation. As we remember this, so will he remember his covenant which he swore unto our fathers.

TUESDAY

Cheerful Giving. 2 Cor. 9:6-15

We might well begin this topic with v. 15; "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift!" As we think of his great love (John 3:16), and remember that it is he that hath "dispersed abroad," surely love for him and for the work of his kingdom will prompt our own hearts to give willingly and gladly such as we are able to give. As we do this, our passage says, not only shall we ourselves have all sufficiency in all things, but our gift shall result in great thanksgiving to God on the part of those our gift has benefitted. Let us pray that in all things he may have the preeminence.

WEDNESDAY

Proving God with our Gifts. Mal. 3:7-12

We have not because we ask not, says James; and we might well add that we have not because we give not. As has often been pointed out, if one selfishly gives for the express purpose of getting some greater personal blessing in return, his reward shall be only in the praise he received from men. But if he gives out of a heart of pure love, great are God's promises. If we, as a people, should bring ALL the tithes into God's house, his blessing would surely rest upon us, and all nations would call us blessed. But what is true of a people is also true of individuals: let us pause here and before God inquire if we ourselves have robbed him of any of his tithes and offerings. Pray that not one of us may be guilty of this charge!

THURSDAY

Anxiety for Things is Sin. Luke 12:22-34

What a wonderful, unlearned lesson in these verses! God is our Father, and will surely provide for those who put their trust in him, according to his riches in glory. To be anxious about things is to show a lack of faith in our heavenly Father. To be sure, he has not promised to provide all the luxuries we may want; only our needs. Let us trust his love and give our hearts to his service. Ponder well the meaning of v. 34: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

FRIDAY

Systematic and Proportionate Giving. 1 Cor. 16:1-9

There are those who believe that the tithe is definitely referred to in the phrase, "as God hath prospered," and that mention of the definite proportion was omitted merely because these Corinthians were already so familiar with it. But be that as it may, we have ample evidence that the tithe is "God's yardstick," and that as we measure up to his standards we find blessings for ourselves and for those about us.

SATURDAY

Not Gold, but God. 1 Tim. 6:17-21

There comes a time in the life of every one when all the riches in the world can avail nothing. It is against this time that Paul says (v. 19), we should lay up for ourselves a good foundation. Remember that "other foundation can no man lay than . . . Jesus Christ," and let us put our trust in him.

SUNDAY

Treasure in Heaven. aMt. 6:19-24

We may provide for the needs of our children after we are gone, but unless we have so taught and led them that their eternal salvation is assured, we have only laid up for ourselves treasures on earth, not in heaven. As we give of our gold and service to the cause of the Master we lay up treasure in heaven. As our loved ones pass on to be with him, our store of heavenly treasure grows. And if we find in him more than all else beside, surely our hearts will be there—not here. Pray that this may be so.

E. M. RIDDLE, President, 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. G. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  J. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBail Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	--	--

November--Stewardship Month

By H. W. Koontz, Tithing Superintendent

Should Christian Endeavor members tithe or begin tithing during this depression? Why not wait until the depression is past to think about our obligations to God? Many are asking themselves these questions, but are we fair to God and his work when we decide not to tithe now? Is God's work of less importance in times of depression than in times of prosperity? Should not first things come first? And what can possibly have a pre-eminent place over that work that God has consigned to men to do—to seek and save the lost? Our very hearts tell us that in these days Christ's work must come first in our every activity and that includes the giving of our means.

Let us resolve to make this month of November count for Christ in a very real way by putting forth a definite program that will lead each C. E. member to feel the blessed privilege of setting aside at least the tithe for the Lord's work. How can it be done?

First, there must be some clear and definite instruction. Go to your pastor for the Biblical teachings that show our obligations in giving to God. He can quickly give you what the Bible has to say about giving. Maybe it would be a good plan to give him fifteen minutes in a C. E. meeting to explain the Biblical basis of giving. Then you can get a great deal of interesting and illuminating material (sample copies free) from the Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois.

After the foundation of instruction has been laid, then put forth an effort to enroll tithers. Don't try to force members to tithe but having laid the foundation of instruction it should be possible to have each Christian Endeavor member canvassed and an opportunity given to sign a tither's pledge. Your local tithing chairman can do this in a small C. E. society, or he may select a committee to work with him. Be sure that only tithers make such a canvass, for little will be accomplished unless the canvasser practices what he preaches.

When C. E. members tithe they are building the foundation of proper church financing that will some day eliminate unscriptural and unspiritual money-making schemes that shame a church before the world.

Roanoke, Virginia.

GRATIS NOTES

Yes, the depression is operative here at Gratis too, and most of us know it well enough. But the pastor is willing to take his too, with everybody else, and to bear his full share with the people in an endeavor to make the best of it. Incidentally this is a good time for pastors to show that the matter of salary is not a consideration with them of the first magnitude. When blistering, biting famine spread over Israel in the days of Elijah, the prophet too had to take his share of the discomforts and inconveniences and deprivations that it brought to others. It would seem that a true shepherd will never refuse to suffer with his flock.

However, at our recent great Harvest Festival and Homecoming we had inspiring proof that loyalty and a willingness to sacrifice, still have a place in the hearts and lives of God's people. It takes the darkness of night to bring out the glitter and sparkle of the stars. And it takes testing and trial to reveal what quality of Christians we really are.

We have come through a busy summer and autumn. On the whole our work has showed no sagging or letdown. Our open air meetings during July were the best yet. Again it was our regret that it was impossible for us to carry on through the month of August. Great attendance was attracted, and the interest was genuine. Undoubtedly the ablest sermon of the month was that of President Otho Wenger of North Manchester College, it was a bold, thoughtful, heartening message—the kind that send God's people home feeling that after all it is still a pretty good world, with much in it yet highly deserving of the support and defense of every Christian. Dr. Wenger has many friends in these parts, not only among his own people, but also among our people, and all of the good people making up this community.

Our annual Sunday School Rally; our Harvest Festival and Homecoming; and our autumn communion service, were strong, constructive events. We look back upon all of them with genuine pleasure.

We think we have a strong, efficient Sunday school. Our superintendent, Brother Albert Flory, a very busy farmer, is also a busy forward-looking superintendent. Commanding as he does, the confidence and cooperation of his officers and teacher staff, he leads us steadily forward to greater undertakings and better work.

Our Intermediate C. E. society maintains a regular attendance of twenty-five frequently nearer thirty. It is a wonderful, alert, unfolding group of boys and girls and young people. The pastor is always in the meetings to direct and guide. Our standard is—Every topic thoughtfully and exhaustively treated. Result—these young people are being helped in the matter of clear thinking on matters of vital moment, just as they are learning the principles of Christian citizenship, and the value and importance of the Church and Christian ideals to the individual and to society. If I were to leave Gratis, I would have to weep over leaving my Intermediates. They bulk big in my life and interests. We expect soon to launch a Junior C. E. The field here is rich and capable in that direction.

Gratis and Pittsburgh will trade preachers for their respective meetings. I can't say just how badly Pittsburgh feels about it! But Gratis seems to feel fine.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

Ashland on the Air.

The Ohio State University at Columbus has offered the colleges of Ohio the opportunity to use their broadcasting station on certain evenings during the year.

Ashland has been assigned Saturday evening, November 19th, from 8:30 to 9:30. The station is W E A O.

The program will consist of an address by the writer, a skit by the members of the Dramatic Club of the College, and vocal and piano music. The program is under the direction of Dr. Haun.

Homecoming was observed last Saturday when many alumni returned here for the game with Heidelberg, which won from us 6 to 0. Last week we held Oterbein to a scoreless tie. This week we are to play Kent State College at Kent. It was a distinct pleasure to have the former students and graduates return.

The Saturday school still grows, the enrollment now being 108. If this were to be counted in, (and it is all resident work,—we have no off-campus courses) our enrollment would not be far from 400, especially if we were to count the Seminary students who, of course, occupy the plant with the rest.

I should have said above that Homecoming was celebrated also by the putting on of a three act play by the members of the Dramatic Club in the High School auditorium in the evening. There were too many characters to list them all, but the play was well done and was in line with the usual high character of such work at Ashland. I am of the opinion that we have unusual histrionic ability here.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

THE REVIVAL AT FLORA, INDIANA

Beginning on the night of October 10 in Flora, Indiana, we continued an evangelistic effort in that city until Sunday night, October 30. We found here a beautiful city and a church of between three and four hundred members.

Brother Ankrum, pastor of this church, is one of the most efficient pastors that the Brethren Church has today. He is doing a great piece of work in this church and will continue to do so. His influence has already brought about the conversion of some most splendid people. This is not our first revival with this man, it is the fifth campaign, including one church dedication in Oak Hill, West Virginia, where he led the people in establishing one of the Brethren Church's most beautiful structures. Therefore, this was a very happy occasion for the evangelist as ever.

We worked very hard, the pastor and I, we left no stone unturned to reach lost men for Christ or to help the church in its internal life into the better days. The spirit of pessimism and discouragement which has been characteristic of rural communities for the last two years was also prevalent in Flora. To help these dear people to see that the church can no longer be sustained by easy living and giving, but that it now demands genuine sacrifice on the part of those who are true Christians was one of the main goals of our work. We do pray God that we may have succeeded to a profitable degree.

We had a most happy home while in Flora with Brother and Sister Amos Kuhn, who proved themselves most delightful hosts during our stay. The hospitality of the members of the Flora church knows no peer. It is simply wonderful the way these people open their hearts and homes to the ministers of their church. It deserves the warmest of praise. We greatly enjoyed the fellowship that we had in every home. The only reason why we did not enter more homes was because the meetings did not last long enough.

There is in this church a most wonderful band of young people such as any church should be proud of. They form in a real sense the future of the Flora church. Their pastor is not unmindful of this and is doing all he can to hold them for Christ and to lead them into his service.

This church has a tremendous field in which to work. They have not as yet really touched the field. There are greater things ahead than have yet been accomplished. With a new vision of the possibilities that surround them and with a deeper determination to possess the field for Christ this church should go forward in tremendous success and growth for our Lord.

This church has an unusual gift of talent especially in music. Their choir during the meetings was a source of great gratification to those of us who led the work. We have never had more loyal support from any choir. To develop this department of the church will prove a great aid in the effectiveness of all the church activities.

We faced difficulties in this meeting in great numbers. Frankly, we will be very glad when this political campaign is over for some of these poor folks seemed as though they were unable to settle themselves seriously to anything. The economic situation which now prevails in the country has made the presidential campaign to have greater significance than ever before. I hope some day to return to Flora when all the politicians are in Europe. I think we will have better success in a revival! But the Lord was with us and we had many blessings which we shall never forget.

R. PAUL MILLER.

FORT SCOTT, KANSAS

Perhaps a brief report from this place may be of interest to the brotherhood, therefore we will attempt such report. The district conference which convened at Portis, Kansas, is now history and all seemed to pronounce it a good conference.

Our attendance here at regular services is keeping up and increasing some, with good interest.

The W. M. S. is increasing its interest under the leadership of Mrs. Wood. These faithful women, who are also teachers in the church school, have recently organized "Signal Lights," with sixteen children at the organization. They will meet every Thursday after school. The church school is moving forward under the leadership of Mr. Thurman Orr.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, under the leadership of Miss Nina Palmer, is doing a fine piece of work among the young people.

On September 20th we received one new member, a man of middle age, into the church by baptism. He had been associated with the Seventh Day Adventists for some years, but now has a keen appreciation of our Whole Gospel message.

There is another man and his wife, who are earnest and sincere people, who have recently decided to accept the whole Gospel message, these we expect to baptize in the near future.

Nearly all of our people are without work, and if they had regular employment, it would solve many of our problems.

Rev. J. S. Cook of Portis, Kansas, is to be with us about November 15th to lead us in a revival. We are doing all we can to be ready for a good meeting. Brother Cook is going to Mulvane for a meeting, and will come from there here for our meeting. Remember us in our special effort, at the throne of grace.

L. G. WOOD.

LINWOOD, MARYLAND

It has been some time since Linwood has been heard from through the columns of the Evangelist. It has been a busy summer for the pastor and the church. The first event worthy of note was the Daily Vacation Bible School. This closed about the first of July. The school this summer was, I think, the best that has been conducted since I have been the pastor. We had ten teachers and they spared no pains to push the work forward. The attendance was good and there was some real Bible work done. It was a Bible school, and the Book was taught in such a way that it commanded and held the children's interest.

The next event of importance was Brethren's Day at the Rocky Ridge Park. This was not a local event. But it was a spontaneous affair in which the Washington city church, Hagerstown church, Waynesboro church, the Linwood church and the Winchester church shared equal honors. The affair was a splendid success and it was unanimously decided to make this an annual affair. Brethren Day will be held at the same place next year, the first Thursday in July, and we hope Brother Bell and his good wife will be with us again at that time. His address was fine and greatly appreciated.

Harvest Home services at Linwood are always important affairs. This year was no exception. The church was tastefully decorated with fruit, flowers, grain and vegetables; also included in this annual event was a fine display of groceries. At the close of this service everything was turned over to the pastor and his wife. We certainly appreciate this fine contribution to our winter's larder. Thank you, dear folks, we appreciate your kindness.

Homecoming always draws large crowds here. I think the attendance this year was a record attendance. The speakers and singers of which there were 18 were at their very best. Brother Paul Yoder of Juniata College, a former pastor, delivered a strong message. Attorney McKeldin, a Christian lawyer, closed the evening service with a masterful appeal to all and especially to the young to live clean lives, above reproach, but always in the fear of God. Brother W. C. Benshoff of Waynesboro held his large audience from the start to the close with one of the strongest messages of the day. Of the singers and others I cannot mention them by name as this report would be too long. All were good and all deserve credit for their work. This year set a high water mark in Linwood's Homecoming services.

Our next step brings us to the preparatory services. We held a week of services preparatory to our communion. We had a good spiritual service from the start. Five adults were added to the church as a result. These were baptized on Sunday morning after church. These were received as members by confirmation and the right hand of fellowship. We believe these men and women will prove very valuable additions to the church. Our communion service was largely attended and it was a spiritual service in which we believe all that participated were blessed. If the church will unanimously put herself in line with God's will a great day will dawn for the Linwood church. May it be so.

J. L. BOWMAN.

FLORA, INDIANA

These days at the Brethren church in Flora are exceedingly busy days and, in fact, have been so for several months. Planning for the State Conference, and the carrying out of the plans kept this congregation at work, but the people were able to creditably assume the responsibilities that fell to their lot. The Conference was well attended and there was manifested a splendid spirit. The church was benefitted and strengthened by having so many of the Brethren in their midst for the several days of the Conference. We hope that the reception given the visitors was such that they will be willing to come again.

The very next Monday after the Conference closed we launched into our meeting with Brother R. Paul Miller as evangelist. This meeting had been the subject of the prayers of many of the members from the time plans were made for the campaign. The meeting started out with a very good attendance, and from a numerical standpoint there was a splendid audience throughout the meetings. The crowds increased and there was not an audience that was really small. The churches of the town and their pastors cooperated in a fine manner. The Church of the Brethren had no services on two Sunday nights and their people attended. Straight Gospel sermons were delivered without fear of man. Naturally when the line was hewed to, there were some of the more worldly who could not sit under such powerful preaching and so remained away. Much visitation was done, and many miles covered in this community, but in spite of this there were members who failed to indicate by their presence that there was a revival meeting in progress.

It was agreed among many of the members, that the greatest revival that could come would be one that would revive the membership of the church. There were results accomplished that cannot be tabulated in numbers. The church was revived in many ways. The visible results were twelve coming forward, three came into the church from an abandoned Brethren church. Eight came for the first time and were baptized and received into the church. One of the twelve will likely go to another church. This is the fifth campaign counting a pre-dedication service that Brother Miller and the writer have been in together and never have we seen him work as hard as he did in this meeting. He gave himself without stint to the cause of Christ. How he can stand up under such heavy work is a marvel to many who listened to him night after night.

This community, with seven churches in Flora, is cursed with such extreme worldliness that a meeting of three weeks is not long enough to do the necessary work for a real revival. When the meeting closed we were just really getting started for an ingathering. The rolls of the churches of this town are burdened with dead timber and unless they are severely pruned growth will be hindered. Too much emphasis has been laid upon "joining church" and not enough upon conversions. The last day of the meeting saw 244 in Sunday school. A splendid meal was enjoyed in the commodious dining room at noon by over two hundred people. An afternoon service was held and then the final service at night. An encouraging result of the meeting was manifested on the Tuesday night following when what was said to be the largest number ever to attend a communion service gathered around the tables to commemorate and keep the specific instructions of our Lord in this ordinance. There were present members who had not been at a communion for years. The battle is very difficult here and the interests of the faithful are coveted that there might be gathered and prepared in this community a people looking for his coming.

FREEMAN ANKRUM, Pastor.

URGENT CALL FOR UNITED PRAYER

"It is time to seek the Lord" (Hosea. 10-12)

In times of crisis throughout the centuries, united intercession by the Church has been followed by gracious spiritual revivals.

Dr. F. B. Meyer reminds us that during the days when Arianism and Deism prevailed and conversions were rare, a call to prayer issued by English brethren aroused Jonathan Edwards. He promptly prepared an appeal for united prayer, under the caption: "THE NECESSITY FOR EXPLICIT AGREEMENT AND VISIBLE UNION OF GOD'S PEOPLE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD FOR PRAYER FOR THE REVIVAL OF THE CHURCH AND THE ADVANCEMENT OF THE CAUSE OF GOD IN THE WORLD IN KEEPING WITH SCRIPTURE PROMISES AND PROPHECIES." That call, urged by the Spirit of God, bore extraordinary fruit in what is called: "The Great Awakening."

Forty years later, that "Call" fell into the hands of Andrew Fuller of Kittering, and he in turn issued one under the title: "PERSUASIVES TO EXTRAORDINARY UNION IN PRAYER FOR THE REVIVAL OF THE CHURCH." Fuller was a mighty man of prayer, and this fact greatly enforced his appeal for united prayer. From his diary we read: "Devoted this day to fasting and prayer in conjunction with several ministers." "Spent the day in fasting and prayer for the revival of our churches, and the spread of the Gospel." "Some outgoings of heart today for the revival of the Church, beginning in my own heart." Andrew Fuller's call and example inaugurated a revival of prayer that resulted in a gracious spiritual awakening and the effects of which are felt today.

That a call for concerted prayer for a revival of the Churches is needed now as in other times, is being realized increasingly by the people of God. Meeting for humiliation, confession and intercession are evidently in line with the purpose of God. As at Mizpeh, Israel responded to the call of the prophet Samuel and poured out their hearts in confession and prayer, so pastors, Christian workers, Christian students, and Godly men and women should gather together in homes or churches for united supplication that God will again revive his work. "It is time to seek the Lord" (Hosea 10:12).

Let every minister's study on Saturday nights become a Bethel. Let the homes of Godly women be open one morning each week for revival-seeking prayer. Let every mid-week prayer meeting become a Mispheh. Such praying would result in a spiritual awakening surpassing anything the world has ever known. Therefore, in private, in the social circle, in the family, and in public services, let prayer take the precedence. Let us search the Scriptures afresh for instruction and promises, and then pray both alone and with others. God will fulfill his promises and make bare his arm in the sight of his people. "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God" (Isaiah 59:1, 2).

GREAT COMMISSION PRAYER LEAGUE
808 North La Salle Street, Chicago Avenue Station, Chicago, Illinois.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

Dear Editor:

I want to disagree with the "views" of the good brother who wrote recently, Mr. J. H. Harrell. The President isn't allowed any money by the Senate, aside from his salary, that he is not required to pay out for expenses that belong to his office as the chief executive of the nation. Besides, President Hoover has given up a large amount of his salary.

When this letter is published election will be over. Whoever will have been elected, if he does not enforce the 18th Amendment, he will have to add greatly to the cost of the government to catch the increased number of bootleggers, bandits and gangsters. If men are elected who will make the country wet, it will be a boost to the worst element of every community. We need to wake up on this question.

A. J. RAMEY,
Manassas, Virginia.

An easy thing, O Power divine,
To thank thee for these gifts of thine!
For summer's sunshine, winter's snow,
For hearts that kindle, thoughts that glow,
But when shall I attain to this;
To thank thee for the things I miss?

But I can trust God who reads my heart and who knows what I need better than I do. If the dear Lord gave us always what we asked for we would be in a sad condition; but his love and wisdom withhold only to enrich beyond measure. Our trust in God can never be betrayed.—Floyd W. Tomkins.

OUR LITTLE READERS

KARRE FOLKLORE

(Ninth of a series of African Folk Stories collected by Mrs. Orville D. Jobson, Missionary to French Equatorial Africa).
For Boys and Girls:

Once upon a time in sunny Africa way up in the Karre mountains among the rocks and rills, there lived—he still lives—a bright shiny faced lad by the name of Luc Yamanenzi.

His father is dead, but his mother lives in a little grass house in the village.

Luc (this is his Christian name and he likes it better than Yamanenzi) is a very important looking lad, and is always happy and well-fed. He likes to eat corn, cassava, peanuts, big fat rats—when he can catch them, and sometimes a chicken bone, or a rib of goat's meat.

When he was about eight or nine years old (but he never had a birthday celebration because his mother did not just remember when he was born) he came to Bassai to the Mission school. He was not well dressed, as some of our little boys are when they first come to school. All he had to wear was a loin cloth, but his body was clean and well oiled and shined, with peanut oil that his mother made for him to use after his bath.

He was given a wooden slate and a piece of chalk, and told to write what the teacher wrote on the blackboard. At first it looked like chicken tracks, and the next day and the next, but after a week or so, sure enough he was writing "a, o, i, u" and saying it off very proudly.

Every day there was singing, and Bible stories told to all the pupils. This Luc enjoyed very much, and said he too wanted to "take Christ as his Savior."

He learned to read and write quite rapidly and in six or seven months he was promoted to a higher class. When vacation time came most of the school boys returned to their villages, but he wished to stay and work for the Mission. One day a call came from one of our evangelists asking for a school boy who could read and write. Luc was asked if he would go? Most willingly he said he would go if the Lord wanted him to go (for a Karre boy to leave his village and friends is a hard task even for grown up folks).

Luc stayed and worked faithfully until school reopened again the next term.

Several months ago he was taken quite ill with temperature at 104. He prayed earnestly that the Lord would heal him, and he was trusting in the Lord to care for him. He was healed, and was sent to another tribe to tell the Story of Jesus to many who have never heard. Wish you boys and girls could hear him teaching the children to sing.

This is not the end of the story—we don't want it to be; but this is all we can tell you just now. We hope it will go on and on and that some day we can tell you that Luc is preaching to many thousands of people and winning lost souls to Jesus.

THE TOBACCO EVIL

(Continued from page 2)

ests, with their commercial advertisements on streets, buildings and along the roadside, to tie our boys and girls in its clutches? It is high time that our Christian people, members of churches and otherwise, teach the evil effects of tobacco and abstain totally from its use.—Christian Standard.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MEXICO, INDIANA

Revival meetings will begin in the Mexico Brethren church, November 13th and will close the 27th. Brother George C. Pontius, pastor of the West Alexandria, Ohio Brethren church will be the evangelist. The prayers of the brotherhood are earnestly desired that this effort may be a great victory for Christ and the Church.

MARK B. SPACHT, Pastor,
Mexico, Indiana.

CARLETON, NEBRASKA

The Brethren church will hold its fall communion on Monday evening, November 14th, 1932, at 7:45 o'clock. Visiting Brethren and other Christian people are welcome to attend. Let us enjoy this occasion together.

W. R. DEETER, Minister.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

The Brethren's Home Board had confidence to believe that the church as a whole would not turn a deaf ear to the appeals, which for the first time since the opening of the Home, are now being made to provide food and fuel for the old folks. So District Conferences, W. M. S. Societies, Sisterhood Girls, Sunday school classes as well as individuals are responding to our needs. For this we are very grateful and say a great big, "THANK YOU."

It is not news to write that so many appeals are going forth these days that gifts are considerably reduced in amounts in order to meet the many demands and not one thought of criticism is offered for this for there are other worthy causes as well as that of the Brethren's Home, but we do ask for a share of your giving. Perhaps your gift will have to be small but send it along just the same, for many small gifts will make a grand total. Even one dollar will pay for a good many shovelfuls of coal and quite a few groceries these days. Please do not neglect our needs and send your offering large or small to the Treasurer, Henry Rinehart, Flora, Indiana.

Reports from Brethren who visited the Home during the Indiana Conference held recently at Flora, say that the Home is clean and comfortable and that a spiritual atmosphere prevails and all this is to be expected of an institution belonging to the Brethren Church.

A. V. KIMMELL, member of Board.

THE GREATER WE BUILD THE MORE FOUNDATION WE MUST LAY

We are building
A GREATER BRETHREN CHURCH IN THE WORLD

Therefore
We Must Build a Greater Foundation to Carry It
HOME MISSIONS ARE THE FOUNDATION BUILDERS
Of the Brethren Denomination

THE FUTURE
Of Every Pastor, Every Seminary Student, Every Missionary;
THE FUTURE
Of Ashland College, Our Brethren Publishing Company, Our Standard Theological Seminary, Our Foreign Missions
STANDS OR FALLS

With the Kind of Support the Brethren People Give to the
THANKSGIVING OFFERING!!

If Present World Conditions are Tragic to Our Economic Situation
WHAT WILL THE HARVEST BE IF WE ALLOW SUCH CONDITIONS TO ENTER AND DEMORALIZE THE WORK OF CHRIST? !!

The Walls of Jerusalem were Built in Troublous Times
But That Was the Time to Build
THESE ARE THE TIMES TO BUILD FOR THE FUTURE

When Others have Ceased to build, or Fear to Do So
Let Us Glorify Our Lord With a Greater Thanksgiving Offering

R. PAUL MILLER, Secretary-Treasurer,
The Home Mission Board of the Brethren Church

Dr. J. Allen Miller, (LS)
Grant St.,
Ashland, O.

VOL. LIV
Number 45

November 19
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Giving Thanks

Church Attendance

An Editorial in the "Religious Telescope"

"To see a large Sunday school class melt away at the close of the Sunday school period, and the members not be in evidence in the worship service, is most regrettable. That this is a common experience is a fact well known to local church leaders. It would seem that something is lacking somewhere—a weakness in the class or in the church service, or both. One cause possibly lies in the fact that high pressure methods often are used to get folks to attend Sunday school, and practically no effort is made to get them to attend church. The strong effort to secure class attendance and the lack of such effort looking toward the church service tends, beyond doubt, to the idea that the Sunday school is the big thing in the church program. Some Sunday school enthusiasts will openly assert as much. Thus the church service suffers from lack of emphasis and from the feeling that attendance at one service is sufficient.

"It is better, of course, to have people at the Bible school than not to have them in the house of God at all. And it is easier to get them—especially adults—lined up in a Bible class than in a church service, and that for several reasons. People will work for a Bible class more readily than for any other department of the church. It can be popularized more readily. It affords a less restricted fellowship. In fact, it can be placed on a social basis, and sometimes its operation is little more than a social affair. There is less formality, more freedom, and hence more appeal to the average person. If the class is made a real Bible class, if the teaching is strictly religious and Biblical, if it has truly spiritual objectives, then we might be less concerned about the members not having the benefit of both services. If these things really obtain in the Bible class, it is quite probable that soon an increased number of the members will be attending both services.

"But we will not admit that the Sunday school is a sufficient substitute for the worship service, or that it is sufficient to meet the spiritual needs of either the adults or the children. The very fact that there is a difference between the atmosphere of the Sunday school and that of the church service is the reason why people should be in the latter service. They need the deeper spiritual message, the deeper spiritual atmosphere, the deeper spiritual fellowship of the entire congregation in worship. We believe deeper and more abiding impressions are made in the service of worship, and that applies to the children as well as to the fathers and mothers.

"The children's church may serve well the purpose of worship for the younger children. But they should be brought into the regular worship as early as practicable. We are making a tremendous mistake when we concede that any department of church activity can take the place of the regular worship. We have yielded too much on that point, and the church is suffering as a result.

"It is not enough, however to get Bible-class members and the Sunday school pupils generally to attend the church services. This ought to be done, but there remains a bigger job that ought not to be left undone—getting people to the house of God who are not found in either the Sunday school or the church services. And their name is legion. In most communities they constitute a majority of the people. The absence from all forms of worship of a majority of the people in any community is a sad comment upon the religious life of our Country. In fact, it represents an alarming situation, and is one explanation of the difficulty that confronts every reform or uplift movement that looks toward better moral conditions."

* * * * *

The editor of the "Telescope" then mentions the church attendance campaign which is being urged upon all churches and in which its own church constituency is being encouraged to cooperate by its Bureau of Evangelism. The Evangelist is also heartily in favor of the effort to enlist general interest in behalf of church attendance. We have stressed repeatedly the importance of great zeal for evangelism, and church attendance is one of the big problems in successful evangelism. Some have undertaken to solve the problem by dispensing with a preaching evangelistic campaign and substituting a strictly personal visitation campaign. But that is neither scriptural nor practical. Personal visitation evangelism should be used of course, and in large measure, but not to the exclusion of preaching evangelism. We cannot succeed in church work without church attendance. We must face the problem of getting people to church. And aside from the importance of effective, Gospel preaching there is something for the church itself to do, and the sooner the members are made to realize it, the sooner we will get forward in evangelism and spiritual power.

"Why I Hate the Liquor Traffic"

By the late Hon. J. Frank Hanley, Ex-Governor of Indiana

Many of our readers will remember the following scathing denunciation of the liquor traffic by one of the noblest recent figures in public life. To the younger generation of readers the late Gov. Hanley's words will be new, but they should be helped by them to some realization of the true character of the traffic that is now clamoring so vociferously for re-instatement. Young people need to be informed, particularly young voters, and older people need to be reminded of the terribly debauching character of the legalized liquor traffic. The time is at hand when we must fight, and fight hard, if the country is not to be overrun with the drink demon. But hear Mr. Hanley, you have have us for his words:

"Personally I have seen so much of the evils of the liquor traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heartaches, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held and controlled by strong and effective laws. I bear no malice towards those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic, I hate its every phase.

"I hate it for its arrogance. I hate it for its hypocrisy. I hate it for its cant and craft and false pretense. I hate it for its commercialism. I hate it for its greed and avarice. I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price. I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate it for its corrupting influence in civic affairs. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country; for the cowards it makes of public men. I hate it for its utter disregard of law. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compacts of state constitutions.

"I hate it for the load it straps to labor's back, for the palsied hands it gives to toil, for its wounds to genius, for the tragedies of its might-have-beens. I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused. I hate it for the almshouses it peoples, for the prisons it fills, for the insanity it begets, for its countless graves in potter's fields.

"I hate it for the mental ruin it imposes upon its victims, for its spiritual blight, for its moral degradation. I hate it for the crimes it has committed. I hate it for the homes it has destroyed. I hate it for the hearts it has broken. I hate it for the malice it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for its bitterness, for the dead sea fruit with which it starves their souls.

"I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood—the scalding tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care. I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged the infirm, and the helpless, for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children, for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones.

"I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression."

Strength can be ours if we ask for it and use it when it is given. The word in the Greek may be translated "dynamic," and we see how this strength is active, and speaks not of endurance alone but of objective power. We are to be brave in suffering, but we are also to exercise spiritual might.—Floyd W. Tomkins.

Self-control demands effort, but the effort must rest upon the sure foundation of God's love and care. To worry is to doubt God. To be nervous and anxious is to lose strength of mind and body. A calm spirit can accomplish more than an excited and fearful struggle.—Floyd W. Tomkins.

IN THIS NUMBER

Selfishness in Thanksgiving—Editor,	3
Opportunity Challenges to Hard Work—Editor,	3
Editorial Review,	4
"Gratitude or Despair"—W. E. Ronk,	5
A Church Wakes Up—L. L. Garber,	6
Studies in the Book of Revelation—R. I. Humbert,	6
Observing the Ordinances—Thomas Gibson,	7
Significant News and Views,	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey,	9
The Rational Basis of the New Birth—L. S. Keyser,	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon,	11
C. E. Activities in the Pennsylvania District—W. H. Schaffer,	11
Dr. Gribble Chronicles Events,	12
News from the Field,	13, 14
Our Little Readers,	15
Brethren's Home Emergency Corner—M. M. Shively,	15
Announcements,	16

GEORGE S. BAER

Editor

R. R. TEETER

Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 5, 1928

Selfishness in Thanksgiving

There are two kinds of selfishness very much on display at Thanksgiving time. One is the kind that manifests itself in an almost total lack of thanksgiving, in the absence of any expressions of gratitude. And there is much of that kind. There are great hosts of people who never say "thank you" in any way to the God of all grace and blessing. They accept all the good things of life in the same matter-of-fact way that most people receive their pay check,—as if they were but receiving their due, receiving what they had earned.

It is a most unworthy and deplorable attitude, and is so widely prevailing that one is made to feel disappointed and pessimistic regarding our age when he contemplates the situation. But this thankless, selfish spirit is neither modern nor American, it is not peculiar to any age or people. It was very much in evidence in Palestine when Jesus was there in the flesh. Ten lepers were healed, but only one returned to give thanks to the great Healer. Such ingratitude grieved the great, tender, merciful heart of our Lord, for he exclaimed in disappointment: "Were not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?" And it must grieve him yet to see the terrible ingratitude of men, to see not even one out of ten returning to the house of God on these set occasions of thanksgiving to show gratitude for his beneficent providence. How prevalent, and how reprehensible is such selfishness! Always seeking, always receiving, but never showing a sign of gratitude!

But there is another kind of selfishness that is much in evidence, even in many popular expressions of gratitude. It is a selfishness that shows itself in some ordinary reasons for thanksgiving, and is scarcely less dangerous to the average Christian than that which is revealed in the total lack of thanksgiving, because this kind is so subtle and deceptive. It is in such times as these when prevailing conditions are causing many to feel that they have nothing for which to be thankful that this type of selfishness is likely to be more widely revealed. When people ask, Why have thanksgiving in a depression like this? it shows that they are fundamentally self-centered and that they customarily express thankfulness for the things that minister to their selfishness. Consider a few examples.

The high state of civilization that people enjoy is often advanced as a reason for thanksgiving, and we make a great deal of it. We dwell much on our vast material resources and developments. We take pride in the culture of our age, in its accumulations of knowledge, in its creations of art. We contemplate the great and rapidly increasing scientific discoveries and inventions, the achievements that have been wrought and the efficiency that has been perfected. These are the things we customarily rejoice in,—the things we possess, the things that enrich and enlarge us, the things that gratify our selfish pride and encourage self-satisfaction, self-sufficiency, and self-seeking. Let us not be misunderstood. The good things of our civilization are not to be despised, but let them be rated according to their true values and let the quest of such things be properly motivated. For the Christian they are not to be sought as ends in themselves, nor placed first in one's seeking and appreciation. This order must ever stand: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." Christ must be kept preeminent in our sense of values, and his spirit of love that seeketh not its own must be kept the dominating principle of our lives. Civilization is hopelessly selfish apart from the influence of the love of Christ, and without him it sooner or later results in confusion and chaos and the loss of all the seemingly worth-while qualities in which none might rejoice and thank God.

Many national, state and local reasons are put forward for thanksgiving. It is most natural that these should be considered, and that men should be ready to thank God for the special favors showed to them as a people. But very much of such thanksgiving is selfishly motivated. We thank God that our nation has been kept in peace, but have no thought or concern for other nations that are being embroiled in war, or if we think it all, we are as likely as not to say, Let them fight and kill one another if they want to, so long as they leave us alone. We have been wont to thank God for material prosperity, and we have usually had a plenty of prosperity for which to be thankful. But we ignored in our thoughts the terrible poverty and starvation existing in other lands. We have thanked God for the wide extent of our territory and its safety from invasion, but we have little sympathy for the complaints of other nations whose possessions have been divided between greedy neighbors, or whose borders are overrun by enemies. In justice, it must be said that we are not as provincial as we once were, but there is still all too much narrowness of vision and sympathy, and we need to be warned against the peril of selfish thanksgiving.

There are many personal reasons for thanksgiving urged upon us, and it is right and proper. Every life, particularly every Christian life, should be filled with the spirit of thanksgiving to Almighty God for his constant care and provision. But when he is thanking God for health, he should have a word of thanksgiving also for the health that others are enjoying, and a prayer for the blessing of healing and comfort upon those who are ill. When a man is thanking the great Provider for work and an income sufficient to meet his needs, as every one who trusts the Lord ought to do, he should not forget other men, and especially those who are in need. It is hard to think that people—otherwise perfectly good Christian people,—would be selfish in their prayers and thanksgivings, but it is a fact. There are some who are so selfish as to actually give occasion to the keeping alive those old lines of ridicule: "Lord bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife; us four and no more." No one needs to be told that prayer in such a spirit will never reach the throne of God. And thanksgiving of like character is equally as futile. The person whom Jesus will receive is the one who is willing to "deny himself." Oh, "let us give thanks unto the Lord," but let it be unselfishly genuine.

Opportunity Challenges to Hard Work

This may be the time of opportunity for the church, as many are claiming, and as we ourselves have also claimed, but this opportunity presents no picnic affair, no easy picking, but real, down-right hard work. These times very likely do challenge the church and offer it opportunities unparalleled in years, but the prospects can only be gained through the sweat of the brow. Men will not be won to the Christian standards easily. Vast numbers of people are in want and millions more are sorely troubled, but they are not by these evil conditions being turned to God. Some are made receptive of the Gospel message, it is true, but some are being hardened and their lives embittered. The devil is working in these times as well as the Spirit of God, and the servants of Christ will be required to show the metal they are made of to gain the victory. Let no one be deceived at this point. A time of distress is a time of opportunity, but it is also a time when the hosts of the Lord are being challenged to mortal combat with the giants of opposition. And the forces of Satan have many overcome with fear or misled by deception. This fact has already been discovered by many evangelists and pastors. One in his weekly calendar laments the number who have "so hardened their hearts" against the Holy Spirit in his revival effort. He and his evangelist have driven five hundred and fifty miles during the meetings and had called in one hundred and ten different homes and families trying to interest them in the things of the higher life. They preached the Word with conviction and power and they and the people prayed with passion and persistence, but not a few attended the services who were only hardened in heart by their continued unyielding. And concerning them the pastor finally exclaimed in his hopelessness: "They say, 'Not today but tomorrow.' They said the same thing yesterday, . . . they have lied to the Holy Spirit. They have pinned the devil's crepe upon their souls . . . Their blood shall be upon their own heads."

Their efforts were by no means unrewarded; they harvested souls for the Lord, and further reaping may yet be made. But the point is, results did not come easy. It required hard work and plenty of it to get the measure of victory that was registered. And that is the story everywhere—hard work, persistent, continued hard work,—that and agonizing prayer, must be offered on the altar before Heaven's consuming fire will melt the stubborn opposition of men and give victory to the hosts of the Lord.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Dr. K. M. Monroe spent a week in giving Bible lectures at the Dayton church where Brother R. D. Barnard is the efficient pastor.

Prof. A. J. McClain is to deliver a series of lectures over the week end for a church in Sandusky, Ohio, whose pastor was a former student of Prof. McClain's in Philadelphia.

A revival is in progress at the Brethren church of Ashland, Ohio, where Brother Dyoil Belote is the faithful pastor. Dr. W. S. Bell is the evangelist and Dr. C. A. Bame is the song leader.

We are informed by the pastor that the work at Peru, Indiana, is moving forward nicely and that they are to begin a two weeks' revival meeting on November 27 with Brother Vanator doing the preaching.

Brother C. A. Stewart, pastor of the church at Bryan, Ohio, writes that "every department of the church is working in a commendable way", and that is good news for any congregation. These good people are making a steady pull forward, and when a church is determined to do that in harmony and under the leadership of the Spirit, as the pastor suggests, they are certain to succeed. They are now in the midst of a revival under the leadership of the pastor as evangelist and of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richer as song leaders.

Brother W. H. Schaffer gives us a report of Christian Endeavor activities in the Pennsylvania district, as revealed at the district conference held at Johnstown. It seems that this district is not disposed to neglect its young people's work, especially is this true of the church at Masontown, which, according to the record, deserved honorable mention for its large membership. The young people of the First church of Johnstown gain creditable mention also on several points. Brother Whitmer, the departmental editor, reminds societies of the reports they should have made of "Organization Month," which was October.

Dr. Martin Shively, a member of the Brethren's Home Board, writes this week in the interest of that department of the church's general work. He is right when he says the church deserves commendation for its vision in undertaking to support all the various agencies that are at work in our brotherhood, and we believe that if they are kept properly informed about the needs, they will see to it that these interests are maintained. They are all worthy and necessary phases of our whole task and none should be overlooked. Among these is the Brethren's Home at Flora, which must needs have our help if it is to go through the winter able to discharge its duty to those who are making their home there.

Our good correspondent from Elkhart, Indiana, reports a successful Homecoming program on November 8th with their new pastor, Brother H. F. Stuckman, bringing the morning message, and their former pastor, Brother W. I. Duker, bringing a reminiscent message in the afternoon. Reports at that service covering the progress made during the last five years since the congregation entered its new building were most encouraging, almost $40,000 having passed through the church treasury and nearly 200 new members added to the church roll. And under their capable leadership, these good people seem determined not to retrench during these times.

The Secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Mission Board, Brother R. A. Hazen, of Ashland, informs us that a number of the churches are getting behind in their payments on state mission apportionments. This has been going on for some time and the treasurer is getting all too near the bottom of his money barrel. We sincerely hope the churches and Sunday schools (for in some instances the schools have assumed the responsibility) will do their very utmost to keep up on their payments. Ohio churches have a splendid record, they have never made a mission pastor wait on his salary a single time in at least twelve years. Let's maintain that record.

Dr. Florence N. Gribble gives a record of events connected with her preparation and departure for the mission field in Africa. Her stay in England was especially profitable from many standpoints. God blessed her with some valuable gifts to her African medical equipment, but most important of all is the statement that British medical authorities believed they could cure her of the physical weaknesses that threaten to cut short her missionary career, and because of which weaknesses the Foreign Board was very reluctant to grant her permission to return to Africa.

Brother F. C. Vanator, president of the Benevolence Board writes an appeal in behalf of funds wherewith to pay the allowances to the superannuated ministers and their dependents. This is the season when the call for benevolences is very pressing and urgent, and we who have been blessed of God with employment or other sources of income should not fail to remember that we owe our fellows who are less fortunate a helping hand. It is not a mere privilege to give to Community Chests and other relief funds; it is our duty. But in the midst of our giving, let us not forget that we have an obligation also to the aged and infirm and dependent ministers of our church. No duty is more bounden than this, and we doubtless need only to be reminded of the existence of a need along this line to be led to make further contributions to this worthy cause.

Dr. I. D. Bowman began on October 30th in the pulpit of the Calvary, New Jersey, church where his son, Brother J. Milton Bowman is pastor, the following series of prophetic and evangelistic sermon subjects: "The Philosophy of Prayer," "The Metallurgical Image, or Five Universal Kingdoms," "Three Hells—What, When and Who will be cast into them?" "Five Judgment Days," "The Origin, Fall, Work, and End of the Devil," "Seven Seals, Seven Trumpets, and Seven Vials," "The Millennium and the New Heavens and Earth," "The Second Personal, Visible Coming of Christ," "The Two Paths Through All Ages Contrasted," "The Sin Against the Holy Ghost," "What Kind of Clothes to Wear," "Salvation by Grace without Faith by Works," "Salvation by Faith without Works," "Salvation by Faith and Works," "Life Eternal Manifested and Imparted," "The Prodigal Son."

WHAT OUR PREACHERS ARE PREACHING—

As stated in a previous issue, there are evidences that our readers will appreciate learning what our preachers are preaching about. We have therefore invited correspondents to send in lists of sermon subjects that may be of special interest or suggestiveness. We have the following to report this week:

On Sunday, November 7th, designated as Membership Day, when every member was urged to be present, the pastor of the church at New Paris, Indiana, Dr. G. W. Rench, began a special series of meetings. It was announced that for two weeks the pastor would seek to study anew and re-emphasize the great events clustering around the personal return of our Lord. These lectures will be undenominational, but with a growing conviction that, "When men know the destiny toward which they are moving they will be more apt to live accordingly."

The themes for the first week are as follows: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard * * * the things which God hath prepared for them that love him," "The End of this Age Likened to the Age of Noah," "His Invisible Coming for his Own," "Signs that a new Age is Approaching," "That First Meeting with the Lord. Who? Its Character," "A New Testament description of a banquet in the Heavens."

PRAYER REQUESTS FOR THIS WEEK—

Pray for the recovery of the only son of Brother and Sister L. A. Myers, pastor at Morrill, Kansas. This son lies critically ill in a hospital, but the parents have hopes of his recovery.

“Gratitude or Despair”

By Willis E. Ronk

Text: The whole earth is full of the lovingkindness of Jehovah.—Psalm 33:5.

“A mighty hand from an exultless urn, pours forth a never-ending flood of years among the peoples,” sang the poet.

We are reminded that another year has passed into history since we last observed Thanksgiving Day. Again in a few days, at the call of the President of the United States, all over this great land, men, women, and children will assemble themselves in the House of God to offer thanks to Almighty God for his keeping care during another year.

Shall we then with the psalmist exultingly cry, “the whole earth is full of the lovingkindness of Jehovah,”—or can we so praise his name for his loving kindness? How many of our 124,000,000 citizens can or will cry out, “the whole earth is full of the loving kindness of Jehovah?” How many are there who will rather say, “things have never looked so dark nor life seemed so hard?” Many modern men as they look about them will so fret. There are millions of people out of work, women and children are hungry,—there is much fear and anxiety over scanty possession, or over bare existence.

Politically there is much unrest, for over two years there has been a whispering campaign carrying with it the threat of revolution,—and what would be a futile attempt to right our wrongs. The two national political parties are engaged in a campaign of fear. Democrats are saying that a continuation of the present administration will result disastrously, while Republican orators are saying that any change in the present emergency will but retard business revival.

Among the nations, there is the threat of war. France, with a splendid line of fortifications and a great army awaits a supposed attack by Germany, while Germany chafes under the refusal of the nations to permit her to arm. Japan, by her warlike nature, threatens the peace of the east, and indeed that of the whole world, while the United States maintains her navy in Pacific waters for any emergency.

Religiously, there is a shrinkage of revenue and a consequent reduction in missionary effort, and a curtailment of home expenses. While attendance at church services, in some sections, is on the increase, the general outlook is far from bright.

These are only a few hints as to conditions in the world about us, but the evidence is sufficient to make many pessimists. If one looks at all the evils that now are, and that may be, he will yield to utter despair. We should remember that the Hebrew poet was neither ignorant of life nor indulging in a flight of fancy. He saw clearly humanity's sins and struggles, and hardships; indeed, he lived in a time of turmoil, of disaster, of rebellion. Yet he saw with a clear vision, the goodness of God as expressed in larger hopes and possibilities of life. So much so, that the disturbing factors drop out of sight.

Whether one shall give way to utter despair or maintain the spirit of gratitude depends largely upon certain factors we may call the intelligent view. One must look intelligently before he can rightly value the things of the world. One may hold out a five dollar gold piece to a child. He calls it a penny and is ready to buy his candy. Whether one offers him a one dollar bill or a twenty dollar bill, there is no difference to him. Most people think of the bee as a creature to be respected for its sting, or valued for its honey. But to another, it is the object of increasing wonder,—its industry, its cooperation, and its architectural skill never cease to amaze the knowing mind. It takes intelligence to value God or to understand the everyday facts of life. The average man sees with narrow vision the facts of life about him. He has already forgotten that there have been other dark days,—that there have been fifteen panics in the history of America. He forgets likewise that only a few years ago, we were in the midst of prosperity, such as the world had never seen before. He cannot look beyond the dark days of the present to brighter days in the future. Therefore he gives way to despair.

Rev. Willis E. Ronk
Pastor, Meyersdale, Pa.

The second factor which governs human attitudes toward life is selective attention. One may cultivate the habit of looking at evil, and the sad, the discouraging things of life until he loses all sight of the good, and the uplifting things of life. Doctor Brown tells of traveling up the Rhine River on a hot day. An American family complained all day because they wanted ice cream and could not get it, and they missed the beautiful scenery along the Rhine.

One may look at present conditions,—at unemployment, and the suffering about us—he may have too close a vision of the hungry and the cold and fail to see any good. He remembers that there are 10,000,000 unemployed and forgets the 30,000,000 who are employed. He remembers that money is scarce but forgets that the value of the dollar has been maintained while the currencies of the world have depreciated. He sees the thousands who are hungry and poorly clothed, but forgets the millions who have plenty and to spare,—he sees the need but forgets the charity which provides for the needy,—he hears the cry of radicals in government, but forgets the millions who stand back of the government “of the people, by the people, and for the people.” In short, he looks only at those things which lead to despair and forgets the things for which he should be grateful.

The third factor which determines one's outlook is the personal consciousness of God. These words from Lowell's “Present Crisis” seem to be of perennial value:

“Truth forever on the scaffold,
“Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet the scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadows,
Keeping watch above his own.”

There have been wars between the nations which we cannot understand, but we know that God is over all, we look up and trust him. We know that the progress of nations politically, economically, socially, and religiously, is by spasmodic revival, and not by unbroken lines of progress. Why this is true we cannot say, but history teaches us that it is true. We know that God is over all, we look up and trust. Sickness and death invades our homes, taking away our nearest and dearest, and oftentimes we know not why. We look up and trust. We are familiar with broken hopes, with our heartaches, and with grinding toil, but in the midst of all, we remember the Lord.

We may look out upon a world of sorrow, of turmoil, of disaster, and yield to utter despair, or with intelligence we may fasten our attention upon the blessings of life and looking up, trust the Lord and find our hearts filled with gratitude. As someone long ago said, "Tis not the gale, but the set of the sail that determines the way we go." A poet has said:

"This is my Father's world,
O let me ne'er forget,
That though the wrong seems oft so strong,
God is the ruler yet.

"This is my Father's world,
The battle is not done,
Jesus who died, shall be satisfied,
And earth and heaven be one.

"This is my Father's world,
Should my heart be ever sad?
The Lord is King! Let the heavens ring.
God reigns,—let the earth be glad."

May we with the psalmist of old exclaim, "The whole earth is full of the lovingkindness of Jehovah."
Meyersdale, Pennsylvania.

A Church Wakes Up!

By Prof. L. L. Garber, Litt.D.

Two or more Methodist District Conferences have declared flat-footedly and squarely for the socialization of the major industries of America; for the abolition of greed as the motivating and organizing force in our economic-industrial activities.

Why are they speaking out? Because they have seen the contributions to their missions, to their ministry, to their church activities shrink by millions in the country of largest opportunities and greatest wealth, real and potential.

Why? Because they are beginning to realize the tragic stupidity and colossal absurdity of the present industrial-economic set up, dominated by hard-hearted selfishness and organized greed, but palsied and panic-stricken in its own ineptness.

Why? Because they have grown weary of the daily record of theft, graft, speculation; of crime, suicide, murder; of strong men destroying themselves; of fathers forsaking wives and children; of mothers murdering their offspring; of parents bootlegging to save their children from starving; of the hourly descent of respectable persons into meaner and meaner modes of living; of the echoes of thousands of community drives, daily doles, soup-kitchens, and the trampling feet of despairing millions unemployed; of all the hunger-driven, starving, depressed multitude in a situation which might easily provide ample food, employment, clothing, comfort, even luxuries, for all.

Why? Because they have been reflecting upon some tremendously significant facts, as these: millions are hungry while there is abundance of food and multiplied capacity to create two, three, five times as much as is needed; farmers are idle while millions want; mills are silent while thousands need clothing; factories are still while remains unmet the civilized demand for improved machinery, tractors, radios, electric apparatus, and a multitude of the civilized necessities, comforts, and cultural opportunities which can be created in almost limitless quantities by the expert million-horse-powered tireless machine.

Why? Because they have learned that thus the creative capacity of men has been immensely increased; that the man and the machine may now grow, make, create, from two to one thousand times as rapidly as formerly, and that consequently it ought to be immensely easier to feed, clothe, comfort, house, and luxuriate civilization than it was in former days.

Why? Because they know that the defeat of the same promise and high expectancy of a larger, fuller, ampler cultural and Christian life by a situation marked with a chaos of disorder, enforced idleness, and poverty is an inexcusable, tragic and stupid absurdity.

Consequently, these awakened religions resolve:

"The supreme paganism of our day is found in the principles and practices of our present economic situation."

"Capitalism as it has operated in our modern world has been weighed and found wanting."

"The tragedy of the present hour makes imperative a change in our economic system."

"To achieve this end, our financial and industrial system must be socialized in both ownership and control, and our vast resources must be utilized not for the benefit of the few, but for the many."

All of this is to say that our present economic-industrial set up based upon greed, motivated by greed, permeated by greed, must be remodeled, revamped, reorganized, so that man and the machine may be brought together and coordinated in happy creative production and high service.

The stupid tragedy of almost limitless creative capacity combined with stunted, erratic, spotty, production poverty and unemployment must come to an end. It will come to an end when Christians generally "wake up" and cut through the tangled web of political tradition and economic selfishness, and demand that civilization be organized and motivated not by desire for greedy profits but for rational Christian service for the common good.

"What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy?" The Wesleyan Hosts go forth! Who follows in their train?

Ashland, Ohio.

Studies in the Book of Revelation

By R. I. Humbert

Study No. Eight

Warning Against Danger

Pergamos has allowed error to creep in and they are warned of the danger of Christ's coming as though it is the worst thing that could happen to them; for if they are unprepared, he will fight against them with the sword of his mouth.

Thyatira had allowed Jezebel to seduce the saints to commit fornication. A wife who is untrue to her husband, commits adultery and a Christian who courts the friendship of the world is untrue to the bridegroom, and commits spiritual fornication (James 4:4). We are only studying these messages briefly and cannot go into a fuller study of Jezebel and her wickedness, but we can easily remember how Jezebel put down the prophets of the Lord and exalted the prophets of Baal. Such is not unknown in our own time and to avoid a conflict with a modern Jezebel, many a prophet has degraded his high calling and has gone so far as to condone evil. Often a false prophet need only wear a ring of some lodge and his position in the church is secure.

There were some in Thyatira who, like the seven thousand of Elijah's day, had not bowed the knee to Baal and, although they were unpopular and in the minority, yet they were to hold fast until his coming when their cares would be over.

Resurrection and Translation

In this book of Revelation and in fact the whole New Testament, death for a Christian is not taken into account, for even though they die, they lose nothing. In fact they will be raised first (1 Thess. 4:14-18). Resurrection for the righteous dead and translation for the living will place them on an equality and both will take place at the same instant (1 Cor. 15:52). Thus for a Christian to die is no loss, for even though he die a martyr's death, yet resurrection will bring his body together and not a hair of his head will perish (Luke 21:16, 18). The time is coming when a godly person is better off dead than sible to give all our goods to feed the poor and even give the Lord from henceforth" (from now on)—that is, during the vial judgments.

Sardis

The church at Sardis had imperfect works. She was no doubt busy but it lacked the warmth of love. It is possible to give all our goods to feed the poor and even give our body to be burned and yet be profited nothing (1 Cor. 13:3). Sardis was admonished to change her ways, for the worst thing that could happen to her members was the return of their Lord, and for him to catch them unawares would be a tragedy.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia was admonished to hold fast what she had. Many today are departing from the faith and giving heed to seducing spirits. They are turning to Christian Science, Russalism, etc., but let us hold fast lest someone take our crown. Judas had a wonderful opportunity to earn a crown with the other disciples, but he did not hold fast his opportunity and another took his place.

Lapdicea

Laodicea no doubt represents the present church age. Machinery, fine buildings, organization, motion, wheels, "pep," vim, vigor, but with scarce a mention of the name of the Lord. If his name is mentioned at all, it is just as a matter of course and not with reverence and love. They are so busy trying to keep the machinery moving that they are not aware that their Lord is no longer among them. Although there are still fifty-two Sundays in a year, they have so many memorial days and mothers' days and fathers' days and flag days and special days that there is hardly time to have a true Lord's day.

With these things they bid for the crowds, not realizing that their power is gone. Like Samson of old, the world has robbed them of their separation and they wist not that the Lord has departed from them.

Invitation to the Individual

But Christ still lingers near. He calls to the individual and knocks on the door of his own church. This is not a call to the world, it is a call to any individual in the church to turn from serving systems, to love and serve him. When the Son of Man cometh shall he find the faith on the earth? There will be few who can see beyond the maze of organizations and systems, and see the Lord Jesus Christ himself. There will be such a din of machinery that it will be hard to hear his voice, but if anyone does hear his voice and opens his heart's door, the result is certain,—there will be fellowship with the Lord of glory.

Exhortation

In the sixth heading we have "Exhortation." Human language is exhausted in an effort to impress the importance of these messages upon our mind. Seven times the entreaty is given, "He that hath an ear, let him hear." How this should move us to read and study this book.

Exaltation of the Overcomer

The seventh heading is "Exaltation." Men will suffer and die by the thousands to build a Panama Canal or to overcome the difficulties of travel to the North Pole, but let a person live an overcoming, sacrificial life and serve the Lord with a true devotion and immediately he is branded as a fanatic.

It costs something to be a truly separated Christian. There are great deserts to travel where the sun of persecution will boil down upon the hot sands of daily toil and the thirst for sympathy will almost overcome the traveler. Often there will loom up in the distance, a promise of refreshment. Surely this is a friend with whom he can have fellowship in the Lord. But alas! it was merely a mirage and time soon proves that the new friend has another love that is stranger than that which he has for the Lord. The overcomer will sail across the sea of life with here an iceberg and there a rock. An iceberg of worldliness to cool his ardor and drown his love; a rock of unbelief to snag his ship and wreck his faith. Alas, so many fall by the wayside, but the reward to him who overcomes the difficulties of nature, is as nothing compared to the reward of him who will overcome in this voyage of life.

Martinsburg, Pennsylvania.

Observing the Ordinances

By Thomas Gibson

"Why is it important to observe the ordinances?" It is important for various reasons. It is important because God commanded it. It is not man's prerogative to dictate to God, but it is his privilege to humbly obey the voice of God.

"Trust and obey, for there's no other way

To be happy in Jesus, but to trust and obey."

Christ threatened to excommunicate Peter for refusing to obey him. "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me."

It is important to observe the ordinances, then, that there may be that vital union between us and Christ. It is important because our happiness depends on the observance of the ordinances. It is not enough that we simply know God's will, but it is essential that we do his will. The Lord Jesus did not say, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye know them," but "Happy are ye if ye do them." It is the "answering of a good conscience" which brings the blessing. God's blessing is promised only in the proper observance of the ordinances. "I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done unto you." The Lord Jesus will not accept a substitute or counterfeit.

About the last thing Jehovah said to his servant Moses, when he called him into the Mount, to receive instructions concerning the building of the tabernacle in the wilderness, was, in substance, "Moses, be sure to make everything according to the pattern showed thee in the Mount." God is very exacting in his requirements.

It is important to observe the ordinances because they are the doctrines of Christ. "He that transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son" (2 John 1-9). "The Father and the Son are one." He that rejects the Son, rejects the Father also. "The words I speak unto you are not mine, but the Father's which sent me." The acid test of our love for Christ is the measure of our obedience to him. He himself has emphatically declared, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments." David's prayer of obedience was, "Thy testimonies also are my delight, and my counsellors." "Thy law is my delight." "Happy is the man whose delight is in the law of the Lord, and doth meditate in his law day and night."

It is important to observe the ordinances because they are life-giving. They are the source of spiritual life—the mystic communion, intercourse with the Divine Son of God. "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you," said the Lord Jesus. "He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him." Paul, in describing this mystic intercourse, partaking of communion in Christ, says, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" (1 Cor. 10:16). As "Jesus, by his thought divine, transmuted the water into wine," so he, by his thought divine, transmuted the bread and the wine into the elements of his broken body and shed blood, thus imparting to them the life-giving substance. "He that hath the Son, hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life."

What a wonderful likeness there is in Jehovah God giving instructions to Moses in the Mount, concerning the building of the tabernacle in the wilderness, and Christ giving instructions to his disciples, on Mount Olivet, how to build his church. Be sure, said the Lord to Moses, to strictly "follow the pattern shown you." Be sure, said the Lord Jesus, to teach them "all things, whatsoever I have commanded you." Upon this condition, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Berkeley, California.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

CHURCHES ARE CUTTING BUDGETS

Robert Cashman, business manager of the Chicago seminary recently sent an inquiry to 300 representative churches. "Church Management" reports the results. To the first question, "Has your budget been cut?" practically all replied yes; reductions ranging from 1 to 50 per cent, the average being 15. The second question read, "Has the pastor's salary been included?" Two-thirds replied yes, one-third no. On benevolences, two-thirds of the replies indicate that the trend has been downward, reductions ranging from 10 to 100 per cent of benevolence budgets. One-third of the churches are holding their own or increasing their gifts.—The Christian Century.

BORAH EXPECTED TO TAKE LEADERSHIP IN CONGRESS AGAINST WETS

A recent press report states that Senator William E. Borah, insurgent Republican, of Idaho, is expected to take over the leadership of the dry's fight in Congress to prevent modification of the Volstead Act and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or its replacement by an amendment providing for qualified repeal.

It is now recognized as the plan of many wets in Congress to force the issue in the coming short session. They intend first to pass a measure to permit beer. In the next place they intend to get rid of the repeal issue by submitting to the states an amendment knocking out or liberalizing the Eighteenth Amendment.

On the other hand, the dry organizations have announced their purpose to have a large conclave of dry leaders there about the time the session opens for devising ways to frustrate the wets. Senator Borah is a member of the Committee on Judiciary, before which any measure to change the prohibition system probably will have to go.

Senator Borah will be in a position of advantage in that he is in no way committed either to the Republican liquor plank of any phase of the Democratic program. He has taken the position that both the repeal plank of the Democrats and the Republican program would for all practical purposes mean state control of the liquor traffic and that either of these programs would put the return of the saloon up to the states.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

LEGALIZING NEAR-BEER BRINGS REPRISALS

Something of the ardor of the dry sentiment in Alabama may be gathered from the fact that until October of this year not only were all intoxicating beverages illegal but even near-beer was banned. The recent law permitting the sale of near-beer caused the ousting from his place as deacon of the Holt Baptist church, Tuscaloosa, of state representative A. K. Callahan. The state legislature retaliated by electing Mr. Callahan honorary chaplain.—Christian Century.

A SCIENTIST TAKES TO THE PULPIT

Dr. Robert A. Millikan is probably America's greater scientist. He is also an active Christian, a member of the Congregational Church in Pasadena, California. A short time ago, en route to one of his experiment stations, Dr. Millikan stopped in Winnipeg long enough to preach in one of the pulpits of that Canadian city. He denied, among other things, that science was anti-religion. On the contrary, he cited a long list of scientists who gave a place in their scheme of things to a divine force: Maxwell, Faraday, Galileo, Newton, Einstein, Jeans, and Eddington. He denied, also, that science was getting less religious. Quite the contrary seems to be the case—if church membership is any indication. An examination of Who's Who in America revealed that the oldest one-fourth of the scientists listed there, 12 per cent were church members. But of the youngest one-fourth, 44 per cent were church members.—Christian Herald.

THE CAMPUS ASKS FOR FAITH

Fay Campbell, secretary of the Yale Christian Association states: "There is a new spirit abroad in student circles. The liberalism which has been fed to the campus gets no response today. The man who wins the attention of our best minds is one who has a real creed and knows what he believes—and that creed includes some positive information about God and Christ, alongside of some clear convictions as to the revolutionary nature of the ethics of Jesus. Students no longer need to be told that capitalism and war are wicked. They want to hear from a man who can help them to pray and at the same time train themselves to build a new world. I am certain that the religious situation on the campuses which I know is the most encouraging it has been since the war."—The Congregationalist.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY ANNOUNCED

The Commission on Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches, George E. Haynes, Secretary, 105 East 22nd Street, announced today that the eleventh annual observance of Race Relations Sunday will be on February 12, 1933, Lincoln's Birthday. Among the interesting items and suggestions in the plans prepared by the Commission for the observance of the day will be messages from Dr. Daniel A. Poling, President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, and from Dr. Robert R. Morton, Principal of Tuskegee Institute. There will be a general Race Relations Sunday message calling attention to the crisis in race relations between the forces of prejudice and the forces of friendly goodwill.

A suggested program for church services has been prepared by Dr. Ernest F. Tittle of Evanston, Illinois, and a unique program for the Church School has been prepared by Dr. P. R. Hayward of the International Council of Religious Education. An original poem by Dr. Hayward gives the present-day meaning of "enslaved" and contains these lines: "... whenever any ignorant or willful man denies to his fellowman his full chance at life, there we are. But we are more than men. We are hopes—that failed. We are love—that was denied. We are dreams—that a harsh world turned to the ashes of bitterness. We are human imagination—that died at its birth. We are courage—slain. We are creative minds—crushed among machines and routines. We are flaming spirits—smothered at their first flicker of divine promise. . . . We always await the Great Liberator." A Church Women's program prepared by Mrs. Orrin R. Judd, President of the Council of Women for Home Missions, suggests steps for "Adventuring in Friendliness."

A MILITANT BISHOP

Bishop William T. Manning recently assisted in forcing an entrance to a church which he believed had been closed "with the purpose of preventing the rector from continuing the policy of admitting colored people to the services." He declared such action to be "contrary to the central principles of religion." There doubtless are a good many who are disposed to regard such action as beneath the dignity of a bishop, yet it is recalled that Jesus manifested quite as much violence in the cleansing of the temple. It is also known that there are very many Christian people who would object to Negroes worshipping with them, but there is no shadow of ground for feeling that Jesus would have objected to an audience composed of all sorts of people.—The Presbyterian Advance.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Jonah II

On one never-to-be-forgotten occasion during his student days the writer asked his teacher, the world renowned linguist and Old Testament authority, Robert Dick Wilson, if a modern believer could accept the book of Jonah as a genuine product and not be put to shame by the destructive critical scholars? He replied in his characteristic, but energetic manner, "Well, why not?" Then there followed as interesting words as the most earnest student could expect to receive from a teacher. We both missed our noon-day luncheons, but never shall your scribe forget the rich summary of evidence which the famous Princeton scholar set before him.

Much of that discussion has passed into the fringe areas of consciousness; but today, the day following our national election, the famous conclusions of the worthy Dr. Wilson are before his eyes. They appear in The Princeton Theological Review and are accessible to students of the Scriptures. The articles examine "the linguistic evidence of the critics and the summation thereof." They are a monumental study and very enlightening and convincing, reminding one of the statement which Dr. Wilson often uttered in the classroom: "No one knows enough about the Old Testament to assail its authenticity or general trustworthiness." That the writer earnestly believes.

My readers will no doubt be interested in the conclusions held by the widely known Princeton authority. He writes:

"This detailed examinations of the evidence produced by the critics in support of their allegations that the Book of Jonah cannot have been written in the lifetime of Jonah, the son of Amittai, has shown that in not a single specification is the evidence convincing. Not a single statement as to diction, style, ideas, or historical allusions, will stand the test of a complete induction and comparison. The most that can be said for any single item is that it is possible, but not one is supported by even one assured witness. The testimony of the Book of Jonah as to its origin and facts stands unimpeached. Its diction, its style, its ideas and its historical references, agree with what we know of the eighth century B. C. and with what the book affirms as to the time of its composition. Those who assail it must confine themselves to its accounts of miracles, predictions, and divine interventions. At all such assaults the Christian will sniff and he that sitteth in the heavens will laugh. For in these days of surgeon's wonders and submarines' achievements and Burbank's experiments, it is a bold man who will attempt to set limits to the subtleties of the All-wise or to affix bounds to the Almighty Maker and Preserver of all things. Christus creator, Christus revelator, Christus consummator! "Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven, or canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?"

I THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Jonah, son of Amittai. II Kings 14:25; Jonah 1:1.
2. When and Where Written? Around 800 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Written? To Jews and the Nations.
4. Purpose. To teach that the purposes of God reach beyond the children of Abraham.
5. Authenticity. The best scholarship finds it an authentic writing.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. Jonah's Disobedience and Defeat. Chap. I.
2. Jonah's Distress and Deliverance. Chap. II.
3. Jonah's Declaration and Discovery. Chap. III.
4. Jonah's Displeasure and Discipline. Chap. IV.

III THE PROGRESS OF THE STORY (In Scripture)

1. "... But Jonah rose up to flee into Tarshish from the presence of Jehovah." Jonah 1:3.
2. "Then Jonah prayed unto Jehovah his God out of the fish's belly." Jonah 2:1.
3. "And the word of Jehovah came unto Jonah the second time." Jonah 3:1.
4. "I do well to be angry even unto death." Jonah 4:9.

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Repent. "I" is often used.
2. Key Verses. 2:9; 4:2.
3. Key Chapters. 2, 4.
4. Key Topics. The God of the Gentile and the God of the Jew.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The book of Jonah is especially rich in typical truth. Another teacher of the writer, Dr. John D. Davis, taught the following as regards types teaching truth:

"1. Nineveh repented at the preaching of one prophet; whereas Israel repented not, although many prophets were sent to it (cp. Matt. xii. 41). This seems to be a type, to be related to and look forward to a general truth, that the Gentiles yield a readier acquiescence to the doctrines of God than Israel had done: acquiescing not more readily to the moral law indeed, but to the revelation of God as a whole; for example, to his method of salvation as outlined in Hosea xiv. (cp. Is. ii. 2-4 with 5).

"2. Jonah, an Israelite and God's servant sent to preach to the Gentiles, is an evidence of God's will that the people of God's Kingdom shall lead the Gentiles to repentance and to God. Jonah was not the only Israelite in whom this truth was exemplified: Elijah was sent to a woman of Zarephath (1 Kin. xvii.), Elisha cured Naaman the Syrian (2 Kin. v.), Christ talked to a woman of Samaria about the things of God and healed the daughter of a Syrophenician woman (Mark vii.; John iv.)

"3. Jonah, an Israelite and God's servant fleeing from duty, is cast into the sea, but is delivered in order that he may fulfill his mission. This illustrates the prophetic doctrine that the children of Israel, untrue to their native land; but a remnant, chiefly of the southern kingdom, shall be saved to fulfill Israel's mission to the world (Is. xlii. 1-4; xlix. 1-13; cp. ii. 2-4; vi. 10).

"4. Jonah, an Israelite and God's servant cast into the depths of Sheol and yet brought up alive out of the pit (Jon. ii. 2, 6), illustrates and probably portended the death for sins not his own, and the burial and the resurrection of the Messiah, the representative Israelite and perfect servant of the Lord (Matt. xii. 40.)"

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

1. Jonah and Christ. Read Mt. 12:38-42. Also Lk. 11:29-32.
2. Jonah and Israel. Dr. Bullinger says: "Jonah is God's ambassador sent to preach repentance to the Gentiles. So was Israel. He objects to Gentiles being thus blessed, and flees from the unpleasant task. He is visited by divinely sent storm, and is thrown into the sea. So Israel is now cast into the sea of nations; but like Jonah, is not lost, for presently Israel will be cast up on the earth, and become the ambassadors of Jehovah, and the conveyors of blessing to the Gentiles."

VII THE LESSONS OF THE BOOK

1. Man cannot escape the presence of Jehovah. 1:3-17.
2. Obedience is the royal path to spiritual success. 1:12; 3:1-3.
3. Man's anger is vain before a holy God. 4:1-11.
4. The heathen are worthwhile in God's sight. 3:5-10; 4:11.
5. Sailors and the sea belong to God. 1:9-16.
6. Jehovah condemns sin in all nations. 3:4-8.
7. God is merciful to the penitent. 3:9-10.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Rational Basis of the New Birth

By Leander S. Keyser, D. D.

(Address Delivered at the Summer School of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles)

I Christianity and Intellectual Culture

Nicodemus, who came to Jesus by night, began the conversation by paying Jesus a compliment. He said: "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him" (John 3:2). But Jesus, apparently, paid no attention to his salutation, but seemed to divert the conversation into another channel by saying: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except any one be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). (The American Revision says "born anew"; margin, "born from above." In either case it would signify a supernatural event. It should also be remembered that the Greek uses the term tis, which means, not "a man," but "any one." So we have translated it literally in the text.)

Of course, there was a logical connection between the statement of Nicodemus and our Lord's reply, which might be phrased in this way: "If you look upon me merely as a Jewish rabbi and a miracle-worker, you have too low a conception of me, that is, a merely external and intellectual one. The only way by which you may come really to understand me and the principles of my kingdom is by being born again."

But Nicodemus was utterly nonplused by Christ's answer. He exclaimed: "How can a man be born when he is old?" Jesus did not stop to explain to him the mystery of the new birth, but repeated his previous statement, only in somewhat different phraseology: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except any one be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

Then Nicodemus, as it were, "threw up his hands," and exclaimed, "How can these things be?"

This incident leads us to offer some observations on the relation of the Christian religion to intellectual culture. Nicodemus was an educated man. We know this from several circumstances: he was a Pharisee; he was a member of the Jewish Sanhedrin; Jesus called him "a master of Israel." Perhaps he was a graduate of the University of Jerusalem, and may have sat at the feet of teachers like Hillel and Gamaliel. Yet he could not understand what Jesus meant by the new birth.

These facts lead to a further remark: A man might be a highly educated man from the academic viewpoint, a veritable savant; and yet might be only an abecedarian in spiritual lore. Some one has put it rather poetically, nevertheless truly, in the following way, which we will not attempt to quote literally, but will express in our language:

A man might be a great astronomer, so that he could talk learnedly about the stars and planets of the heavens and their wonderful movements in the universe; and yet he might not be able to discover "the Star of Bethlehem." A man might be a great botanist, able to speak learnedly about all the flowers, plants and trees, and give their technical scientific names and classifications; and yet he might not be able to identify "the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley." Again, a man might be a great geologist, able to discover in an erudite way about the rocks and fossils and the diversified strata of the earth's formation; and yet he might not know how to take his stand on "the Rock of Ages." Once more, a man might be a learned mathematician, competent to solve all the problems of his recondite science; and yet he might not be able to solve the most fundamental and important problem of all, namely: What it would "profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul."

No! History and experience prove that no one can become a Christian by a mere intellectual process. Whether learned or unlearned, men are not made Christians in that way. Christians are made by being "born again."

Sometimes inquiring persons are puzzled over this circumstance. To make the matter concrete, they may put their problem in this form: Here is a very learned man, a veritable Solon, with many scholastic titles attached to his name; yet he does not believe Jesus Christ to be the Savior of the world and the Bible to be the inspired Word of God. On the other hand, here is another man who is equally erudite, with just as many academic titles appended to his name; yet he is a devout believer in Christ and the Bible. How, then, asks the earnest inquirer, are we to decide where great doctors disagree?

We would not chide the questioner because of his mental dilemma; yet his conundrum may be solved in a very simple way: The first man mentioned is not an unbeliever because he is so highly educated in the academic sense, but because he has never been "born again." The other man in this comparison is not a believer because of his great intellectual acquisitions, but because he has had the experience of the "new birth." That experience, and that alone, makes the difference between the believer and the unbeliever, the Christian person and the worldling.

It may be said that these are purely dogmatic statements. Thus far, we grant, they may seem to be so; but they are based on reasonable premises. Suppose our religion depended on erudition and long-drawn and minute historical and scientific investigations; then the vast majority of people never could become Christians. Yet many of the best and most useful Christian people we have known have never attended a college or a university; have never, so to speak, brushed their clothes against academic walls. A religion that is meant to be universal, as the Christian religion certainly is, should be available to everybody. The Christian religion is available; for every person, lettered or unlettered, can, if he will, come to God in the name of Christ through the narrow gateway of repentance and faith, and receive the experience of regeneration by the Holy Spirit. It is not a difficult or complex or protracted process.

Yet this method does, he it frankly said, demand humility and submission. That requirement, however, is reasonable; for a docile attitude of mind is necessary in the presence of all truth, no matter to what realm it may belong. If you go into a chemical or physical laboratory to discover facts regarding the composition and activity of matter, you must investigate in a humble and teachable spirit. You must submit to the physical conditions. The same truth obtains in the laboratory of spiritual experience.

Of this fundamental principle are based several elementary statements of the Bible. The way of salvation, says the prophet, is so plain that "the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein" (Isa. 35:8). "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth," said Jesus, "that thou hast hidden these things from the wise and the prudent, and has revealed them unto babes; even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight" (Matt. 11:25, 26). What a tender, yet rationally fundamental, statement! Paul teaches the same doctrine. "For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe" (1 Cor. 1:21). Again: "The Wisdom of this world is foolishness with God" (1 Cor. 3:19).

All this teaching is just as it should be to meet the universal human need for a clear assurance of truth and salvation. Nor is the foregoing statement of the Christian way of salvation in the least measure to be construed as a belittling of education and intellectual culture. The world needs educated men and women to bring to it many of the necessities and amenities of our physical, social and spiritual existence; to open up the precious treasures of knowledge; to vindicate cogently and convincingly "the ways of God to man," especially in his beneficent revelation through Jesus Christ and in the Holy Scriptures. Yes; the Christian religion is the friend of intellectual culture, even while it proves itself sane and well-balanced by refusing to overstress it and make unreasonable demands upon it.

II The Definition of the New Birth

1. A Simple Statement.

The definition of regeneration (Latin re and generare, to beget; regeneratio, the state of being reborn), which is the theological term for the new birth, need not be made difficult or abstruse. It may be very simply stated in this way: Regeneration is the implanting, by the Holy Spirit, of the principles of a new spiritual life in the human soul. The result is that the divine image in man, lost through Adam's fall, is restored, and thus man again becomes in rapport with God. Surely this is so reasonable a doctrine that one feels it ought to be true.

The process of regeneration might be illustrated from the physical realm; for, as Henry Drummond was wont to say, there is "physical law in the spiritual realm." We might, however, reverse the order by phrasing it: "spiritual law in the physical realm." As the cosmos is a unitary system, it is reasonable to believe that in many respects the same laws hold in all realms.

Our illustration is this: Suppose you own a plot of ground in the rear part of your yard, and wish to convert it into a garden.

In its natural state it is overgrown with weeds and thorns and thistles and infested with noxious vermin. What method of garden-making will you pursue? You will dig up and cast forth the weeds, thorns and thistles, drive out or kill off the infesting vermin, break up the hard soil and harrow it thoroughly, until you have converted it into a fine tilth. Then what is your next step? You certainly do not let it lie fallow. You carefully plant in the mellowed soil some valuable seeds. Then the sunshine warms them, the bland winds blow over them, the dews of heaven moisten them; they begin to germinate, then unfold, break through the surface of the soil, and continue

(Continued on page 15)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

STEWARDSHIP OF LIFE

(Lesson for November 27)

Lesson Text: Mark 1:16-20; Acts 26:12-19;
Golden Text: 2 Cor. 8:5

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Fishers of Men. Mark 1:16-20

Assuredly there was nothing wrong or improper in the business of being a fisherman, or in any other honest business. But God wants us to fix our attention on something of much greater value than fish, or hogs, or corn, or money: he would have us work with life. It may be necessary, like Carey, to "cobble shoes to pay expenses" while we do this greater work, but we should let nothing take our thoughts away from our great objective. We are stewards not only of our own lives, but also of the lives of others. Think well upon James 5:20. Could there be a greater work than saving souls from death unto life? Let us, too, follow the Master in this work.

TUESDAY

Paul's Dedication. Acts 26:12-19

Paul had a two-fold incentive: first, in the glorious vision itself, and second, in the high challenge to service. Few of us would stumble at any task, however difficult, if called to it by the Lord himself, by word of mouth; then when we realize the glorious service to which Paul was called (v. 18), any of us should be glad to yield our own obedience to such a call. May we realize that we have been called to this self-same service, and that we have been called thereto by the Lord of life, himself; and may we, too, be obedient unto the heavenly vision!

WEDNESDAY

Isaiah's Dedication. Isa. 61:8

Just as Jesus called those first disciples to be fishers of men, and called Paul and Isaiah to the self-same work, so he has been calling to those who would hear his voice down through the ages: "Who will go for us?" Each must learn of God himself the particular mission to which he calls us; but rest assured he is calling us—each one. When he has given so much for us, dare we refuse what he asks of us? After all, it is no great thing—only a "reasonable service." (Rom. 12:1).

THURSDAY

Using Our Talents. Matt. 25:14-23

As has often been pointed out, these servants were not rewarded for their success in increasing their Lord's treasure, but for their faithful use of that which had been placed in their keeping. The man who had gained only two talents received precisely the same commendation as the man who had gained five. There is no greater reward for which any Christian may strive than this same commendation: May we so use our talents for the Master that we may be found faithful and may be able to present increased treasure to our Lord when he comes.

FRIDAY

Losing our Talents. Matt. 25:24-30

This poor man had done nothing wrong; in fact, the whole trouble was he had done nothing at all. God had placed a great treasure in his keeping, and by his failure to use it he suffered the universal penalty of neglect: he lost that which he had neglected. God has also given us life, the greatest treasure of all, to be used for him until he calls us to account: Will we use it for him? Or will we lose it? God keep us from the sin of neglect!

SATURDAY

Entrusted with a Stewardship. 1 Cor. 9:16-23

"Dispensation of the gospel" (v. 17), is more properly "stewardship of the gospel." Elsewhere we read that we are "stewards of the manifold grace of God." What wonderful things God has entrusted to our keeping! And moreover it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful. The stewardship of the gospel is the greatest fact of life, is higher than life itself, in the ordinary use of the word, for it involves eternal life. O God, may we be faithful stewards of our own lives, and may we faithfully dispense to others that gospel which shall bring the more abundant life!

SUNDAY

First Things First. Matt. 6:28-34

When God calls a man to a work, if we will heed his voice he will teach us and empower us for that work. He even provides for our physical and temporal needs, not only in the sense in which he so provides for us all every day, but in more miraculous ways when need be. Elijah at the brook can testify to this; so could George Muller—and so could all of us. Lord increase our faith; help us to put first things first, then all things needful may be added unto us!

E. M. RIDDLE, President 1117 Randolph, Iowa Waterloo, Iowa F. G. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio
J. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.

Christian Endeavor Activities in the Pennsylvania District

By W. H. Schaffer, District President

(Dear Young People: Have you forgotten to write to me about the organization of new societies during October? You will remember that October was Organization month.

THE PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT. IS FIRST TO SEND THEIR REPORTS. WHO WILL BE THE NEXT SOCIETY?

C. D. WHITMER,
Department Editor.)

The following report was made at the Pennsylvania District Conference held at Johnstown, Pennsylvania, October 14, 1932.

The number of churches reporting Christian Endeavor societies were 21.

An enrollment of active members in the Young People's Societies of 701 was reported, Masontown having the largest enrollment of 150.

Enrollment of Associate members in the Young People's Society was 80, with Masontown having 25.

A total enrollment of all members in the Young People's Society was 776, with Masontown heading the list with 175 members.

All of the societies hold their meetings weekly and on Sunday evening.

A report of seven Junior Societies was made. (Several have organized since.)

The enrollment for Junior Societies is 187 with Johnstown First, leading with 35. One Intermediate Society of 25 members at the Johnstown First church, was reported.

The following reports deal only with the Young People's Societies:

A net gain in membership was realized from September 1, 1931 to September 1, 1932 of 128, with the Brush Valley Society leading with 25. The loss in the same time was 13. That leaves a net gain for the year of 115.

Nine Societies report definite missionary activities in the form of jail services, local missions, Missionary programs, Midweek Missionary studies on Missions.

Offerings to Home Missions during the year amounted to $63.00, Waynesboro giving the largest offering of $15.00.

Offerings to Foreign Missions during the year were $151.00, Johnstown First giving $100.00.

Offerings contributed to local needs during the year were $114.24 for local expenses, building funds, pastor's salaries, etc. Allentown gave $35.00.

The number of Life Work Recruits (Those who have dedicated their lives to definite Christian work and are preparing toward that end) is 10. Johnstown First reports 6.

Number of Expert Endeavorers who hold or have pending certificates, 37. Conemaugh reports 8 and Brush Valley 8.

Two expert Endeavor courses are planned for the near future.

Eighteen societies report social activities.

Other definite Christian activities other than aforementioned were: Prayer for sick in homes, programs, community meetings, conducting church service in absence of pastor, conduct services at Children's Home.

Eighteen societies report that their pastor takes an active part in the society by: attendance, taking part, superintending, advising, etc.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN

Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to

R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berna, Indiana

Dr. Gribble Chronicles Events

70 rue de Pretoria, Antwerp, Belgium.

September 30, 1932.

Dear Evangelist Readers:

It has occurred to me that a brief chronicle of the month which has elapsed since some of us met and parted at our National Conference, might be of interest to you. It was a pleasure to travel with my sister-in-law, Mrs. Irvin Gribble, on the day following Conference, to Grand Rapids, Michigan, where I had the privilege of hearing a wonderful missionary program, conducted by Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Westervelt and their group of young men—all sons of missionaries, and looking forward to foreign fields. As most of these young men were at one time under my care as babes, some of them from their very birth, it surely was an occasion of rejoicing as I beheld "what God hath wrought" in their lives. We were entertained at Grand Rapids by Mr. and Mrs. Pretzel, whose kind hospitality was greatly appreciated. Mrs. Slack, who spends her vacations with them, had already departed to her Kentucky work.

The next day in spite of the heat we drove through to Detroit where I remained several days in my brother-in-law's home, reviewing the manuscripts of "Undaunted Hope."

On Sunday afternoon, I had the privilege of giving an address on Medical Missions to the Blackwell Society (of Detroit doctors) assembled at the farm home of the famous Chicago woman doctor, Bertha Van Hoesen—Rochester, Michigan.

Much of blessing attended our efforts here, we believe. The full results of our service here below we shall know only in eternity. How blessed is the privilege of sowing beside all waters!

Johnstown, Pennsylvania

The following day we were on our way to New Cumberland. At Johnstown we had the very pleasant surprise of meeting Dr. and Mrs. Bauman and Paul. It was a great pleasure that night to address through Dr. Bauman's courtesy the large audience assembled to hear him—his own address being deferred until the following evening. We are grateful to the Johnstown church for the very substantial gift made toward outfit. The following afternoon found us at my husband's parental home at New Cumberland, Pennsylvania, warmly welcomed by the sisters who now occupy it.

For some months gifts for missionaries had been mailed there by personal friends and churches. And now we plunged into the work of unpacking, listing and repacking, generously aided by the bevy of interested sisters.

Although we arrived on Tuesday it was not until Saturday afternoon that the work was completed, all boxes and trunks forwarded by express to Philadelphia and we ourselves off for an evening meeting at Mountain top, Pennsylvania, where our beloved missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon have relatives. We were entertained in their hospitable home at Glenn Summit Springs. A brief service in Ashley on Sunday morning was followed by a train trip to Philadelphia where we had the pleasure of meeting once more, albeit in farewell, our Philadelphia friends. Monday and Tuesday were spent in additional packing, as gifts for missionaries on the field were arriving until actually the last moment before our supposed departure. One-half hour before train-time the last trunk was closed, the freight shipment was in order, and we were ready to depart for the station with baggage—when Mr. Seitz entered. He, having been away, had known of my arrival but had supposed me to be already departed. A brief telephonic communication with his wife resulted in a change of my own plans—as with a sense of relief I accepted their kind proposal to drive me to New York on the following day. I remained one more night at the hospitable home of our dear brother and sister Kimmell and then Brother and Sister Seitz on the front seat, with trunks and bags occupying the rear, proceeded to New York. Thus a day which on previous occasions has always been a day of strain and fatigue, was transformed into one of relaxation and pleasure.

Note.—Several active societies did not return their reports and we are certain that Christian Endeavor is stronger in this district than this report actually shows. The officers for the present year are: President, W. H. Schaffer; Vice President, Dora McCoy; Secretary-Treasurer, Robert Ashman.

We visited the American Mission to Lepers, where we had a pleasant and profitable interview, Ford's agent where we gained information for future use, and finally the Cunard Line office, from which we proceeded direct to Hoboken, New Jersey, from which the boat was sailing. Brother and Sister Seitz both came on board with me, disembarked at the last moment with other visitors and remained on the wharf until the Mauretania loosed her moorings and we were once more at sea. It was a precious moment of prayer together on deck just before we separated. How sweet will be these memories in days to come!

And now I turned to the large steamer mail—letters, packages, and even one telegram. The unpacking and settling in our very comfortable cabin was soon accomplished. My room-mate was an English lady—Miss Richardson—very pleasant and congenial. My table mates, except a New England professor, were also English, as this is not the ordinary time for Americans to go abroad. The sum total of the Mauretania's passengers first, tourist and third was only 300, while officers and crew numbered 600! Quite a contrast to the Wadai on which we will soon sail to Africa whose berths are all booked full!

For the most of the journey we had a moderate sea. A day or two even the sailors acknowledged to be rough, and my old enemy "mal de mer" was an unwelcome visitor.

Some of our passengers disembarked at Plymouth, some at Cherbourg, but the majority went on to Southampton.

Here I disembarked also, traveling at the Cunard Line Company's expense, across England and the Channel to Antwerp, the port to which I had booked. This arrangement included one day in London at the National Hotel. As I spent eight days in London, a week of the time was spent at the guest home of Mrs. Weber, in Highgate, London, N-6 at 35 Langdon Park Road. Friends from the Church of the Brethren who pass through London will remember her gratefully. It seemed good to see the "Gospel Messenger" in the home, to hear the familiar "Dunkard" names as household words, and to remember "all (we) are Brethren."

Some of my shopping was done in London. Those who may in future travel by Cunard Line will be interested to know that underwear, hosiery, etc., is purchasable in London at approximately one-third of American prices. This is partly because the £ is so greatly in our favor as to exchange—being now between $3.47 and $3.57 instead of $4.87 as it used to be. We took advantage of this to invest money which had been committed to us for our own passage and that of other missionaries in pounds. Passage on the German steamer—on which five of us are so soon traveling to or from France, three (Miss Myers, Miss Crawford and myself) on the outward voyage—two (Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway) on the homeward voyage of the same steamer—is payable in pounds—best purchased in England.

England to me was also a place of the Lord's bounty as manifested in two remarkable gifts to the medical work—one of a pathological set presented by Dr. Neif Leitch, the famous London pathologist, the other of a case of antiseptics sent to Kribi, carriage free, by Mr. Locke, a London dealer. As the medical work is now entirely dependent upon the faithfulness of a prayer hearing God through the free-will offerings of his children,—definitely as specified—these surprising and unsolicited gifts have been received as a special token of his favor and blessing upon it.

In London I met a dear old lady who had been 48 years in India with only a single year of furlough. She was however in a healthful district, had never had malaria and had frequent residences among India's lofty mountains. She surprised me by handing me a little gift to be forwarded to Marguerite.

I had the privilege also of being a frequent guest of the Royal Empire Society, through the kindness of Mr. Dorey—a valiant friend of the "Mission Oubangui-Char" and of all its members who visit England or France. Under Mr. Dorey's escort I was also privileged to visit the British Museum, where are displayed the latest archaeological findings from Egypt, Babylonia and the Ur of Chaldees. These vindicate, as such findings, always must, the truth of God's invincible word, and the accuracy of its verbal inspiration.

The National Art Gallery interested me especially as to the various artistic conceptions of our Lord, and as to the representations of the "Holy Family."

The visit to the headquarters of the British and Foreign Bible Society was also fraught with interest. It is a great pleasure to meet such men as Dr. Kilgour and Mr. Platt. The latter had recently returned from his tour of the Belgian Congo and was especially enthused as to the necessity for immediate and concerted effort on the part of all those who hold the truth in sincerity. He referred especially to the changing methods and rapid advances of Catholicism in the Belgian Congo. The conditions in the Belgian Congo are sounding a warning cry to us who labor in French Territory where Catholicism, while rapidly advancing, has as yet made fewer inroads. Already Belgian Protestant missionaries find their hands are tied. Shall we wait until ours are also? Or shall we labor while we may?

It was a great pleasure and rare privilege to have a Sunday in England. I took advantage of it to hear Campbell Morgan at the Westminster Congregational Church in the morning and Drusdale Young at a down-town Methodist church, (strong in the fundamentals) in the evening. Strange to say the same text was used on both occasions, "Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world." I never hear the text quoted but what I hear again, as it were, Mr. Gribble's sententious remark: "The 'Lo' is for those who set about to 'go.'"

Dr. Cook and Dr. Leitch, two eminent tropical specialists have kindly examined me and believe they can cure both the heart condition and the filariasis. How wonderful should I be spared again to see you!

On Wednesday night I left London, traveling by train, by steamship "Antwerp" to Antwerp. I had the worst of all my "Channel" crossings, but God wonderfully answered prayer in sustaining and relieving.

I am now with Mr. and Mrs. J. Palmer Hern, formerly of Leopoldville, Congo Belge, now conducting a Mission Hostel in Antwerp. I leave tomorrow for Paris, where Mr. Taber will meet me.

If this reaches you in time will you pray for the little party of outgoing missionaries as we embark at Boulogne (France) on October 18th for Kribi?

May God bless us as we together labor with united efforts to prepare a Highway for the Second Coming of our King in the completion of our task of world-evangelization.

Lovingly your missionary friend,
FLORENCE N. GRIBBLE.

God has blessed the church in a wonderful way.

Several letters of former pastors were read,—Dr. J. Allen Miller, Brother Garber, and Wolford—these letters brought memories of other days to many. Brother Duker was present and gave a talk relating experiences during his long pastorate.

We have one charter member, Mrs. Amanda Leonard—eighty-two,—she loves her church and is faithful in her attendance.

Brother Stuckman, assisted by our choir leader, Mrs. Wilson, and some of our young people, presented "Our church album."

This pantomime began with the history of the Church and closed with the history of our local church. This was a pleasing presentation of church history and was enjoyed by all.

These five years in our first unit have been busy years. After all, the busy church is the growing church.

These are times when the church should not retrench—through the loyalty of our people in adversity as well as in prosperity and the very capable leadership of Brother Stuckman, we are going forward.

EDNA NICHOLAS.

REPORT OF THE WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION HELD IN BRAZIL

Dr. H. C. Tucker, for more than forty years the general agent of the American Bible Society in Brazil, and perhaps the best loved of all Brazil's Evangelical leaders, has prepared this comprehensive statement concerning the recent

Eleventh World's Sunday School Convention

The Eleventh World's Sunday School Convention was called to order by Dean Luther A. Weigle of Yale University at 2:00 P. M. on July 25, 1932, in the magnificent Municipal Theater, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Devotional exercises were conducted by Bishop Wm. M. Thomas of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Southern Brazil. The welcome address was given by Sr. Jose Luiz Fernandes Braga, chairman of the Local Convention Committee, a successful merchant and prominent Sunday School worker. He was followed by the chairman of the Brazil Sunday School Union. Appreciative responses were made by chosen representatives from the continents of Africa, Asia, Australia, Europe, North America and South America. An official representative from the Presidential box in the Theater brought from the President of the Republic most cordial greetings and ardent wishes for the success of the Convention. A message from the President of the World's Sunday School Association, Sir Harold Mackintosh of Halifax, England, who was unavoidably absent, was heard by the great audience in the Theater and a still greater audience by means of radio. There is only space to quote a sentence or two. "Rio de Janeiro has the fame of being the most beautiful city in the world, and your country and its inhabitants are numbered among the most amiable and hospitable of all peoples. Permit me to repeat to you one of Kipling's verses that since my student days has lived in my thought:

I've never sailed the Amazon,
I've never reached Brazil,
Yet, weekly from Southampton,
Great steamers, white and gold,
Go rolling down to Rio,
And I'd like to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old."

BRYAN, OHIO

The work at Bryan, Ohio, is moving along in a steady trend. While we are not doing anything that might be termed as spectacular, yet we feel that we are making some gains. We have not had to make any retrenchments because of present world conditions, as far as the work is concerned. To be sure our budget is not what it had been, but we are not willing to take any backward step. We feel that if there ever was a time the church needed to move forward it is now. This is the opportune time for the church to do some definite work, when people do not have so much money that they can go every place else. To close the church and wait till times get better, would amount to the same as a farmer refusing to plant any crops till he has the mortgage paid off on his farm. So while we cannot do all that we had hoped to do, it may be the Lord's way of using us to do greater things for him. If people will get back to earth, the church will have an opportunity to reason with them about God and his program for their salvation. So the Bryan church is seeking to go forward in the name of Jesus Christ, and doing his will, and we know he will lead through these difficult and trying times.

Every department of the church is working in a commendable way, and we have no reason to be discouraged in any way. When every department of the church is working in harmony and seeking the leadership of the Holy Spirit, it is bound to go forward. The services are growing in interest since the summer slump, and people are beginning to settle down for the winter.

November 13th we are beginning our revival meetings. We will have Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Richer with us again to lead the music. We were all so pleased with our services last winter that we decided to have them again, and that is good news not only to our own church, but to the town's people. We are looking forward to a good meeting, and believe that souls will be saved. We ask a special interest in the prayers of praying people in behalf of these meetings.

C. A. STEWART.

ELKHART, INDIANA

Homecoming Day, November 8, was a day of inspiration—a day of blessings socially and spiritually. While there were but few strangers with us, it was a great day for our own people. Each service was largely attended and we all felt it was a source of encouragement.

The day began with a large attendance at Sunday school, which was followed by preaching; our pastor, Brother Stuckman, gave the morning address.

Dinner was served and it was no "depression" dinner, every one present enjoyed the dinner and the social hour that followed.

The afternoon services were very informal.

Reports of money raised during this five year period showed almost $40,000 passed through our church treasury. Nearly two hundred members were added to our roll. These five years have been wonderful years,—years of spiritual uplift, years of work and sacrifice, years of great joy and satisfaction because, of the work begun, a large and very definite task was accomplished. In every way our work has been strengthened and enabled to go on in a larger service.

During this period Brother W. I. Duker was our pastor and through his leadership and the willingness of his people to respond

"This great international Convention represents the greatest and mightiest voluntary movement in the world, cooperating for the Christian education of coming generations. The Sunday school scholar of today will be the Christian citizen of tomorrow. The Sunday school is indeed the hope of the future. Heaven grant that the Living Christ may unite us all, those present and those absent, in a new and greater consecration to his service."

The Chairman of the Executive Committee explained the plan and purpose of the Convention, the official photograph was taken and a reception followed in the spacious lobbies in which genuine Brazilian coffee was served after the style of the country.

The Convention was now in full swing and went forward day after day with the splendid program built around the Convention theme—"The Living Christ." There were two general sessions a day, afternoon and evening; six Seminar Groups did excellent work in the mornings, and brought to the Convention their findings and recommendations. Three popular conference sessions on each of five great topics were held in churches and halls in different parts of the city. The Youth Council planned under the leadership of Dr. George Stewart, the first of its kind on an international basis in South America, was successfully carried out at the Bennett College. The Choir of 500 voices and the beautiful and impressive Pageant entitled "The Christ of the Ages" under the direction of Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston University contributed largely to the success of the Convention. The Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah, as well as other masterpieces sung in Portuguese, and the Convention Hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" sung in many tongues, thrilled the assembly from time to time.

The educational Exhibit assembled and set up by the skillful hand of Mr. Harvey E. Cressman of Philadelphia in the rooms of the School of Fine Arts was visited, appreciated and studied day after day by hundreds other than delegates of the Convention. In an adjoining room 500 Color Reproductions of World Famous Masterpieces, constituting a Temple of Religious Art were shown and interpreted daily by Prof. Smith to increasing numbers of interested visitors and delegates.

An audience of perhaps 10,000 gathered in a large park near the center of the city on the afternoon of Convention Sunday, and heard, by the aid of loud speakers, brief messages from representatives of thirty-three nations, and led by a Salvation Army band joined in singing Sunday School hymns in different languages.

There were held eleven general sessions of the Convention; the Pageant was given twice; the meetings of Seminars, Youth Council, Popular Conferences, Groups by Languages and Areas, the Executive Committee of the World's Sunday School Association and other groups connected with the Convention numbered seventy-five. Ninety-six program participants were listed in the Convention Who's Who coming from every continent in the world. One-half of these either live in Latin America or are able to speak Portuguese or Spanish. In the main sessions every speaker announced save one was present ready to respond to his program assignment. The enrollment of delegates was 1,619 from thirty-three nations. Special arrangements were made whereby from the local churches many others in addition to the official delegates attended some of the sessions. At times the audience numbered more than 2,000 persons.

There were a number of social events and contacts of interest. The Banquet provided by the President, Sir Harold Mackintosh, brought together in delightful fellowship delegates of the several nations and races represented. The usual Pilgrim's Banquet for delegates who had attended one or more World Conventions was presided over by the greatly beloved Dr. W. C. Pearce of Los Angeles who stood at the head of the list, this being the seventh World's Convention he has attended. The President of the Local Committee entertained all Latin American delegates who mingled together in delightful fellowship and a spirit of continental solidarity. The University Club of Rio de Janeiro, the Rotary Club and others entertained numbers of the delegates at luncheons. I saw in the lobby of the hotel, as guests were gathering for one of these banquets, five Protestant Bishops and a number of prominent Church leaders of various denominations, races and countries mingling together in conversation and Christian Fellowship.

An interesting and lengthy communication could be written on Brazil as Host of the Convention. Delegates at the Sixth World's Convention in Washington, 1910, put South America on the Sunday School map of the world; and at each succeeding Convention at Zurich, Tokyo, Glasgow and Los Angeles, Brazil repeated her invitation to the delegates to come to Rio de Janeiro. When the invitation was finally accepted at Los Angeles one of the Brazilian delegates, passing through New York on his return homeward, walked into the head office of the World's Sunday School Association at New York, handed to the General Secretary a thousand dollars, saying that is the first of the five thousand dollars Brazil will give to have the Convention as her guest; Brazil wanted this Convention. This Christian gentleman accepted the chairmanship of the local committee arrangements; very soon a number were gathered to make up the General Committee and they were divided into various subcommittees with tasks assigned. It was agreed that at noon every day all who could would meet in a room at the Convention headquarters for a few minutes in prayer for guidance and fellowship; this proved to be increasingly a blessing. A campaign for funds started from the offices of the Brazil Sunday School Union brought responses from Sunday schools and individuals throughout the country. Literally thousands made contributions, most of them small but the sum total was sufficient. Government authorities readily granted the free use of the beautiful Municipal Theatre for the Convention sessions, spacious rooms in the School of Fine Arts building just across the Rio Branco Avenue from the Convention Hall for the Exhibit, and facilitated the passing of exhibit material and baggage through the customs free. The hotels of the city were ready to do their part; the press responded and during the Convention gave generous space in reporting the proceedings; the illustrated papers and photographers featured the Convention in two weekly issues; and Radio Companies cooperated splendidly. The Protestant churches of the city generously offered the use of their auditoriums and schools rooms and invited delegates to occupy their pulpits; many homes were open to visitors and all the citizens were courteous, kind and interested. Foreign delegates were conducted on sight-seeing tours about the city and out along the splendid automobile drives over the surrounding mountains and by the sea shores.

The President of the Republic very cordially received a delegation commissioned to convey to him and to the Brazilian Government and people most hearty thanks for the generous hospitality and consideration accorded the Convention. He readily consented to be photographed with the commission in the garden of the Presidential residence; this will be a historic picture.

Greetings and messages of encouragement were received from many parts of the world; from the Prime Minister of Great Britain, the President of the United States, the Patriarch of Jerusalem, the Prime Minister of Japan, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of China, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, and from many others prominent in State, Church, business, educational and social circles.

We would not leave the impression on the minds of our readers, that the Convention was mainly an occasion of social, international, interracial and interdenominational fellowship. The story of the profound study and preparation that produced the many splendid, informing, thought-provoking and inspiring public addresses, the enlightening direction given to study groups and the results summed up in the findings, will appear in the Convention volume. This is to be published separately in Portuguese and English. This will be the first time that the entire proceedings of a World's Sunday School Convention have been published in another language than English. Brazil appreciates the honor, and the cause of Evangelical Religious Education in Latin America will be greatly advanced. The Convention was indeed a great success and was well worth while the time, labor, money, travel and sacrifice that many from all parts of the world gave to make it possible.

The Convention has made a profound impression on the public, and has contributed as no single event of the past to raise the Protestant Evangelical Church and Sunday School movement in Brazil and elsewhere in the estimation and respect of the people generally. The effect and influence of the Convention on the mind and heart of workers, foreign and national, and the community of believers in Brazil and throughout South America has been, and will be increasingly to dispel the sense of isolation heretofore keenly felt.

The spirit of the Convention was forward-looking, and hopeful. The leaders, speakers and delegates were, like the multitudes everywhere, sobered into deep seriousness by the disappointments, disillusionments and depressions that have come to the world of mankind in recent years; but not a word of pessimism was uttered at any time. The Living Christ, the hope and light of the world, was the dominant note all the way through. There stands on Corcovado Mountain overlooking the city of Rio a massive reinforced concrete figure of Christ with outstretched arms. Coinciding with the opening of the Convention Roman Catholic plans were completed for the nightly illumination of the statue. Multitudes beheld the scene in striking contrast with the purpose and program of the Convention to unveil, reveal, illumine and exalt The Living Christ in human hearts and lives.

From time to time tourists seeking pleasure, scientists in search of knowledge, educators and others on missions of good will, capitalists, engineers and business men looking for investments and for commercial and industrial expansion, in increasing numbers have been coming to South America, but never before has so large and representative a group from thirty-three nations of the world visited this Continent on Business for the King.

The Twelfth World's Sunday School Convention goes to Scandinavia in 1936.

Dr. Merrill has said that the liberal in religion is like Abraham, who "went out, not knowing whither he was going." But the danger is that he may resemble the Abraham described by a backwoods preacher, who "went out, not knowing whether he was going or not."—John Bunyan, in The Baptist.

A Texas paper comments as follows: "The preacher has a great time. If his hair is gray, he is too old. If he is a young man, he hasn't had experience. If he has ten children, he has too many; if he has none, he isn't setting a good example. If his wife sings in the choir, she is presuming; if she doesn't she isn't interested in her husband's work. If a preacher reads from notes, he is a bore; if he speaks extemporaneously, he isn't deep enough. If he stays at home in his study, he doesn't mix enough with the people; if he is seen around the streets, he ought to be at home getting up a good sermon. If he calls on some poor family, he is playing to the grandstand; if he calls at the home of the wealthy, he is an aristocrat. Whatever he does, someone could have told him how to do better."—The Churchman.

THE RATIONAL BASIS OF THE NEW BIRTH

(Continued from page 11)

to grow, until presently you have a beautiful flower and vegetable garden.

In that way, precisely, the new life is begotten in the soul. Through the law that foreign growths are uprooted and cast away, the corrupt creatures removed; then the soil is broken up by begetting repentance, contrition, sorrow for sin and desire for salvation. At this point the new vital spiritual principle is planted in the receptive soul; and that divine act constitutes regeneration. The result, or fruitage, of the new birth is the ability to exercise active faith in Christ as the Savior, bringing justification on God's part and the beginning of sanctification on the believer's part. This last is a progressive work of grace, and is furthered by the correlation of the divine will and the renewed (regenerated) human will. In this way the believing soul (to keep up the figure) is converted into a beautiful and useful "garden of the Lord," which may be said to "blossom as the rose." To possess such a heart-garden ought to be the earnest desire of every individual.

2. A Statement in Psychological Terms. It may be objected that our argument is based on imagery; that it is simply founded on an illustration from the physical realm, and that proves nothing. "That explanation is not sufficiently psychological," says the objector.

Then let us apply psychology. Just as an external object, say a tree, through the well-known optical and physiological media, carries a stimulus back to the center of consciousness in the cortex of the brain, and there meets with the corresponding response in the self-conscious mind, so that the person says, "I see a tree out yonder on the campus"; just so the Holy Spirit, through the medium of the law and the Gospel, whether read, heard, or otherwise made known, carries a spiritual stimulus to the soul and creates within it new powers and perceptions, which in turn enable it to react to the gracious appeal in sequential and corresponding ways. That is the psychology of Christian conversion. In this mediated process and experience, theology and psychology meet and integrate; one might almost say, meet and embrace each other. Between them has been established a true modus vivendi.

(To be continued)

"I DIDN'T KNOW THAT!"

The Prophet attended the Great Council of Prophets and Scribes, and the shortage of Shekels and the size of the Debts for the great organization caused much debate and much re-organization and de-organization. And it came to pass at a time when the stomach joined in with the loud speakers and got the floor, one of the Prophets spake thusly to the Prophet who writeth this, "Wherefore, when Shekels are so scarce, do the High Priests go to the High-Brow Inn for refreshment and rest, while many of us go to Low-Brow Inns?"

And the Prophet said, "I know not why, and furthermore it is none of my business."

And it came to pass, when none had any wind to speak any more, a Scribe arose and thanked all who had made the sojourn of the Prophets so pleasant in that hospitable city; and behold, he thanked the High-Brow Inn for refreshment and rest, while many of us go to Low-Brow Inns!

And the Prophet who wanted to know the "why," confessed and said, "Oh, I didn't know that!"

And the Prophet said, "If the so-called Prophets knew first what they were talking about, there would be more light and less heat in the Great Council. And in a good many other places." —Now and Then.

OUR LITTLE READERS

ON TO GRANDPA'S

Mother had been talking for several weeks of going to grandpa's for Thanksgiving, and now at last, with the trunks packed and at the station, and with Helen and Gertrude and Baby Weldon by her side in a tiny room on the through express, they were on their way.

Helen and Gertrude had often ridden on the cars before, but then they had simply sat in straight-backed seats and ridden for a little distance; but there they had a beautiful stateroom all to themselves and because there was Baby Weldon papa had arranged to have a berth made up all the time so that Mamma could lay him down whenever he wanted to sleep.

At first Helen and Gertrude watched the cows that lazily looked at the train as it went by, or scampered away across the fields when the whistle of the engine startled them. But soon they both grew hungry and tired. Then mother said, "Let us have a little party."

In a few minutes she had a little table set up at one side of the stateroom, with napkins on it and sandwiches and cake and fruit, and they had a very jolly party all by themselves.

But their eyes grew heavy at last, and after the porter had made another bed Mamma tucked Helen and Gertrude safely in for the night, and the motion of the train rocked them to sleep; when they awoke it was morning.

"Is this Grandpa's?" asked Helen, as the train stopped in a big city.

"Oh, no!" said mother. "We shall not get to Grandpa's until seven o'clock tonight." "Can't we make some rings and bracelets and baskets?" asked Helen.

"I forgot the beads," said Mamma, "but there is something else that I didn't forget!"

Then from the big travelling bag she took a bundle of white paper and a bundle of brown crinkly paper and a box of water-color paints, a little tube of mullage, some red and some dark-green sealing wax, some copper wire, a pair of pincers, and last of

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

The members of the Brethren Church deserve commendation for their breadth of vision, as indicated in their having undertaken to support so large a variety of interests outside of the borders of their local congregations. The College, Foreign Missions, Home Missions, and District Missions, a thriving Woman's Missionary Society, a National Sunday School organization, A National Christian Endeavor organization, a Laymen's organization, besides The Brethren's Home and the attempt to do something worth while in support of our superannuated ministry. This is a large program for a denomination with the numerical strength of ours, and the degree of financial competency which exists among our people. And it is most heartening to note the measure of loyalty expressed in such a time as this. Knowing that in many instances the offerings which are made in support of these, represent a real sacrifice, it is with keen regret that attention must be called to the crisis through which the Management of the Brethren's Home is passing. Though every effort is made to conserve its resources, it must have fuel to keep its inmates from suffering, and both food and clothing to otherwise support them. Believing that our people only need to know the situation to come to its relief, both with their prayers and their gifts, we, whom you have made responsible for the care of the institution, have pledged ourselves to bring to you a weekly message of information, concerning the Home and its needs. This faith of ours has already borne fruit, and we have thanked the Lord for help which his people have offered. Pray for the Brethren's Home, but not only for it as an institution, but for its inmates, its superintendent and matron, its treasurer, who has done so much for it, and its board of directors. And having thus prayed, do as the Holy Spirit leads.

Send all gifts to The Brethren's Home, Flora, Indiana, or to its treasurer, Henry Rinehart, same address.

MARTIN SHIVELY.

all two or three handfuls of big, fat, English walnuts.

"Oh, what are we going to do?" cried both girls.

"I think," said Mamma, "that we can make a lot of little turkeys for the Thanksgiving dinner, so that every one at the table can have a whole one. I will make the first one."

First she twisted three strands of the wire together like a rope and cut off pieces just long enough for the turkey's legs. With a bit of the dark-green sealing wax, melted on the steam pipe, she fastened the legs to the under side of one of the walnuts. When the sealing wax was dry, she spread the end of the wires apart to make three toes, so the turkey stood up.

Then she took part of the paper and cut some of it into pieces of the right size and shape, some for tails and some for wings. With the water-color paints she drew brown stripes across the paper and then folded it up like a little fan. When she smoothed it out again, each piece was marked with brown and white just as a turkey's tail and wings are marked.

When the wings and tail were dry, Mamma stuck them carefully on the sides and one end of the walnut. Then on the other end she made a neck and head of green sealing wax, with little dashes of red sealing wax for the comb and the wattles. At last it was done; the funniest little turkey the children had ever seen. It stood straight up on the table, with its head held proudly in the air, its wings and tail outstretched.

And how they worked after that to make turkeys like it!

Not only once did they ask for anything to eat or say they were tired, and when at last Mamma said, "We must put everything away now, for in an hour we shall be at Grandpa's," they counted, and found that they had a flock of twelve turkeys. They had only just time to put them all away carefully when the train stopped, and a tall man with a white beard came into the little room and kissed Mamma, and said, as he stretched out his hands to the two little girls, "Come to your Grandpa, you youngsters!"

The next day, at dinner, there was a proud little turkey at every plate, besides the big one, which did not look so proud, in the center of the table; and Grandpa said that was the first time he had ever known any one to raise turkeys on a railway train. —Frank E. Graeff, in The Youth's Companion.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BRYAN, OHIO

We will hold our communion service on November 28th in the Bryan church, and we invite all those of like faith to attend and commune with us.

C. A. STEWART, Pastor.

FREMONT, OHIO, BRETHREN

Fremont, Ohio, Brethren will hold their Communion services Sunday evening, November 20th at 7:30 o'clock, and the annual Homecoming and Anniversary Services Sunday, November 27th. A cordial invitation is extended to all neighboring Brethren.

REV. WM. S. CRICK, Minister.

ANOTHER EMERGENCY CORNER

The Benevolent Board of the Brethren Church is wondering if there are any churches which have not contributed to the Superannuated Fund, or who there may be that has taken an offering and has forgotten to send it in. It is very nearly time for the December payment to those who are on our lists for support and we frankly tell you that there is not sufficient funds in the treasury to send out the checks in full. We do not want to do anything to militate against the Home Mission offering, but the need is so great that we are appealing to all who have failed to send in their offerings and any others who will help this needy cause to send any amounts, large or small, to our secretary, Rev. G. L. Maus, Roann, Indiana.

Are our aged ministers and their wives to suffer because we have forgotten? Already we have applications for additional support and we are not able to respond to them in an affirmative manner.

Come on! Let's get under this burden and MOVE IT!

FRED C. VANATOR,
President Benevolent Board.

The Prohibition Campaign Is Not Over

MILLIONS

Must fight for God and Home and a Sober Land

AND OUR CAMPAIGN FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS

for the

Brethren Evangelist has just Started

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 90 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions. $1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscrip-

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor tions

Church now renewing its list

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscription is one not now getting the paper.)

VOL. LIV
Number 46

November 26
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

BEHOLD THE LAMB OF GOD

—Alexander Bida.

DID YOU
send in that offering for Home
Missions?

DID YOU do your best?

Then
GOD
BLESS
YOU

A Parable of the Depression

By Sanley B. Crosland

And behold, two men lived in the trying days of 1932. Both were of the same age and both enjoyed good health but, sad to relate, both suffered equal heavy losses in Ye Common Stock and in 6% Gold Bonds and both lost money in Ye National Bank which failed to open on a certain Friday in spite of Ye Federal Reserve Systemme and Ye Reconstruction Finance Corppe. Both alike were they in many ways, but in one great difference were they unlike as between a coward and a brave man. Yet in this difference hangs our sad yet hopeful tale.

After ye said crash, the first man went up unto his house; kicked his faithful dog and, together with the dog, sulked into the presence of his good wife. Thereupon he poured forth his woe like unto a break in a water main and she, poor soul, was more disturbed by what the loss had done unto the character of her husband than the greatness of the loss itself.

And so the supper was spoiled and they ate not, neither didst return thanks for the good things which were upon their table. And behold, the gloom settled down upon that house so thick that one mightest cut it with a knife. The more she pitied him the more didst flow the grief, and so on, and on, long into the night. Wherefore, she, who had worked all day and was weary, didst suffer herself to try to mend his sore hurt throughout the long watches of the night until the sixth hour. The long days and the still longer nights passed over this man and he saw not. For the loss of money had blinded his eyes to all else. He didst not sleep, neither ate he of his food. He starved his soul of the blessedness of God's goodness.

It soon became a habit. Like unto a drug, it affected him. The more pity that was heaped upon him by his relatives and friends, the worse he became. Soon he began to enjoy poor health and imagined poverty. Only one of his relatives knew what was the matter. That relative was too young to dare say it out loud. But in his room the little shaver didst say unto himself, "Granddad should be whipped and put to bed without his supper, and told to try to remember that he was a big boy now and must not act like a baby."

Verily, I say unto you, the little grandson was 97½% correct and the other relatives did more harm than good with their pity. And finally, the man died and was buried. In the future life he found it was too hot to cool his brow by fanning himself with frozen assets and stock certificates.

But the second man, after ye crash, went up unto his house and didst bathe himself and put upon his body fresh clothes and went unto his wife and said, "I feel thirty years younger, for, behold, in view of my present financial calculations, I now stand where I was thirty years ago. Now we will have all the fun and adventure of starting over again as when we were first married. My only regret is that I did not buy you the electric ice box before the bank failed, for in my old age I find watermelon on ice a great comfort."

Then arose his wife and came unto the man and, placing a kiss upon his clean-shaven cheek, spake as follows unto her hero: "Thou art a great joy unto me, my husband. For many years I have loved you and have taken exceeding joy in your comradeship. We have indeed lost much money after years of saving for the rainy day. You have tried to keep the bad news from me but the phone didst ring this morning, and the wife of Mr. Thing-a-ma-bob didst call me and added to the tale of our misfortune the fact that the Jones' baby is to arrive next month. But we have only lost our money. I have you and that is enough for me, and, besides, our third grandchild has cut a new tooth and we must go on the morrow, to see this great thing. Now, wilt thou help me shell the peas for supper? I have little time left and the neighbors art soon come with us. I figured good food and your happy, smiling face would cheer them up, for verily, they have, this week, been in the dumps."

Verily, I say unto you, this man hath much honor rather than the other, for although both suffered equal material loss, yet the second kept his soul intact. And he lived long upon the earth and men did not think of offering him their pity but came to him to borrow what all men most need—faith, hope and love.—The Congregationalist.

Publication of Proclamation Delayed

(Through some mishap we failed to get the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation published last week, though we had it in hand and had fully intended doing so. Now, of course, it is too late for use at Thanksgiving services, but in view of the unique nature of it and because some literary relic hunters among our readers may not get hold of it through other publications, we are supplying them with a copy herewith. EDITOR.)

Whereas at this season of the year our people for generations past have always turned their thought to thankfulness for the blessings of Almighty God.

Now, therefore, I, Herbert Hoover, President of the United States, do set aside and declare Thursday, November 24, 1932, as a day of national thanksgiving, and I do urge that they repair to their places of public worship, there to give thanks to the beneficent Providence from whom comes all our good; and I do further recommend, inasmuch as this year marks the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the father of our country, whose immeasurable services to our liberties and our security are blessings perennially renewed upon us, that our people refresh their memory of his first Thanksgiving proclamation which I append and incorporate in this present proclamation.

WASHINGTON'S PROCLAMATION

"By the President of the United States of America.

"A proclamation.

"Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the Providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly to implore His protection and favor—and whereas both houses of Congress have by their joint committee requested me to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of government for their safety and happiness.'

"Now, therefore I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November, next, to be devoted by the people of these states to the service of that great and glorious Being, who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be—that we may then all unite in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks—for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation—for the signal and manifold mercies, and the favorable interpositions of His providence, which we experienced in the course and conclusion of the late war—for the great degree of tranquility, union, and plenty, which we have since enjoyed—for the peaceable and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish constitutions of government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted—for the civil and religious liberty with which we are blessed, and the means we have of acquiring and diffusing useful knowledge; and in general for all the great and various favors which He hath been pleased to confer upon us.

"And also that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and ruler of nations and beseech Him to pardon our national and other transgressions—to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually—to render our national government a blessing to all the people, by constantly being a government of wise, just, and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed—to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shewed kindness unto us) and to bless them with good government, peace, and concord—to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue, and the increase of science among them and us—and generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as He alone knows to be best."

"Given under my hand at the city of

(Continued on page 15)

IN THIS NUMBER

Can the Church Regain the Offensive?—Editor, .....	3
The Result of Sin—Floyd Sibert, ..	5
Rejoice in the Lord—Lucille Guiley, ..	6
The Election and the Church—W. T. Ellis, .....	7
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
The Rational Basis of the New Birth—L. S. Keyser, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	11
Useful Books in a C. E. Library—E. M. Riddle, .....	11
Age-Limits in the Junior Society, ..	11
Pen Sketches from Africa—C. W. Guinter, .....	12
News from the Field, .....	13
Our Little Readers, .....	15
Brethren's Home Corner—Henry Rinehart, .....	15
Announcements, .....	16
In the Shadow, .....	16
The Tie that Binds, .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Can the Church Regain the Offensive?

The church is like a certain football team that has just closed the season with a rather indifferent record. That team has played a good defensive game, but has been unable to advance the ball consistently. Of course defensive playing is important, but that alone doesn't win games. If a team is to win, it must be able to play offensive as well as defensive ball, and have the spirit to do it. The best this ball club was able to do was to defend its own goal. The church also is on the defensive and in most instances it seems pretty well satisfied if it is able to hold its own. It has not always been so, but of late it seems to have lost the offensive. It shows neither the determination nor the tactics necessary to make consistent gains. There are exceptions, but they only prove the rule.

It is not the financial situation that we have in mind. The aggressiveness of the church is not necessarily nor primarily dependent on the finances it has in hand. There are other things far more important than money considerations. If it were not so, the outlook would be gloomy indeed. For the depression is an economic situation and is beyond the control of the church, though it may have had its origin in moral and spiritual considerations. The depression has no doubt greatly accentuated the church's trouble, but it is not the real cause; it merely affords the occasion for the bringing of the weaknesses to the surface. The church's trouble is at bottom spiritual and not material, and it has itself to blame for the conditions and consequently it must look within for the remedy. Following are some points at which it must make readjustment if it is to recover the spirit of aggressiveness and take the battle into the enemy's territory.

PASSION FOR LOST SOULS

First, it must renew its passion for lost souls; it must know and share in a larger way the evangelistic passion of Christ. Something has happened at this point, something tragic. The church has lost the aggressiveness in evangelism it once had. It is not seeking to win men to Christ with its old-time fervor. Some will not admit it, but it is a fact, and the most prophetic voices are declaring it. Correspondence and personal conversation with men engaged in evangelism recently have lent conviction to this view. And religious papers are heralding it. Edwin E. Sundt writes in The Baptist: "No amount of thundering against this fact can refute it. The passion for a lost world is lost. Even a discussion of it, in some quarters, sounds like the echo of a past day." Such words do not truly describe the condition in our church, but we must confess to a belief that there is a letting down in our evangelistic zeal. And that is not a hopeful sign.

Some of our prominent church leaders were discussing this question recently in The Evangelist office and one of the men put the question directly to the editor: "Can we recover the old-time revival spirit?" "Somehow we must," was the reply, "there is no hope for us without it." And there is none. Unless the church can regain that aggressive evangelistic spirit; unless the ministry can recapture the conviction that men are really lost without the transforming power of the grace of God; unless the laity can become enthusiastic for the winning of their fellowmen to Christ,—there is no hope for the church, it has lost its future by losing sight of its supreme function. Of course mere evangelism, in its commonly restricted sense, is not the whole of Christianity, but it is the distinguishing mark of it; it is the saving salt of it. And it is the thing of greatest concern to the heart of our Lord. Rev. W. A. Findlay has said: "Show me on the one hand a community of Christians building noble churches in which to offer solemn, splendid worship, cultivating the devout life, searching the Scriptures and seeking the Spirit for guidance into all truth, scrupulous in the practice of righteousness and purity, yet blind and deaf to the sinful, suffering world outside—and show me, on the other hand, a Salvation Army, heedless of much else in its passion to seek and to save the lost; I cannot doubt which is nearest Christ's heart and most deserves to wear his name." Evangelism is not the sole thing, but it is the supreme thing, the first thing, the most vital thing. And the very first thing in importance for the recovery of the former aggressiveness on the part of the church is a new and intensive passion for lost souls.

THE WHOLE COUNSEL OF GOD

The second thing necessary to put the church on the offensive is a fresh grip of faith in the whole "counsel of God" and a new readiness to obey all that is therein set forth. The two go together—faith and obedience—for faith that will not obey is not sincere and obedience that is not guided by faith cannot be complete. When men of the world are willing to listen to the church the thing they want to hear and know more than anything else, and the thing that satisfies them most, is the will of God. What is the will of God? they are asking. And the church must tell them what to believe and do. How readily and fully men accept what the church teaches depends on how strongly the teachers themselves believe their message. Men will accept a whole Gospel message as readily as a half, if they are led to believe that its promoters have strong faith in it. And it takes strong convictions to present truth strongly and convincingly. Therein lies the difference between success and failure—the measure of the strength of our convictions. If we only half believe our message, we will have small success, but if we believe it with all the power of our souls,—if we are ready to say we know it is true and that everything depends on it,—then men will believe us and will accept our faith.

From the days of Alexander Mack on down all true Brethren have challenged one another with an implicit faith in and an unquestioning obedience to the whole Gospel of Christ and have refused to tamper with any formulas or statements of men. That is the rock-foundation on which our church is built, and that should be the plea that gives rise to every new launching of the Brethren cause. It is such a whole gospel faith that we have all confessed, and to that we must all be true. And never did the charge come with greater challenge or with brighter promise than during these times of confusion and loose thinking. Well may we heed the admonition of the Epistle to the Hebrews (10:23): "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." Paul's counsel to Timothy (2 Tim. 1:13) also is to the point: "Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." To "hold fast" means to be firm in the faith and strong in its defense, and not like "children, tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive" (Eph. 4:14). Rather we are to "prove all things," as Paul admonished the church at Thessalonica (1 Thes. 5:21), and "hold fast that which is good."

With such strong faith in the whole Gospel, we must go forward in it and "contend earnestly" for it, as Jude admonishes us. Too often we apologize for our faith, or act as if our full obedience needed some explanation, or we debate within ourselves whether this or that rite is a necessity or a privilege. Let us believe that both our success and our safety depend on full faith and prompt obedience. If the history of the Hebrew people in their escape from Egyptian bondage has any message for us it is that. When they arrived at the Red Sea, they found themselves in a trap from which it was impossible for them to extricate themselves, so far as human wisdom and power were concerned. What will Moses their leader do? The Israelites will hold him responsible for their predicament and he cannot afford to do anything foolish or impractical. What does he do? He does nothing till God tells him what to do, then he does exactly what God bids him do—smites the water with his walking stick and a way is opened for them through the sea. Suppose he had begun to cavil and say, "Surely I misunderstand God. This is too simple a thing to come from God who made heaven and earth, I will wait for a command more in keeping with his majesty." Any such captious objections would have resulted in their being overtaken by the Egyptians and driven back into hopeless slavery. And yet men are objecting in a similar manner to some of God's simple commandments given unto us through his Son! Have we gotten away from the necessity of such faith and obedience?

Again see them, encamped at Gilgal in the border of their inheritance. The strongly walled city of Jericho stands in the way of their progress. What will they do? God tells Joshua to have the people march around the city time after time. And without battering-ram or powerful artillery to batter down the walls, they simply obey God, with the watchers on the wall no doubt poking fun at them for their strange and unheard-of maneuvers. But men who are obeying God can afford to be laughed at, for they are marching in rhythmic time-beat with the Eternal and ere long they will march in triumph over the fallen ramparts that now proudly defy their progress. It is as true now as then. The way to victory in the name of the Lord is the way of obedience to all that the Lord commands. Such a course we may well defend and contend for, because it is the way of "the faith once for all delivered unto the

THE LOVE OF CHRIST

A third thing necessary to a successful, aggressive church is to permit the love of Christ to be the motivating power in the lives of its members. With all our firmness for the faith we must not fail to be kind. In the midst of our strong defense for sincere and implicit obedience to all that Jesus committed unto his church, we must not fail to show ourselves tender and gracious and forbearing. Love and tenderness and not bitterness and uncharitableness should inspire and dominate in all our relations. High above everything else in the requirements of the Lord Jesus are these two words—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, . . . and thy neighbor as thyself" (Mark 12:30, 31). These words present no mere sentiment but a great necessity to the effective work and witnessing of God's people. Many a sad experience in congregational or conference life bear testimony to the importance of love and kindly consideration, as over against sharpness and snapping. Love one toward another enters into the very warp and woof of our lives and is the distinguishing mark of the Christian. We have Jesus' own words on this point: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; . . . By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John 13:34, 35). When the spirit of love has had large place among the Brethren they have been united and aggressive and their witness has had power with men. Love has caused them to care for their own, to cling together in a fine spirit of fellowship, and to display a Christlike sympathy toward the world without. The absence of love destroys fellowship, disunites effort, makes void every attempted service for Christ. That is the teaching of Paul's words in 1 Corinthians (13:1-3) "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not (love), I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not (love), I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not (love), it profiteth me nothing." Love is indispensable. Nothing will give such power and effectiveness and eagerness as love. No adversity can blight it; no persecution can destroy it; no obstacle can overcome it—it is invincible. And we are invincible so long as we are continually seeking and receptive of the impartation of the love of God into our hearts and lives.

ENDURE HARDNESS, UNDISCOURAGED

Fourth, if we are to be aggressive as a people in the Lords' service, we must set ourselves to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ," and refuse ever to be discouraged. "Let us be not weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9). These are hard times and the spirit of depression and discouragement are on every hand. We must be warned against yielding to these disheartening influences. Discouragement weakens our purposes and paralyzes our energies. A discouraged man is only half a man, and the same is true of a discouraged church. We cannot afford to allow ourselves to become discouraged, not even for an hour. We need all our strength and efficiency to meet the demands of these trying times. And there is no reason for discouragement—that is, for the Christian. There will be many times when the way will be hard and things will go against us, when the cross will cut deep into the flesh, when our paths will lead through hot desert sand and hopes will fall like withered leaves, when every step will seem to take us farther away from our goal, when the heavens will be without sun by day or stars by night, still none of these things are sufficient to cause discouragement to the child of God. He need never be discouraged, and should not, if he claims the promises of God. "All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." "Neither death nor life . . . can separate us from the love of God." "We are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Who is justified in being discouraged in the face of such promises? Only he who does not believe that God keeps his words and remembers his promises unto his children. The Christian need never fail nor be discouraged. He can always be victorious in Christ. So can and should the church be victorious, for he has said that the "gates of hell shall prevail against it."

THE ENABLING POWER OF GOD

And last of all, we must remember, if we would be successful in our offensive against the hosts of sin, that it is fatal to trust in human wisdom and strength, and that it is necessary to seek the enabling power of God. That was the secret of Paul's success in Christian work. At a particularly critical time in his career he said, "the Lord stood by me and strengthened me." What an assurance comes to one when he is conscious of the Lord standing by him and strengthening him. That gives power that nothing can defeat. Again he said, viewing his life as a whole, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." That is a wonderful confidence, not in the flesh, but in the Spirit of God. And that same power may be had by all God's people, who will but lay hold on it. Was not the promise given to all, "Ye shall receive power"? And will not he who so abundantly fulfilled the promise in the lives of the first Christians so that common men were changed into supermen and cowards and hot-heads became heroes and apostles of love, will not he fulfill it in your life and mine, and make the church equal to every emergency? The power centers in God; he is the source of all power; he is all-powerful. And we may make contact with that infinite source of power through Jesus Christ. What a privilege! "To as many as received him, to them gave he power. . . ." And to us also! What empowerment that means! Nothing can defeat us when we are in him. May the church, and every member of it, press on in the battle against sin, challenge Satan and his forces in their every evil work and bring victory and honor to the cause of Christ in his name.

If you like to read letters from other churches, write one from your own.

Now is the time to renew your subscription and to get others to subscribe.

The Christian Endeavorers will find a list of recommended books for the beginning of a Christian Endeavor library on their page, over the signature of their president, Brother E. M. Riddle.

The Brethren's Home Board has a special emergency announcement this week. The bank is demanding final payment of a note amounting to $181.44 and they have no money with which to pay. This is a very urgent need and those who are able should heed the call.

We have a newsletter this week from Brother Samuel H. Buzard, pastor of the church at Vandergrift, Pennsylvania. As a result of special services three souls were baptized and two added to the Brethren church, the other going to the Methodist church. Attendance at both church and Sunday school is excellent. He has a remarkable "prayer group" among the young people and he has done us a service in reporting it. May God bless those young people with continued enlargement in their prayer experience, and cause others to be inspired by this report.

The Result of Sin

By Floyd Sibert

(This paper was read before the Pennsylvania Ministerium and was voted to be published in the Evangelist)

There are many results of sin that naturally follow in the wake of sin. Just as a hurricane or a flood leaves in its pathway piles of debris, disaster and death, so sin when it entered upon the realm of earth left its damning marks upon all creation, even to the defacing of the earth itself. But sin did not originate on the earth, nor did it confine its debasing, demoralizing work to the earth; for it first left its mark on one of heaven's chosen ones.

The first result of sin is seen in heaven. Entering into the heart of one of God's chosen ones, we see it first interrupting God in his orderly routine of heavenly work, if so be that we may say that he was interrupted, but not hindered. In Ezekiel 28:11-15, we read of a perfect workmanship of God being marred by sin in heaven: "Thou wast perfect in all thy ways from the day that thou wast created till iniquity was found in thee" Found in him, IN HEAVEN. "Thus saith the Lord God; thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty. Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, . . . the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created. Thou art the anointed Cherub that covereth; and I have set thee so; thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire."

From this it is evident that Satan was a high and exalted angel before he fell. He was created by God with wisdom, beauty and perfection befitting one who would be an honor to the court of heaven. The Scripture definitely states that he was located by God upon the "mountain of God," which is a symbol of the center of God's power, government and eternal throne. Holding this exalted position it would seem that he, like the earthly cherub on the ark, was a guard to the throne of holiness. His tabrets and pipes would seem to indicate that he led the angelic host in song.

But in spite of his perfect surroundings, an unholy ambition possessed him and led to his fall. This was possible because he, like the first Adam, was a CREATED being. Sin is no respecter of persons. It damns and blights regardless of rank, position or environment. There is but one safeguard of surety—Christ and his indwelling presence. This, Satan did not have, for said he, "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mountain of the congregation on the sides of the north; I will ascend above the height of the clouds: I WILL BE LIKE THE MOST HIGH." PRIDE also contributed to his fall. "Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom because of thy brightness." Solomon says, "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." The prophet Isaiah describes the fall. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning, how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nation."

We need here to observe that Isaiah's vision views Satan's career from the end time backward. Hence some things that are of future fulfillment are mentioned as though they were already past. We need further to observe that Satan was cast out of heaven into the heavens BECAUSE OF SIN. He lost his standing and position and became a traitor and an outcast to the court of heaven. "By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and THOU HAST SINNED; therefore I will cast thee as profane OUT OF THE MOUNTAIN OF GOD; and I will destroy thee, O covering Cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire" (Ezek. 28:16).

If God could afford to loose so important a character as this from his heavenly staff, how small and insignificant ought it make those to feel who think they do God a favor by joining his church.

In conclusion then, sin disturbed the peace of heaven, alienated an angel from God; dismantled a Cherub of power and glory; made a liar of God's most trusted servant (John 8:34), and took away his fitness for heavenly work.

The second result of sin we see in the garden of God, that beautiful spot called Eden. Eden was sinless, peaceful and harmonious when man was created. In the cool of the morning God walked in the garden and talked with his new creation. What a blessed privilege. Here he was walking and talking with God in reality. This was man's first standing with God. But SIN destroyed man's standing with God. God told Adam and Eve that the result of sin was death. But the serpent said, "Ye shall not surely die." This, as far as the records show, was the first lie, a direct denial of God's Word. By persuading Eve to accept and believe it, Satan led our first parents to commit sin; and, as the wages of sin is death, by it, also, he caused their death, and so became, in reality, the first murderer. A lie therefore is a twin brother to murder, one of the most hateful things in the sight of God, the God of truth.

This was the end of man's fellowship with God, that is to say, his direct fellowship with God. With the loss of fellowship came also the loss of innocence. "And the eyes of both were opened and they knew they were naked, and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons. And the Lord God called unto Adam and said unto him, Where art thou? and he said, I heard thy voice in the garden and I was afraid because I was naked; and I hid myself." What a blessing it would be if some of the twentieth century flappers could hear God speak and be afraid. "And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Has thou eaten of the tree, whereof I told thee that thou shouldst not eat?" Human mentality cannot fathom the depth of degradation found in the maelstrom of sin that came as a result of lost innocence.

Sin removed Godly support and made man responsible for his own life. "Thou shalt eat the herbs of the field; in the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread." Sin brought a curse on God's perfect creation. "For dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return."

The third result was felt by the earth and its inhabitants. By it a beautiful, delightful and peaceful nature was changed to a struggling survival of the fittest. "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee." From the day that these words were spoken man has never ceased to grapple with the cruel, hard forces of nature in his effort to dig from the ground a livelihood. Stones, weeds, and unproductive soil together with drought and flood, have joined against man in his efforts to subdue the cursed ground. We may well believe that earth eruptions and thundering tempests have played their part in fulfilling this curse.

To fully understand the radical change this curse made in the realm of animal life, we have to look at the ideal or restored picture of what is yet to be when the curse is removed by the Son of power. "The wolf and the lamb shall feed together and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock. The dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my Holy mountain, saith the Lord." Thank God, then, that war is a part of the curse and it with the rest will be removed from the hearts of men.

The fourth result was on the social order. It changed the ideal (the wish of one the well being of all) to one of selfish aggrandizement. Just as Lucifer sought preeminence over his Creator, so man have borne in their hearts a desire to have preeminence in the social order and to lord it over one another. Because of this, life has become cheap,—not cheap in the eyes of God, for he values one soul more than the whole world; but it is cheap in the eyes of man. Certainly we need to hear again the words of the fiery prophet of old, "What mean ye that you grind the face of the poor?"

Sin changed the Divinely instituted social relationship to one wherein the lust of the flesh predominated, and the sex passion played a prominent part. Immorality was a word unknown until sin entered the heart in the garden of Eden. What a cesspool of stench and rottenness it has created to besmirch the history of the human race! As a direct by-product of this we have the poorhouse, the feeble-minded institution, the orphanage, the insane asylum and the penitentiary. There may be some exceptions, but that "the sins of the parents shall be visited on the third and fourth generations" is all too evident. War, murder and man-made laws are direct results of a distorted social order.

Sin substituted for a divinely ordained innocence a conscience NOT void of offence. The final result or fruit of sin is, "his sin when it is finished bringeth forth death" (Jas. 1:15). "For the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23).

Masontown, Pennsylvania.

Rejoice in the Lord. Philippians 4:4

By Miss Lucille Guiley

Philippians has often been called the book of Christian joy; its one word is "Rejoice." It was written by the apostle Paul to the Christians at Philippi. Paul was in prison at Rome at the time of this writing and the Philippian Christians had sent him a gift by the hand of their messenger, Epaphroditus. It is a letter of thanksgiving to these people, so therefore we should not expect it to be particularly doctrinal or theological and yet we find brief statements of many of the great Christian doctrines. I wish to call your attention to the fact that the word "sin" is not found once in this book but the word "joy" in some form is found at least fourteen times.

In this brief study it will be necessary to hurry through the book, dwelling only on the especially helpful verses. In chapter I, we see Christ as the believer's life. The inward look exists, we might say. The first few verses are introductory, telling us the name of the author, the persons addressed, and then following with Paul's thanksgiving for these people and their thoughtfulness for him. But let us go on to verse 6: "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Notice, he is addressing Christians, real Christians, in whom a new work has begun. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (II Cor. 5:17). But notice also those verbs, "hath begun" and "will perform." This good work is merely begun in the believer and day by day he is perfecting it; he is evermore putting his finishing touches to it, and will continue to do so until the day of Jesus Christ, the day of his promised return, and of our glorification with him. We often have heard it said, "He is not perfect," or "She is not perfect and we must overlook her mistakes." How true that is that none of us are perfect and yet so many are just more than ready to criticize the first little flaw they can find in a fellow Christian. We look at a diamond that is just fresh from the mines; it has not yet been chopped and chiseled, and filed and polished. Do we criticize it? Do we say it will never be beautiful and valuable and useful? No, we look upon it as an unfinished piece of work and in spite of its roughness it is beautiful to our eyes because we look into the future and visualize the finished product in all its radiance and beauty. Oh, that we could do likewise with our fellow Christians. Look upon them as an unfinished work of God, being daily molded and polished in his hands; being made perfect because he never turns out less than a perfect product, and above all remember that you yourself are still in an imperfect state. What a difference such an attitude would make in our churches today and in the daily lives of many Christians. As Christians we are all members of the same body and shall receive glorified bodies like unto his own glorified body. He is not partial. He loved us all with the same love and we in turn should endeavor to love the other members of this body with the love of Christ.

Going on now to verses 9 and 10 we read: "And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment; That ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ." I wish to call special attention to that word "sincere." It has been better translated "sun-tested" or from the Latin it means "without wax." Did you ever see the sun come shining through a window or through a knot-hole in some old building, at just such an angle that in this ray of light you could see the particles of dust and dirt as they floated through the air? Yes, sun-tested! The sun, often to our sorrow, too well tests the dyes and qualities of garments. In Paul's day, earthen vessels of all kinds were in common use. If a vase became cracked or a piece was broken off it was easily fixed with melted wax. To the natural eye the vase was perfect and could be sold in the markets for such, but if held up to the sun oh, how that patch, that mended place would show up! Sun-tested—that ye might be sun-tested! Are you willing to let your heart be tested in even a greater, stronger light than this? Will you let it be tested by the Son of Righteousness? Remember, all the black spots no matter how small, will be brought to view in this Light.

From this Paul goes on to speak of his imprisonment. We would say, "What a great calamity, what a disaster that such a man as Paul should be so treated and the work of God so hindered" but just a minute! Remember Romans 8:28—"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God." What, this working for good? How? Paul says, "Rejoice." "Why just think of the soldiers and guards and many others in the palace and prison who are hearing the Gospel of Christ from Paul who would have heard it in no other way. And not only that, but many babes in Christ who always felt that Paul could do so much more and so much better than they could and so let many things up to him are now growing confident, are gaining courage and are going out and preaching Christ. They are growing in grace and still others are hearing of Christ. Here is fruit ten-fold or even maybe one hundred-fold. But there is one drawback to this. Some who are merely professors are preaching Christ thinking that they will add sorrow to my bondage. It is a sad thing that some for revenge, or out of jealous hearts will do this but then what can I do about it? Should I sit here and worry about it? Shall I give way to the trial of this and lose patience and peace? Must I? Need I? Nay, what matters it? Is not the fiery arrow quenched in Christ for me? After all it brings a gain; it spreads the Gospel so much further. Only, in every way, fair or foul, Christ is being preached; and in this I rejoice, aye, and rejoice I shall." Friend, have you such peace in times of trial?

We might illustrate this with a little diagram. Draw a large circle and let it represent Jesus Christ in whom there is neither beginning nor ending. In the center place a dot and let it represent yourself if you are a Christian, if you are really found in him. The poisonous darts from the enemy may come from all sides and angles but notice, it cannot reach you until it has first passed through him. And think how much of the swiftness of that arrow is checked as it passes through that first Stronghold, how much of the poison is removed! Truly as Paul says, "Is not the fiery arrow quenched in Christ for me?" "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." (1 Cor. 10:13). Remember this, dear friend, in times of temptation and trial. When that sharp, angry word or that unkind act wounds and hurts your heart just remember that it went through him first and that he is bearing the heaviest part of it for you.

In the twenty-first verse we find the key to this book and to Paul's life. "For me to live is Christ and to die is gain." Next to Christ, Christianity owes more to Paul than any other man. Another way to state this verse is: "Whatever I live, I live Christ." Can you say that? I live only to serve Christ. Christ occupies the whole of my life. I have no secrets apart from him. I have no locked doors to keep him out of any part of my life. Christ has full possession of myself. Paul leads a surrendered life and finds the utmost peace and power in it. It is a victorious life in the truest sense of the word. Mere existence is not real life for Paul. He is not just marking time. Christ covers the entire horizon for him, the whole circumference of his interests. Christ fills all of Paul's eye, he has no part, however small for just a glimpse of the world. Christ is his all and in all. But then what about death? "To die is gain." All that death can do for Paul is to give him more of Christ. It will be like cashing in the principal and the interest. Then he will gain all of Christ. He feels like an eagle in a cage. Death will be his liberation from the limitations of the flesh. He looks upon death as a friend in disguise, the door to complete and glorious union with Christ. So Paul is ready for death but is not dissatisfied with life here. He has a desire to depart and be with Christ but realizes that it is more needful that he remain here for awhile.

"For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake." (verse 29). According to that the believer should expect to suffer. His life though a happy one in Christ is not a bed of roses. Are you willing to suffer for his sake? Will you do it willingly?

(To be continued)

The Election and the Church

By William T. Ellis

Staggering significance must be attached to the recent American Presidential election. All sorts of grave meanings are being seen in it by the secular press. But for the Christian Church there is one outstanding import of it all: an overwhelming majority of the people are seeking a better way of life. Their number is far greater than Governor Roosevelt's impressive majority. Even the least thoughtful person cannot escape the truth that the American mood is one of desire for change. The nation is profoundly dissatisfied with things as they are—and that discontent embraces the whole post-war scheme of life.

Such open-mindedness and unrest as the election revealed are a clear call to the Church. The people have said, in effect, "We are not satisfied. We want a better way of life. Perhaps a change of administrations will help. Anyway, we'll try it; for we are ready to follow any path that seems to be a way out."

At the best, as Governor Roosevelt would be the first to declare, political remedies can go only part of the way in effecting a new national order. The deeper remedies lie within the minds and hearts of the people. Here the Church and the school must take up the task.

Not since the war has the Church been given such an opportunity. Open-minded, unsatisfied, questioning, the people are plainly ready to take any steps that will lead them toward the New Day.

If the Church is wise and courageous and prompt, those steps will be toward the houses of worship, where the essential Way of Life is set forth, Sunday after Sunday.

I am not here proposing any new "movement" or organization: we are too heavily encumbered with such already. True, there should be swift action in the emergency by official religious leadership; but more important, and more effective, will be the measures taken by individual pastors and local church boards. These last should sit immediately in special deliberation upon measures to be taken in their own parishes to meet this magnificent opportunity.

What are some of these measures? Well, doubtless a few of the more alert and outspoken bodies will take time to rebuke the religious "leaders" who acted as political campaigners, and diverted many channels of religious expression, and some national Christian organizations, to partisan purposes. Their impotency, as shown by the vote, should be a chastening experience. David should have had more sense than to try to wear the armor of Saul. The Church's weapons must ever be spiritual, and not carnal.

That for an important aside. Most urgently, the local church officials should give themselves to a consideration of measures for getting the people to attend church services. That is the first step; for only so can the old Message that is the sure word for the new times ever reach the ears of the people. A concerted activity to promote church-going should sweep the land. All emphasis upon other more general interests, such as have too greatly engrossed the ministry of late, should be sidetracked to make way for the special express train called "Go to Church."

Methods are many, and may be left to local devising and to interchange of experience. Probably no method will ever be an improvement upon the old one of personal invitation by church members themselves. Is it too optimistic to envisage a nation-wide "Go to Church" canvass, locally inspired and directed?

But what will the people find if they do go to church? Will they be welcomed to warm Christian hospitality and fellowship? Will there be reality and vitality in the worship? May they be sure of hearing words of life from the pulpit—a clear presentation of the Gospel of comfort and counsel and joy, and of God's great love? Discourses about books and about politics and about international affairs and about the Mooney case, and such like, make poor pabulum for hungry and weary spirits. What men and women eagerly desire today is inspiring truth about God, and what he may mean to their lives. The Good News which transformed the early Christians is what this present seeking world most desires.

We have had, in the election, a spectacular and Providential revelation of a nation's new mood. It all spells "Opportunity" for the Church. Is the Church wise enough, great enough, interested enough, to enter this open door?

Swarthmore, Pennsylvania.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

PROPOSE UNITING SEMINARIES

A merger of the 13 seminaries of the United Lutheran church was proposed at the recent 8th biennial convention held in Philadelphia and referred to the synods. Now the full-time professors range in number from 2 to 8, of students from 9 to 109; of cost per student from $507 to $2,625, with an average cost per student of $706. Last year there were altogether 396 resident theologues. It has been recommended that Hartwick, Gettysburg, Susquehanna, and Philadelphia seminaries be merged into one eastern seminary, Hamma and Chicago into one middle western, Western, Martin Luther and Northwestern into one between the Mississippi and the Rockies, and the Southern seminary at Columbia, S. C. be kept and developed, with the students from the Pacific coast being sent to the western seminary, with transportation paid for by the board of education. Because of the present surplus of ministers the appropriation was reduced to theologues and to college students in preparation for the ministry.—Christian Century.

NUMERICAL GROWTH AND FINANCIAL WASTE

The Southern Baptist Handbook for 1932, says the New York Times, declares that Southern Baptists are "still wasting money in riotous living" and reports "a tragic falling off in contributions," but, on the other hand, the largest annual membership gain since 1923. "The great losses and 'hard times' which have come upon Southern Baptists by reason of the present prolonged depression have not stopped them from wasting their substance in riotous living," the book says. "Southern Baptists waste sufficient money, along five or six lines of extravagant living, every year, to finance the whole program of the Southern Baptist work." They spend, according to this book, more than $40,000,000 a year on tobacco, from $25,000,000 to $40,000,000 on moving pictures, more than $21,000,000 on once-a-week automobile outings, $35,000,000 for soft drinks and chewing gum, and $43,000,000 for cosmetics and beauty parlor bills. (These Southern Baptists must be some spenders, and it looks like they have something to spend.) Gifts for all church work purposes are declared to have been $32,618,125, a per capita average of $8.27. The total was smaller than that for 1930 by $4,870,892, or a decrease of 12.99 per cent. The membership gain, the largest annual one reported since 1923, was 94,288, bringing the total membership up to 3,944,566. There were 211,253 baptisms, the largest number since 1925, and gains were reported in the number of churches and Sunday schools, 75 for the former and 325 for the latter. The Southern Baptist Church is active and militant.—The Methodist-Protestant-Recorder.

PEACE PROSPECTS

In a recent address before the council of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Pittsburgh area, Secretary Stimson called attention to the fact that the political demagogue who thinks it more worth while to declaim against the expected, or suspected, machinations of foreign debtors is always with us. On the other hand, goodwill is to be achieved only as we are ready to do our share in avoiding provocation, banishing unfounded suspicions and seeking justice. Remarking that "the first step towards law and order is to get hold of the pistols," he expressed the conviction that the stand which the United States had taken on the performance of the Briand-Kellogg pact, instead of looking the other way when the trouble broke out in Manchuria, had helped to solidify world opinion in support of that view. It is believed that this is true, but it has to be admitted that the war prophet is still with us. There is a great deal of publicity as to possible or probable war between the United States and Japan which is morally reprehensible though not legally criminal.—The Presbyterian Advance.

ON TRIAL FOR BLASPHEMY

Because Rev. T. Grabinski, Methodist preacher at Dereczyn, in Poland, stated that while Mary, the mother of Jesus, was a good woman, she was not divine, and therefore one should not pray to her he has been taken in charge by the Polish authorities and is now awaiting his trial for blasphemy. "And yet," says Rev. Edmund Chambers, superintendent of the Eastern District of the Polish Mission, "one can hardly blame the Polish authorities for adopting a suspicious attitude toward what is to them a new and unknown doctrine. This whole section has been flooded with Communistic agents and propaganda, and any new movement is suspected by the authorities as being a part of this. This makes it doubly difficult for us. While Brother Grabinski is awaiting trial, we have secured a new hall and another young preacher to take over the work, and we are going ahead."—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

RUSSIA'S BAN ON GOD

God must be out of Russia in five years. The decree has been signed by Stalin and others who have such matters in charge.

The expulsion is the ultimate objective of a "five-year plan of atheism," reported by a special correspondent of the London Morning Post. As the correspondent quotes the decree, it runs:

"On May 1, 1937, there must not remain on the territory of the U. S. S. R. a single house of prayer to God, and the very conception 'God' will be banished from the boundaries of the Soviet Union, as a survival of the Middle Ages which has served as an instrument for the oppression of the working masses."

The Soviet Government has been struggling against God for some years, and has destroyed unnumbered churches and made bonfires of symbols and icons. Apparently the battle is far from won.

In the first year of the fresh campaign, the correspondent tells us, it is proposed to suppress all religious schools and to deprive all the "servitors of religious cults" of their allowances of food and the necessities of life. In the capitals of the Soviet Union all the churches and prayer-houses of all religious communities are to be closed by May 1, 1934.

A "shock campaign" will be launched in the second year against "religious centers" in family life and the officially registered "communes of the faithful" (the former monasteries). Special attention will be devoted to the inculcation of "reasonable unbelief" among the masses.

The second half of the plan will be devoted to the consolidation of the results achieved by the "activation of the anti-God units," and to the conversion of former churches into clubs, picture-houses, and other places of "reasonable recreation."—Literary Digest.

FIFTY-FOUR YEARS AT A TASK

The Watchman-Examiner mentions a gentleman, by name, Fred D. Meek, of Denver, Colorado, who recently retired after serving fifty-four years as usher in his church. In all that long period he rarely missed a church service morning or evening. We think Mr. Meek deserves mention and commendation. To be a good usher is a task of no small importance, and it requires high qualities to fulfill it. We incline to think that the usher contributes as much to the attractive or repellant impression of a church upon the first-time visitor as any one in any place. We have known good ushers, and some not so good. That alert man, not busy gossiping around the entrance, but watching every person who enters, giving kindly, yet not effusive greeting, catering to the fussy little whims which a few regulars always have, and giving the stranger an impression of coming among friends, will do much for the cause of Christ. Think of such service for fifty-four years! We honor Mr. Meek.—The Presbyterian.

JESUIT PROPERTY FOR SOCIAL WELFARE

The Spanish Cortez (Parliament) has passed a bill ordering the distribution of more than $30,000,000 for "social welfare." The fund was obtained by the confiscation of the property of the Jesuits whose order was dissolved last January. Spain prior to the revolution dethroning King Alfonso was most cordial to Catholic monastic orders, some of which found refuge there, when neighboring nations became unfriendly to their institutions. The founder of the Jesuits was Ignatius Loyola, of Spanish birth, whose military career was interrupted and who then became a soldier of Jesus. The order was formally incorporated in 1540 by the pope.—The Lutheran.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Micah

"The word of Jehovah that came to Micah the Morasthite in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem." (R. V.)

These are the introductory words of the book which bears the name of the prophet Micah. He lived at Moresheth-gath (Mic. 1:14), a town possibly of Judah, not far from Gath which was for a time a dependency of the war-like Philistine city. During the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, he prophesied. Isaiah and Hosea, his contemporaries, began their prophetic activity prior to that of their colleague.

The Prophetic Testimony

It is interesting to observe that the major and minor prophets, speaking to their day and generation, using their natural style of speech, appearing at unexpected times and in unusual circumstances, testify unitedly to the God-inspired Scriptures. To them "the Scripture, cannot be broken." They all speak of God's mind, God's purpose, and God's Christ in days long before the advent of the Son. All this, mark you, in spite of an abundant variety of subjects and human viewpoints. Prophecy is a supernatural gift. The prophets are the only true seers.

Micah's Prophecy

Who instructed Micah as to the birth of the Lord Jesus in Bethlehem? Let the sages answer that! They will be strangely silent after they read the opening chapters of Matthew and Luke. Like the Magi, profoundly intelligent men, they will bear their works of knowledge to the feet of the Christ "whose wisdom ever waketh." "The prophecy contained in chapter 5:1-5" says Dr. Hales, "is, perhaps, the most important single prophecy in the Old Testament, and the most comprehensive respecting the personal character of the Messiah, and his successive manifestations to the world. It crowns the whole chain of predictions descriptive of the several limitations of the blessed Seed of the woman to the line of Shem, to the family of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to the tribe of Judah, and to the Royal house of David, here terminating in his birth at Bethlehem, 'the city of David.' It carefully distinguishes his human nativity from his eternal generation; foretells the rejection of the Israelites and Jews for a season; their final restoration, and the universal peace destined to prevail throughout the earth in the Regeneration."

I THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Micah, the Morasthite, Mic. 1:1.
2. To Whom Written? To Samaria, Jerusalem, Jews, and Gentiles.
3. When Written? 750-700 B. C.
4. Why Written? To warn and comfort the people.
5. Authenticity. The book is a genuine product, entirely trustworthy.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Prophecy to the Nation: Judging. Mic. 1-2.
2. The Prophecy to the Rulers: Condemning. Mic. 3-5.
3. The Prophecy to the People: Comforting. Mic. 6-7.

III THE FEATURES OF THE BOOK

The book of Micah is outstanding for these reasons:

1. Its style is simple, elegant, but not rugged.
2. It contains a marvelous prophecy concerning Jerusalem. (3)
3. It depicts the future glory of the City of David. (4)
4. It selects the birthplace of the Savior (5)
5. It presents spiritual religion at its best. (6:6-8)
6. It specializes in Messianic prophecy.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Controversy. "Hear."
2. Key Verses. 6:8; 6:2; 7:18.
3. Key Chapters. 4 and 5.
4. Key Ideas. Witnessing, Consoling, Pleading, Pardoning.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

The book of Micah is an invaluable indictment of the social and spiritual conditions of the seventh century B. C. It contrasts the authority of rulers with that of the Great Coming Ruler. It evinces three fundamental things:

1. God's hatred of injustice.
2. God's hatred of ritualism.
3. God's delight in pardoning.

Micah "foretells, in clear terms, the invasions of Shalmaneser and Sennacherib; the dispersion of Israel; the cessation of prophecy; the utter destruction of Jerusalem; nor less clearly, the deliverance of Israel; the destruction of Assyria, and of the enemies Assyria represents; the birthplace of Christ, and his Divine nature, for his goings forth are "from everlasting;" the promulgation of his gospel from Mount Zion, and its results, and the exaltation of his kingdom over all nations."

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Jesus is observed in Micah's writing as One whose "goings forth are from of old." He is to be the Man who shall be "our peace." Surely none other is good enough to rule Israel, set up an everlasting kingdom, usher in universal peace, except the glorious Eternal Babe of Bethlehem's crib. Mohammed, Confucius, Buddha, and their ilk, are not worthy to stand where the Savior stood,—silent, majestic, alone. They are but unworthy figures of time, bespeckled and bedaubed with the trials and tribulations of time, but our Christ is luminous with light, life, and love.

One strangely comforting fact awaits the Christian daily. It is the fact of his coming. He will come to complete the work of the Father in the Kingdom, and then we shall witness perfect government. perfect rule, perfect authority minus inhuman oppressors, worthless priests, and insincere preachers of righteousness. May the hour of God's great clock soon strike is the writer's prayer. Let us so live that his coming may not startle, alarm, or shock us. When the Christ comes we shall be able to greet him as the Unseen Guest who always had a place at our tables, in our studies, and, most of all, in our actual daily living.

VII THE LESSONS OF THE BOOK

1. The chief sins such as idolatry, false prophecy, cruelty, injustice, etc., will always be punished.
2. The chief punishments were measured out by Jehovah by refusing help, by bringing on desolation, and by establishing the captivity.
3. The chief promises pertained to a return from captivity; a Ruler of Jehovah in Zion; a Bethlehemite of Jacob's household, who would conquer his enemies and rule righteously.
4. The chief virtues such as kindness, humility, and justice are extolled.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Rational Basis of the New Birth

By Leander S. Keyser, D. D.

(Address Delivered at the Summer School of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles)

(Continued from last week)

III. The Necessity of the New Birth

1. Our Lord's Positive Language.

On the need of the birth from above our Lord spoke in a most positive tone. He preceded each statement by his solemn and impressive, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee." Then he added: "Marvel not that I say unto thee, Ye must be born again."

2. A categorical imperative.

One might put it briefly in this way: We must be born again because we must! Why must we breathe the air and eat nutritious food in order to live? Because we must! That regimen lies in the very structure of things. There are many categorical imperatives in this world besides Immanuel Kant's categorical moral imperative. That is there are many musts.

It is not necessary, however, to state the matter in so dogmatic a way. In the moral and spiritual realm there is always a rational basis for any imperative regimen. A noted unbeliever of the preceding century was wont to become hilarious in this way: "These Christian people," he said, "with all their preachers and theologians, are a crude lot: they declare that we have been born all wrong the first time, and so must be born all over again!" And this speech was regarded as an occasion for laughter!

But it certainly was a superficial criticism. Cannot everybody see that there is something radically wrong with human nature? Why all the wickedness in the world if human nature is all right in its natural state? Why the recent World War? Why all the departures from the moral standard? And, most of all, why this awful pall of spiritual indifference the world over? To attribute it to environment is simply to raise the question, Why is the environment invariably bad? The trouble lies deeper. Man is not born a tabula rasa. He has resting upon him in his natural birth the terrible entail of depravity.

The Psalmist was a better analyst of human nature than was the scoffing infidel, for the Psalmist said: "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me" (Ps. 51:5). Paul proved himself better versed in anthropology, for he wrote: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them; for they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor. 2:14). Again he scored deeply: "The natural mind is enmity against God, and is not subject to the law of God; neither indeed can be" (Rom. 8:7). Our Lord, in his interview with Nicodemus, told the whole sad story: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh; that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6).

3. The Law of Biogenesis.

Here, then, the secret is revealed; the riddle is unraveled. Men must be born again because they are not born right the first time. Having been conceived and born in sin, and therefore born with the unspiritual mind, how can they be made spiritually minded except by a new birth—except the Holy Spirit implant in them something which they do not possess by natural generation? At this point the scientific law of biogenesis enters in with its categorical imperative: Life comes only from antecedent life—a law that is recognized by all biologists who stay by the facts. Omne vivum ex vivo. So the unspiritual mind cannot evolve, by its own resident powers, into a spiritual state and experience, because the "resident powers" are not there. Nothing can come from nothing. Hence we must recognize and submit to the imperative of our Lord when he says, "Ye must be born again."

4. Individual Certification Needed.

There is still another element in the rationale of the new birth. Since, as has been previously shown, a special revelation was needed, and therefore God gave it, and saw to it that it was recorded in the Bible, and thus given to the world in general, it is reasonable to believe that God would institute a method by which each person might receive an inner certification for himself that this professed revelation is true. Any other way would certainly be incomplete and non-consequential; in fact, it would be absurd.

Now, the new birth is bestowed for the very purpose of giving to the individual the personal assurance of salvation and truth. Thus we see how perfectly the various parts of the Christian system integrate. It is charged with rationality. It is a complete philosophy.

IV. The Divine Agent in Regeneration

There is also a notable consistency in the fact that it is the Holy Spirit who begets this good and gracious work in the human soul. Several reasons for this may be assigned.

1. The Cause Not Subjective.

The Spiritual life, being a new given power, cannot arise from the content of the human mind in itself. It cannot spring up from the content of the so-called "sub-conscious mind." Such content is not there; if there is anything there, it is man's legacy of depravity from the fall of Adam. No one who has been converted in the Christian way has ever attributed his experience to any force within himself. The chief element in the content of Christian experience is that it comes into the soul from a power outside of itself.

2. The Agent Divine.

There is still this additional element in such an experience—that it is begotten of God. No converted person ever ascribes it to any other source. It is known to be a divine operation by the subject himself. And this is true, no matter how unspiritual and agnostical, or even atheistic, the person may have been prior to his conversion. Therefore, the Holy Spirit being one of the persons of the Triune God, imparts the divine element in this experience. Thus, and only thus, can it be adequately explained.

3. The Specific Work of the Holy Spirit.

There is also rational congruity in the fact that it is the special function of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity to perform this work of grace in the human soul. Each divine person performs his specific share in the plan of redemption, just as if it were all purposely arranged in logical order. The Father sends the Son into the world, and sustains him during his period of voluntary self-renunciation; the Son comes into the world, becomes incarnate, and takes the burdens of mankind upon himself on the cross, thus making expiation for sin; now the Holy Spirit's office is to apply the objective redemption thus wrought by the Son to the individual soul, bringing to it a subjective experience of its truth and saving power.

Not only so, but the Holy Spirit is the innermost psychical element or person in the Holy Trinity; He is that person who unites Father and Son in a blessed union of self-consciousness and fellowship; therefore, it is in harmony with the nature of a psychical and spiritual experience that the Holy Spirit should perform the innermost work within the soul, that of regeneration. There is a remarkable Pauline statement which seems to indicate this deep, searching work of the Holy Spirit. Speaking of the things which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard," etc., Paul adds: "But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God; for what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God" (1 Cor. 2:10, 11). The most subjective Person of the Trinity logically performs the subjective office in us.

V. The Means Employed

The Holy Spirit employs means in accomplishing the work of Grace within men's souls. He does not come down in any kind of a way out of the blue. The chief divinely appointed instrumentality he uses is the Word of God. He does not work an evangelical experience except through the Law and the Gospel as given in the Bible. If we did not have the Bible, we would not even know of Christ and the redemption he wrought for us. We would not know that God will pardon, justify and save us on the condition of our accepting Christ as our Lord and Savior.

But this valuable safeguarding truth is known, not through human wisdom but through the special revelation given in the Scriptures; for while they teach that we are "born of God," and "born of the Spirit," they also teach that we are "born by (through) the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever" (1 Pet. 1:23). Paul agrees with this: "How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God" (Rom. 10:14-17).

Here again let us reflect upon the rationale of this divinely appointed process. We have already discussed the rational basis of a special divine revelation and God's normal

WEDNESDAY

A Joyful Feast. Lev. 23:39-44

The Feast of Tabernacles was, of course, a religious feast. It centered the thoughts first of all on God and his goodness. In addition, there was the joy and pleasure that came from the opportunity to meet with old friends and to renew old acquaintances and fellowships. Our modern life seems to afford so little time for being neighborly and friendly—which is one of the best of recreations, adding much to the sum of the world's joy, subtracting much from its sorrows. May we keep our minds fixed on him who teaches us to be neighbors!

THURSDAY

The Children Playing. Zech 8:1-8

In this future day to which the prophet looks, there shall be more leisure for the elderly, as well as for the children. Perhaps even parents may not be too busy to give more time to play with their children. Such wholesome recreation would be of inestimable benefit not only to the children, but also to the parents. In planning our program of Christian activities, let us not forget to give some time to the children.

FRIDAY

Dangerous Leisure. Luke 22:54-62

The great warning here is that if the Christian so far forgets himself as to seek his pleasure with the wrong people, and in the wrong places, he may come to the same state as Peter, who blasphemed and denied the Lord he loved. In fact, our very presence in such surroundings is a tacit denial of our Lord, even if our mouths have not yet spoken it. Pray that our God may protect us against dangerous leisure!

SATURDAY

Mindful of the Weaker Ones. 1 Cor. 10:23-33

This is a doctrine that the world simply cannot understand—even too few Christians seem to understand. "What'll you have gentlemen?" one of a group asked a newcomer, simulating the bar tender whose return some seem to crave. "Ginger ale," was the reply. The mock bar tender, an ardent wet, immediately launched into an argument proving that ginger ale was very harmful to the human system, much more so than beer, or light wine. "Very well, then," was the reply. "I had no idea it was so harmful, but if what you say is true, I am quite willing to do without it rather than injure my fellow-man because of it." Taken aback for once, the "bar tender" was silent. The principle applies to many things other than ginger ale. May God help us to appreciate its full application!

SUNDAY

Choosing the Best. Phil. 4:4-9

"The world is so full of a number of things," sang the poet. There are many good things in life, and we cannot hope to enjoy them all; therefore, we will surely not want to waste time on worthless things. Even among the good things, life is so short that we must pray for wisdom to prove all things and choose only the best, that we may render a good report to him who has called us.

VI. The Mystery of the New Birth

There is no need to stumble over the mys-

(Continued on page 15)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

THE CHRISTIAN'S USE OF LEISURE

(Lesson for December 11).

Lesson Text: Neh. 8:10-17; Mark 6:30-32;

Golden Text: 1 Cor. 10:31

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Enjoying the Good. Neh. 8:9-18

This feast of the booths, or tabernacles, was a sort of Independence Day and Thanksgiving Day in one. The Israelites were first to gather in the fruit of the land, and then to dwell in rude "booths," woven from the boughs of trees, for seven days commemorating their rude dwellings on the journey from bondage to the Promised Land. As they thought on God's goodness, their hearts were made tender, and they were brought closer to him. During the long captivity the Jews had forgotten all this, and when they again read of it on their return, it seemed especially precious. They took this time of leisure (although undoubtedly many other duties were pressing them), to joy in the Lord. May we, too, learn that our greatest joy is in him!

TUESDAY

Rest and Recreation. Mark 6:30-34

There are many Christians who, it seems, scarcely need to rest from their labors for God. However, let us not forget that those who are being poured out in the Lord's service DO need a rest, even from that. Like Jesus and the disciples we need to come apart and rest awhile. This does not mean engaging in questionable amusement and recreation: the disciples spent their rest period in the presence of the Lord. May we find our rest in him!

E. M. RIDDLE,
President
1117 Randolph St.,
Waterloo, Iowa
F. C. VANATOR,
Associate
Peru, Indiana

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK

C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Duhal Ave., South Bend, Ind.

GLADYS M. SPIFF,
General Secretary
and
Treasurer
2301 13th St., N. E.,
Canton, Ohio

Useful Books in a Christian Endeavor Library

The following suggestions are being made because of inquiries lately received relative to books for Christian Endeavor Libraries. There are many other good books which some societies will want to add, but this list will assist some of those planning such a library:

Bible Autobiographies.
The Child's Quiet Hour.
C. E. Manuals.
Expert Endeavor.
Intermediate Manual.
Learn to Live.
The Inner Life.
The Living Bible.
Missionary Manual.
Prayer Meeting Methods.
Progressive Endeavor.
Religious Vocations.
The Upward Look.
What Men Need Most.
Why We Believe the Bible.
Picnic and Outdoor Games.

These books and many others can be secured at the offices of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, either through the Chicago office at 17 N. Wabash Avenue, or Boston, Massachusetts, 41 Mount Vernon Streets. I am not quoting prices, as they are subject to change.

E. M. RIDDLE, President.

Age-Limits in the Junior Society

By Stanley B. Vandersol, Editor, Junior C. E. World

It is difficult, of course, to make rules which apply in every situation, especially in so flexible an institution as a Junior Christian Endeavor society. Here and now, however, we make bold to assert that the societies which do the most effective work are those which are most careful about the qualifications of the members, especially with regard to age.

When the first Junior Christian Endeavor societies were organized, there were many reasons for a wide range of ages. Religious work with children was not very far advanced, and there was no substantial grading even in the Sunday school. Primary and Junior classes were not carefully distinguished, and there was much reason to include boys and girls of six or seven in the same society with their older brothers and sisters. Until the Intermediate society came along to claim the teen-age youngsters, they too found a place in the Junior society until they were fourteen or fifteen.

Even now there are some churches where it is said to be impossible to care for the boys and girls in Christian Endeavor unless it be in one society. While the handicaps of such a situation are acknowledged by the leaders, the actual steps toward changing it are often slow in coming.

The ideal ages for a Junior Christian Endeavor society are the years nine, ten, and eleven, with twelve as somewhat open to either the Junior or Intermediate society, depending on circumstances. If the younger children can be led to look forward to their ninth birthday, or to the first entrance-time after that, their appreciation of the Junior society is large from the start. But when there is laxity in the lower age-limit, and some children of eight or even seven are allowed to join, the result is seen not only in the quality of work done, but also in the loss of esteem in which membership is held.

The painstaking training-work of the Junior superintendent must always be distinguished by at least three elements. She must see to it that the younger members who are new in the society are properly assimilated. She must place a fair share of responsibility on those who have had one year's experience. And she must continually cultivate the older ones so that they will see the advancement which is coming to them when they are old enough to join the Intermediate society. This is one of the hard tasks for the superintendent.

She should make her work so thorough and so distinctive that the Intermediate superintendent can say, "I can always count on the Intermediates who have come out of the Junior society."

With too wide a range of ages the Junior superintendent can not get this accomplishment. If the younger members are below nine, it is next to impossible to assimilate them into the work of a society which has as its leaders those who are twelve or over. And if the older ones are more than twelve, they either do more than their share of the work or they gradually disappear from the society, without the beneficial results of a promotion service.

Experience teaches that the Juniors should leave the society when interest is at its height. Of course, there must be an older society into which they can go, and the assimilation process begins again, although on a different basis, for these new Intermediates already know Christian Endeavor. Only with such planning can Christian Endeavor occupy a year-after-year position in the church and do its best work for the boys and girls.

There are many other reasons for limited ages in the society which pertain to the nature of the work. Concentration and real training are possible only among those whose day-by-day experiences and mental and spiritual attainment are practically equal.—Junior C. E. World.

to see the world as a part of his training for life. The World War came on and he was drafted into service and accompanied the British forces in the Cameroon campaign. On his return he came to Ibi, the field headquarters of the Sudan United Mission. Here he heard the gospel preached, and here he became very friendly with one of the Christian young men who was attending the mission school. He became much interested in the Word of God as he heard it read by his friend. He decided to learn to read it for himself. His training in the Moslem school stood him in good stead. In a few weeks he began reading. He made rapid progress. He spent many hours daily poring over this wonderful Word. The Spirit of God began to work in his heart and finally led him into the truth as it is in Christ. Very soon he saw an opportunity for service among the Moslems. He decided to learn the Arabic that he might read to them the Bible in their sacred language. After months of faithful study he was able to read. He was a fine penman. He began writing out selected Scripture passages for the Mohammedan teachers. He would take his Arabic Bible and go into the homes of these men and read to them by the hour and interpret as best he could. He had a fine memory and he committed large portions of the Scripture to memory. He became a fine preacher. The people would gather to hear him at the market place. Through his message many became interested. After more than two years of probation it was my privilege to baptize him and receive him into church membership. Then he decided that he would go out and preach Christ, looking to him to supply his needs. It was my privilege to visit many of the places where he had preached. Many souls became interested in the gospel message through him. Many Moslems purchased from him the Gospel of John in Arabic. Thus he has gone up and down the land sowing the precious seed. Only eternity will reveal the lives he has touched for God. Christ was triumphant in the heart of this Moslem convert.

During the second year of our effort in Wurkum land we spent some months at Kerum, erecting temporary quarters for an out-station. Among those who first became interested were two young men, Maigandi and Ammadu. They helped us with the building, they attended the services and when we opened school they were among the first to enroll. They accompanied me on itinerating tours among the villages, sometimes interpreting in the Pia language for me. We returned to Bambar. They struggled on with their studies. When I visited the outstation for one week end of each month, they would come morning, afternoon and evening for help. They got on well and soon were able to read the primer and the simple Gospel stories. Some months later when I was away attending a conference, these two young men came to Mrs. Guinter asking what they must do to be saved. She pointed out to them the way and asked them to give themselves to Christ. They did so as best they understood. They went back to let their light shine in the home town. As occasion presented itself we gave them teaching. They began to teach others to read, and to interest them in their Christ. They made substantial progress and after more than two years of probation they were baptized by Rev. McBride. They are developing into splendid workers. Maigandi is a good speaker and Ammadu is mighty

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Pen Sketches from Africa

By Rev. C. W. Guinter, Northumberland, Pennsylvania

In the town of Takum there lived a widow, Pa'ana by name, formerly a Jukun slave. She was now well past middle life. She lived alone and made her living by cultivating her garden and trading in the local market. The missionaries came to her town and preached in the market place. Here she first heard the gospel message. Later an out-station was opened in the town and a native evangelist stationed there. Pa'ana became vitally interested and enrolled as an enquirer. She attended the services faithfully. She was always faithful in personal testimony among the people of the town. She suffered not a little persecution for the name of Christ. In due time she received Christian baptism. Her growth in grace was very phenomenal. She devoted much time to prayer until she became known as "the daughter of prayer." From her meager earnings she always brought her tithe and frequently her free will offering. One Christmas eve she came to greet the missionary. Before taking her leave she said, "I have brought my Christmas gift for my Lord." It was a fine sheep. Only God knows the sacrifice she made to bring this offering to him whom she had learned to love and whom she served. What a fine living testimony to the power of Christ, in a redeemed, saved, slave woman.

Lakan was one of the leading witch doctors in the Yergum tribe. He was much more feared than the native chief. He was consulted by the people from far and near.

He did not hesitate to use poison when it served his purpose. Some years ago one of his friends became a Christian. There came into his life such a complete transformation that Lakan was deeply impressed by it, and he confessed to him that he had discovered a medicine that he knew nothing about. This gave him an opportunity to tell of his Christ and what he had done for him. Lakan became deeply interested. After some time he expressed a desire to become a Christian. He took his charms, his medicines and all his paraphernalia to the mission station and burned them, and beside their ashes he gave himself to Christ. He went out to live a new life. He was placed under instruction and after a long period of probation he was baptized and received into the church. As in the past he had been a mighty worker of evil now he became a power for God through divine grace. His devotion, his earnestness, his zeal, made him one of the most influential men of the district. As an office bearer in the church he was loving in counsel, strict in discipline, making for a high standard of Christian living in the local church. His example and his message have given courage to many another to turn from the powerful pagan fetish worship to the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ has gloriously triumphed in this life.

A young man, Mohamma, by name, was born of Moslem parents in the city of Kano. In his childhood he received training in the Koranic school. As a young man he set out in prayer. When there is no missionary resident at the out-station, they carry on the evangelistic and school work. Periodically they go on preaching tours in the villages. The growing interest in Kerum is largely due to the fine Christian living and the faithful Christian service of these two young men. Thus Christ is coming into his own in the dark Sudan.—The Evangelical-Messenger.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

VANDERGRIFT, PENNSYLVANIA

Noting a spiritual awakening among us I called to council our working group Sunday morning and suggested a few special week day services. Accordingly, for the two weeks just closed; we held two special revival services each week. As a result we baptized three precious souls last evening. Two of them being after baptism were confirmed and received into fellowship with the church, the other one wishing to unite with the Free Methodist church.

Our work in this place is in a flourishing condition. The Sunday school enrollment stands at one hundred and sixty four and our attendance averages close to eighty per cent. The church attendance is also on the increase as to numbers and interest; we are expecting other accessions in the near future.

Our esteemed Brother Schaffer of Cone-maugh asked that I should give an address at the Christian Endeavor session of our district conference to tell of the work of our "Young People's Prayer Group." But owing to lack of finances I was unable to be present at conference. So if our editor will give it room here I will give an account of it now.

Our local Christian Endeavor had gotten low in interest and attendance and was not functioning very satisfactorily, so a number of our young folks organized what they call a "Prayer Group." They meet ordinarily once each week on Monday evening in the church homes of the community. It is primarily, as its name implies, a "young people's prayer group." I as their pastor do not meet with them often: twice at their special invitation, and possibly only two other times, and then once they met in our home. But I can say sincerely, it is a real benediction to any home they visit. A really alive and happy group of young folks imbued with a consciousness of fellowship of the Holy Spirit.

The spirituality of any group of folks is manifest by its interests. The interests of this group are (a) Personal experience (b) Missions (c) The Church (d) The Sunday school (e) The inspiration of their pastor. And when they stand together in their prayer circle, for almost exclusively this is their method—with hands clasped in a prayer circle. The prayer of each individual voices sentiments as follows:

That I may experience Christ as my personal Savior and friend.

That our group may constantly expand by the addition of new members.

That our church may grow in numbers and in conscious fellowship with its acknowledged Leader and Head.

That our Sunday school and all its officers, teachers, classes and pupils may be inspired by a conscientious service to Christ.

That our pastor may be inspired with just the message God in Christ would have us receive.

I had this group for a number of weeks conduct the devotions for our regular Sunday evening service with good results. The interest thus aroused tided us over the usual summer slump with increased rather than decreased attendance.

Blessed indeed is any church, pastor or community that has such devoted SPIRIT-filled group of young folks.

Our church will hold its semi-annual Communion service Sunday evening, November 20. We ask the prayers of the brotherhood.

"Now unto HIM that is able to do Exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the Power that worketh in us, Unto HIM be glory in the Church by CHRIST JESUS." Now, just now the joy, the glory of a great RENAISSANCE.

SAMUEL H. BUZARD.

Young Folks' Books

Books for All Young Folks

Selected by "The Congregationalist"

Welcome Christmas! By Eleanor Graham. (Dutton. $2.00.)

A book of stories, legends, carols, games, riddles, etc., all associated with Christmas, collected by the author, who had wide experience during her years in charge of the Children's Book Department in a London bookshop.

A Rabbit Advises the Clock. By J. W. G. Ward. (Abingdon. $1.50.)

Dr. Ward, formerly of the First Congregational church in Detroit and now minister of the First Presbyterian church, Oak Park, Ill., presents in this book twenty-eight stories for Juniors. They are in the realm of imagination and romance, and while they are intended for little folks to read for themselves, they have also the additional purpose of providing material that may be used for bed-time stories by teachers and preachers in the instilling of good lessons and in the enrichment of character.

Outline of World History for Boys and Girls. By H. C. Knapp-Fisher. (Dutton. $3.00.)

Every child ought to be given, as early as he can appreciate it, a sort of perspective of the world in which he lives, and the human race to which he belongs. He can fill in the details as he grows older, but he ought to have something corresponding to the stamp album of young stamp collectors, suggesting the extent of the spaces that there are to fill in, and also the nature of much that is to be put there. This book will be found very good for the purpose. Its author is free from any strong bias that would render the picture narrow or distorted; and while what ought to be put in and what ought to be left out of such a book must be a matter subject to wide variety of judgment, he has shown skill in his selection of significant events and persons. The author appreciates the historical significance of Jesus and Christianity, and he writes of both with a sincere effort simply to state the essential historic facts. The New Testament states them somewhat better, but as a whole the Outline is well proportioned and exceedingly well done. Some portions might call for a little help in exposition on the part of an older reader—especially in relation to younger readers of the group of from nine to fifteen years, for whom the book is intended.

Two Little Confederates. By Thomas Nelson Page. (Scribners. $2.50.)

This beautiful edition of a story written nearly half a century ago will be welcomed by old, and new, readers. Its distinction, apart from the interest of the story and its general attractiveness as a book, lies in the many illustrations by Captain John W. Thomason, illustrations that are full of zest and entirely in the atmosphere and spirit of the story.

Van Loon's Geography. By Hendrik Willem van Loon. (Simon and Shuster. $3.75.)

For Mr. van Loon this earth is not simply a mass of material disposed in mountains and plains, rivers and seas; it is a habitable globe, with relationships to the masses of people who live upon it. As in his books interpreting history, Mr. van Loon has unique and graphic methods of making geography both human and vivid. His book is packed with information but it is not in the form of tables and statistics. A wonderful attractive book for both old and young.

Experimental Television. By A. Frederick Collins. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard. $2.50.)

Mr. Collins, who, in addition to his distinction as inventor of the wireless telephone in 1899, has written much in the interpretation of science for young people, presents in this book for those of all ages an account of television, with a series of simple experiments and instructions for making a complete home television transmitter and receiver. The book is illustrated with 185 illustrations and diagrams.

Lone Cowboy. By Will James. (Scribners. $2.50.)

In the same series of Illustrated Classics is Will James' life story, first published in 1930. In addition to the black and white drawings which have made the "lone cowboy" as famous as his writing, the book is now richly illustrated in color, with a most alluring colored cover.

Air Travelers. By Laura A. Large. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard. $1.50.)

The story of aviation from its earliest beginnings to recent achievements told in a relatively brief and interesting narrative, and illustrated with a number of photographs of much historic value and effectiveness.

Children's Hour. Station Y. E. F., By Yvonne Elizabeth Frank (Macaulay. $1.50.)

Yvonne found that all the children's books are written by grownups, who, she thinks, are apt to forget how children really feel and talk. She decided to set up her own make-believe radio station and broadcast the sort of stories she makes up for her dog, Zip. The stories show much originality, the fairy stories being particularly good and well told.

The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come. By John Fox, Jr. (Scribners. $2.50.)

This famous story, first published in 1903, has been given a worthy and beautiful setting in this charming edition, with fourteen full-page color illustrations by N. C. Wyeth. Uncle Bill. By Will James. (Scribners. $2.00.)

This "tale of two kids and a cowboy" has all the charm and authority, of Mr. James' stories of Western life, with the very important attraction of his vigorous drawings. Kip and his sister Scootie were city youngsters, but they learned a great deal in their summer on their uncle's ranch.

Distant Worlds. The Story of a Voyage to the Planets. By Friedrich Mader. Translated from the German by Max Shachtman. (Scribners. $2.00.)

Mader is described as the modern Jules Verne. He has written many books for boys founded upon some scientific idea or invention. Distant Worlds, which has had wide circulation in Germany, is the first of his books to be translated into English. By a reversal of gravitation, Lord Filmore's World-Ship is able to visit the planets. Terrible experiences befall them until they ultimately come to a planet paradise inhabited by a higher order than those of our own earth.

When You Grow Up to Vote. By Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. (Houghton Mifflin. $1.50.)

The children whom Mrs. Roosevelt instructs in the mechanism and art of citizenship will be too young ever to vote for or against her husband, but she has done her part for young America in writing this very graphic book. It is really unique in its conception and in the way in which, with the important help of Manning de V. Lee, the illustrator, she puts her lessons across.

The Little Wise One. By Frank Worthington. (Houghton Mifflin. $1.75.)

Mr. Worthington records the simple and delightful animal stories, handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation, that he heard during his twenty-two years in Africa. The book is intended for readers of from seven to ten, but it will appeal to older young folks and adults. The author's own illustrations give added interest.

Made in England. By Susan Smith. (Nelson. $2.00.)

A gift edition of a book telling the story of English decorative art. It is beautifully illustrated, and offers a great deal of information concerning such artists or skilled workers in various fields as Sir Christopher Wren, Josiah Wedgwood, Thomas Chippendale, and many others. It is for all readers, young and old.

Romany Road. By Irving Brown. (Harrison Smith & Robert Haas. $2.50.)

A story for young people of from ten to sixteen years of the adventures, amusing and tragic, of a fourteen-year-old American boy who runs away from home and is adopted by a Gypsy family. The book presents a picture of the life of what is said to be "the wildest, least known, and most colorful of the various kinds of Romanies, the Nomad Coppersmiths." The author of the book is an authority on this subject and has written three books about these Gypsies.

And That's Why. By W. Maxwell Reed. (Harcourt, Brace. $1.25.)

The author of The Earth for Sam has written a most interesting "why" book. It tells the "why" of clouds, frost, mountains, thunderstorms, lightning, fire, etc., describes what happens when we have a thunderstorm, and explains many other things about which children of ages six to ten wish to know. It is illustrated by Karl Moseley.

Words to the Wise. A Book of Proverbs for Boys and Girls. By Helen Sewell. (Dodd, Mead. $1.25.)

The proverbs selected are illustrated by the author, with drawings done in red, and the proverb itself in green lettering.

Romantic Rebel. By Hildegard Hawthorne. (Century. $2.50.)

Older boys and girls, as well as adults, will find very fascinating this romantic story of Nathaniel Hawthorne, written by his grand-daughter. It is not a critical biography of a great literary artist, but is an intimate and delightful account of a gentle and generous man whose own life, character, and relationships were an inherent part of his achievement. To every lover of Hawthorne's books this colorful biography will bring added joy.

The Ruth Brooks Cross-Word Puzzle Book. By Ruth Brooks. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard. $1.35.)

The Ruth Brooks puzzles are in the aristocracy of cross-word enigmas. If you can't solve them there is a key in the back of the book.

"THE FIGHT AGAINST ALCOHOL GAINS" DECLARES CAPTAIN GASTON, LONDON, IN A NEW YORK INTERVIEW WITH VIVIAN BURNETT

New York Special. — "World advance against alcohol and the liquor traffic is rapidly gaining despite wet claims to the contrary," Captain Edward Page Gaston, F.R.G.S., of London, England, founder and special commissioner of the World Prohibition Federation, in an interview here today with Vivian Burnett, New York business representative of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation.

Captain Gaston has just arrived in New York after conferences with friends of the dry cause in Toronto, Chicago, Washington and Baltimore.

"The fight against the liquor traffic in America under the Eighteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution, has proved an inspiration of world-wide importance to the temperance cause," said Captain Gaston. "The battle for sobriety in England and Europe generally, has been at a great disadvantage for years, due to the solid political and industrial entrenchments of the drink traffic there. In the British Isles particularly, the brewers are in the saddle to an extent that Americans can hardly imagine, their brewery stock being held by parliamentary and even by some church leaders; their advertising dominating the newspaper landscape and their influence affecting all public consideration of the question.

"One of the startling evidences of this influence is the widespread propaganda which fairly drenches the English newspapers with misrepresentation of prohibition in America. What I have seen with my own eyes in the past few weeks in a large number of your great cities emphatically explodes the wet claims in our London press, that prohibition is a nullity and is non-enforceable in the United States.

"As an American citizen who has never lost his love for his native land, although the necessities of business affiliations have compelled me to reside abroad for some years, I am frank to admit, as I compare liquor conditions in the old license days in Chicago and other American centers, with present facts as I have found them, even the surface benefits of prohibition are amazing.

"In the drunkenness and dissipation which were everywhere manifest in the old days, there is no resemblance whatever to the busy crowds of sober but happy citizens with whom I have mingled on your streets and in your places of business during the past few days.

"Just as prohibition America has proved a factor of great encouragement to the forces fighting the liquor traffic in other lands, so the record of temperance progress around the world should hearten and strengthen the defense of your national prohibition legislation here in America," continued Captain Gaston.

"Despite many handicaps which have to be overcome in non-prohibition lands, there is a steady gain in the registering of scientific and industrial condemnation of beverage alcohol.

"Leading scientists of England, France, Germany and other European countries have stripped alcoholic liquor of its every camouflage and an increasing number of the new generation in these lands are espousing abstinence principles, and developing real hostility to the continued domination of the liquor interests.

"This is especially true in England and Germany, while Russia is attacking the liquor problem and the alcohol habit in the boldest of educational propaganda.

"The widely heralded defeat of prohibition in Finland was not a defeat for prohibition as it is known in America, as previous legislation permitted the sale of alcoholic beer and the biggest fight of that little country has been with a cordon of liquor smugglers across her border.

"But the most startling evidence of liquor's active propaganda against America is seen in the efforts of the liquor interests of Europe to lend their aid and support to the wet interests fighting for repeal here in America.

"One of the clearest proofs of the success of prohibition in America is found in the eagerness with which our Scotch whiskey makers, the wine growers of France and the brewers of noted German beers are following and applauding every news item which seems to favor, as they hope, a re-opening American market through modification or repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"As a matter of fact, the activity of the liquor interests abroad in misleading England and Europe's public regarding American conditions, should fairly stir the resentment of the American people and I believe the time has come for them to protest against the intolerable effrontery from which America has suffered for a dozen years."—The Christian-Evangelist.

Be captain of your soul, but remember there is an officer superior to a captain.—Religious Telescope.

But to all who are sorry for their sin, who love the Lord Jesus Christ, who desire to have their faith strengthened, their lives more Godly, their sins forgiven. To all such the infinitely compassionate Redeemer saith: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy-laden and I will give you rest."

If you purpose in your heart to continue in wilful sin, to ignore the Word of God, and the preaching thereof, to "pass by on the other side" as regards the Missionary Commandment of Christ and the work of the Lord in general, then we warn and admonish you do not come to the table of the Lord.

Publication of Proclamation Delayed

(Continued from page 2)

New York the third day of October in the year of our Lord 1789.

"George Washington."

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington the third day of November, in the year of our Lord 1932, and of the independence of the United States of America the 157th.

Herbert Hoover.

OUR LITTLE READERS

A GOOD JOB

By Maud Wilcox Neidermeyer

"Russel, Russel, wake up!"

Russell knew the voice, and he yawned and stretched and then sat up straight in bed.

"This is Saturday, and there are some extra jobs for you to do," continued his mother, closing the bedroom window.

"Yes, mother, but I wanted to go nutting with Arthur," objected Russel.

"I'm sorry, son, but the lawn in front of the house needs raking. I want you to go right out there after breakfast and clean it up."

Russel dressed rather soberly. It was a shame a boy couldn't have one day a week to himself! It would be awful to have to see Arthur go off alone hunting nuts. But maybe, after breakfast he would feel better, especially if there were pancakes.

But there weren't any pancakes. Everybody seemed to be in a great hurry. Katie was already at her baking, and the kitchen had a delicious cinnamon smell.

"The rake is in the tool shed, Russel. Now, let me see what a good job you can make of the lawn," mother said.

Russel went slowly out to the shed. He sent many anxious glances toward the house next door, for that was where Arthur lived. Art knew all the best places to find nuts. It was a shame that—He pulled the rake around the front of the house. Suddenly a familiar voice called to him.

"Lo, Rus, you got a job, too?" It was Arthur, and he was raking furiously away at his own front lawn.

"Lo, Art," responded Russel. "Say you're way ahead of me. You're about half finished already."

Before Arthur could reply his mother came out on the steps and waved a warning dust cloth at him. "Arthur Clark!" she exclaimed, "that's no way to rake a lawn. Where you've gone over it, it looks about as bad as the rest. I want it raked clean."

Poor Arthur! He had to start all over again at the path that ran around the house and rake up all those helter-skelter leaves.

Russel thought to himself, "Art may get through ahead of me, but I'm going to have the best looking lawn. I'm going to rake it so clean that you couldn't find a leaf anywhere."

It was rather slow work to rake as carefully as all that, but Russel stuck to it. He glanced over at Arthur now and then, and saw that he was making fast progress. But his lawn was not neat looking.

Arthur finished his job and disappeared. Russel took a good look at the lawn next door.

"He needn't have raked it at all, if he couldn't do better than that," said Russel to himself. Then he glanced at his own lawn, leafless and clean, and went to work harder than ever.

He had just finished carrying the last basketful of dead leaves to the barn, when an automobile drove up and stopped. Two boys and a girl got out. Russel rushed to meet them.

"We're going on a picnic!" cried Joan, his little cousin. "Is your mother ready?"

A picnic! Russel suddenly remembered the cinnamon smell in the kitchen. Katie must have been getting ready for a picnic. Hurrah!

"Say, Russel, this is the best looking lawn around here," said his uncle, getting out of the car.

"I like the way you have worked," added his aunt. "That's a good job of raking."

Russel felt very proud. It was worth it to do your job a little bit better than it had ever been done before.

"After the picnic we are going nutting," said Harold.

Russel felt as though he wanted to shout. He threw his cap in the air, and then ran into the house to help his mother bring out the picnic things.

The Rational Basis of the New Birth

(Continued from page 11)

tery of the spiritual process known as regeneration. Jesus wisely said to his interlocutor: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." Then as an analogy he referred to "the wind which bloweth where it listeth," but is understood by no one.

There are people who do not want to accept what they cannot understand; but in view of all the mysteries with which we are surrounded, that is not a reasonable attitude to assume. No one knows what matter and mind are, nor how they are correlated in the human brain to produce self-conscious thought, emotion and volition. Who can get a clear conception of force, electricity, magnetism, time, space, eternity, infinity? These are all inexplicable mysteries. Yet we do not on that account deny their reality.

So with regard to the operation of the Holy Spirit within our psychology; we do not need to understand it; we need only to experience it; then we shall know it to be a reality. While this experience is an inner psychical one, it makes its impact upon the same center of self-consciousness as do our sense impressions, and so it is just as clearly attested.

VII. Unity and Diversity in the New Birth

The truth of the above sub-head will be clarified in a Pauline statement: "There are diversities of operations, but it is the same God who worketh all in all" (1 Cor. 12:6). In every case of true spiritual regeneration, it is wrought by the Holy Spirit through the medium of the Word of God. Here is a sacred unity in all Christian experience. But the Spirit comes to different individuals in various ways. Herein lies a beautiful diversity. Diversity of condition, circumstance and temperament result in diversity in the manner in which the experience comes.

At this place our Lord's imagery is most apropos. He illustrated his thesis by the wind blowing where it listeth. The wind does not always blow in the same way. Sometimes it blows a hurricane or a cyclone. Some people's experience of conversion comes in that way: it is sudden and revolutionary, resulting in great clarity as to time, place, main content, and other details. Such was the experience of Paul, Augustine, John Newton, Rowland Hill, John Bunyan, Jerry McAuley, and many others.

However, the wind does not always, nor even usually, blow with violence. Often it blows a gentle breeze or zephyr and softly fans your cheek. No doubt there are many conversions of the zephyr-like description. The Holy Spirit breathes upon some persons in a more gentle way. This is apt to be the case in children's conversions. Some of the best Christians we have ever known have described their experience in practically this way: "We cannot recall the exact time and place when we were converted, for we cannot remember the time when we did not trust and love the Lord Jesus Christ."

No doubt such persons were converted in their childhood, perhaps at their mother's knee, and have never lost their faith in their Lord. The experience of it came to them more gradually and gently than would the experience of an adult person who was somewhat suddenly convicted and converted after following a course of sin.

Paul, although he himself had the more revolutionary experience, recognized the genuineness of Timothy's more childlike experience, for he wrote thus to Timothy: "But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them; and that from (Greek, a babe) thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 3: 14, 15).

To sum up, the Christian system is coherent, complete and effectual. Man was created in the divine image, and therefore

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

A NEW EMERGENCY

A crisis has come to us, in that the Lafayette Land Bank insists upon the payment of $181.44 and a small addition of interest, on or before December 1, this being the amount now past due on the loan against the 80 acre farm, located near the Home. The matter is urgent, as every reader will agree. Who will come to our rescue? Send money immediately to

HENRY RINEHART, Treasurer,
Flora, Indiana.

in a state of moral and spiritual integrity; through the abuse of his freedom, he sinned and thus lost the divine image, rendering himself an alien from the life of God; in the fulness of time God sent his Son to redeem his fallen creatures, thus removing all the judicial obstacles in the way of his salvation; then the Holy Spirit came to apply the objective redemption wrought by the active and passive obedience of the incarnate Son of God, to regenerate man, to create saving faith in his soul, restore the divine image in him, to give him inner certification of truth and salvation, and thus bring him back into the holy and happy fellowship with his Creator. Is not that a complete system and a rational philosophy? If it were generally accepted, and were permitted to be an energizing moral and spiritual force in men's lives, human hearts would be stabilized and comforted, and the race would advance rapidly in true civilization. Then, too, the perplexed minds of men would experience the divine solution of their fundamental problems.

Nor would such peace of mind in any way or measure curtail men's activities and researches, but would turn them into other and more fruitful channels, because then men's souls would be at peace, "in tune with the infinite." And so for every one the great and satisfying experience of the apostle would be realized: "Godliness with contentment is great gain."—The King's Business.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

HAVE YOU PLACED YOUR ORDER?

Dr. Florence N. Gribble's book, "UNDAUNTED HOPE," is now in the hands of the publishers, and promised to be off the press shortly after November 15th. This book tells the fascinating story of the founding of the Mission Oubangui-Chari in the heart of French Equatorial Africa by our pioneer missionary, James S. Gribble. The first 1000 copies will be sold at cost—$1.65 postpaid to any address in the United States. After this first edition is exhausted, the price of the book will be materially advanced. Get in on the first 1000 orders by sending us your name and address by return mail, accompanied by check or money order for $1.65.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY
OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH, 1925
East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

GUTKNECHT-OTT—Virgil R. Gutknecht, of Morrill, Kansas, and Charlotte E. Ott of Sabetha, Kansas, were united in marriage at the Brethren parsonage, Morrill, Kansas, September 15, 1932. The groom is a member of the Brethren church at Morrill, in which town they will reside. Their many friends wish them much happiness and success on the journey of life. Ceremony by the writer.

L. A. MYERS.

DIENSTRIER-HESELTYNE—Frederick H. Dienstbier, of Sabetha, Kansas and Kathryn I. Heseltyne also of Sabetha, were united in marriage at the Brethren parsonage, Morrill, Kansas, November 3, 1932. The happy couple will make their home in the vicinity of Sabetha on a farm. Their many friends join in wishing them much joy and success over the highway of life. Ceremony by the writer.

L. A. MYERS.

IN THE SHADOW

WILCOX—Edward Wilcox was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on August 31, 1857, and departed this life at the family home in Fort Scott, Kansas, June 3rd, 1932, at the age of 74 years, 9 months and 2 days.

Mr. Wilcox was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Fuller in Fort Scott, Kansas, November 6th, 1880. He is survived by the wife and the following children: George Ellsworth Wilcox, Fred Wilcox, Seattle Washington; Mrs. Anna King, Miss Jennie Wilcox, Tulsa, Oklahoma; Mrs. Blanch Redding and Mrs. Mary Ellen Jennings and five grandchildren. He was a good Christian man, a good husband and father, and neighbor and will be missed by a large circle of friends. Funeral by the writer from the Church of God, of Fort Scott, Kansas, assisted by the pastor, Rev. T. M. Tucker. Many beautiful flowers were an evidence of esteem from many friends and groups. Burial was made in the family lot in Oak Grove cemetery.

L. G. WOOD.

STRAUB—Lydia Ann Straub passed to her reward, August 16, 1932, at Pawnee City, Nebraska. Her illness was of a prolonged nature and her care was provided by her relatives at the Pawnee City Hospital. She was 72 years, 7 months and 14 days old. Her church membership was in the Hamlin church and the funeral services were held from that church by the writer.

L. A. MYERS.

KIDWELL—Lois Babcock Kidwell was called home, Saturday morning, September 30, 1932, at the age of 70 years, 3 months and 20 days. She was living with her son-in-law, Adolph Kennel at the time of her illness. She was a member of the Brethren church at Hamlin, Kansas. The funeral services were held from that church by the writer.

L. A. MYERS.

BERKLEY—Cyrus W. Berkley departed this life August 20, 1932, at the age of 81 years, 6 months and 13 days. He was a member of the Brethren church at Hamlin, Kansas. The funeral services were held in the Hamlin church and interment in the Hamlin Cemetery. Services were conducted by the writer.

L. A. MYERS.

Is there ever a time when a Christian should not GIVE THANKS TO GOD?

We truly thank God for those who are doing their best
For Our Campaign For Subscriptions To
THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Begin now to get a Christmas Club of New Subscribers

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 90 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions. $1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscrip-

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor tions

Church now renewing its list

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscriber is one not now getting the paper.)

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

In Memoriam--A Communion Thought

"This do in remembrance of me." I have rambled into the old graveyard in the city of Boston where its first citizens were buried. I tried to read the inscriptions on the old tombstones. Some of them were worn away. Some that were readable were ludicrous. They were all meant to preserve the memory of those buried there. I stood at the Egyptian obelisk in Central Park of New York City and noted that the ancient inscriptions carved in stone were being erased by the wear of the centuries, and the very stone itself was wearing away. I have plodded in many of the out-of-the-way places where once a devoted people buried their dead, and found the old graveyard littered with fallen tombstones, many of them broken or sunken in the earth, uncared for and forgotten. And my heart has been saddened at the obvious futility of human effort to preserve the memory of men. The names of some few have come down to us in the literature of the nations, and many of these I think would rather have been forgotten. The teeming millions who have walked the earth since first the flight of time began have lived and wrought, each in his little span of life, and vanished in the world's forgetfulness. But when the rocks have crumbled and the books have molded there will still be multitudes in the everlasting Kingdom of earth who will break their bread, though the ages roll, in loving memory of the Man of Galilee.—Rev. E. E. Smith.

Why I am for Prohibiting the Sale of Liquor

By Rose E. Upton Bascom

In 1881 and 1882 I taught the village school in the lumbering town of Hungerford Michigan, going back and forth by train from my home in Big Rapids, which was the end of the line. When the time came to start, the bell would ring long and loud and often as many as twenty "lumberjacks" would file out of the back door of Mike Collins' saloon, take the train and before Hungerford, seven miles out, was reached, most would be drunk and dead to the world.

Hungerford boasted a depot, several small houses for the section hands, and one large mill close by the depot. Farther up the track and 'round that sharp curve of the road where two poor drunks asleep on the tracks were beheaded, was the one dirty general store, whose proprietor was generally drunk, the other mill houses for the mill hands, and Fred Hodges' saloon, the only pretentious building in town. One of the lumber manufacturers once said to me: "Miss Upton, I pay out $1,500 a month. If I could give Fred Hodges half of that and keep the men away from his saloon they would have more at the end of the month than they have now." (Show me the company today who can say that.)

Not a child in my school had comfortable clothing. I recall one family's lunch consisted of slices of bread with thick slices of cold fat boiled pork in between, week after week. How those little wolves used to watch my lunch, and how they snapped up what I could never refuse to give them. One little girl watched as I ate an orange unshared. The last piece was just disappearing. Her last chance was at hand. "Teacher, do you like oranges?" I have always felt sorry she spoke too late.

That child's father was the best paid man in town—the filer of saws. Death claimed the son in that home and "teacher" must furnish the music for that sad occasion. The house was absolutely bare of comforts or conveniences. I had to stand through the simple service conducted by a layman, because of so few chairs. Together in the coming dusk of a misty, cold November afternoon we walked ankle-deep through the sandy road to the graveyard, well named, merely an opening in the "slashings" surrounded by tall, dead pines, accompanied by the father, too drunk to walk straight. Then the mother and the four little ones and that drunken father went back to that forlorn home, the mother to again take up the struggle to provide for the children by washing, and Fred Hodges, just across the track, getting a fat bank account from that man's pay check.

Christmas had few if any pleasures for any of the children, so supplied with popcorn to pop materials for molasses candy and my hook for pulling it, oranges and peanuts. I gave them the only treat they would have. The filer's daughter was the jolliest child there. Late in the afternoon, with her dinner pail which "teacher" had filled with a treat for the little ones at home, she started down the hill a happy child. Going to the depot to take the train home, on the depot platform I ran onto a man sitting there with his coat torn clear to the collar, hair disheveled and face bathed in blood, the result of a drunken brawl. Jessie's father. Such a sight after that happy afternoon at school, and Christmas eve.

One spring the "drive" broke up at Newaygo, down the line, and the crew, thirty or forty lumberjacks, wild with drink abundant on every hand, were on the train I was to take. The conductor, seeming to consider discretion the better part of valor, came into our car, locking the door, leaving them to settle their own differences. Search the whole country and our possessions with a fine-tooth comb and where will you find anything like that? Michigan was not on the outskirts of civilization, by any means. These were only everyday occurrences. These women of wealth bemoaning the "horrors of prohibition" are pinning the label on the wrong party. Where is the vicinity that would tolerate such conditions if such a town with its saloons could be transplanted into their midst?

What has made the change? Prohibiting the sale and manufacture of liquor. Prohibition wiped out 177,000 saloons and their product—the conditions I found in Hungerford. Then call it a failure.

Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment? Never! Prohibition is only twelve years old. Give it a chance.—The American Issue.

Effects of the Depression on Child Employment

National Child Labor Day, the annual observance of which occurs on January 28-30, 1933, under the auspices of the National Child Labor Committee, takes on a new significance with the prolongation of the depression. The total number of children employed has been greatly reduced, at least for the time being. The United States Census places the number of working children, 10 to 15 years of age, inclusive, at 667,118 in 1930 as compared with 1,060,858 in 1920, a reduction of 37 per cent.

Many of the children now at work, however, have been driven prematurely into industry by long continued unemployment of adult relatives. Some of the less scrupulous small concerns take advantage of the situation to work young girls excessive hours, at starvation wages. Beginners earning $3 a week or less in textile and clothing manufacture have been reported from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. In South Carolina and Georgia, where the longest working hours are allowed, the Census of 1930 showed an actual increase in the number of children under 16 employed in manufacturing. The greatest care should be given at this juncture therefore to enforcing child labor laws improving lax laws, and maintaining established standards of minimum age, physical fitness, and working hours.

No less important is the education and welfare of the boys and girls for whom no jobs are available. But the schools, which ought to be offering increased facilities, are faced in many sections of the country with reduced appropriations. School terms are being shortened, the teaching force curtailed, attendance work reduced, vocational training and guidance programs suspended, and building plans cancelled. Handicapped as they are, educational systems have been unable to hold or to recall a large percentage of the boys and girls for whom industry no longer has room.

The Federal Children's Bureau estimates that there are upwards of half a million boys and young men under 21 years of age drifting about the country on foot or jumping freight trains in a fruitless search for work. Most cities, with local relief agencies already taxed by community needs, move these boys on with no more than a night's lodging and a meager meal or two, and without any real attempt to solve the problem of their reabsorption into the social fabric.

A numerical reduction therefore in the number of child laborers is not sufficient, without alternative provision for constructive training. Never has the need for the strengthening of our educational structure been more urgent than now. Including those of 16 and 17 years, more than 2,000,000 boys and girls are reported by the 1930 Census as gainfully employed; but more than 3,000,000 are not attending school. The opportunity exists for keeping thousands of young people in school and preparing them to find greater satisfaction, usefulness, security and development in what their hands and minds find to do. The amount and kind of education given to adolescent youth in the next few years will largely determine the contribution of the coming generation to the solution of the problem of unemployment, economic instability, and international relationships which are troubling the world today.

Churches, schools and clubs wishing to plan a program for National Child Labor Day are invited to send to the National Child Labor Committee, 331 Fourth Avenue, New York City, for free material, including an outline of the status of child labor and education in any specified State.

"Those who eat and drink unworthily (without repentance for sin in their hearts) eat and drink judgment to themselves.—The Word of God.

The promises of God form a great check-book. Every one is endorsed by the mediator, and his word and honor are pledged to their fulfillment. To make his Yea into Amen you must sign your name upon the back of the promise, and then personally appropriate it.—A. B. Simpson.

IN THIS NUMBER

The Church My Fellowship—Editor,	3
What the Word of God Will Do—
Editor . . . . .	3
Editorial Review . . . . .	4
Moderator's Address—F. C. Vanator,	5
Rejoice in the Lord—Lucille Guiley,	7
Significant News and Views . . . . .	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey . . . . .	8
The Challenge of Missions to Christian Youth—R. H. Glover . . . . .	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson
—T. C. Lyon . . . . .	11
"Faith"—Vivian Adler . . . . .	11
Plans for the Junior Committee . . .	11
Argentina—C. F. Yoder . . . . .	12
News from the Field . . . . .	13, 14
Our Little Readers . . . . .	16
In the Shadow . . . . .	16
Announcements . . . . .	16
Business Manager's Corner . . . . .	16
Brethren's Home Corner . . . . .	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Church my Fellowship

(Reprint of Chapter written by the Editor in "The Way of Life")

The Church Defined

Our study deals with the visible or actual church, which we may define briefly as the organized body of Christian disciples. It may be helpful to say further that the Greek word in the New Testament which is translated "church" means "the called out ones." Hence the church is composed of those who have heard the Gospel call to separate themselves from the evil world to a life of righteousness in Christ Jesus (2 Cor. 6:17). Our English word "church" is derived ultimately from another Greek word which means "belonging to the Lord," which implies that the church is a society of people "belonging to the Lord."

The church is not to be confused with the Kingdom of God, or Kingdom of heaven, which terms refers to the reign of righteousness which Christ set up, and which is destined to prevail more and more until it shall be completed. The church is not the Kingdom, but is the agency for bringing about its completion.

Its Foundation.

The church is built upon faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, and he himself is the builder. Peter was called the rock-man when he professed faith in the divine Sonship of Christ because his life was established on a rock foundation (Matt. 16:18). And it was upon that foundation, namely, faith in his deity, that our Lord declared, "I will build my church." We find Philip demanding of the Ethiopian eunuch just such faith in Jesus Christ as a requisite to baptism (Acts 8:37). And Paul declared "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3:11). Moreover John emphatically states that he who denies that Jesus is the Christ ("the anointed") is a liar and an antichrist, and he admonishes his readers to let the faith which they had received from the beginning abide in them (1 John 2:22-24.)

The Mission of the Church

The mission of the church is three-fold:

(1) To proclaim the Gospel of saving grace to those who know it not (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:15).

(2) To culture the spiritual lives of its membership (Matt. 28:21—"Teaching them to observe all things;" John 21:15-17—"Feed my sheep;" Acts 20:28; 1 Peter 5:2).

(3) To minister to those in distress, i. e., heal the sick, succor the needy, cast out demons, etc. (Matt. 26:34-46; Mark 16:17, 18; Luke 9:6; 10:9, 27—"Love thy neighbor as thyself", 30-37).

Its Creed

The creed of the church is the written word of God, which was given unto us through his Son (Heb. 1:1), and was written that we might "believe" (John 20:31). It has been the historic position of the Brethren fraternity that the Bible is the only creed that the church needs or may rightfully possess. "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:14, 17), and that word is the sufficient rule and unfailing source of faith. If we believe the Bible to be the record of "holy men of God who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Peter 1:21), and not the "words which man's wisdom teacheth" (1 Cor. 2:13), we have no need of any man-written creed, for the inspired word of God is all-sufficient (2 Tim. 3:16).

Rule of Conduct

"By baptism the Christian died to the world, and so the negative, prohibitive, sphere of law had no longer any meaning for him (Rom. 6:3; Col. 3:5-12). His life was consecrated to Christ (Rom. 12:1-2), who is its goal (Rom. 14:8; Phil. 1:21), its example, (Phil. 2:5; 1 Peter 2:21-24), and the source of its strength (John 6:48; 2 Cor. 12:9; Eph. 4:16). His body is the sacred temple of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. 6:19), a member of Christ (1 Cor. 6:15), and therefore personal holiness and purity are his natural condition" (Hastings, Dictionary of the Bible). In every way, Christian conduct is to be above question, and even in applying the principles of Christian liberty, the utmost care is to be taken to avoid occasions of offense (Matt. 8:6; Luke 17:1, 2; Rom. 14:13, 21; 1 Cor. 8:12, 13; 10:31, 32).

Its Authority and Discipline

The authority which the church possesses rests not in any apostle or church official, but in the inspired word, which is declared to be sufficient for reproof and correction in righteousness (2 Tim. 3:16). And such authority as was originally exercised by bishops or elders was committed to them through inspired utterances embodied in the Word (2 Tim. 4:1, 2; Titus 2:15), and was local in its sphere. There was no central government extending over the churches and no officers possessing authority over them all. It was recognized that the visible church, composed as it was of imperfect human beings, could not exist without discipline, and the form was provided by the Founder of the church himself (Matt. 18:15-20). It is the gentlest discipline that could possibly be administered, and yet the wisdom of the ages has not been able to devise anything more effective.

Conditions of Membership

There are three conditions to membership set forth clearly and repeatedly:

(1) Faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God (Mark 16:16; John 3:14-16; Acts 8:37; 16:31).

(2) Repentance of sins (Acts 2:38; 3:19; 17:30; 26:20).

(3) Baptism (Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:16; John 3:5; Acts 2:28; 22:16).

Importance of Church Membership

The church is Christ's agency for saving the world and every saved person ought to be a part of it. It is difficult to see how any one can claim to be a disciple of Christ and refuse to identify himself with his church. In the times of the Apostles those who were being saved day by day were added unto the church (Acts 2:47).

Since the church is Christ's own possession and he himself is the builder (Matt. 16:18), every saved person ought to submit himself to be as a stone in the building which he would erect.

The church is the body of Christ (1 Cor. 12:27; Eph. 1:10, 23; 5:30). How can one possess the life of Christ and not be a member of that body?

The church is the bride of Christ (Eph. 5:25; Rev. 21:2, 9). How can one enjoy the blessedness of that intimate relation and remain apart from the church?

The church actual and militant is destined by the grace and power of God to become the church ideal and triumphant (Eph. 5:25-27). How can one share the glory of that triumph, who has not identified himself with the church in the earth and shared its conflicts and trials?

What the Word of God Will Do

In many pulpits Bible Sunday is being observed the first Sunday in December. This is not to imply that the Bible is not, or should not be, given prominence on other Sundays. The Bible ought to be the meat of every service in the whole round year. But through the advocacy of certain Bible societies this Sunday is being urged as a time for taking account in a special way of the influence of the Bible upon the life of the world, and for stressing the great need of men for a more vital and intimate knowledge of its precious truth.

No one needs to be told that the Bible has wielded a profound influence upon the world. It has indeed been as a bright and shining light. By its very nature it was bound to be so, for it is the Word of God and God's words are always light. In the beginning God spoke and "There was light." Again God spoke and his Son came forth as "the light of the world." The experience of men has borne witness to the light-giving power of the word of God. The psalmist declared: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path (Psa. 119:105)." Again he says: "The entrance of thy words giveth light (Psa. 119:130)." The Apostle Peter recognized and valued this characteristic of the word and said, "whereunto ye do well to take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place" (2 Pet. 1:19). And Paul tells us "they were written for our admonition" (1 Cor. 10:11), and that they are profitable for many things, particularly "for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

But consider more specifically what the word of God does for mankind, or stands ready to do.

The primary purpose of the written word is that men might have eternal life. That is John's testimony: "But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name" (John 20:31). From Jesus' own lips we have the statement: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." And a moment later when Jesus asked the disciples if they too would go away as the crowd was doing, Peter replied: "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life" (John 6:63, 68). And James declares, "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth" (Jas. 1:18).

And from the example and statement of the Lord Jesus in the midst of his temptation in the wilderness, we learn that men are not merely begotten, or made partakers of eternal life through his word, but that we are also to live by it. "It is written," he replies to Satan, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4).

God's word has a cleansing power upon the lives of men. Here are the words of Jesus to that effect: "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you" (John 15:3).

The word has sanctifying power, as we learn from Jesus' high priestly prayer: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth" (John 17:17).

The word of God is to be desired as a means of spiritual growth, for Peter gives the admonition: "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Pet. 2:2).

The word is to give patience and comfort and to enliven our hope. Hear Paul: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

And finally (Not that we have exhausted the subject, but it is final for our present consideration) we are told that the word of God is able to build us up in the spiritual life and make us partakers of that inheritance we have in Christ Jesus, if we make much of it. "And now, brethren," says Paul, "I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified" (Acts 20:32).

---

EDITORIAL REVIEW

---

Brother W. C. Benschoff reports a three weeks' revival effort at Limestone, Tennessee, where Brother and Sister Hill Maconaghy are the efficient leaders. The evangelist speaks highly of these young, consecrated workers, who are doing a splendid work, not merely in the Limestone church but are seeking to extend the borders of the whole Gospel in a new community nearby. Brother Benschoff says the people here, though isolated from other churches of our faith, are truly Brethren.

Ohio Conference churches and Sunday schools are urged to make payments on their district mission apportionments as promptly as possible. The secretary-treasurer, Brother R. A. Hazen of Ashland, Ohio, says his checking account is getting low. We must not allow our obligations to our state mission pastors to go unmet. Our policy is to meet every payment as we go, and we hope our churches will not compel us to change that policy after all these years of promptness. Send in the back amounts, or as much as possible, NOW.

Brother Freeman Ankrum, pastor of the church at Flora, Indiana, writes in the "Brethren's Home Emergency Corner" this week and says the aged people who reside in the Home are supplied with spiritual services in the home and are also privileged to worship in the Brethren church at that place. It will be remembered, as per announcement in last week's paper, that the Home has a new emergency to meet in the payment of a note to the bank, a small amount it seems, and yet quite large when the treasury is empty.

A revival at Jones Mills in Pennsylvania, conducted by the pastor, Brother William Gray, was a real success, twenty-one souls confessing Christ and seventeen being added to the church. Naturally the church has taken on new life and the pastor is held in high regard for his faithful service. Brother J. L. Gingrich recently conducted a week of highly appreciated Bible lectures at this church. At the Mount Pleasant church of which Brother Gray is also pastor, the Lord has added sixteen souls to the church since March the first, and the Sunday school is growing.

Dr. Gribble's book is ready for mailing. Send your money with order, if it has not already been sent, to Dr. Louis S. Bauman, 1925 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California. The price is $1.65, instead of the $2.50 when the book was first proposed. It has been printed by our own publishing house and each book will be mailed carefully packed in separate carton. This is a splendid Christmas gift suggestion. You could give your friend no finer remembrance. A friend said to us the other day, "I am ordering three copies—one for my son, one for our public library and one for my own home." How many are you ordering? And when?

Dr. C. F. Yoder writes from Argentina that the Lord's work is taking on new interest there with the return of spring. Our readers, of course, bear in mind that Argentina is in the southern hemisphere and that the seasons are reversed there from what they are in North America. The people there seem to be very much like people are here, however, in that weather conditions have not a little to do with their religious activity. But it would seem that they are more justified in being responsive to weather conditions than are we. Brother Farre, the one mentioned as being baptized, will be remembered for his splendid article written, and translated by Miss Nielsen, for the Evangelist a few months ago.

Brother Claud Studebaker, pastor of the church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, writes of the splendid evangelistic campaign conducted in his church under the leadership of Dr. W. H. Beachler. The church was strengthened by the addition of four men, one of which was reclaimed after forty years of wandering away from God. It was two zealous souls together in the meetings and they are to be together yet again in the return meeting in Brother Beachler's field at Gratis. The pastor speaks highly of the evangelist's ministry in his midst. Three other new members had been added to the church just prior to the meetings. All departments of the work at Pittsburgh are going strong with special emphasis on the Sunday school.

Dr. R. R. Teeter, our business manager, writes this week, and two things in particular are the burden of his message—payments for Sunday school supplies and subscribers to the Evangelist. We are in a position to know that there is reason for his concern about these matters. We are hoping that our people everywhere will do their very best. We believe they desire to do their best by the Lord's work as a whole, insofar as they understand its needs. But we sometimes fear that vast numbers of them do not realize the place of strategic importance that their publication interests hold. Speaking particularly of the church paper, we are convinced that even in a time of depression, when sacrifice is necessary all along the line, nothing is more important to the continued success of the whole work of the church than that this organ should be kept in the homes of all our people, or in as large a number of them as possible. To give encouragement to this end we are offering special rates for new subscribers, and to renewals as well. We are praying, for the good of the church at large, that some one in every congregation will be found to cooperate with the pastor in an effort to enlarge the circulation of The Evangelist in the parish. Let's all work together and we'll all grow together.

Moderator's Address

Delivered by Rev. F. C. Vanator, at the Indiana District Conference at Flora

In District Conference the Moderator's address has come to be a strange mixture of soothing syrup and quinine and usually is filled with praise and scolding so combined to make the average congregation feel kindly toward the speaker and yet to set forth the failures and the shortcomings of the District in such a manner that the application of the lotion thus concocted may work for the betterment of both the individual delegates and the entire territory under discussion. The Moderator becomes the physician for the moment and lays his hand on the sore spots, striving while he is so doing to so manipulate his course of action that even when the application hurts, the patient realizes it is for the good of the work of the entire body. I do not want to be classed with the dentist who saw a nail sticking out of one of the tires of his automobile and with a pair of pincers prepared to grasp the offending piece of metal and extract it. Summoning his best office manner he said, in what was aimed to be a quiet, soothing voice, "Now get a grasp on yourself, for this is going to hurt a little." You can imagine the result when he pulled the nail.

I want to speak very plainly, and at the same time kindly as I can on important issues that confront the District and the Brotherhood.

When we go to a physician we want to be told what the ailment is so we may use the proper medicine to heal and the necessary precaution to prevent the return of the disease. We expect him to put his fingers on the sore spots and diagnose the matter from the very source. For we realize that unless the source is reached there is no chance of permanent cure.

Now I do not set myself up as a specialist or an expert; neither do I want to be classed as a "quack." I hope to take the temperature of the situation and feel the pulse of the District and then let common sense prescribe the remedy.

I take it that those who attend District Conference are most vitally interested in the work of the church else they would not take time and energy to do so. I am aware of the fact that under ordinary circumstances they are not struck with the sickness that we are attempting to diagnose and that needs the remedy. But it is through them that the dose of medicine, sometimes bitter in taste, must be disseminated to the whole body.

One of the most modern ways of diagnosing a case is by means of the X-Ray. It sees right through us. Nothing is hidden. Especially do the affected parts stand out in the picture made. This morning I want that we may stand our district up before the most powerful X-Ray machine the world has ever known—the Word of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

The photograph that we see thus before us contains the framework of our salvation; stewardship, sacrifice, sanctification, Scriptural injunction and steadfastness. These are the parts that are affected.

First of all we look at

I. Stewardship

The Word of God has a very straight-to-the-point illustration from the lips of Jesus: "And he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods. And he called him and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship." Now I am not interested in the attitude of this particular steward and the manner in which he seemingly evaded the issue. I am interested in the Word of our Lord which says, "Give an account of thy stewardship." I am also interested in the conclusion to which he finally comes. Listen to it: "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. If therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own? No servant can serve two masters." Now one of the most neglected parts of the service of God is that of STEWARDSHIP. We forget that the Master went away and committed unto us his goods and said "occupy till I come." With proper occupation the churches of our district should never for one moment be ceasing to be operative. There is no such a thing as "depression" with God. Given his proper portion of our "world's goods" and the churches would have money to do very aggressive work besides supporting every possible phase of the local work. Let me illustrate.

I do not happen to have at my command as I write, the figures of the District Statistician for Indiana for the past year, but basing the problem on the report of 1931 for the whole brotherhood I find that there were reported 28,140 members. Using a conservative estimate I would say that this would represent at least 10,000 families. Again being conservative in the estimate of the incomes of these families we would put it at $400.00 per year. The gross income on this basis would be $4,000,000 per year. Using the proper stewardship method the Lord's part of this would amount to the tidy sum of $400,000.00. The report of 1931 showed that the gross expenditures of the Brotherhood for all phases of the work, both foreign and at home to be $248,929.99. This would mean that the sum of $151,070.01 (and we will throw off the one cent and make it even money), was withheld from the work of the Lord. Now I want you to note that I have used the very lowest conservative estimate of incomes and not the real income of the brotherhood. Were we to have positive figures, the surplus thus accumulated would amount to several times the amount of $150,000. What a work could be accomplished should the membership of the churches get a real vision of genuine stewardship. We forget that the Lord said, "Give an account of thy stewardship."

This thought leads us logically to the second of our affected parts, namely,

II. Sacrifice

Again the Word of God speaks in Romans 12:1: "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God to present your bodies a LIVING SACRIFICE, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." H-O-L-Y means W-H-O-L-E-L-Y. All together. Without reservation. Brethren, we have not even learned the A. B. C.s of sacrifice. I challenge one of you here today to rise and say (and I include myself), "I have spent a year of sacrifice that the work of the Lord might continue." Well—I am waiting! None? No, not one of us has sacrificed in even a small way to forward this cause. It truly is a hard saying, but out of "our abundance" we have given a little to the Lord. According to statistics each member of the Brethren Church has given the magnificent average of $8.90 a year to keep the work of the Lord going. That is less than 2½ cents per day per member, covering every phase of our work at home and abroad. I am sure in this year of so-called depression the amount would figure much less. Truly we ought to be ashamed of ourselves.

Hurt???? Sure it does!!! Yet I am simply putting my fingers on the affected parts.

But I hear someone say, "We are sacrificing. We are closing the doors of our church in order to save expense. We are cutting the corners." That's just it. We are sacrificing, not ourselves but our work. Let me quote from the Moderator's address of our last General Conference. That moderator is a member of our District and of our District Mission Board. He was looking ahead to what might happen. Listen to his words: He entitles it, "A Warning." I quote: "Would you bear with me while I make use of this opportunity to give a warning that many of you, I am sure, have recognized the need of in these times? It is a warning to the churches against the temptation to sacrifice preaching in the interest of economy. I know that economy must needs be done, but let us be wise in our economizing. We had better enter upon a program of sacrificing, to be entered into by both pastor and people, than to close our pulpits for the purpose of saving money. Moreover, let our sacrificing make its largest demands on our personal programs rather than on the program of the church. It is neither wise nor consistent to begin our enforced economy by cutting down on our support to the church and Kingdom interests. Such action proceeds on the assumption that the affairs of God are subordinate or incidental and that the interests of self should be regarded as life's major concern. From a purely business standpoint, it is stupid to decide to remain without a pastor for a time, to save money. Dissipation and disintegration will set in and the church will soon find that it has lost more, even in a financial way, than it has saved." Here ends the quotation.

The X-Ray shows lack of sacrifice and the Great Physician prescribes: "Present your bodies a LIVING SACRIFICE—which is your reasonable service."

Again we turn our eyes to the photograph. We see an affected

II. Sanctification

How we fear that word. Two words that have lost their original intent in the language of today are "Saint" and "Sanctification." "Saint" is derived from the Greek word meaning "Holy." Sanctify means "set apart." We say we cannot be holy, yet the Word enjoins us, "Be ye holy." We fight shy of the word "sanctify," yet being a part of the body of Christ we must be sanctified. Listen to the reading of Ephesians 5:25-27: "Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it; (he said in another place, 'I sanctify myself'), that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be HOLY and without blemish." What the church VISIBLE today needs is the essentials of the church INVISIBLE being manifest in her fruitage. We need to be reminded that the Word says, "Ye are bought with a price; ye are not your own." We need to realize that we are set apart, (sanctified) for a peculiar task, the task of spreading the Gospel to all the world. There is no other excuse for the existence of a church except that it become the medium through which men and women, boys and girls are introduced to Jesus Christ, its Head. It is no mere social organization to simply form a place of meeting for friends. It is the place of the manifestation of the power of God to save and to keep. Its services becomes the Bread and Water of eternal life. It is the living body of Christ walking to and fro in the midst of a perverse generation. Yet we hear from many corners, (not of course, in Brethren churches in Indiana, but in other denominations), "We can't afford to have a revival this year. It takes too much for light and coal. We will just get along somehow or other without it this year." And in the meantime souls of incalculable value in the sight of Almighty God are being lost for the want of an opportunity to confess him. They are literally starving for the Bread of Life. Do we wonder that the element of sanctification in the church has suffered a setback and shows a shrinking in the light of the X-Ray of the Word?

And what has caused that shrinkage? Many things might be found, but chiefest among the causes is a failure of the gland of

IV. Scriptural Injunction

to be permitted to function. We need a good old course of genuine Bible instruction. Many and varied have been the attempts on the part of pastors and consecrated laymen to lead the church in general to a course of Bible Study. How rarely they succeed in touching more than the very innermost circle of the membership. Yet one of the most striking sentences from the lips of Jesus is found in John 5:39, 40, and reads as follows: "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me, and ye will not come to me that ye might have life." Until our district comes to the realization that the Word of God is the TEXTBOOK of the church and not mere reference material, there can be no such thing as a definite trend toward genuine progress in Christian living. Until the Bible, the great source Book of Christianity is deemed authoritative in the matter of practice as well as doctrine, there can be no decisive upward trend in the realm of morality and purity of living. Sad as it is to say, many members of the visible church are laying aside the cloak of purity and donning the garb, of, if not impurity, its sister impropriety, hiding under the misrepresentation that the Word of God is not fitted to govern life in this day and age and consoling themselves that they are "getting by" with it before the world. Well, they may be,—but there is an X-Ray eye that sees through and through them. If an intimate knowledge of the injunctions of the Scriptures were theirs, brought about by a "searching of the Word," they would know that there is nothing in common between such attitudes and a Holy and Righteous God. They might even be described as "surging waves of the sea" and "rolling clouds of the sky." There is oftentimes lacking the constancy that builds up strong, stalwart, earnest, consistent followers of the Lord. Such an attitude brings about a strained appearance of the backbone in the picture and we wonder what is the matter with our

V. Stedfastness?

"Therefore," says Paul, in I Corinthians 15:58, "my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Why should we lose the oldfashioned grip on the things that are eternal and everlasting? Our beloved church is built around a loyalty to the fundamental principles of service to and love for the Master. Anything less than the very best of our lives is not worthy to offer to him. When we know that "our labor" is not in vain when performed with his help, how it should drive us to an ever increasing consecration to the task. Brethren, there is but one

VI. Solution

to our problems. That is a very concentrated dose of the only cure for the ills of any spiritual organism, namely, an infilling of the love of Christ and the love for Christ and a deep determination to push the work of his church to the place where it will have its rightful due. Did he not say, "Even the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it?"

Will God's work be frustrated because of our inability or lack of desire to accomplish it? Heaven forbid. Is God dead? Has he lost his power to bring the weak things into power? No, a thousand times no! All he wants is the lives of his church members through which

Let us be the eye that sees,
The hand that lifts the load;
The feet that tread the narrow path
On life's eternal road.
Steadfast, earnest Christians
Who follow where he leads;
The helpers of our Savior,
The fulfillers of his needs.

Brethren, the body of Christ must be a functioning body, else the Head will use the only wise, common-sense method of dealing with it and the offending member will be "cut off or out" as the case may be. If the X-Ray of God's Word shows disease, let us apply the remedy, no matter how much it hurts, for left to itself, the malady will, in time, creep over the entire body and the only result will be—Death.

Peru, Indiana.

Rejoice in the Lord. Philippians 4:4

By Miss Lucille Guiley

(Continued from last week)

Let us proceed to chapter II. Here we see Christ as the pattern or example of life. The backward look exists. In chapter I we looked inward and saw our own condition as it would appear in the searching light of the Son of Righteousness. Now we will take a backward look, way way back through the years and what do we see?

"Since there be therefore any consolation in Christ, since any comfort of love, since any fellowship of the Spirit, since any compassion, Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." Notice those four springs: consolation, comfort, fellowship and compassion, which issue into the four streams: likemindedness, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. If you through Christ possess those four springs there should flow out from your life those four streams. Do they?

Beginning with verse 5 is one of the most wonderful passages in the whole Bible. Read verses 5 to 11, then read it again, slowly and meditate on it. Try to picture if you can the glory, the power, the wealth, the love, the holiness, perfection, exalted position, and many other things that were his and surrounded him while he was there with his Father. Try to imagine the sacrifice he made apart from his death in leaving all that to dwell for awhile on this filthy, vile, unholy earth. When you think you have fathomed just that in some small measure then think of his cruel death, the agony, the pain, the desolation, the heart-breaking. "He became obedient unto death even the death of the Cross." In connection with this look at Isaiah 50:6—"I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting." As we think of the crucifixion and preceding events we see him as he was led to Pilate, we see the stones that were hurled at him, bruising his body till it was black and blue, we see the sneers, the repulsive sputum as it was spat on his face, we hear the mocking and jeering and then we see those cruel nails as they are pounded through the very nerve centers of his hands and feet, that crown of thorns pressed down upon his brow until the blood trickles down his cheeks, and then we see that sword as it pierces his very heart and the water and blood gush forth. Yes, in meditating on this wonderful story all these things pass before our mental vision, but did you ever think of what Isaiah tells us? They plucked off his hair. They grabbed the hair of his beard and jerked it from his cheeks and chin. Oh, how painful! We sometimes fret if a few hairs be plucked from our heads but imagine the tender skin of the cheeks suffering so. My friend, he did it all in love for you. And more than that. Turn to Isaiah 52:14—"His visage was so marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men." Dr. C. I. Scofield in his footnotes on this passage says, "The literal rendering is terrible: 'So marred from the form of man was his aspect that his appearance was not that of a son of man' i. e., not human—the effect of the brutalities described in the Gospels." His visage was so marred that to look upon him you would not recognize him as a human being. Can you imagine such a death? And perhaps there may be more. It maybe was not all written, so terrible would it be to describe. Such a depth of love, for me? Wonderful, wonderful Jesus! How can I help but love him? But oh, I am so glad for those glorious verses following. God hath highly exalted him and given him the name which is above every name, the name at which all things and beings shall bow either now or hereafter. Praise God for that! He that humbleth himself shall be exalted. I'm so glad that my Jesus is now highly exalted, my wonderful, matchless Savior.

I wish to call just one thing to your attention in verse 12. Paul says "Work out your own salvation." Critics and faultfinders like to use this passage as an example that the Bible contradicts itself. At first thought and without study it would seem to contradict Eph. 2:8-9 but just remember this: you cannot work out something that is not already in. Water does not come forth from a dry spring. You cannot work out a mathematical problem unless you first have the problem and then not only must you have it on paper but in your mind as well. So we see that we cannot work out a salvation into practical everyday Christianity unless we first have that salvation in our hearts. Paul does not say "Work for your own salvation" for which I am very glad because I'm afraid I could never gain salvation by any good work that I have done.

It is necessary to hurry on to chapter III at this time. This chapter presents Christ, the goal of life, or the onward look. We've seen the Cross and we've accepted its work now what is ahead of us? "Rejoice in the Lord" Paul says. He then warns us of false teachers. Beginning with the fourth verse he warns us against trusting in our own righteousness and tells us what he might trust in if he were to trust in the flesh. There was not a thing legally that could be brought against Paul. He was an Israelite and of the favored tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of Hebrews and a Pharisee, he had zeal and was righteous in the sight of the law. But Paul says these things are all counted loss, he throws them away as refuse that he might know Christ better and be found in him blameless. God has said that all our righteousness are as filthy rags in his sight and Paul realized this. The Christian life might be considered a race. Verses 7 to 9 show us the start of the race. A person, if he expects to win, does not start out running without some preparation. He practices and gets his body in a fit condition and builds up those muscles that will be most used. Then before starting out he discards his common garments, a man does not try to run a race with heavy walking shoes on his feet. What swiftness could he gain that way? He does not wear a heavy coat and all such things which would retard rather than aid his progress. So in this Christian race we must be properly clothed and we see in verse 9 that we are to discard our own self-righteousness (those filthy rags) and put on the righteousness which is of God by faith. You wouldn't attempt to run a race with a load of bricks on your back. Why then hang on to these vile, filthy, tattered garments which will be so much in your way and will hinder your speed?

Now we are properly clothed and already to run. See verses 10 to 19. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." So that is why we are running—that we may know him. Well, don't we know him now? Didn't we come to know him back there at the cross? Yes, we did, in a measure; in one phase of his work for us, but we can go on learning to know him day by day and still never come to a full knowledge of all he is. "And the power of his resurrection." What power? Did his resurrection show power? Yes, indeed, power and victory over death and the grave. What could he do for us if he was not a living Christ today? But praise God, he is living, living today and can do all things for me. Oh, that we might come to realize more the power of his resurrection, what it has done for us and what it would mean in our lives to appropriate it unto ourselves. "And the fellowship of his sufferings." Must that be? Is it necessary that we suffer in order to know him? Reader, consider a minute. Who is your best, most confidential earthly friend? How did you come to love and trust that one so intimately? I believe that nine times in ten you will find that it was through mutual suffering that you were drawn together. You wish to know Christ better, don't you? Then be willing to suffer for his namesake. It is sorrow, pain, heartaches that drive us more often to our knees and it is there on our knees that we learn to know him and trust him as we commune as friend to Friend. "Being made conformable unto his death." Are you willing to die a death similar to his? Would you sacrifice all for an ignorant, unworthy sinner? Though you hate sin in any form can you yet love the sinner enough to die a cruel martyr's death for him?

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

THE HOUSE THE NEGRO LIVES IN

"In common with the immigrant group, the Negro suffers from poor housing. Yet for the farmer there is always the possibility of escape, at least in the second generation, to a better neighborhood. In the case of the Negro the factor of race and definite racial attitudes creates difficulties for the breaking of the physical restrictions in residence areas. The level of Negro income points him to the section of low-priced dwellings where real estate operators find it impracticable to build new homes. These run-down neighborhoods become less and less desirable, few repairs are made, while the chances for improvements are exceedingly rare. In spite of the rapid growth of Negro urban population, little corresponding expansion of Negro neighborhoods has taken place. In addition there is evidence that in virtually every city of the North, Negro tenants pay not merely excessive rentals for the properties provided, but a considerably higher amount than was paid by the white families who preceded them or who are living in similar quarters.

It is well known that Negro death rates are nearly twice as high as the white, and that they are higher in the cities than in the country. Tuberculosis is six times as high among Negro boys and girls as among white boys and girls. The Negro is required to spend a larger proportion of his income for rent than other groups because he must pay more for the same type of housing than others do. His actual scale of comfort is likely to be as high as that of the people with whom he comes in contact, while his chances for advancement do not encourage thrift." From "Negro Housing," in the Southern Workman.

CRISIS CONTINUED

Sixty journalists of many nations were gathered in the lobby of the Disarmament building adjoining the League of Nations at Geneva, Switzerland. There was the usual journalistic uproar. Typewriters, in the near-by press room, roared and clattered. At one o'clock a young woman appeared at a desk at one end of the lobby. The correspondents immediately surrounded her. And one by one the copies of the Lytton report on Manchuria were passed out. As the story is told in the New York "Times," a silence at once settled over the place. "It was silence born of something deep in every man that told him here was something profoundly grave. Here was a thing not simply of life and death, but of lives and deaths; not merely of peace between the Chinese and the Japanese but peace and war for every man in every dispute. It was a silence born of awe."

Geneva's journalists were convinced that the future of the world's efforts to keep the peace was bound up in this document. And to that observers of world affairs generally agreed. If the Lytton report had compromised, side-stepped, evaded, then the League, the Pact to Outlaw War, the whole peace structure, doubtless, would have collapsed. But the report did not evade. It placed squarely upon Japan responsibility for offensive action in Manchuria, declared that the grievances of the Japanese were insufficient cause for the drastic occupation of the whole country, bluntly asserted that the new regime is pure Japanese in all important matters. It recommended: first, that China suspend her government-encouraged boycott of Japan; second, that Japan withdraw her troops from Manchuria; third, that Japan's special economic interests in Manchuria likewise be recognized and that, to insure these two things, the territory be placed under international jurisdiction until such time as China can take it over in her own right.

Japan's Militarist leaders promptly repudiated the report. The League of Nations, however, is not likely to repudiate it. The question remains as to how much further the Japanese will dare to defy the public opinion of the world, and what measures the world may take against Japan should that defiance continue.—Christian Herald.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Nahum

"Woe to the City of Blood,
All of her guile, robbery-full, ceaseless rapine!
"Hark the whip,
And the rumbling of wheels!
Horses at the gallop,
And the rattling dance of the chariot!
Cavalry at the charge,
Flash of sabres, and lightning of lances!"

Here are lines which depict the awful catastrophe which overcame the ancient city of Nineveh. Our twentieth century civilization ought to read them seriously, soberly, slowly, remembering that the God of the Nations still is a God of vengeance and wrath, holy and just, full of mercy and love, the Founder of grace and truth.

Vengeance and Wrath

When we read the vigorous words of Nahum we are apt to receive a wrong impression of the prophet and his divinely sponsored revelation. Who, for instance, relishes a God Whose actions can be described with the famous seven-fold words of the Elko-shite? Here they are: "Jealous, Vengeance, Wrath, Anger, Indignation, Fierceness, Fury." Nobody likes these words except the man who understands them.

Has it ever occurred to you, to sample two of the most flagrant terms in the above list,—vengeance and wrath—that man conceives these words in the light of his earthly existence, while God thinks of them in the light of eternal wisdom. With man vengeance carries the idea of retaliation in punishment, but with God punishment is always retribution. There is a vast difference between the two.

In the case of wrath, let us never forget, man is governed by a passion which becomes his master and drives him, but in Jehovah's case he is always master of his wrath—develops it, guides it, uses it, not to his own undoing, but to man's. So when you read, "Jehovah taketh vengeance on his adversaries, and he re-serveeth his wrath for his enemies," in Nahum's prophecy, you will understand. Likewise, when you read the words, "Jealous, Anger, Indignation, Fierceness, Fury," you will be careful enough to remember that Nahum understands them in the language of heaven and not the language of the earth. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Nineveh

Nahum's prophecy is God's pre-revelation and pre-announcement of the impending doom and utter annihilation of Nineveh. Yes, Nineveh, with its material splendor, with its wealth of philology, of astronomy and astrology, of gods and goddesses, of science, of literature, of history and chronology, of commerce, and of letters. Truly Nineveh was cultured, as archaeological discoveries reveal, but crass, crude, and cunning in her ways. In addition she reeked with vice, reveled and reeled in drunkenness, and rotted within and without. She was civilized and educated, but Godless and depraved. Her learning did not save her; she failed to consider repentance as her citizens once did under the preaching of Jonah; she perished like so many helpless cattle in the roaring flood of her own iniquity. Where are her kings and her conquered territories now?

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Nahum, the Elkoshite, a Palestinian.
2. When and Where Written? Between 706 and 606 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Written? To Israel.
4. Purpose. To comfort Israel and announce Nineveh's destruction.
5. Authenticity. This is a reliable prophecy: it has been fulfilled in a most remarkable way.

II. THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Judge of Nineveh. (Jehovah) Chap. 1.
  - (1). Holiness.
  - (2). Vengeance.
2. The Judgment of Nineveh. (Jehovah's) Chaps. 2-3.
  - (1). The Siege.
  - (2). The Storm.
  - (3). The Spoiling.

III. THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

Some scholars think the book of Nahum has neither theme nor noticeable order. That is a faulty observation. The very first chapter is built around the letters and sounds of the Hebrew alphabet. The writer examined that matter closely before he took up his pen today and knows that it is an alphabetical poem. The remaining two odes, representing chapters two and three, are a poetic drama of the perishing Nineveh. In ode one, the theme is the vengeance of the Lord; in odes two and three, it is the siege and fall of the city. The moral theme is: God's holiness will cause him to deal with sin.

IV. THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Nineveh. Consolation. Comforter.
2. Key Verses. 1:15; 2:13; 3:7; 1:8, 9.
3. Key Chapters. 1 and 3.
4. Key Ideas. Holiness and Judgment; Comfort and Warning.

V. THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

1. The doctrinal value of the writing of Nahum is noteworthy. The book opens with a declaration of the Person and Nature of God, giving "a sublime and powerful statement of those attributes of God which constitute the basis of all his actions towards the children of men."

2. "Nahum forms a beautiful, vivid, pictorial poem on the grandeur, power, and justice of God, and on the conflict between this cruel and defiant world empire of Nineveh," so one author writes.

Another student of the prophetic writings concludes: "None of the minor prophets seem to equal Nahum in boldness, ardor, and sublimity."

VI. THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Certainly he is a dull student who cannot find the Christ of Nahum's writings. Jesus is revealed as the Peace Bringer in the midst of judgment. Look for your own instruction at Nahum 1:15: "Behold upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace." Whose feet are these? First, those of the prophet-preacher, and second, those of the Christ. Read Isa. 52:7; Rom. 10:15.

Cyrus, Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, Kaiser Wilhelm, Mussolini, or Stalin would hardly be accused of wearing the sandals of peace or of being harbingers of the Gospel of love, truth and grace. These are they who bring tribulation and trial, not rest and peace. Only Christ is the Prince of Peace.

VII. THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

Permit me to quote from the writings of Dr. Moorehead:

"The destruction and utter desolation of Nineveh is described by Nahum with magnificent eloquence and with marvelous detail.

"1. It was predicted that 'with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place,' 1:8. The allusion is to an invading army, no doubt that of the Medes and Babylonians who attacked Nineveh and completely demolished it.

"2. The Tigris was to assist in its overthrow, 2:6. This was fulfilled. The ancient historian, Diodorus Siculus, mentions an old prophecy that Nineveh should not be taken until the river (Tigris) should become its enemy. He adds that when the assailants attacked it the river burst its banks and washed away the wall for twenty stadia.

"3. It was to be destroyed partly by fire, 3:13, 15. This, too, was literally fulfilled. In the excavations which have been made on the site it is discovered that one of the gates, and most of the buildings had been burnt.

"4. The population was to be surprised when unprepared, 'while they are drunk as drunkards they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry,' 1:10. Diodorus states that the last and fatal assault was made when they were overcome with wine. In the remains that have been exhumed carousing scenes are represented, in which the king, his courtiers, and even the queen, reclining on couches or seated on thrones and attended by musicians, appear to be pledging each other in bowls of wine.

"5. It was to be despoiled of its idols, 1:14; and of its silver and gold, 2:9. This prediction likewise was amply fulfilled. The images of Nineveh were swept away, either destroyed or carried off by the conquerors. Enormous amounts of gold and silver were conveyed to Ecbatana by the victorious Medes. Very little of the precious metals have been found in the excavations of recent times.

"6. The captivity of the inhabitants and their removal to distant provinces were announced, 2:7; 3:18. The place was depopulated and the proud city sank into a mass of ruins and rubbish.

"7. It was to disappear and to become a perpetual desolation, 1:14; 3:19. For centuries its site has been an arid waste of yellow sand. Every trace of its existence disappeared for ages. Two hundred years after its capture Xenophon, in the retreat of the ten thousand, passed near it, saw the ruins, but knew not what they were, and did not so much as learn the name of Nineveh. Even 'garrulous Herodotus,' who visited the spot, had no more to say of it than this: 'The Tigris was the river upon which Nineveh formerly stood.' For centuries the only sound heard in its vicinity was the lonely cry of the jackal, and hoarse growl of the hyena. God had said by the mouth of his servant the prophet, 'I will make thy grave.' He did. Wide and deep he did dig it; low and deep he buried Nineveh, never more to rise again, save to be gazed at with curious eyes amid the torchlight by the archaeologist, whose pick and spade have confirmed the Lord's predictions."

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Challenge of Missions to Christian Youth

By Robert H. Glover

No conceivable challenge to Christian youth could be a louder one than that which the world-wide missionary enterprise presents. There are many aspects of this challenge which we may not consider at this time, but there are a few aspects about which I invite you to think with me.

1. The Challenge of Loyalty to Christ.

The Christian missionary enterprise is Christ's own enterprise. The Great Commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," is his personal commission. It is the statement of his will, the expression of his desire. But it is more. It is his clear, explicit, imperative command. Nor was this command qualified by any conditions of ease, convenience or safety. It was simply the preeminent "Go." Nor has it ever been revoked. It concerns this group of Christ's followers gathered here today not one whit less than that group of disciples who heard the words from the Master's own lips. How, then, can any one of us confess him as Savior and acknowledge him as Master, and yet fail to recognize and respond to the personal implications of his Great Missionary Commission?

As I read the New Testament record I am impressed by the fact that the one thing which engaged Christ's thought and filled his heart, the only thing of which he spoke, so far as we know, in those last days with his disciples before his ascension, was the carrying of his gospel to all the world. The very last recorded words which fell from his lips were, "Ye shall be my witnesses . . . unto the uttermost part of the earth."

That Great Commission was the charter upon which Jesus Christ founded his church. It constituted the church's marching orders, its one supreme aim, its all-engrossing task. And yet we face the tragic fact that in this year of our Lord, 1931, hundreds of millions throughout the world are still living and dying in as utter ignorance of the Savior as though he had never been born, or had never died as their Redeemer. How can you and I love Christ, and be loyal to him, and not pledge him our utmost help in carrying out his last wish and greatest command?

2. The Challenge of the Greatest Service to Our Fellow-Men.

The highest aim in life is service to others. The truest estimate of our lives is not what we get, but what we give. The words of Jesus "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it," were not a mere arbitrary dictum but the expression of an eternal principle and law of the spiritual kingdom.

"Not in having, or receiving, but in giving is there bliss;
He who has no other pleasure ever may rejoice in this.

Be it wealth, or be it leisure, be it skill we have to give,
Still, in spending life for others, Christians only truly live."

I am thinking just now of the great heathen world as I have myself seen it. There is its material aspect, its dire poverty, its abject misery, its wretched hovels that pass for homes its dull drudgery of unremitting toil, its gross intellectual darkness, its unrelieved physical disease and suffering, its utter lack of a thousand features which gladden and bless our lives and make them worth living.

Then there is the moral aspect, and I think of how those lands reek with abominable and filthy habits, with brutal crime and cruelty, with every form of unmentionable moral vice and pollution. There still exist the open sores of slavery and witchcraft in Africa, blighting caste and suffering widowhood and child-wifehood in India, the ravages of the opium curse in China, the tragedy of polygamy everywhere. These open sores cry to heaven for healing, these awful evils for correction.

Lastly, there is the spiritual aspect, darkest of all because it relates to time not only, but eternity. I think of multiplied millions with the same human susceptibilities and the same eternity of destiny as we, yet never given one vestige of knowledge of that only Savior to Whom we owe everything we are and have, "having no hope, and without God in the world," sunk in dark despair, perishing for the bread of life.

Then, over against this terrible picture, I think of what the gospel has done to heal and change it all wherever it has been given a chance to exert its influence. I think of the vilest cannibals and savages turned into saints, and witnesses, and even martyrs for Christ, of the countless lives lifted from abysmal depths of pagan superstition and degradation to lofty heights of purity, integrity and spiritual experience, of the wonderful transformations wrought in individuals, in homes, in entire tribes and communities, by the power of the gospel.

When now I bring together these two pictures upon which we have looked—the picture of all this appalling temporal, moral and spiritual need, and the picture of how this need may be met by the message and power of the gospel—and when I go on to reflect that to me his blood-bought follower, Christ has given in trust this potential remedy for all earth's misery and wrong, this means of leading these lost souls out of darkness and death into a new and blessed life for time and eternity, I am compelled to the conclusion that unless I am a base ingrate, an embodiment of heartless selfishness, I must throw my life, with all its powers and resources, into this enterprise for the salvage of the souls and bodies of my fellow-men.

3. The Challenge of a Rugged Task.

I should scorn to lower the missionary appeal by representing the task of the missionary as an easy, safe and comfortable one. I am speaking to young men who, if I estimate them rightly, are not content to fill the soft seat of a spectator of the game, but prefer a place in the game itself, with all that this involves of hard training, self-denial and severe exertion, young men who are not afraid of the tackle, the scrimmage, the stiff contest. In every sphere of life it is the hard task that makes men and women of us, and that produces God's heroes and heroines.

When Scott, the famous Arctic explorer, appealed for men for his perilous expedition, literally thousands responded. Men pressed for a place, without conditions or reservations. Some even offered to meet all their own expenses. And for what? For an undertaking that promised certain hardship and suffering, and the likelihood of death itself.

I think of the words of Garibaldi, the great Italian patriot and liberator. Said he: "I am going out of Rome. I offer neither pay, nor quarters, nor provisions. I offer hunger, thirst, forced marches, battles, death. Let him who loves his country in his heart, and not with his lips only, follow me." And they followed him!

But it is an infinitely greater than Scott, or Garibaldi, or any human being that ever spoke, who here today challenges us with the words, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." His missionary enterprise has always been marked by discomfort, privation, hardship and danger, and to seek to eliminate these features would be to rob it of that which is its very essence and gives to its highest value. Sacrifice has always been the soul of missions.

The imagination of youth is ever stirred by the accounts of the noble daring of a David Livingstone, a John G. Paton, a Hudson Taylor, or some other missionary hero of an earlier generation. Let me assure you that there is still plenty of room for the heroic in missions today, for the display of high courage and daring, for the employ of the highest gifts and attainments. And particularly is this true in such a Forward Movement as the China Inland Mission is at present seeking to carry out to the remotest confines of China, or in penetrating the great unevangelized regions which lie at the heart of the continents of Asia, Africa and South America. I cannot understand how the soul of Christian youth is not filled with a consuming passion to have a part in pushing back the frontiers of Christ's kingdom in these distant lands, and planting his standard in "the regions beyond," where his name has never yet been heard. After all, how every worldly adventurer of our day, whether the quest for the North and South Poles, the scaling of Mt. Everest, or the conquest of the air, pales into insignificance before the sublime aim and goal of Christian Missions!

4. The Challenge of Incomparably Rich Returns.

I grant that the highest motive in missionary service is not the reward it brings to the worker. And yet such reward is in the very nature of things inseparable from such service. There is of necessity sacrifice in missionary life and labor, as I have already pointed out. But let me add that it is altogether swallowed up by the abounding compensations.

We still hear echoes today of that old ally talk about missionaries "throwing their lives away" by "burying themselves" in some foreign mission field. But let me tell you that even the material compensations attaching to missionary work—its foreign travel, its international contacts, its opportunities for wide observations and comparison, and much besides—make it a liberal education in itself, immeasurably enlarging and enriching to those engaged in it.

But these are the least of the missionary's compensations. Tell me what other joy and satisfaction can equal that of bringing healing to afflicted bodies and illumination to dark minds, lifting individuals, homes and communities from depths of defilement and misery to higher, purer levels, and, above all, leading men through the knowledge of a Savior into the joyous liberty of the sons of God, and putting into their hearts the rapturous hope of eternal bliss?

Wrote a missionary from Japan: "I think there can be no other joy on earth quite like the joy of being with Jesus when he (Continued on page 14)

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

LIVING WITH PEOPLE OF OTHER RACES

(Lesson for December 4)

Lesson Text: John 4:5-10; Acts 10:30-35;

Golden Text: Acts 10:34

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

Jesus and the Samaritan Woman. John 4:5-10

Uzefovich and Bartoshevitch from Russia; Bayer from Austria; Bessemer from Germany, Lavicka and Utradovec from Poland; Castro from Mexico—these are only a few of the men who worked with me in the office in Chicago. Even in staid old Washington the roster of names is not greatly different, either in the office or in our home communities. In America we are living with people of other races, and we cannot adopt the attitude of the Samaritan woman without great loss to ourselves—to say nothing of personal duty. We need to remember that other races have produced great men, even if their names were unpronounceable; some, such as von Steuben and Lafayette, have proved themselves national heroes. May we realize that these people of other races have much they can contribute, and may we help them to that end.

TUESDAY

Peter and Cornelius. Acts 10:30-35

It took a special revelation from God to make Peter realize that God loved people other than the Jews and had a place for them in his plan. Many of us still need the same revelation. The stories that come to us from our mission fields in Africa and South America should be enough to shame many of us; as we read of the wonderful way in which God has saved them from sin and shame, and of their devotion and sacrifice for their new-found faith, we should realize anew that God is no respecter of race or person. Let us pray that we may be as faithful to him and his work.

WEDNESDAY

The Foreigner Included. 1 Kings 9:37-43

We sometimes think that there was no provision for the stranger and alien until New Testament times, but the law of Moses made ample provision for them too. Read Lev. 19:17, 18; Ex. 12:49; Prov. 25:21. 22. May we have more of the vision of Solomon, and have more interest in bringing the strangers into fuller communion with our Father in heaven.

THURSDAY

The Unity of the Nations. Acts 17:22-28

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, and all that in them is. All men are descended from Adam, the first man, and later through Noah and his family, and are thus of one blood. God is creator of them all, and for them ALL Christ died. Remember the many "whatsoevers" of the gospel. In the Revelation of Jesus Christ to John, John visioned a "great multitude, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues," redeemed to God and made one in him by the blood of the Lamb. Let us praise him for the unity with one another and with him, which we have in Christ Jesus.

FRIDAY

An Impartial Father. Matt. 5:43-48

Not only on the people of all races, but on the just and unjust of every nation God showers his manifold blessings. This is not because any of us have deserved such blessings, for at best we are "unprofitable servants." But the goodness of God is to lead us to repentance, and to a closer walk with him. Pray that this may be so.

SATURDAY

All Belong to God. Ps. 24:1-10

Ye are not your own. For ye are bought with a price (1 Cor. 6:19, 20). Whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's (Rom. 14:7). Our last two lessons were on stewardship: do not forget that here, too, we must be faithful stewards of that which belongs to him. Let us therefore glorify God in our bodies, and in our spirits, which are God's.

SUNDAY

Who is my Neighbor? Luke 10:30-37

Jesus, of course, did not mean to teach merely that the Jews and Samaritans were neighbors, and should act like it: the lesson was broader. The Samaritan proved himself a neighbor by ministering to the needs of the wounded man; he also considered the wounded man a neighbor because of his great need. Had not the Samaritan happened by in time, the wounded man would probably have perished. Remember that there are thousands of thousands in the world in just this situation: shall we prove ourselves neighbors? Or shall we leave them to perish in their sin and misery? May God give us the spirit of Christ, that we may be neighbors to those in need throughout all the world.

E. M. RIDDLE, President 117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuBall Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
--	---	--

"Faith"

By Vivian Adler, a South Bend Endeavorer

Through all the days that you shall live
Be patient, kind and willing to give.
God is our help as you should know,
Whate'er you do, where'er you go.

Don't lose faith when things go wrong,
For life on earth is not so long.
God's promise to men is eternal life—
No more trouble, pain or strife.

Oh, faithless one, understand
The willing guidance of God's hand!
Cling to him and you shall see
How happy you can really be.

Now can't you see, my dear good friend,
That a Christ-like life has no end?
If you want joy and happiness,
Your faith in Christ you must confess.

whose name they have written did, or give just one reason why they like the characters they have chosen. In doing this ask the Juniors not to use the names of the characters, but simply the word "he" or "she." Collect the papers, and have one of the older Juniors read them one by one, but without giving the names of the characters. As the papers are read, the Juniors will guess the names of the characters.

Missionary Travelogues For Missionary Committees

For a month or two, with the help of the superintendent, the missionary committee may conduct a missionary period in each meeting, giving from ten to fifteen minutes to it. Take a missionary text-book, and present one chapter each week. This may be read, or the contents of the chapter may be told. The superintendent or a Junior may ask questions on the previous week's lesson. The Juniors may bring to the meeting curios from missionary lands.

A Birthday Scrap-Book For Birthday Committees

The birthday committee should get as many picture post-cards as the birthday guest is years old, and tie the cards together with ribbon at each end, so as to form a little book. Or one may get double the number of cards and paste them together back to back, each two cards thus forming one leaf or two pages in the picture-book. This makes it possible to use old

Plans for the Junior Committees

A Bible-Character Drill for Prayer Meeting Committees

For this drill give to each member a piece of paper and a pencil. Then ask each Junior to write in one corner of his paper the name of a Bible character, but not to show it to any one. When this is done, ask them to write down one thing that the character cards. Let a member of the committee write a birthday greeting on the first card, and let as many other members of the society as possible sign their names on the cards. At the meeting the book should be presented to the guest Junior by the chairman of the committee, who expresses the good wishes of the society.

A Junior Choir For Music Committees

The music committee, with the help of the superintendent, or, better still, with the help of the song leader of the Young People's society, may well organize a Junior choir, which will lead the singing in the Junior meetings, and perhaps also sing for sick and shut in people in homes or institutions. Only those Juniors that behave well in the society should be allowed to belong to the choir, so that the list of the choir may be a sort of roll of honor. The members of the choir should learn a memory hymn each month.

What Shall We Play? For Social Committees

A week or two before the date of your next social ask the members to write on slips of paper the names of their favorite games, that is, games they would like to see played at the coming social. The games must, of course, be such as the whole company can play. The Sunday before the social the slips will be collected by the social committee, and the games that are suitable for the social will be selected in consultation with the superintendent. In the social the names of the selected games may be written on slips of paper, and the slips placed in a hat. One by one the slips may be drawn out and the games played. The Juniors will be interested in the games played, and the society will be sure of playing games that the Juniors want.

Walking the Ties, For Lookout Committees

On a rather long sheet of paper (or several sheets pasted together) draw the picture of a railroad station and rails running up to it, the ties showing. Prepare another similar sheet. Then divide the society into two groups for a contest, giving one point for attendance and one each for prayer or original talk. Slip-reading does not count. The contest is to see which side reaches the station first. Of course there must be the same number of ties on each picture. Every five or ten points, according to the size of the society, will count one point or tie, and progress will be written on the ties each week. The members of the lookout committee will keep the record. Individual records may also be kept, showing how each member helped his side to progress.

the midst of change. She is alive and not dead. She is growing and meeting the needs of new conditions. As education has widened women's sphere, the Church has met the enlarged situations. Chinese say: "If the Jesus religion will do so much for the foreign wife and mother, it is worth trying for Chinese women." The Mission hospital also has proved a blessing, which "Mr. Average Man of Hopo" can recognize.

Third—Because the Church shows power to change broken and wrecked lives, to reclaim and remold them into something fine and good. An example is found in Mr. Liu, a scholar but an opium smoker, who had fallen so low that his wife turned him out. He was reclaimed by the mission and joined the church. Then his wife also came and said, "I can't come to church much, but the Jesus religion has made my husband over, so that I too want to join and be baptized with him." This couple was not satisfied to keep to themselves what they had found in Christ. Three months later they had brought together their neighbors and had raised money to build a chapel in their own village.

Today Hopo Church has an ordained Chinese pastor and the people are making vigorous efforts to put over the five-year evangelistic program. Good results are already reported. No wonder "Mr. Average Man of Hopo" believes in the Christian Church!—Missionary Review of the World.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Berne, Indiana

Argentina

Beautiful spring with bright new clothes has once more come to Argentina bringing gladness to all. The poor look forward to work in the different harvests and to something more from their gardens, although lettuce and onions and carrots and cabbage and such things are green here all winter long.

The Lord's work also takes on new interest in the spring time. As the houses are not heated it is harder for the poor to come to church in the winter, and also those in poor health can come better in the spring. Then too, the Christmas season is approaching and here as elsewhere there are many whose religious fervor is always greatest at Christmas time.

The Bible coach and tent have gone out under the leadership of Brother Juan Iztueta with Federico Sotola, Jr., as helper. It started on its long trip to Rosario October 19 and since then we have been having a "temporal" or protracted rain, but the coach arrived safely October 22 and is now in the midst of the campaign there.

Here in Almaguere we have had our first baptism in the new bastistry. Brother Luis Farre chose to come here for baptism in his new faith. On leaving the convent he spent only a few days in Rio Cuarto before going to Azul where he spent the year teaching and studying. The director of the Institute would like to continue him as a teacher there, but his studies have confirmed his faith in the Brethren doctrine, and while we might have him as our representative on the faculty there, we feel that we need him too badly in this district. He has recently contributed a valuable series of articles on the Lord's Prayer for our union paper.

We are preparing for the summer vacation Bible schools and look forward to great blessings again in the tent work. In all this we need the help of your prayers.

C. F. YODER.

WHAT THE "MAN OF HOPO" THINKS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The views of the "Average Man of Hopo" in regard to the Christian Church are given in Missions by Arthur S. Adams, an American Baptist Missionary in South China.

Thirty years ago the Chinese soldiers tried to prevent the Baptist Mission from building a Christian church in Hopo. The church won the case, however, and the building was erected. It became popular both as a church and as a day school. In the meantime the military post which opposed the building was abolished and the yamen was sold.

Later when the church school outgrew its quarters the use of a Confucian temple was granted to carry forward the work. Thus the missionary became guardian of the images. When the new Rhoda Roblee Barker School was built, the temple was returned in good condition to the Confucian elders. These caretakers were less careful of the property and today it is a wreck.

Why is "Mr. Average Man of Hopo" impressed with the Christian Church? asks Mr. Adams. The answers may be summarized as follows:

First—Because the Church of Christ stands unchanging in the midst of change. The yamen and temple are gone, but the Church abides.

Second—Because the Church changes in

CHILDREN AS A POINT OF CONTACT

From a missionary of the United Church of Canada in India comes this account of a home that let its light shine by traveling: "The wife of an evangelistic missionary has a delightful opportunity for service as she tours with her husband, through the villages, during the cold season. Well do I remember my first season in tent with our little six-months-old son. It is quite true we had to take the cow along, but the baby flourished, and was a constant attraction to the people who flocked to our camps. As our children grew older they much enjoyed those four or five months under canvas, the singing, the lantern slides and the gramophone. Often they would have their little group of children, to whom they taught Indian hymns or Bible verses and stories, and led the singing with a mouth organ or violin. How they enjoyed the picnic lunches under a big tree, outside the village, and the bumpy rides in the two-wheeled cart over the rough country roads! The Indians loved and enjoyed the children and our Christian home was a moving picture spread before them. The death of our darling boy, after a short residence in a new station, was the means of breaking down the reserve and suspicion of the community, and many came to hear about the little laughing child they had enjoyed as we drove through the main street every day. Verily many have been led into the Master's presence through a little missionary child."—The Congregationalist.

He never made a more characteristic speech. Here you have the heart of the man talking. Look at that word "betrayed," and find the whole soul and purpose of Christ! To be betrayed was the agony, to be crucified was nothing to the man who would take such a view of betrayal. It was the sin he looked at, not the butchery.—Joseph Parker.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA

I hope the editor will not be too greatly shocked at another report from Pittsburgh so short a time. The main subject in this report is our evangelistic meeting conducted by Rev. William H. Beachler, pastor of our church at Gratis, Ohio. Dr. Beachler came to Pittsburgh on Monday, November 7th, preaching on Monday night and continuing until Sunday night, November 20th. It seemed we just got well started when we closed. The confession of three fine young men on the last night was a victory and the coming forward for re-consecration of a man who had been a member of this church 30 years ago, but had wandered off into sin. He came evidently in true penitence calling on God for forgiveness. It stirred the entire congregation. May God give him strength to redeem the days that may yet be his. He came on the next to the last night of the meeting. We did not accomplish all that we had hoped but the meeting closed with a fine spirit. A neighboring Methodist church dismissed their service and came with their minister on the last Lord's day evening which added much to the fine spirit of unity and harmony. Rev. Beachler preached strong gospel sermons with a tremendous appeal to both saint and sinner. No one can sit and listen to his sermons without being impressed with his sincere faith in the Bible as the infallible Word of God, and Jesus Christ as God's only sacrifice for sin and the only hope for all men to become redeemed children of God. That is the gospel in all of its love and power. If we could have carried on for two more weeks no doubt the numerical result would have been much larger but our church felt that we had a good meeting. Rev. Beachler is very congenial company, he met a number of his former Meyersdale parishioner and long-time friend, all of which were pleasant experiences. All in all it was a mutually pleasant and helpful meeting to all concerned. We hope Rev. Beachler may come back again. According to the plan we are to hold a meeting for the Gratis church later in the season. We anticipate a pleasant visit.

The Pittsburgh church has many reasons to be encouraged. Our choir furnishes splendid music, which means somebody takes an interest. Our prayer and Bible study night is better attended, though we cannot compare in numbers with some reports which we are delighted to read. Our Women's work is increasing in interest. Our Christian Endeavor carries on a good substantial work. According to our last quarterly report the Sunday school had broken all attendance records that were available. Three fine young ladies were received into the church by baptism just before our meeting. Our Communion was more largely attended than at any service during our pastorate. Our finances have held up remarkably well considering the number of our people who are unemployed and the great losses our substantial men have sustained. We indeed have many things to be thankful for. I am hoping that our Thanksgiving offering does reveal thankful hearts. Probably the surest guarantee of prosperity now, as in the olden time, would be to "bring all the tithes into the storehouse" in recognition of our dependence on the bounty of God. We again remind you—if you know of Brethren people in Pittsburgh who are not in our church and will send their name and address, we shall be glad to visit them.

CLAUD STUDEBAKER,

5002 Dearborn Street.
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

VALLEY BRETHREN CHURCH, JONES MILLS, PENNSYLVANIA

It has been many months since we have given the Evangelist a report of our work. We are glad to report that the Lord is blessing our work here for him. We moved to Mount Pleasant from Highland, Pennsylvania on February 29th, and began our work here on March 1st.

The church here at Mount Pleasant is not so large in membership, but we have a group of good workers here. Our Sunday school is growing splendidly, and within the next few Sundays we expect to reach one hundred and twenty-five. The Lord has added to this church, since March 1st, sixteen souls. Our prayer meetings are well attended. The Brethren here can see Victory for their work not far away. We will have a revival here in January, for which we ask an interest in your prayers.

We have just closed a revival at the Jones Mills church. The results of this meeting will long be remembered. The number coming to Christ in this meeting was twenty-one. Seventeen were baptized, of this number, sixteen came into the church, and one member was received by letter, making a total of seventeen souls received in the church from this meeting. The church also seems to have taken on new life, and the community in general we feel has received a blessing from the Lord, because of this meeting.

On November the fourteenth Brother J. L. Gingrich of the Third Brethren church of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, came to the Jones Mills church for a week of Bible lectures. Brother Gingrich brought a series of lectures on the Book of Genesis. These lectures proved to be very interesting, and were true to the WORD. The Brethren church, with this type of message, is bound to have a bright future, and have the blessing of the Lord resting on her.

During this week of meetings, Brother Gingrich and the pastor, along with a number of the men of the church and the community, began making ready for a furnace under the church, and on Saturday night the furnace was in and in use. The church did not have money enough to pay for the furnace, but on Saturday night Brother Gingrich raised more than enough to pay for it. The Jones Mills brethren now have a good comfortable church to worship in; for which we are very thankful. We praise our God for the blessings that he has bestowed on these two churches. Pray that God's blessing may continue to rest on the work here. WILLIAM GRAY, Pastor.

LIMESTONE, TENNESSEE

On Sunday evening, November 13, the writer closed a three weeks' revival effort at Limestone, Tennessee. We have here a church with a membership of about 125, having been organized some twenty years ago. Being a rural church the membership is scattered. But when weather conditions permitted they came, some from quite a distance, and the attendance throughout the time of the meeting was very good, the church being at times well filled. Our people here, though quite a distance from others of like faith, are truly Brethren. It did not take me long to discover that I was among Christian people who believe and practice the things which have made the Brethren church what it is. Here I found an atmosphere in which it was easy to preach the whole Gospel.

Brother Hill Maconaghy is the efficient and consecrated pastor of this church. This is his first pastorate but he is proving himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. Mention should be made of Sister Maconaghy who too has consecrated her talent and special training to the cause of Christ. These young people are being used of the Lord in the more firmly establishing of the faith in this needy community. They are seeking the leading of the Spirit in their desire to open a new work nearby. Let us pray they may be used to this end.

Entertainment during these three weeks was in the home of the pastor. Too much cannot be said in praise of this hospitality. The time spent in Christian fellowship in this home was positive preparation for the work which awaited us. Considerable time was spent in visiting and everywhere we were cordially welcomed. Many homes opened to us and the hospitality found among this people is unsurpassed. In cultivating the acquaintance of the people of this church, lasting friendships have been formed.

Many difficult situations were faced here. But the Lord is faithful who has promised, and with trust in him we carried on. Backed by the earnest efforts of God's people, the Word was preached. The results of this meeting were not immediate, but there is every reason to believe that a lasting good has been accomplished within the church.

W. C. BENSHOFF.

REVIVAL IN JONES MILLS VALLEY BRETHREN CHURCH, JONES MILLS, PENNSYLVANIA

Sunday evening, October 9, Rev. William Gray, pastor of the charge, began a revival meeting in the Valley Brethren church at Jones Mills which continued three weeks, closing on October 30. Brother Gray was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. George Gearheart of Mt. Pleasant Brethren church, as song leaders.

Brother Gray preached wonderful sermons from night to night, which stirred the hearts of every man and woman. He tirelessly and fearlessly proclaimed God's truth both in the pulpit, in the home, in the field, on the highways, wherever he chanced to meet the soul outside the Master's fold.

However, of late years things have not gone so good with our congregation. Discouragement has been stalking through their midst, leaving its trail in many lives and homes.

Since the beginning of the revival the love and loyalty of the people to Jesus Christ and their interest in the Word of God have been most refreshing. I cannot but remark on the splendid spirit and interest manifested on the part of the men and women of the church and of the entire community.

Brother and Sister Gearheart rendered special music from night to night. Special music was also furnished by other churches.

The revival was attended by delegations from Uniontown on several nights, these people traveling a distance of thirty-six miles each day. Brethren of Mount Pleasant and Berlin were also present.

In the services twenty-one souls gave their hearts to Christ, of which number seventeen were baptized in the Mount Pleasant church November 6. Confirmation services were held November 6, after which Communion services were observed. The services were largely attended.

Let us all pray for Brother Gray and his congregation at Jones Mills, so that his people may always continue to work with him and pray that the spirit of the revival may last forever.

May God's richest blessing abide with Brother Gray as he undertakes to bring many souls to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ because of his steadfast witness of the truth.

MISS MARIE HARKCOM,
Somerset, Pennsylvania.

THE COMMUNION CUP

By Kelvin L. McCray

1 Cor. 11:25: "This cup is the new testament in my blood; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me."

It is said that a person can walk out on the beach, pick up a seashell and carry it far inland, place it to his ear and hear the roaring of the surf. This roaring of the sea can always be heard in the seashell. Whether this is really true or not is left for the reader to decide. Anyway, it suffices to illustrate a point in reference to the communion cup. As the devout worshiper lifts the cup to his lips, nineteen hundred years after that first communion service in the upper room he hears in it the surging of the great ocean of the Savior's agony; his voice pitched high, and his groans as they rose in the still night air in the moonlit Garden of Gethsemane, while bloody sweat oozed from his kneeling body. Then are heard those seven fitful cries from the cross.

This blessed cup of communion points two ways—to Calvary and to heaven. It sets before our minds the cross and then follows heaven. Through nineteen hundred years wars and tumults, upheavals and unrest, have reverberated from century to century until they echo in the cup of communion in the worshiper's hand these words: "This do in remembrance of me." The worshiper does not only hear, but he feels. He feels in this cup that intense love that passeth human understanding and drives out of his soul the spirit of indifference and vindictiveness.

If the use of the first personal pronoun will be pardoned in a sentence or two, I should like to say that recently I set before myself the cup of communion and silently meditated upon it as if I were listening to it. It seemed to me I could feel some great power in that cup that was blending two spirits together—Jesus' spirit and mine. I could feel in it the strong tie of divine love drawing my wayward soul into a deeper joy of an eternal fellowship. I felt that this was a loving cup if there was one. My name was not engraved on the outside of the cup together with an inscription telling of some particular achievement of mine, but I could not help but feel that my name was inscribed in the archives of glory in the crimson flow the cup before me symbolized, not for anything I had done other than yielding my life to him whom to know aright is life everlasting.

An eastern fable tells us that when Zachaeus was old he still dwelt at Jericho, humble and pious. Every morning at sunrise he went out for a walk and always came back calm and happy for his day's work. His wife one morning secretly followed him and watched to see what he would do. He went to the tree from which he first saw the Lord. He poured water about the roots, pulled the weeds and passed his hand fondly over the old trunk. Then he looked up at the place where he had sat that day when he first saw Jesus. Then with a smile of gratitude turned homeward. His quiet explanation was: "It was that tree which brought me to him whom my soul loveth." "There is no true life without its sacred memories of special blessing," says Dr. J. R. Miller.

We should keep these places fresh and green by grateful service. Communion, attendance upon the service of the Lord's supper, is a watering of the roots of the Christian life. It is a visit to the tree. It is a keeping of the place of spiritual blessing fresh and green. The Christian who is too indifferent to hear the silent message of the cup, too cold to feel its warm glow in his heart, too engrossed in worldly things to take the time to press the sacred memorial to his lips in a token of faith and love, is a slander on the Christian religion. This cup is the seal of the covenant of our salvation in Christ.—Methodist-Protestant-Recorder, Monongah, West Virginia.

NINETY-EIGHT

By Fred A. Smart

In 1898 a college Senior whom I remember would have remonstrated at being called emotional and unintelligent. He thought he was doing all in his power to increase his intelligence. Early each morning he hastened to join the crowds around the newspaper bulletin boards, agast at the blowing up of the Maine, exuberant over Dewey's victory. He and his roommate, like others, set a flag in their dormitory window, even though the college daily said it would be better to join in purchasing a larger flag and pole for the entire college. He sent home for the Infantry Drill Regulations, which he had been required to use in his Freshman year, and appeared daily for drill in the manual of arms and marching, till he felt the futility of an afternoon spent in firing imaginary volleys and running back and forth at the state rifle range. He stood in silence with the crowds as a regiment started for the front, a river of men flowing between banks of spectators. He heard the college president praise Hobson's exploit and award diplomas to absent men of Bellum Hispaniam. He read of a war correspondent's suffering with a bullet in the spine and heard the account of a college mate's sensations when first wounded—like being stung by a bee! He thought not only reports about doubtful food, but even the "round robin" about dangerous camp conditions in Cuba only political talk. Not till he saw a gaunt, feeble group returning from the typhoid terrors of Chickamauga did he understand that war might be marked by disease as well as display; not till long after did he feel that something could have been said for Spain; that perhaps the Spanish War might be questionable, as he had always thought the War of 1812 and the Mexican War questionable, or worse.

In contrast with these memories came the thrill with which he realized the truth in a protest against this same war. He did not discover the lines till years later, when he read them in Love Triumphant, a volume of verse by a young New Hampshire poet, Frederick Lawrence Knowles:

Son of the Puritans, can it be thou,
Harnessed for slaughter with bayonet and blade?

Weeds in thy furrow, rust on thy plough,
Death for thy trade?

Fruitless the sowing in War's black soil!

What do the red-handed harvestmen reap?

Cripples that languish, children that toil,
Widows who weep!

Ah, these death-gleaners must learn as they mow

Darkest of secrets that History boards:
Only a harvest of hatred can grow

From a sowing of swords!

—Selected.

THE CHALLENGE OF MISSIONS TO CHRISTIAN YOUTH

(Continued from page 11)

brings in a lost sheep which has been wandering in the dense darkness of heathenism all its life." And out of glad personal experience I can confirm that testimony, for it has been my joy more than once to lead to the Savior a soul that never before had heard of him. As I look back over the thirty-six years of my own missionary career, with all the trials and difficulties it recalls, I am ready to say that if I had my life to live over again I should make the very same choice that I made as a young man. I submit to you that I have gotten out of this missionary investment infinitely more than I ever put into it. And so will any man or woman.

And now just a closing remark about that word "challenge" in our topic. I have used it not by chance but by choice. I frankly like the word in missionary appeal. It is a fighting term, it is an insistent word that compels an answer. A challenge is something you cannot ignore or evade, something you must face up to, and accept, or else show the white feather and back down.

The facts I have placed before you, even so imperfectly and incompletely, confront every one of you as a personal challenge. Not only from the heathen world but also from Jesus Christ, your Savior and Lord. How are you going to meet this challenge? You are going to meet it in one of two ways. Having looked these appalling and convicting facts in the face, you are going home from this Convention either to live for self, for pleasure, for personal ambition, for money, for the world, and then pass into Christ's presence empty-handed, having failed and disappointed him, having missed the best for your life; or else you are going to say with Paul, "We thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead; and that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again", and then by yielding to him you are going to become his channels for the bringing of relief, and emancipation, and comfort, and joy, and eternal life to others, who will some day stand by your side in his presence and hear him say to you, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; ... enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." The momentous question is: Which of these two courses is going to be yours?

"Perhaps in heaven one day to me,

Some blessed soul will come and say,
'All hail, beloved! but for thee,

My soul to death had been a prey.'

Ah, then, what sweetness in the thought,
One soul to glory to have brought!"

The Evangelical Student.

OUR LITTLE READERS

TWO LITTLE GIRLS AND A DOLL

One little girl was the daughter of an Apache Indian chief. The other little girl was the daughter of a United States Army officer. The doll had rosy cheeks, blue eyes, and had traveled in a box all the way from "back East."

It all happened years ago, when the United States Government was trying to allot certain lands to the Indians. Some of the Apaches were not satisfied with their share, so they made ready for war and gathered from every direction to fight the white man.

"The Apaches are gathering for war," was the message sent to the Government. Immediately large numbers of soldiers were ordered to the nearest fort to keep constant watch on the Indians.

The first Apache captured by the soldiers was very small. She was a little girl, who strayed too far from her wigwam and could not find her way back. The Government soldiers found her, tired and frightened, and took her on to their own fort. They tried to show her that they wanted to be friends, but their strange white faces terrified her, and she cried and cried. One soldier after another tried to comfort her, but the more they tried the louder she wailed. The commanding officer did not know what to do next. He shook his head in despair. Then he said to his men, "Wait a minute; I have an idea."

He called his little daughter. "Here's a little girl who has come to visit you," he said, as he led the little lost Apache toward her. She walked shyly up to the little Indian girl, hugging in her arms her new doll, which had come in the box from friends in the East. As soon as the little Indian saw the doll she forgot to cry any more, and held out both arms for it.

At first it seemed there would be another war. The little girls were like their fathers. Both wanted the same doll, as their fathers wanted the same land.

"Won't you let your little friend play with your doll awhile?" asked the officer coaxingly.

Then he waited until his daughter politely handed her doll to the daughter of the Apache chief. After that they were friends. They sat down together, they ate together, and then went to sleep together. When the little Apache awoke, some of the soldiers took her back to her father's wigwam, marching under a flag of truce. She was delighted to be back home and ran around showing all her friends the doll which the little "paleface" had given her.

At the fort the soldiers waited for the attack of the Indians. Everything was very still, and soon the message came that the various bands of Apaches were breaking up and going in peace to the land which the Government had set apart for them. The soldiers could not understand.

"Seems like the red men aren't going to fight us after all. What do you suppose has happened?"

"Do you suppose it could be the doll that has charmed 'em?"

The soldiers laughed, but this was exactly what had happened. The Apache chief was so pleased with the doll and the kindness of the white man to his little daughter, that he declared the war off.—Mrs. E. C. Cronk.

IN THE SHADOW

DELOZIER—Austin B. DeLozier, father of the undersigned, was struck by an automobile on the evening of October 21 and died the following morning of injuries.

Age 66 years. 1 month and 5 days.
On September 19th, 1889, he was united in marriage to Etta Mae States who survives. To this union 13 children were born, 9 of whom are living.

He deceased was a carpenter by trade and for many years a well-known contractor and builder. He was for a period of years a faithful member of the McKee Brethren church, but in recent years was not active in church work.

The funeral services were conducted at the McKee Brethren church, by the pastor, Rev. R. I. Humbard, who was assisted by Rev. G. B. Harmon of the Lutheran church of Duncansville where Mrs. DeLozier worships. The services were attended by a large assemblage of relatives and friends. Internment was made in the cemetery adjoining the McKee church.

This notice is written by the son of the deceased at the request of Rev. R. I. Humbard.

A. L. DELOZIER.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

TO THOSE WHO PRAYED

To the many, many dear friends who have been praying for Mrs. Lynn's recovery, we are happy to state that she has undergone successfully a very serious operation. Her condition is good. We are giving praise to the dear Lord Jesus Christ for his tender mercy. Thank you, Brethren, for your earnest prayers and Christian sympathy.

A. L. LYNN.

BRETHREN TRACTS WANTED

As superintendent of the Tract Promotion department of the National Sunday School Association, I have made arrangements with the Editor of The Evangelist to run frequent reviews of tracts and comments concerning tracts that would be worthy of use among Brethren people. Thinking there may possibly be some tracts written by Brethren people that have not circulated among us, I am inviting Brethren ministers to send me samples of any tracts they may have written.

LESLIE E. LINDOWER,

908 E. Center Street, Warsaw, Indiana.

HAVE YOU PLACED YOUR ORDER?

Dr. Florence N. Gribble's book, "UNDAUNTED HOPE," is now in the hands of the publishers, and promised to be off the press shortly after November 15th. This book tells the fascinating story of the founding of the Mission Oubangui-Chari in the heart of French Equatorial Africa by our pioneer missionary, James S. Gribble. The first 1000 copies will be sold at cost—$1.65 postpaid to any address in the United States. After this first edition is exhausted, the price of the book will be materially advanced. Get in on the first 1000 orders by sending us your name and address by return mail, accompanied by check or money order for $1.65.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY
OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH, 1925
East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California.

Business Manager's Corner

THINGS THAT ARE CAESAR'S

On one occasion Jesus was asked whether it was lawful or not to pay tribute to Caesar. To make the matter plain to his questioner he asked that a coin might be handed him, and also asked whose image and whose superscription appeared on the face of the coin. This was a simple question, easy of answer; and the reply was readily made that it was Caesar's.

This reply gave Jesus the opening he was seeking, and he instantly replied "Render to Caesar therefore the things that are Caesar's."

This statement from the lips of Jesus carries the thought that there are certain financial obligations that are to be met in a certain way, or that certain monies are to be used to meet particular obligations.

We do not want our critically minded interpreters of the Bible to say we are misinterpreting the words of Jesus when we make the application we are about to make of this passage of Scripture, as we are using it only to illustrate a point.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

THE BRETHREN'S HOME

There may arise questions in the minds of folks in the more distant parts of the brotherhood regarding the connection of the local church and the Brethren's Home. The Home while located at Flora is not an adjunct of the First Brethren church of this city. The members of the Home who are able are permitted to attend the services at the local church and ways are provided for such. The two Superintendents and Matrons who have been there since our becoming pastor here have been very kind in assisting the inmates to attend the services. While there is only one member of the Home a member of the Flora congregation, we consider all part of the flock and try to minister to them accordingly. We have tried for some time to see that they have a service there once each month. We feel that the Home as a whole has not been appreciated as it should be. It is not our intent to enter into any reason why, but the fact remains, THAT WE HAVE THE HOME. The Superintendent and Matron, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Meyer, seem to be very efficient and are making an effort to keep things going to the best possible advantage. Nevertheless they are limited and must depend upon the response of the brotherhood. While the present may be somewhat dark, I am convinced that there will be brighter days ahead for it and the support given at the present time will in future years not be a matter of regret.

FREEMAN ANKRUM,
Pastor Flora Brethren Church.

Sunday Schools and Their Bills

There are a number of Brethren Sunday schools that are pretty far behind with the payment for their Sunday school literature. We have talked this matter over in a general way with several of our ministers, and it was suggested by them that possibly some of these schools were diverting a portion of their Sunday school offerings to other purposes, so that they might meet other financial obligations.

We know that practically all churches are face to face with a real problem of finance as they strive to carry on their local work. The Business Manager understands this all too well, as he is unfortunate enough to be chairman of the finance committee of the Ashland church; but we should all remember that money contributed for specific purposes should be used for that purpose first of all. Then, should there be any thing left after this purpose has been met, what remains might legitimately be used for some other cause; but from the Sunday school offerings the literature used in the school should first be paid. This would be only "rendering to Caesar the things that are Caesar's."

Now Brethren, Is there anything wrong with this line of reasoning?

The Evangelist Subscription Campaign

For a number of weeks emphasis has been placed on the campaign that has been launched for new subscriptions to The Brethren Evangelist in the columns of the paper itself. Large and prominent space has been given to display advertising of the campaign, and some results have been attained; but to date nothing remarkable has been accomplished.

We know these are distressing times through which we are passing. Perhaps no other institution of the church knows it better or feels the effect any more than The Brethren Publishing Company.

We know it is not going to be an EASY task to increase the subscription list of the Brethren Evangelist, in fact it will not be an easy task to keep the list up to its present standing. This is the experience of all our exchanges, and there are many of them that come to our office.

Recently we received a form letter and a four page, handsomely printed, circular from one of our exchanges that has been published for more than one hundred years, and that is serving one of the large denominations of America. This circular offers a very special inducement to add new subscriptions to its list, and at the same time reported the success of this plan as it had been in operation for the past three years. The result of their 1929 Christmas campaign was 1,200 new subscribers; for 1930 it was 900 new subscribers, while for 1931 it was 700 new subscribers, and they are wondering what 1932 will do for their subscription list.

Number of Subscribers as Compared to Church Membership

Another of our exchanges recently printed on its first page a map showing the location and the number of members that constitute the territory and the constituency it serves. This is one of the old and well organized denominations with a very large membership.

The constituency served by this one publication numbers more than 228,000 souls. The number of subscriptions to their church paper is one subscription to twenty-two and eight tenths members.

At the present time the ratio of Evangelist subscriptions to the membership of the Brethren church is more than twice as large as that of the paper referred to above; but that does not justify us to remain content with the number we now have. Our subscription list should be doubled, and we feel sure it could be, if enough others could be made to feel the same way about it. But it will require hard work on the part of our already hard-worked pastors.

But our last Sunday's Sunday school lesson taught us that our Lord chooses hard-worked and busy men to do his most important tasks.

Let us all do our best to make this campaign a success. Tell others about it. Non-subscribers will not know anything about it unless some one tells them. Will that somebody be you? We only ask you to do your best; and remember, "He who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly; angels could do no more."

T. R. TEETER, Business Manager.

Make your friends and yourself
A MERRY CHRISTMAS
throughout the year by a Subscription to your church paper
No better offer was ever made for placing
The Brethren Evangelist
in every home of every congregation, large or small
Begin now to get a Christmas Club of New Subscribers

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES
for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist
(Good for 60 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions. $1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor Church now renewing its list	$1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscriptions $1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions
---	---

(Note—A new Subscriber is one not now getting the paper.)

VOL. LIV
Number 48

December 10
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

"SILENT NIGHT! HOLY NIGHT!
ALL IS CALM, ALL IS BRIGHT."

Christmas is on the horizon and with its coming there will be the annual opportunity to contribute to the support of the National Sunday School Association and to give encouragement to the great work it is doing.

It is the time when we challenge ourselves to make in very truth

WHITE GIFTS FOR THE KING

IS ANY GIFT OF LOVE AND SACRIFICE TOO GREAT FOR HIM?

Signs of the Times

by
Alva-J. McClain

THE Book by Dr. Gribble

I am glad to announce that the work of printing on the book is completed. We shall have the first copies from the press tomorrow (December 6th), and the mailing will begin immediately. Various factors have caused about three weeks' delay beyond the date originally announced.

Including introductory material, appendices, and index, the book contains about 450 pages. In addition there are seventeen pages of illustrative material and a specially drawn map showing our territory and stations. The printing is on excellent paper and the cover is attractive. Our Publishing Company is to be congratulated for their work. Such a book could not ordinarily be sold for less than four dollars. The price set for the first thousand copies is absolutely a cost price and was made possible only by the cooperation of our own printing establishment. You will not soon get another book-bargain like this for $1.65.

The author, Doctor Gribble, deserves much credit for producing a work which not only has a high spiritual value but will be a source book of missionary material to the Brethren Church through the years.

The task of preparing the manuscript for the press, planning of its arrangement, reading of proof, has not been an easy one. We are especially thankful for the prayers of the Lord's people in answer to which the work was not at any time interrupted by illness.

And now this department of the Evangelist temporarily discontinued, will be resumed. The present times are full of interest to the student of the Word, and there is much to write about.

THE Recent Election

The crushing defeat of President Hoover and the success of Governor Roosevelt was unquestionably the work of an electorate resentful on account of the distressing economic situation. Of course, Mr. Hoover did not cause this situation; neither can Mr. Roosevelt cure it. But it pleases "the people" to smash their gods of yesterday. Thus they preserve the pleasant fiction that their troubles are caused, not by themselves, but by their "leaders."

For the past decade this country has been plunging straight for moral and economic disaster. On the economic side I do not know of any class which can wholly disclaim responsibility. If any political leader of responsibility had really done anything to stem the tide, he would have been torn to pieces for hindering what men called "progress." And so the political leaders did what all such have been doing since the dawn of democracy—they rode with the tide. And now that ruin has come, the "people" condemn the leaders because they did not do what the people did not want done at the time.

We have come to a stage when to tell the truth about democracy sounds like cynicism. The trouble is, after all, not with the institution, but with the people who must operate it. They lack two very important things: first wisdom; and second, the moral will to apply it in human affairs. Without Christ, personally present on earth and also enthroned in the hearts of a regenerated society, these two factors will always be missing in human government. And to that extent government will go on blundering.

THE Eighteenth Amendment

Many of us can remember the time, ten to fifteen years ago, when prohibition was the popular thing politically. Today the situation seems rather strangely reversed. A man running for president on a straight repeal plank, with no qualifications, is elected by an astonishing majority. Gradually most of the dry politicians have been trimming their sails to take advantage of the new wind. They are now ready to carry out the "will of their constituents." And it begins to look, no matter what our personal convictions may be, as if the 18th Amendment is on the way to repeal. In taking stock of the situation several things should be said:

1. Belief that the 18th Amendment would succeed was evidently based on a too optimistic opinion of human nature. Some are finding out what they should have known, that you cannot permanently impose Christian conduct on a non-Christian democracy.

2. The Church needs to get back to the business of winning souls for Christ. When we get enough people who are born from above, then such reforms as prohibition will succeed. Thus we reach the paradox that when the Church devotes its attention too exclusively to the field of political reform, then it fails finally in that field; but when it sticks to its task of spiritual regeneration, then it succeeds in the field of political reform. Seek first the Kingdom of God and its righteousness, and all the other things will be added unto you. But seek the other things first, and you will find nothing but bitter disillusionment in the end.

3: There is but one sure foundation for social reform, and that foundation is Jesus Christ. No other foundation can any man lay. Too often in the past prohibition was based on a foundation of economics. The people were told that they would have more money without liquor. Today the argument has become a boomerang; we are now told that liquor will help end the depression. Of course, the argument is fallacious. But that does not affect the point I have in mind. To base a moral reform on dollars-and-cents is to invite disaster. For when the dollars disappear, the reform crashes. When we bring men to Christ, and they become advocates of righteousness for his Sake, then we get into the realm of something permanent. Apart from Christ there is neither any permanent standard of righteousness nor basis on which to establish it. The present day tendency to separate the matter of moral and political reform from the Son of God, advocated recently even by Christian leaders in their ignorance, is to establish civilization on a foundation of sand and will at last plunge it into irreparable catastrophe. You cannot build a stable world without God. AND THERE IS NO GOD APART FROM CHRIST.

THE Shorter Week

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor at its recent convention declared for a five-day week with a six hour day, and said that if employers would not listen to reason force would be used to bring in this reform.

A Board of Engineers report that if industry were properly managed, man would not need to work nearly as long as the Federation of Labor demands; perhaps four hours a day for only part of the week, with long vacations interspersed.

Some of us have wished at times that we could live at least an eight-hour day. But that has never seemed possible. And doubtless it is just as well. The really important matter, after all, is not how long we work, but WHAT WE DO. And also whether we enjoy what we are doing. Furthermore, the time is short; too short. We must work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

RELIGION in Russia

Dr. Sims, head of the department of sociology at Oberlin College recently returned from Russia advocating the recognition of the Russian Government by this country. He reports that religion is dying in Russia, saying, "It is my firm conviction that there will not be a single vestige of religion left in the next generation."

The world, if wise, had better take cognizance of this approaching situation. It will be a new phenomenon in human history. Never before, so far as the record of history informs us, has the world ever seen a nation the size of Russia utterly abandon religion and gods. When the present worshippers in Russia, left-overs from the past generation, are dead, what will happen?

And what will happen if the Russians succeed in bringing in an economic millennium, which I am inclined to believe they will do temporarily. Will it not encourage other nations to adopt the same road of atheism? It is not impossible. Witness the present illogical perverseness in America where thousands of people connect prohibition with hard times. In like manner the Bolshevik connects belief in God with social inequalities.

And don't forget that in the end-time, when men have rejected the truth, God will permit them to believe a lie. Read 2 Thess. 2:11-12.

IN THIS NUMBER

The Healing Ministry of the Church	3
—Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	3
The White Gift—W. I. Duker, .....	5
Promotional Work—N. V. Leatherman, .....	6
Rejoice in the Lord—Lucille Guiley, .....	7
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
The Teacher's Responsibility—Mrs. Herman Shumacher, .....	10
Paul the Soul-Winner's Pattern—L. S. Chater, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	11
The Cobbler Who Became an Ambassador—W. O. Klopfenstein, .....	12
News from the Field, .....	13-15
The Brethren's Home Corner, .....	15
In the Shadow, .....	16
The Tie that Binds, .....	16
Announcements, .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Healing Ministry of the Church

We are not accustomed to think much about this phase of the church's ministry. It is not so popular as it might be, and consequently is shunned or neglected in some quarters. One reason for this is that divine healing has come all too generally to be associated with certain religious cults, such as Eddyism, McPhersonism, and the like. This, of course, is largely the fault of the church. It has neglected in times past the Gospel teachings regarding the healing of the sick until they have been lifted out of their hiding places and presented to the public in distorted fashion by these healing cults. If the church had been faithful to proclaim the whole Gospel through all its history, there would never have been any occasion for the springing forth of these and many other vagarious movements. But it was not, and the world has scarcely any knowledge of divine healing except that which has come through the warped notions of John Alexander Dowie, or Mary Baker Eddy, or Aimee Semple McPherson. And the church must rescue the revealed truth on this subject from the disrepute into which it has fallen and recover its healing ministry. There is divine authority for such a ministry and it needs to be better understood by the church itself.

In the first place it should be understood that the church's healing ministry is not one that it set apart from, and in opposition to, medical practice. The church has recognized God's healing power exercised through the science of medicine and surgery and has given extensive encouragement to it and promoted it to the glory of God on foreign mission fields and in the homeland. But the particular phase of bodily healing that is commonly understood by the term "divine healing" and the kind that has a definitely religious significance and is the special and distinctive task of the church, is that which is sought through spiritual means—through prayer and faith.

The Church Commissioned to Heal

When Jesus sent out the twelve two by two he "gave them power over unclean spirits, . . . and they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them" (Mark 6:7, 13). And if any is inclined to say that this was a temporary commission, it will be noticed following the final commission in Mark that the promise is to those who believe, "In my name shall they cast out devils", and "they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (16:17, 18). That healing was understood to be practiced within the church is indicated by James (5:14), who says: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord."

The Source of Power

The healing is to be accomplished by the power of God. Jesus himself bore witness to that, saying he "cast out devils by the Spirit of God" (Matt. 12:28). There is no superstition, or magic, or human cunning connected with the church's healing ministry; it is a divine work, accomplished by the Spirit of God and the Son of God. Peter made that clear when he had healed the lame man at the temple gate: "Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? . . . the God of our fathers hath glorified his Son Jesus" (Acts 3:12, 13). Peter told Aeneas whom he healed at Lydda: "Christ Jesus maketh thee whole" (Acts 9:34). And James says "The Lord shall raise him up" (5:15), in response to prayer.

The Agents of Healing

God has chosen "the elders of the church" (5:14) as his agents through whom he will exercise his healing power. In them the power and grace of the Holy Spirit should appear in special measure. And they are to officiate as representatives of the church and not as friends nor as interested individuals. Neander writes that James "regards the presbyters in the light of organs of the church, acting in its name." And "as the presbyters acted in the name of the whole church, and each one as a member of the body felt that he needed its sympathy and intercession, and might count upon it; individuals should therefore, in case of sickness, send for the presbyters of the church. They were to offer prayer in their behalf."

The Means Employed

"Is any among you afflicted? let him pray." Having called for the elders, "let them pray over him, anointing him with oil" (13, 14). "Anointed them with oil" (Mark 6:13). "They laid hands on the sick" (Mark 16:18). From these references we find that the Lord used and uses as means of accomplishing his healing work: prayer, anointing and the laying-on-of-hands. When God decides, who are we that we should cavil?

Conditions of Being Healed

Prayer of faith. Prayer is both a means and a condition of healing. It shall be both a prayer of faith and fervency (5:13, 15, 16; Mark 11:24; John 14:14).

Confession of faults and seeking forgiveness (5:16; 1 John 1:9; Eccles. 38:10).

Benefits of Anointing

Healing—"prayer of faith shall save the sick, raise him up" (v. 15).

Sins forgiven—"if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him" (v. 15). And sins forgiven means a revival of confidence.

Recovery Dependent on the Will of God

Pray, if it be the will of God, 1 John 5:14.

All prayer is limited by the will of God. Jesus himself limited his own prayer. Matt. 26:39. There are other conditions that naturally limit prayer, but always it should be offered "in Jesus name" (John 14:14). That is not a mere form of words; it means according to the will of, for the sake of, and to the honor of the Lord Jesus Christ. All things, for the Christian, in life or in death, must be according to the divine purpose (Rom. 8:28).

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Our readers will be glad to see Prof. McClain back in his department after an absence of a few weeks due to the extra work required of him in preparing copy and reading proof for Dr. Gribble's book.

President E. E. Jacobs gives us an installment of Collège News in this issue and takes occasion to appeal to those who may be indebted to the college to meet their obligations as promptly as possible, so as to enable the college to make its payments promptly. This is a critical time for Ashland College financially, as it is for practically all the general interests of the church, and prayer and effort should be made by all loyal Brethren to the end that God may enable us to weather the stress of these times.

A note recently received from Brother Paul A. Davis, pastor at Center Chapel church, near Roann, Indiana, informs us that he began a revival meeting at that place on December 4th. He is hoping for the cooperation of nearby churches. He is encouraged with his people and says "fine work is going on at this church in spite of hardships," with an "increase in attendance and offerings from Sunday to Sunday." Brother Davis was among the Ashland young men in training for the ministry until recently and we are glad for this indication of success in these beginning days of his work.

The pastor of the church at Limestone, Tennessee, writes this week of the revival recently held under the leadership of Brother W. C. Benshoff, and who made report from the evangelist's viewpoint last week. Brother Hill Maconaghy says the meetings proved to be a real revival for the church and resulted in adding two to the membership. After the close of the meetings two others made the good confession and the revival spirit still continues. The communion service following the revival was largely attended.

Dr. W. H. Beachler writes of the fine fellowship he had with the Studebakers and the rest of the good people of the Pittsburgh church during the recent evangelistic campaign. According to Brother Studebaker's report last week the Christian love and enjoyment was a mutual experience, and God blessed their labors together for good. Brother Beachler pays a fine compliment, and we think well deserved to the work and influence of the pastor of the Pittsburgh church.

We have had partial reports before of Brethren Day held at Rocky Ridge, Maryland, but we are given the official report and also let in on how this event came to be celebrated. We congratulate the group on having elected such a capable secretary; she knows how to put up the kind of copy that delights an editor. It was a happy get-together, and we are not surprised that those who were in attendance made provisions for repeating the celebration next year. Other closely located congregations of Brethren people would do well to follow the example of these southeastern Brethren.

The first call for the White Gift offering is issued this week. The president and general secretary of the National Sunday School Association give you their message this week. In the next issue other members of the Sunday School Board will appear. Christmas is the time to lift White Gift offerings, and every school in the brotherhood is urged to take an offering and to do the best possible under the circumstances. Times are hard, but they never become too hard for those who love their Lord to make a White Gift to him on his birthday.

We call attention to Dr. Bame's announcement this week concerning the improved "Boys and Girls' Quarterly," and also the improved "Youth's Quarterly." When Brother Bame put a copy of the first named quarterly before us we were delighted at the greatly improved "dress", and you will like it too. And we were equally impressed with the improvement of the contents. The most approved pedagogical methods are followed in the preparation of the lesson material and pupil tests. We commend Dr. Bame on this achievement and bespeak the support of our Sunday school workers.

It will be of interest to Ohio pastors to know that the date for the annual Ohio Pastors' Convention has been set for January 30 to February 2, 1933, and the place of meeting is Columbus. The theme is "Evangelism—Vitalizing Life." Eight special committees will lead discussions on eight phases of evangelism. Among the outstanding speakers are Evangeline Booth, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Dr. Jesse M. Bader, Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, Bishop H. Lester Smith, Bishop Henry Wise Hobson and Frederick B. Fisher. Then there will be the Dunker Preachers' Meeting and Luncheon, a get-together and frank discussion of ministers of both the Brethren and Church of the Brethren. It will be worth sacrificing to get there, if at all possible.

We have a report from the Brethren's Home matron at Flora, Indiana, recording financial and other gifts received since National Conference to November 11th. In a letter to Dr. J. Allen Miller, president of the Board, she tells how timely and important those gifts were. With regard to one in particular she said: "The first of October I did not know where the money was coming from to pay all my grocery bill, and then I received the $13.95 from Smithville, Ohio. So I hope and trust that something like that will happen before December 1st." We are hoping her hopes were realized, but we have not yet had any report to that effect.

The church at Washington, D. C. has enjoyed a special season of refreshing from the Lord and has had the pleasure of seeing thirty-one persons step forward to confess Christ and renew fellowship with his church during a series of meetings, with the pastor, Brother Homer A. Kent, doing the preaching and Brother E. J. Rohart of Winchester, Virginia, leading the singing and assisting in personal work. The two weeks of preaching were preceded by a week of intensive personal visitation, which enabled the church to get in touch with the unsaved people in larger number and to start off the meetings with a larger attendance than usual. This special effort on the part of the membership continued after the revival got under way and brought much blessing into their lives. Such interest on the part of the laity will add greatly to the efforts of any pastor and is in keeping with what the Lord expects of his followers, laymen as well as ministers.

While it is not our custom to take note of social events in general, yet the silver wedding celebration of one of our prominent pastors and his wife and the wedding of his daughter to a splendid young man of the congregation, are unusual and significant enough to merit attention in our church family paper. It was Rev. and Mrs. Fred C. Vanator of Peru, Indiana, who observed their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Thanksgiving Day, and on the same day, their daughter, Esther, was united in marriage to Mr. Carl E. Mohler, Brother Vanator himself officiating at the ceremony. We join the many friends of their congregation and community in congratulating Brother and Sister Vanator and wish them many more years of happy service together, and also congratulate the happy young couple and pray that the smile of God's countenance may be upon them all their days.

In a number of church calendars that have come to the Editor's desk, special notices have appeared concerning the Evangelist Subscription Campaign. We are grateful to these pastors for their leadership in behalf of an extended circulation of their church paper. We hope many others are cooperating in this effort. Never were better rates offered than now, and they are effective only till the close of January, 1933. Those whose time may not expire during these weeks may nevertheless take advantage of the rates by sending in cash renewals during the campaign and have their subscription extended one year from the date of its expiration. This is an especially good time for new subscriptions—a club of five for only $1.25 each. Every church ought to be able to get at least five new subscribers at that rate. Those who wish to make a Christmas gift to a friend will find this a splendid opportunity—a subscription to a religious paper that preaches a whole Gospel. It will be appreciated, and nothing is more needed.

Brother M. L. Sands gives us a summary of the progress realized during his four years' pastorate at Muncie, Indiana, and tells of the blessing of God upon his beginning ministry in the Clayton, Ohio, church. There were seventy-five new members added to the Muncie church during his leadership there and a complete basement unit of their beautifully planned new church building was completed and dedicated free of debt. The Sunday school experienced a splendid growth. Another feature worthy of special note was the good work done by Sister Sands in the Junior Church. An average attendance of forty-four children at worship services is a record worthy of attention. We firmly believe in the worthwhileness of any pastor or other church leader to put forth special effort of one kind or another to build up the habit of church attendance and worship in the children and young people of the parish. At Clayton Brother Sands' work has gotten started under auspicious circumstances. He has for two weeks been engaged in a revival and at the time of the report four confessions and seventeen re-consecrations had been received.

WHAT OUR PREACHERS ARE PREACHING—

During the months of September and October Brother Dyoll Belote, pastor of the Brethren church of Ashland, Ohio, preached the following series to his Sunday evening congregations. The general theme of the series was "Glorious Names of Our Blessed Lord." He explained that the special names applied to our blessed Lord are many, but he selected the following with which to deal: "The Good Shepherd," "The Door," "The Lion of the Tribe of Judah," "The Christ," "The King," "The Bread of Life," "The Alpha and the Omega," "The Lamb of God."

The following revival sermon series was preached by Dr. W. S. Bell during his recent evangelistic campaign conducted in the Brethren church at Ashland, Ohio: "A Call to the Colors," "The Miracle of the Ages," "The Imperatives of Jesus," "Anchors of Safety," "The Devil in Heaven's Livery," "What is the Matter with the World?" "The World's next Great Event," "Is America Forgetting God?" "The Sins God Will not Forgive," "A Voice from the Dead."

The White Gift for the New Year!

By W. I. Duker, President National Sunday School Association

We, who serve the mother Church in one capacity or another, often wonder just how we should approach our task of reminding the membership of the task that lies ahead. Just how we might bring to your mind your responsibility and arouse your enthusiasm and yet not cause you to feel that we are attempting to become arbitrary or dogmatic. This task is not an easy one. In our attempt to enthuse the brotherhood, we may overstate our case and do harm to the cause rather than good. In our anxiety lest the cause under our leadership, might fail, we are in danger of becoming a burden to some churches in our insistence that the White Gift be taken. All this we very greatly desire not to do. Our only desire is to do the task to which the Mother Church has called us. If we fail at the task, we do not wish it to be the result of our disregard or lack of interest.

Rev. W. I. Duker

We can not be led to believe that it would be profitable at this time to attempt to tell the brotherhood what it is all about. We have surely been sold on the WHITE GIFT all of these years. All that it stands for and all that it has stood for in the past, lies so close to the heart of a "BRETHREN" that the term itself is sufficient to plead its own case. Somehow it seems so close to the Savior himself, that White Gift and Savior seem to be interchangeable in certain associations.

Then too, there is the work taken up by your chosen Association. Do we need to defend it or to urge its acceptance? Not to real Brethren! All this was planned carefully and prayerfully and then presented to our Church in National Council, and there passed upon favorably. In fact we were instructed by this same Council to see to it that the work, there planned, was done. This is the Lord's work. We must be responsible to him for its satisfactory completion.

We are in the midst of the fight in our local churches. We are very well aware of the difficulty that faces them at present. We are not talking about a matter speculatively. The financial difficulty that faces our local churches is an everyday problem to us. We have made sacrifices and are ready to continue to do so, that these agencies of the church may go on. The saddest thing that I have noticed lately is where the pastor has taken a substantial reduction in his personal affairs and then the church makes the same reduction in the work of the church. It seems to me that the purpose of the reduction in salary which the pastor sustains is to make possible the continuance of the different activities of the Church. When these activities are curtailed and almost forgotten, then it is that any sacrifice which the pastor has made becomes a sacrifice without benefit.

We are led to believe that after all the matter of INTEREST is pretty largely at the bottom of much of our giving. A survey of our gifts last year, in comparison with all other benevolent gifts, indicated quite clearly that there was no more potent agency in the entire matter than INTEREST. If our heart is in the matter, somehow the Lord will lead a congregation into a gift commensurate with its ability. If we are not interested in the cause, then though the Lord has blessed us in a most magnificent manner, our gift will be found among the smallest in the brotherhood.

It would be a pleasure were it possible for your Board to enter the congregations which, by their assistance, have made the work to continue, and thank each one for their splendid support. Last year, with conditions as they were, many fine contributions came in. These too, came in from those churches which might have had the greatest excuses for not paying at all. We wish we might without offending others tell you of some of these contributions. Certain churches where the Sunday school spirit runs high, came through with contributions that reminded one of those days when money was plenty. In fact were it possible to make a graph of contributions for this cause and then make another which had to do with interest in

Sunday school work, you would be surprised to see that the two graphs were nearly the same.

If you consult the budget adopted you will see that the Association was conscious of the depleted treasury. You will note that we have made the work as little as we dare and still maintain the dignity which you demand as coming from the Sunday school department of your Mother Church. We must do our share of the work of the Christian world. As you carry the cause of your beloved Church out into the path of the needy world, this department must be in keeping with other departments of the Church. That is, there is a standard which we must not forget, lest we all suffer. When you invite some friend, whose good opinion you desire, into your home and are telling him of your big business up town, you will be greatly embarrassed to have him see your wife in the kitchen preparing the family wash on the old washboard and then setting the table with not enough dishes and knives and forks to provide for each one at the table. Maybe the figure will not seem to be in keeping with your judgment of the matter under discussion, but to me, there is a very marked similarity. What we are saying is just this—The budget was trimmed until we must have this amount or we shall all suffer more than we can afford. This, Brethren, is not just a "reduced budget." It is a budget in its lowest terms. It reminds us of the sentence which if it suffers the loss of any other word will no longer make "complete sense." You may reduce a "friction" as Amos calls it, by changing its form but there comes a time in its reduction when you must attack its "value." Then it is no longer a reduction; it is a change of value.

All this has been said in the hope that the WHITE GIFT will not lose its appeal or value in your mind. In fact, we feel sure that if we can get the brotherhood to hold fast their regard for this work we shall have no further serious difficulty. The answers which we have received when we inquired relative to small return or no returns at all for White Gift, in every instance indicated small interest in the offering. We are not worried about the financial situation. We are concerned about the "interest" situation. We are not really worried about this, for we are assured of a splendid attitude on the part of our Brethren and await what they can do in the matter with hopeful hearts. When the Gift is in, we trust that we shall be conscious that you have "done what you could," and the Lord will be pleased with your effort, we feel sure.

Now, if you are still following us, we have a request to make. Other Brethren will be writing relative to this matter from time to time. Will you please read each article carefully? We can do but little if you fail to read carefully what we have to offer. This request is made because I, too, receive the Evangelist and know just how easy it is to read awhile and then stop and say, "Well, that's that!" May we make this bargain with you? You read carefully our articles about our field of work and then we will read your articles in the same manner. I read an article "once" by a splendid brother regarding the work and I felt sure, by his lack of cooperation in matters of the Church, that he had never read our articles. Let's cooperate. You help us and we will help you and together the Lord will be magnified! Working together! What a foretaste of things divine! Now watch for what my associates will have to say. What I have said just means—"How-do-you-Do?" Now you are ready for conversation.

Goshen, Indiana.

Promotional Work

By Rev. N. V. Leatherman, General Secretary, National Sunday School Association

Progression

There is developing among our Sunday school workers a real interest in progression. This, at the same time there is developing a better understanding and appreciation of our conservative theological position. Your National Sunday School Association wishes to encourage and culture both these lines of thought and attitude. For certainly if our conservative beliefs are right, and we believe they are, then those beliefs should make us more alert and ready for the tasks at hand. There are many instances which reveal that our people are ready and willing to follow true leadership in any aggressive movement to build up our Sunday schools and churches. Your Association allows $250.00 in its budget for promotional work. That is a small sum indeed for all that is intended to be accomplished by it. Yet this enables your leaders in their endeavors to extend their efforts in a remarkable manner. In fact real progress has been made in recent years to the extent that the officers of your association feel encouraged to pursue these lines of promotional work to the fullest extent of their ability.

Rev. N. V. Leatherman

Purpose

An interesting question might be asked as to just what we mean by promotional work in our Sunday schools? A number of answers might be given to this question. The most tangible answer your writer can give is this: Your association is working to help our Sunday schools meet the highest Standard of Excellence.

Program

What has our association done to help our schools in this way?

1. We provide a Standard of Excellence for Brethren Sunday schools. Recognition and awards are given the schools according to their rating. Our schools are giving more and more attention to this Standard. However there is much carelessness yet to be overcome along these lines. Our work is far from complete in this.

2. We seek to cooperate with District Sunday School Boards in setting up section 1 Sunday School Institutes. This is a revival of an old method of Sunday school interest in the Brethren Church. In some districts the Sunday School Institute preceded the interest in District Conference. Later the two were held together. Then for some reason, unknown to the writer, the institute faded out of the picture. But the present interest in the work demonstrates beyond any doubt the value of continuing the institute and encouraging its extension to other borders.

The Pennsylvania District last year had five such institutes. The original idea for a certain group of churches was to have one in the fall and one in the spring. The appreciation of these programs was so keen that it has been suggested for this group of churches that have these institutes at least three times a year if not quarterly. At present they are held twice a year. They may be held more frequently. The idea is growing and other sections of the state are requesting the institute.

The Indiana District pioneered in this work a few years ago and have had at least one institute every year since then. This work truly takes promotion. Your Secretary is too far removed from some of our districts to promote the work in person. Each District should have a working Sunday School Board appointed or elected by their conference. This Board should help their groups of churches to set up institute programs. We will be pleased to assist in every way possible in the accomplishment of this task. Our association has assisted in meeting the traveling expenses of some of our National Sunday School Board who attended and helped in no little degree to make these institutes a success. While the association is always glad to help in this manner our budget would seem to indicate that any group of churches desiring an institute should use discretion in asking the services of some particular man on the Board of whom it may necessitate a considerable traveling expense in preference to another man on the Board whose service may involve very little traveling expense. May we be free also to suggest that whenever possible we arrange our institutes in a series so as to use a man going from one institute to another to keep down traveling expense, while at the same time accomplishing for each institute held the same degree of helpfulness.

3. Another feature of our promotional work, although it is not particularly programmed as our work, is the fostering of young people's rallies. These rallies have been held in Indiana for a number of years. In recent years a few have been held in Ohio. The purpose of the rallies generally is to interest our young people to attend our Training Camp at Shipshewana Lake. Nevertheless if there were no other motive than just getting our young folks together from our different churches we believe our effort worth while.

4. Closely akin to the above feature is the fact that, it was generally agreed by your National Sunday School Board at Winona Lake this last fall, we should include sufficient in the budget for promotional work, to assist the Pennsylvania District Sunday School Board to set up a Young People's Training Camp in the East. Already two Young People's Rallies have been held, one at Berlin, Pennsylvania, and one at Hagerstown, Maryland, where the idea of the Training Camp was presented to the young people themselves, who received the proposal with much enthusiasm. Although we were in no position to give definite assurance of such a camp, owing to the fact that no suitable place has as yet been agreed upon. We are certain however that there will be a goodly number of young people who will be glad to attend once the Board is able to make definite announcement of place and program. The Pennsylvania Board has been looking for a suitable place for a number of months. This is no little problem, and the Board appreciates the necessity of settling this problem right in order to make the camp a success from the start.

Our young people must be trained not only in text books such as a good training camp curriculum can provide. They must also be trained to fellowship together. Our rallies and our camps will inevitably do this for them.

The secret of success among groups of churches congregational in government such as the Brethren Church, is conference, conference, conference. This our institute affords. We cannot be of one mind until, we know how to be together. The prophet asked, "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" We say, no! It is equally as hard to be agreed until they get together. Both are true.

If you deem these interests in getting our young people together and training them, and if you deem it worth while for our people to get together and discuss the best ways and means of promoting the work of the church and Sunday school then we believe you will likewise be interested in helping this good work with your White Gifts.

Berlin, Pennsylvania.

Rejoice in the Lord. Philippians 4:4

By Miss Lucille Guiley

(Concluded from last week)

Paul goes on to tell us now that he does not consider himself to have already reached his goal, but forgetting those things which are behind he is still pressing forward and upward to that high mark which God has set. Paul is not hanging on to all those sins of the past. Remember his life before he saw Christ by faith. What a sinful man he was, what a blasphemer, what a persecutor of Christians. Suppose Paul should hang on to these things and say, "I cannot go here because these people know what a man I was, I dare not enter this city because of the havoc I caused, etc." How far would he have progressed in his Christian life? How much could he have been used of God? Of course we have learned many lessons from the experiences of the past and though we want to remember these lessons that they may help us again in similar circumstances yet there is no need of hanging on to sin itself or the deed which taught the lesson. We must not be troubled with such burdens or sins lest our race be offset. "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." If confessed, they are under the blood—so then—forgetting those things which are behind, reach forth unto the things that are before. In a word then, our running this Christian race consists of our fellowship and conformability with him.

Verses 20 and 21 reveal the ultimate goal to which we are pressing: "For our citizenship is in heaven: from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." Oh, what a glorious goal, what a wonderful reward,—a body like unto his glorious body. Here is where the work of verse 6, chapter 1 finds its completion. Is not that goal worth running for? So let us run every day of our earthly lives, ever looking for that glorious appearing of our Lord when we shall be changed and given a body like unto his own.

In chapter IV we see Christ, the strength of life. We might call this the upward look for the Christian. Yes, if we are going to run this race I'm afraid we'll find our own strength insufficient. We need a greater source of strength to which we can look for help. In the first few verses Paul exhorts the church members to unity that they might have the fulness of Christian joy. And in verse 4 we find his exhortation: "Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice." Then follows verses 6 and 7: "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." Does that "Be careful for nothing" mean that we should be indifferent and careless? No, it really is: "Be anxious about nothing,—don't worry." Pray and then trust. Worry, in plain words, is simply sin, because if we trust we do not worry, and if we worry we are not trusting. Cannot he that careth for the sparrow care for you, O ye of little faith?

When you see the lilies spinning in distress

Taking thought to manufacture loveliness;

When you see the birds all building barns for store

'Twill be time for you to worry. Not before.

About two years ago when down in the heart of Brazil a missionary, the Rev. Arthur Tylee, his two-year old daughter Marian, and the nurse, Miss Kratz were so cruelly massacred by the Indians Mrs. Tylee was also quite seriously hurt. But when she regained consciousness and realized what had happened and knew her loneliness among such a people she still remained calm. It was cabled to America that Mrs. Tylee has a peace that passeth understanding. Where did she get that peace? Was it of herself? She had been living near her Lord, serving him, trusting him and had found him true and faithful. She KNEW him. He gave her sweet peace as she still prayed and trusted. He will give you such peace through all the storms of life if you make known unto him your difficulty and if you will be "careful about nothing."

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Here is a verse just brimful and bubbling over with helpful instruction. Suppose it read just the opposite from what it does. It would be something like this: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are untrue, whatsoever things are dishonest, whatsoever things are impure, whatsoever things are unlovely, whatsoever things are of evil report; if there be any gossip, and if there be any fault-finding, think on these things." Where would we end if we followed such teaching? But praise God he doesn't exhort us to such filthy living. And yet analyze your own mind for just a minute—do it fairly and without prejudice—which way do you score highest? God help us to think on THESE things—the things he tells us to because our lives are just the expression of our thoughts.

Before closing we want to glance at that wonderful thirteenth verse lest we become weary and faint in the way. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Friend, as you are running and you stumble over rocks, step upon thorns, or must turn out for pitfalls and boulders, you become tired and weary, you feel you can't go another step just claim that verse and remember he says ALL things. And then verse 19 puts a fitting climax to this book: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." This means not only material or financial needs to which this verse is more often applied but it means also spiritual and physical needs. He will supply ALL you need to run your Christian race, he will supply strength for the day, he will supply food and the many, many other things which we need day by day. He will supply grace for trials, strength to be victor in times of temptation and words to speak when called upon to witness for him. "My God shall supply ALL your need."

Friend, as we look back over this book I would like to ask you: Has your heart been tested in the light of the Son of Righteousness? How did it show up. If you are honest with yourself you know that you would not want others to see your heart in that Light. You know what it needs. Have you seen the Cross? Has the precious blood been applied to that stained heart? If it has you are not ashamed of it now. Are you in the race? If not, wouldn't you like to be? Come today. Perhaps you are in the race but constantly falling behind—"Be careful for nothing—I can do all things through Christ—My God shall supply all your need." I plead with you to come to Jesus now. He will save, he will keep, he will satisfy.

830 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Illinois.

---

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

---

A CASUALTY OF THE WAR

When we put that estimate of Colonel Raymond Robins into page 4 of this issue, Mr. Robins had not yet been found. Meantime, as most of our readers will know, he has been discovered in the Great Smoky region of North Carolina, a victim of amnesia.

What not all will recognize is that Colonel Robins' condition is the result of that strenuous, courageous living that has characterized almost all his career. He made his wealth by digging it out of the ground in the Alaskan gold rush. He has used it consistently for the benefit of his fellow men. But he has not been content merely to pay to have something good done. He has gone into causes as himself a fighter of immense physical and moral courage.

Moreover, he has done this with such intensity because he believes profoundly in a personal God, an inspired Book and a divine Savior.

* * * * *

Colonel Robins has, therefore, dedicated himself personally to the work of betterment of his fellows and as a consequence has been the victim of many efforts to trap him, and especially of many threats to his safety. It is impossible for one to live so without a strain upon the nervous system. His present state must, then, be the result of this strenuous living and the anxiety for causes to which he gave himself with singular devotion. He is no less a casualty of this moral and spiritual war than if he had found his body riddled with the bullets of the gangsters.

Not all people recognize the strain under which such campaigners for righteousness are always living.—Christian Standard.

KAGAWA CONTINUES FEARLESS SPEECH

Why is it that Toyohiko Kagawa labors under none of the restraints and limitations by which other Christians find themselves circumscribed? The other day he was invited to speak in a great mass meeting within the sacred precincts of the Ise shrines, Shinto's most consecrated sanctuary and legendary birthplace of the Japanese empire. Kagawa-san delivered an impassioned evangelistic message, shot through with economic and social implications, and at the close gave his challenge to discipleship with Jesus to which 150 responded by signing declaration cards. Among those present and deeply impressed were many priests of the Ise shrines. And this is the same man whose meditations on Napoleon appeared as follows in the magazine Kumo no Hashira (Pillar of Cloud) some time ago: "Napoleon tasted the sadness of victory after his conquest of Moscow. Now it is time for Japan to taste the sadness of victory. No victory of the sword can conquer the soul of man." If any other Japanese had said this he would have been immediately clapped into prison, to say nothing of being permitted to speak in or near Ise. But maybe the rest of us Christians are just too timid to live out and speak out our convictions.—Japanese Correspondent to Christian Century.

ONE TAX THAT CAN BE DODGED

Here in the east at least, election week was not concluded before the secular press began announcing the nation's recovery from tax burdens by the prompt restoration of beer as a source of revenue. Estimates of the stream of money that thus will gush forth range from one to one and a half billion dollars. Collateral effects will be the shattering of unemployment, the solution of pessimism, the expansion of low prices for wheat and corn and the drowning of rural discontent, say our jubilant politicians. Beer is to become the branch that will sweeten the bitter waters of our economic desert. By means of hops we can leap from the hole of despair to the height of prosperity.

Well, it is one kind of taxation that a good many of us will dodge, unless, like the war, it is expected to help pay for, they propose to draft the population and compel them to drink beer. It is obvious that the consumption of the beverage must rate at a high average per capita in order to meet the demands its friends propose to make upon it. Notwithstanding the serious financial situation in which we find ourselves and the consequent call upon every American to do his duty, part of the people cannot, many should not and many will not contribute to this tax. We assume that milk will still be continued as the major item in the diet of babies and younger children. Of these in 1930 there were 36,000,000. In the next age bracket, fifteen to nineteen, there are 11,552,000. One should not expect these youths to add their support to saving the nation by drinking their full quota of high-power beer.

Then there is a very considerable segment of the population who do not like beer, or beer does not agree with their bodily health. Some of them have the quaint notion that an alcoholic beverage is intoxicating, and they prefer to keep their minds in a normal state of sanity. We do not know how many of these there are, but we suspect that 20,000,000 is not too high an enumeration. Then there are poor people who cannot afford it and colored people for whom white folk count it a menace.

The more we figure on saving the country from disaster by the revenue from beer, the more our awe increases at the patriotic willingness of the people to burden themselves with the arduous duties involved. And what altruism they exhibit in behalf of those whose incomes are of such size as to permit the government to list them in the upper income tax brackets.—The Lutheran.

NO SALOONS, DID YOU SAY?

Mrs. Sabin and "her set" and President Butler and his crowd have all along been assuring us that they would not stand for return of the saloon. That has been the general tune played by all the wets, including the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Now, however, comes a great featured story in the Enquirer telling how Mayor Cermak, who once swore to support the American Constitution, has served notice upon all speakeasies of Chicago that they may go ahead without molestation to serve beer. Some of us are very dence. We do not find it easy to distinguish between a saloon and a former speakeasy serving beer. That distinction is one of those subtle ones that only such extremely cultured beings as Mayor Cermak, President Butler, Mrs. Sabin and the Cincinnati Enquirer can grasp.

Meanwhile look at this expression of the New York plan for a bar in every cafeteria. It was a meeting of the United Restaurant Owners' Association at the Hotel Astor. Here is what the president, elected for the thirteenth year, says of the Utopia to which his associates look forward:

The restaurant of the old days is gone, Mr. Burger explained. People don't want to sit down and spend hours at a meal; they want to eat quick and run. The cafeteria and the modern restaurant are giving the people what they want. Soon five thousand real eating-places will be spread throughout New York when we get real beer and wine, and there will be a bar with a shiny brass rail in every one. We planned it tonight.

Mr. Roosevelt won't be angry if I say that the "forgotten man" of the restaurant business will make this the great industry of the future. The chains will join us soon, but it's the small owners who are going to bring progress.

Is it the plan to do away with the old saloon by the simple expedient of having nothing else but saloons?—Christian Standard.

AN APT TRIBUTE

Here is a noteworthy citation, used by former Secretary of the Interior James R. Garfield in presenting the distinguished service medal of the Roosevelt Memorial Association to Robert A. Millikan last month:

The Roosevelt medal for distinguished service has been awarded this year in only one domain, the field of science. For this medal, I have the honor to present the name of a scholar, a teacher, a mentor of scholars, a master of research, a scientist, imaginative and pertinacious, who has explored both the infinitely vast and the infinitesimally minute, returning from sidereal space with the secret of the cosmic ray, from the crashing of worlds within the molecule with the secret of the electron's speed, a prophet of the new time, bearing to bewildered man, alike from atom and from star, news of the presence and the goodness of God.

This strikes us as an apt and well-deserved tribute to one of the foremost living Christian scientists.—The Living Church.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Obadiah

Obadiah is a very popular name in the Old Testament. It does not appear, however, until the days of David and occurs occasionally thereafter. Look at the list of characters who bore the name:

1. A Governor of Ahab. 1 Kings 18:3-16.
2. A Family Head in David's Lineage. 1 Chron. 3:21.
3. A Chief of Isaachar. 1 Chron. 7:3.
4. A Descendant of Jonathan (Saul). 1 Chron. 8:38; 9:34.
5. A Son of Shemaiah—Otherwise Abda. 1 Chron. 9:16; Neh. 11:14.
6. A Gadite hero of David's Band. 1 Chron. 12:9.
7. A Zebulunite. 1 Chron. 27:19.
8. A Teaching Prince Under Jehoshaphat. 2 Chron. 17:7.
9. A Levite Overseer Under Josiah. 2 Chron. 34:12.
10. A Descendant of Joab. Ezra 8:9.
11. A Covenant Sealer with Nehemiah. Neh. 12:25.
12. A Gate-Keeper in Nehemiah's Day. Neh. 12:25.
13. A Prophet. Obad. 1.

The Book

Obadiah is the shortest book in the Old Testament canon. By some it is regarded with almost impunity, neglected entirely by others, but to Jews and serious Bible lovers the writing possesses singular charm and an alluring attractiveness.

The Opinion of George Adam Smith

Witness, for instance, the remarks of a famous scholar who did not cherish the ethical aspects of the prophecy. Speaking of the hatred and antipathies of the sons of Jacob and the sons of Esau, he writes: "The Book of Obadiah is singular in this, that it contains nothing else than such feelings and such cries. It brings no spiritual message. It speaks no word of sin, or of righteousness, or of mercy, but only doom upon Edom in bitter resentment at his cruelties, and in exultation that, as he has helped to disinherit Israel, Israel shall disinherit him. Such a book among the prophets surprises us. It seems but a dark surge staining the stream of revelation, as if to exhibit through what a muddy channel these sacred waters have been poured upon the world."

The Evaluation of Matthew Henry

Over against the rather constricted narrow-visioned, and unfair observation of the above writer on the Minor Prophets, permit me to pen the sentiments of a commentator of less critical, but greater devotional, fame: "This," says the quaint Matthew Henry, "is the shortest of all the books of the Old Testament, the least of those tribes; and yet it is not to be passed by, or thought meanly of, for this penny has Caesar's image and superscription upon it; it is stamped with divine authority. There may appear much of God in a short sermon, in a little book; and much good may be done by it; multum in parvo—much in little. Mr. Norris says, 'If angels were to write books, we should have few folios;' that may be very precious, which is not voluminous."

Gentle reader, read the prophecy of Obadiah and judge for yourself between the above quotations! From the former sentiment the present writer demurs, but the latter statement is reverent and judicious. Do you agree with me?

I. THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Obadiah, little known, but not unsung.
2. When and Where Written? Before 800 B. C. or after 586 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Written? To Israel and for Edom.
4. Purpose. To Declare the Impending Doom of Edom and Forecast Anew the Coming Kingdom of Christ.
5. Trustworthiness. The Prophecy Relative to Edom was Fulfilled Literally and Tragically.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Doom of Edom Announced. Vss. 1-16.
2. The Kingdom of Jehovah Promised. Vss. 17-21.

III. THE THEME OF THE BOOK

Obviously enough, the theme of the prophet is the destruction of Edomites, the descendants of Esau. They cherished perpetual hatred for the sons of Jacob and established themselves in the secluded and rocky ridges of their own land. They were a wild-eyed, proud and boastful people, taking revenge upon their brothers at every possible opportunity. Petra was then the capital city and was perched like an eagle's nest (Vs. 4) in the midst of crags and cliffs. It was a mountain stronghold of the highest security, yet it crumbled to pieces when the hordes of Nebuchadnezzar overran their territory and conquered their stronghold. This hatred began, mark you, in the household of Isaac and Rebekah and died out at the capture of the Holy City by the Romans. Hatred is a brutal thing and is brutally punished.

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. Edom, "The Day of the Lord."
2. Key Verses. 15 and 21.
3. Key Chapters. There is only one chapter.
4. Key Ideas. Pride Precedes Humiliation: Anti-Semite Promotes Pride.

V THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

The book of Obadiah is largely prophetic and represents today fulfilled prophecy. Read in addition to predictions mentioned by Obadiah, Ps. 137:7; Isa. 34:5-15; 63:1-6; Jer. 49:7-22; Ez. 25:12-14; Amos 1:11, 12. Fulfilled prophecy is one of the strongest arguments of history in favor of an inspired Bible and God's providential control of the universe and man.

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

The Lord Jesus Christ is seen here as the Leader of his Kingdom. He will punish those who hate the Jew of Promise. This truth has been abundantly evident in history. Men who hate their brothers are liars if they say they love God. But some day hatred will cease and the glorious gospel gems of Obadiah 17 and 18 will be realized in Christian victory.

VII THE LESSONS OF THE BOOK (In Scripture)

1. "As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee." Obad. 15.
2. "With what measure ye mete it shall be measured out to you again." Mt. 7:2. See also Mark 4:24 and Luke 6:38.
3. "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap everlasting life." Gal. 6:8.

W. I. DUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN

MAGAZINE SECTION

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

The Teacher's Responsibility

By Mrs. Herman Shumacher, Osceola, Indiana

I am wondering if men and women who consent to become Sunday school teachers, realize that in so doing they are taking upon themselves one of the greatest responsibilities of their lives. I am also wondering if teachers ever stop to realize the close relationship existing between their work and the preacher's. Although teaching a class is far different from preaching to a congregation, we are both trying to explain the Bible truths to those who have come to hear us and, too, both are trying to bring their listeners to just a little closer and deeper knowledge of Jesus.

We always feel that men should be called of God into the ministry, and we do know that the men who are led by the Spirit through their sermons are the ones who can the more convincingly show us the way to better Christian living. These are the ministers who, after winning souls to Christ, can better hold them there, for many times a new-born Christian needs lots of encouragement.

Now if men who are pastors of churches should be guided by the Holy Spirit in their work, why should not we, as teachers, also be guided by a Supreme Power? We cannot be true Christians and not receive help daily from him, and all who are trying to live the Christian life know this to be true. When we are teaching a Sunday school class, we are serving as mouthpieces for Jesus. When we study our lessons through the week that we are to teach on Sunday morning, we should pray for the Holy Spirit to help us in our preparation. And if we teach the things that we have prepared, we are simply saying what the Holy Spirit has helped us to say.

Jesus was the greatest teacher the world has ever known. Why did he strive so hard to convince sinners that they should turn to him? It was because he loved them and does truly and sincerely love all, whether they are returning his love or casting it aside. How many of us as teachers today love those who are in our classes? Are we concerned over what they will do with their lives? Do we extend a welcoming hand to those who are outside Christ? Are we as willing to have one whom we know is leading a sinful life as we are to have those who already have given their hearts to Jesus? Why should boys and girls of any community, who do not have a church home, care to come to Sunday school, if they are to be repulsed and whispered about by the teacher to other class members, or to some other person in the church. We could teach all our lives and what especial blessing would God give us, if we always taught to boys and girls who were already Christians as compared to the great blessing we would receive, should we be responsible for just one soul to be brought to him?

I earnestly pray that we, as teachers or mouthpieces of Jesus, shall never be responsible for one boy or girl, young man or young woman turning away from him—and we will not if we only love them. Ministers, who are true messengers of God, have a great Christian love in their hearts for all their congregation. So should teachers for their classes have this same love.

Paul the Soul-winner's Pattern

By Lewis Sperry Chafer

Among the many divine transformations which are accomplished in and for the individual at the moment he is saved, is the removal of his citizenship from earth to heaven. Of those who believed on him, Christ said, "they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world" (John 17:14), and the Apostle Paul has declared that "our citizenship is in heaven" (Philippians 3:20, 21, R. V.). Being caught up into heaven and from thence commissioned to return for soul-winning service wrought great reality into the heart of the Apostle whereby he could say, "to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better: nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you" (Philippians 1:23, 24), and "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men" (2 Corinthians 5:11).

Since he thus becomes a citizen of heaven, it would be both reasonable and natural for the believer to be caught away from this world at the moment he is saved; but, like the Apostle, each child of God is commissioned to remain here as a witness for his Lord. Christ said, "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." According to the precise meaning of Ephesians 4:11, 12 we are to recognize that all believers are appointed to service, and we are given to understand that God has provided pastors and teachers for the edification of the saints unto that ministry which is committed unto them. From these passages we observe that every child of God is an heaven-commissioned witness in a world to which he sustains no relation other than that of an "ambassador," a "pilgrim," and a "stranger." The individual Christian may be called to service in one field or another, but there is no commission to service itself other than this universal divine appointment. Certainly the saints need to be "edified" unto their great task.

There are various responsibilities of Christian service. The simpler forms of testimony are borne by the great number of Sunday school teachers, mission workers, colporteurs, and soul winners. Over these are those divinely commissioned with ministry gifts for the direction and edification of the larger group. And over ministers are the seminary professors who prepare the pastors and teachers. It naturally results that if there is no missionary, soul-winning passion in the seminary, there will be little or none in the life of the pastor and teacher, whose failure will be reflected in ever-widening circles. It therefore follows that the man who lacks a flaming zeal for the salvation of lost souls, is by so much, disqualified to serve as a teacher of teachers in a theological seminary. Believers are not detained in this world to refute human speculations and philosophies: they are given a living message from God before which falsehood withers, and the forces of darkness tremble.

Let it not be supposed that there is no need for scholarship and intellectual culture in the execution of the believer's task. No service in this world is so demanding educationally. However the education is specific, calling for a knowledge of God and his Word.

In rebuking the modern notion that full-rounded, mental culture and soul-winning passion are incongruous, one needs only to cite the Apostle Paul. In him was combined the greatest intellect and educational attainment of his day with a burning evangelism which could say, "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some" (1 Corinthians 9:22), and saving a soul, according to the Apostle, is more than outward transformation.

At least five times in the inspired text of the New Testament this great Apostle is held before all believers as a God-given example of Christian service and activity. "Be ye followers of me" is a command which no other Christian would dare to proclaim; yet God has thus honored this unique servant above all others. We therefore turn to the records of his ministry with the divine requirements of emulation resting upon us.

In Romans 10:1 we find the Apostle pouring out his desire to God in behalf of his people that they might be saved.

In 2 Corinthians 5:13 and 15, he announces his great confidence in the fact that Christ died in behalf of all. Therefore, henceforth, he knows no man after the flesh; he knows them only as those for whom Christ has died. All earthly distinctions from the highest to the lowest are dissipated, and the greatest honor that can come upon any human being—that Christ should die for him—is already conferred upon him.

In 1 Corinthians 9:18-27 he declares the character of his service for which he will be rewarded. In his service he makes the gospel without charge that he may "gain the more." He refuses controversy with Jew, legalist, the man to whom the law is given, and the weak, that by all means he may save some.

In Romans 9:3, the Apostle uncovers the deepest longings of his heart. There he states with surpassing emphasis, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." Above all others, he would assure us of the fact that, since Christ has become a curse, there is no need for another. Is he not saying rather that, having been so possessed of the Spirit of Christ, he is willing to be accursed if thereby a soul might be saved?

To what length will he go in tireless service for others! From such a heart of devotion he exhorts us: "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Corinthians 1:9); "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Corinthians 15:58).—The Evangelical Student.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
With
Thoburn C. Lyon

CHRISTIAN STANDARDS OF LIFE

Review

(Lesson for December 18)

Golden Text: Luke 9:23

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

The Christian Standard in Personal Life. 2
Pet. 3:14-18

Note some of the standards mentioned here: Diligent, not merely in his daily tasks, but also in the work of the Lord; Peace; Holy living, without spot and blameless (not faultless); Faith in the deliverance of God, even though he seems to delay; Earnestness in studying the scriptures; Steadfast; and finally, to grow in grace and in knowledge of the truth. Truly these are high standards, but if we live in accordance therewith, daily seeking God's wisdom and guidance, we cannot help growing in grace and in knowing his will more perfectly.

TUESDAY

The Christian Standard in Home Life. Luke
2:40-52

Joseph, head of the home in which Jesus lived, was a "just man," and the fact that Mary was chosen from among all the maidens of Judah to become the mother of our Lord is sufficient testimony to her character. Undoubtedly their home life was of the finest type, deeply spiritual. They seemed slow in grasping the mission and ideals of the boy Jesus, yet they were patient, and thoughtful. And Jesus, even though he was not understood, was subject to them in all things. Pray that we may develop this mutual confidence and consideration, without which there can be no satisfactory, no truly Christian home life.

WEDNESDAY

The Christian Standard in National Life.
Rom. 13:1-7

Just as Jesus did, the Christian will pay his taxes and faithfully fulfill all obligations to the state—except, of course, any which may be in direct opposition to the command of God, such as the bearing of arms. This means that in the republic in which we live the Christian will consider his franchise as "ordained of God," and exercise it as unto the Lord. He will respect ALL laws, and strive by God's grace to live a life above reproach in the eyes of his neighbors, for it is such living that exalteth a nation.

THURSDAY

The Christian Standard in World Life. Ps.
72:7-17

The final verse of this passage states that

ALL men shall call him blessed. This will not come about by further supernatural revelation, nor by the mythical self-advancement of the human race. It will come to pass only as WE make known throughout the nations the manifold grace of God. When that task is complete HE will come again and set up the blessed kingdom described in this passage. Pray for grace and courage that we may do our part in this great work.

FRIDAY

The Christian Standard in Work. 2 Thess.
3:6-13

Be not weary in well-doing; not slothful in business; not eye-servants, but doing our work as unto the Lord—how these precepts challenge us daily! And how they exalt and ennoble our toil! The man who fails to give his employer an honest day's work, by so much robs God and brings dishonor upon the name of Christ. And the employer who withholds from his workers a just wage and decent working conditions is not worthy to bear the name of Christ. May we walk worthy!

SATURDAY

The Christian Standard in Ownership 1
Cor. 9:17-23

This meditation is suggested by the two lessons in stewardship. Paul gave up the recompense in money that was properly his, for his labors, rather than hinder the Lord's work in any way. He was willing to sacrifice every personal right or liberty that he might be "all things to all men," and so win them to a saving knowledge of Christ. Would that we might learn, from such an unselfish example, that there are many things more important than mere ownership of things!

SUNDAY

The Christian Standard in Attainment. Phil.
3:8-14

There are many who would make any sacrifice for self-advancement in the things of this world; these, as the poet said,

..... "Shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprang,
Unwept, unhonored, and unsung."

In contrast with this, there is Paul, who gladly suffered the loss of all things, even life itself, for his ideal of Christian service, and today he still stands out as one of the greatest men of all time. Even so, he did not feel that he "had arrived;" he was always pressing forward toward a fuller knowledge of Christ for himself and a broader ministry for others. May we ever press toward this same mark!

E. M. RIDOLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK  C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. DuSable Ave., South Bend, Ind.	GLADYS M. SPICK, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio
---	--	---

Suggestions for the Social Committee

By Velma Crouch

The work of the social (or recreational) committee is to plan a social time for the society, thus increasing interest and winning others to Christ. Often a person decides for the Christian life after associating with a group of Christian Endeavorers. The first meeting many newcomers attend is a social meeting, later joining the society ranks and then uniting with the church.

The social may well begin with singing suitable popular songs, and should always close with sacred songs and the benediction. The first activities should be games that mix up the guests and get them to talk with one another. There should be no wallflowers or cliques.

The best socials are those that are carefully planned. Plan the type of socials you will have each month for an entire year, making each as seasonable as possible. Carry out the idea in invitations, decorations, program, games, and refreshments. Get a friendly, quickwitted leader to direct the games, announce new ones, stop a game that seems to lag, and try to get all to take part.

The chairman of the committee has both presiding and executive duties. He should be sure games are carefully planned and the equipment provided. He should make it his task to see that every one has a good time and feels at home.

The secretary keeps accurate minutes of the business meetings of the committee, and also takes care of all the committee records, literature, and properties. A scrap book of clippings and suggestions gleaned from various sources is very helpful. This member should be responsible for advertising the social by means of advance notices in pulpit and press, advertisements, posters, and invitations both personal and written. The secretary should also be the social committee's purchasing agent and keep a record of money spent.

One member should have charge of the decorating; securing other interested persons to help. Another member should have charge of providing and serving the refreshments, and cleaning up afterward. Cultivate the "welcome spirit" and the hospitality handshake at Sunday evening prayer meetings as well as at the social events. Use the musical and literary talent of the society in social plans.—C. E. World.

Burlington, Col.

Program-making Requires Good Records

By Estella S. Aitchison—From the Missionary Review of the World

Be systematic. During twenty years' service as a methods secretary the writer's mail has been filled with requests for material recently given in a magazine, but which, alas! the inquirers allowed to go the way of waste papers. If your plans for program-making are to be effective, we would earnestly recommend a. Well-indexed letter files in which materials for all occasions are laid away ready to hand.

b. Scrap-books that are neither "methods crazy quilts" nor literary "hash," but are classified collections of real treasure-trove for the program maker.

c. A series of pasteboard boxes, labelled and listed, in which are preserved not only clippings but bulky cutouts, yearbooks from organizations, and other source material.

d. Notebooks to corral thoughts and suggestions. One of these should be always at hand.

e. Card indexes and filing jackets, which are just as effective in the King's business as in the commercial world.

f. Be timely. As stimulating to the mind as salad greens to the palate in spring is the program that just fits the calendar setting. If not available for this month or next, file the ensuing plans for later use, and have a follow up plan that will remind you of their existence.

could not refuse him. A resolution was passed calling for the presentation of a definite plan of action at the next meeting.

At that memorable October meeting, five comparatively unknown men—William Carey, Andrew Fuller, Samuel Pearce, John Ryland, and John Sutcliffe entered into a solemn covenant to send the Gospel to the long neglected heathen. Their first missionary offering amounted to less than $66.00—given for the most part by those great-hearted ministers of limited means. With an indifferent church at home to criticize them, with neither experience nor precedent to guide them, with no wealth save the nucleus of their own self-denial, those five unknown men undertook to storm the walls of heathenism by faith in the living God.

True to his own vision, Carey volunteered as the Society's first missionary. Finding his wife unwilling to accompany him, he determined to go without her, taking only his oldest son Felix. Indeed, he bade farewell to home, only to be delayed and obliged to return. But even this delay was providential. When he finally set sail in June, 1793, he was accompanied by his entire family. His wife had given her consent provided her sister be permitted to go with her. With them, also, went a Mr. Thomas, a former missionary to Bengal.

The journey of five months in a Danish vessel (they had been denied passage in a British ship) was filled with peril and blessing. Carey's diary gives evidence of rigid self-examination during this period.

Upon arrival, Carey learned that English civilization had contributed little to the spiritual uplift of India. One writer says, "When Carey landed in India, Hinduism was in full vigor—its customs, traditions, institutions and laws all unchanged. The country was practically untouched by any regenerative influence whatever. He had to encounter in its worst forms all the strength of the Hindu system."

Their first year was filled with wormwood and gall—sickness, an empty purse, a new language, strangers in a foreign land, no letters from home for nearly two years—a combination of circumstances that would have discouraged the best. And yet, Carey was able to say, "Attended as I am with difficulties, I would not renounce my undertaking for all the world." Engaging in the indigo trade as a means of support until 1799, he finally removed from Mudnabatti to Serampore at the behest of newly arrived missionaries. Then began that life-long ministry with William Ward and Joshua Marshman. Living together as one large family, the lives of these three men were united in a labor of love for the lost of India. It has been said that never did three men labor in such close and unbroken harmony for so long a period of time as did Carey, Marshman, and Ward. And what a noble triumvirate! Carey, the translator; Marshman, the teacher; and Ward, the printer.

Time and space permit but a brief resume of those years of unbroken fellowship in the Gospel. On Sunday, December 28, 1800, Carey baptized his son Felix, and Krishnu, their first native convert. On March 5, 1801, he laid on the communion table his completed Bengali New Testament, the first copy of the Scriptures in a native tongue, and the fruit of seven and one-half years of toil. In April of 1801 he was offered the professorship of Oriental languages at Fort Williams College, Calcutta. This post was eventually enlarged to include not only Ben-

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
Financial Secretary Foreign Board
1925 East 5th St.,
Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
Home Missionary Secretary
Cerne, Indiana

The Cobbler Who Became an Ambassador. I Cor. 1:27, 28

By W. O. Klopfenstein

The latter half of the eighteenth century marked the dawn of a new era in England. New movements came into being. Schools were established. Public sentiment towards slavery was changing. English commercial supremacy was secured by Wolfe's defeat of Montcalm at Quebec. Captain Cook aroused the people from their provincialism by his explorations in the Pacific. England lost the American colonies. Her neighbor, France, was plunged into revolution.

In the midst of those momentous days, William Carey, the subject of this sketch, was born in Paulers Pury, Northampton, England, on August 17, 1761. He was the son of Edmund Carey, weaver, village school master and parish clerk. William breathed the spirit of the new age. He had a natural preference for science and stories of travel, and gave early evidence of unusual linguistic ability. At the age of twelve, he had memorized sixty pages of a difficult Latin vocabulary. He eagerly read Captain Cook's travels. He was a devout student of nature; his small bedroom was a veritable museum of botanical specimens.

Born of poor parents, William, the oldest of five, was early trained to toil. He was apprenticed to a gardener at the age of twelve, but, unfitted for that, he was reapprenticed two years later to the shoemaker's trade. It was during this period of apprenticeship that he was converted through the influence of John Warr, a fellow workman. himself a new convert.

By the time William Carey was twenty-three years old, he had learned his trade; had married, and lost one child; had tasted the pangs of poverty; had studied some Greek; had been converted and embraced non-conformity; had done his first school teaching; had done his first preaching; had won his two sisters for Christ; and last, but not least, had heard the soul-rending cry of a heathen world. During those early years he acquired a world horizon, a circumstance which transformed his entire life.

He accepted his first pastorate at the age of twenty-four with a remuneration of $50.00 per year, supplementing the remainder of his living at the cobbler's last. Conscious of his lack of education, he studied and mastered Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, and Dutch, besides toiling at his trade and preparing four sermons weekly. His growing soul was not satisfied; a world without was calling. He appealed to a senior minister only to receive this rebuke: "Young man, sit down, sit down. You're an enthusiast. When God pleases to convert the heathen he'll do it without consulting you and me. Besides, there must first be another pentecostal gift of tongues." Carey was silenced, but only for a time.

The stern rebuke of that elder minister reflected the general attitude of the established church of eighteenth century England. The revivals under Wesley and Whitefield had awakened many to a sense of need at home; the church as a whole was yet indifferent to the needs abroad. The religious thinking of that day was still, generally speaking, "rigidly Calvinistic," and "extravagantly predestinarian." "Man was declared to have no power for penitence or faith, save through the super-enabling of God's selective grace." As a consequence, the church "left to God the ingathering of his own selected guests."

But some few souls had caught a vision of better things. Distressed at the barrenness of the church, they gave themselves to intercession. It was first necessary to create conditions favorable to the birth of modern missions. Foremost among the newly awakened was William Carey, the obscure cobbler, schoolmaster, and preacher, whose soul had been touched by a mighty Pentecost. He found a few men whose hearts were sympathetic. He urged action, but his timorous associates waited for a more convenient season. At last, in the midst of those intellectually, socially, commercially, politically, and religiously momentous days—on October 2, 1792, at Kettering, the Baptist Missionary Society was born.

At a meeting held at Nottingham in May of that same year, Carey had presented a most passionate appeal to his brethren. Using Isaiah 44:2, 3 as his text, he poured out his soul in a challenge to: "Expect great things from God; attempt great things for God." He led them back to the forgotten commission and bound its obligations upon their hearts. The brethren were moved, but motionless. The next morning they were about to adjourn when Carey gripped Andrew Fuller's arm, and in the agony of a crushed spirit, cried, "Is there nothing again going to be done, sir?" Fuller trembled for a moment. He counted the cost—and paid it. He pleaded with his brethren to reopen business and take immediate action. They gali, but also Sanskrit and Marathi with a salary of $7,500 per year. On this salary Carey could easily have created for himself and family a handsome estate had he chosen to do so. But not he! The day after his appointment he sent $250 back to England for the support of indigent relatives. Allowing himself and family but a modest allowance for clothing, he placed the rest of his salary in the common treasury of the Mission. His colleagues did likewise.

(To be continued)

present house October 5. We moved here the following Friday. Sometimes, what we do we do quickly.

We found a very fine group of Brethren people who were ready to go forward under our leadership. The attendance at Bible school and church services has materially increased since we are here. There is a good feeling among the people and the prospects are good for better work this year.

Rally Day and Homecoming services were held on Sunday, October 30. At this time three services were held in the church. The Sunday school was held at 9:30 with special program which included special music, reports of attendance from each class, and an object talk by Mrs. Sands. During the preaching service letters were read from Dr. Martin Shively, Rev. Wm. Benshoff, Rev. Willis Ronk, Rev. Jas. Cook, Rev. W. R. Deeter, all of whom were former pastors at this church. The present pastor brought the morning message on "What Is the Matter with the Church?" There were 116 present at Sunday school and most of them stayed to church services.

At noon a very fine basket dinner was served to a large number in the church basement. Rev. R. D. Barnard, pastor of the Dayton church and his wife and daughter were present to enjoy the fellowship of this hour.

The afternoon service was very fine indeed. There was a splendid crowd. Rev. Geo. Pontius, former pastor, led in prayer, Rev. and Mrs. Sands sang a duet and Rev. Barnard brought the afternoon sermon. All of the program was good but this sermon was extra fine. Everybody went away commenting on this splendid sermon and hoping Rev. Barnard would come back again soon.

The church here certainly knows how to take care of their pastor. About two weeks ago on Thursday night we heard a knock on the door and when we opened it there stood forty-four people with all kinds of good things to eat in their hands. They came in with bright smiles and cheery greetings, depositing sugar, coffee, flour, potatoes, apples, canned goods, on the table and on the floor. They brought also, to the preacher's delight, a live duck and a live rooster. Since that time we have received 10 pounds of sugar, one pound of coffee and another chicken. The evening was spent in fine fellowship which helped us to get better acquainted with each other. They went away leaving us with the feeling in our heart that we are going to enjoy our work with this church very much.

This was a part time church working with West Alexandria but we are giving them full time service. By this we hope to do good service for our Lord and help this church to become a real factor in the life of this community. The people are responding splendidly in cooperation for the good of the work in the Lord.

We had a very rich experience in the closing days of our pastorate in Muncie. Some seventy-five of the members and friends of the church got together in a farewell banquet. There was fried chicken galore. There were other good things too. After the physical man was taken care of the spiritual man was taken care of too. We were very surprised to see Brother Loren Garrett get up and after some well chosen words present us with a very fine Bible. This was a Red Letter Worker's Bible with many helps, having on the cover in gilt letters, "To Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Sands from First

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS OF THE COLLEGE

The broadcast over the Ohio State University station last Saturday was reported at various places as very well received.

Dr. Bell just closed a very profitable revival here at the local church. The College as well as the church felt the influence of his efforts.

School was closed over Thanksgiving and will close again December 23 for the Christmas vacation and will reopen Tuesday, January 10, 1933.

I recently spoke before a union meeting at Greenwich on the general topic of Religion and Education.

At the last meeting of the Faculty Club, Mrs. Andrews of the Department of English spoke very acceptably on the Modern English Novel.

Finances here are hard. Everyone who owes the school is late in paying, but everyone expects the college to meet its obligations promptly. This is a one-sided situation and can not be successfully met. It is ardently wished that those who know themselves to be indebted to the school should meet their obligations promptly.

We have recently received some very handsome gifts of books for the Library.

The Fall Quarterly is now on the press. It will contain the short history of the College which I read to a very small group at the late General Conference. I could wish that there would be no political meetings at Winona this coming fall during our Conference period, for you know when there are, they very noticeably thin out our attendance at the tabernacle.

I earnestly solicit an interest in your prayers for the College.

EDWIN E. JACOBS.

LIMESTONE, TENNESSEE

"The Brethren church at Limestone, Tennessee, has had another season of refreshing from the hands of the Lord. That is the way the entire membership feels, from the pastor to every one of the members, concerning the three weeks' revival service which closed November 13th.

It seemed for a while that we would be unable to have a revival service this year because of financial conditions. One door after another closed but we continued to pray and finally the Lord opened the way for us to have Brother W. C. Benshoff of Waynesboro to conduct the meetings. So at the very outset, the Lord having led so definitely, we were confident that it was his meeting.

We did not get off to a very good start the first week. Brother Benshoff arrived on Tuesday and on Wednesday night it rained so hard that no one came to the service. However, by Sunday night we had a crowded house. Satan was busy here, as he always is when the Word is being given forth in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. We noticed in many instances, that when the unsaved were convicted instead of coming out for the Lord, they stayed away from the meetings. Then, too, about one night each week the rain kept a good many folks away. Election day came during the last week of the meetings, and prior to it, there were many political meetings held in and around the community which divided the attention of many.

However, in spite of the opposition of Satan we feel that the meeting was very successful. As a result of it, two boys took a stand for Jesus Christ and have since been received into the Church. We know that his Word will not return unto him void, but will prosper in that whereunto he has sent it. Even though it has apparently been death unto death, we continue to pray that it may be life unto life to many. The revival did not close with the end of the meetings, but is continuing through the regular services, and the past Sunday we rejoiced when a man and his son-in-law stepped forward for Christ. We ask the prayers of the entire brotherhood that this revival may continue.

Looking back at the meetings, we feel that the purpose for which a revival is held—that of truly reviving the membership of the church—was accomplished. This was shown at the communion service which was held the night after the close of the meetings. It was the largest communion service in the history of the church, with sixty-eight at the tables. It rejoiced our heart to see the young people again participating in this blessed service.

There was another service that we especially wanted to mention. This was "Family Night," held the evening of election day. We had a record attendance with quite a large number of complete families present. The honor of having the largest family present went to Brother and Sister Isaac Gwin, who are faithful members of the church.

In closing we praise the Lord for his faithful servant, Brother Benshoff, through whom he worked mightily during these meetings. It was the first time we had ever worked together in a meeting, but during the short time that he was here, we enjoyed every moment of our fellowship with him and found him to be a faithful and fearless preacher of the Word.

HILL MACONAGHY, Pastor.

FROM MUNCIE, INDIANA TO CLAYTON, OHIO

We closed our work in Muncie September 30 and preached our first sermon in the Clayton Brethren church on Sunday, October 2. We came looking for a house at Brookville during the week and rented our Brethren Church, Muncie, Indiana, September 22, 1932." We shall always remember with a great deal of satisfaction the love and fellowship of our friends inside and outside of the Muncie Brethren church.

Not all was accomplished that we had hoped for during our four years in Muncie. We had hoped to see a self-supporting church there when we were ready to close our pastorate. And they might do this if all the different groups get together in united effort. But, there was some real progress made in the work.

The yearly church business meeting was held during the first week in October. Reports were given from the different departments showing that real gains had been made. The Sunday school attendance was well over the 200 mark a number of times. The average attendance was 178 for the year. A number of the children accepted Christ and were received into the church during the year.

Mrs. Sands rendered a very fine report of the work done by the Junior church. Over 1400 children were in attendance during the year. The largest number present was 69 on Easter Sunday. The average attendance was 40. These services were carried on during the morning worship hour and the children loved to attend them. Mrs. Sands gave them illustrated talks and taught them to sing and pray in public. Birthdays were remembered and real birthday cakes were made for the children. Parents' night with special programs by the children were a part of the general program of work and the parents were glad to send their children to these meetings. Altogether it was very worthwhile and was a very vital part of the work during our pastorate.

A Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was carried on by a group of earnest young people of the church. Besides the regular meetings each Sunday they entertained the young people of the Walnut Street Baptist church and its pastor during the year in a fine social meeting. They also entertained the County Christian Endeavor Union when about 50 or more were present. This society has promise of becoming a great factor in the work of the church.

The pastor made the best report of our entire pastorate there. We reported 303 calls made, 100 sermons preached, 6 marriages performed, 3 funerals conducted, 2 services at the Infirmary, 2 services at the Children's Home. The Cornerstone of the new church was laid with appropriate services and Rev. W. I. Duker assisting on Sunday, September 27. The basement unit of the new church and the new basement under the old church were dedicated free of debt with Rev. J. Raymond Schutz assisting on Sunday, December 6. A revival was held by Rev. Charles Ashman of Johnstown and 40 were baptized and received into the church. Of these 11 were adults, 6 older young people and the remainder were children 12 years to 14 years. In addition to these the pastor visited and obtained the consent of 21 of the members of the old Maple Grove church near Eaton to place their names on the roll of the Muncie church. This made a total of 61 members received during the last year of our pastorate, and a grand total of 75 received during the entire pastorate. Other families were talking of uniting with the church.

We believe Muncie is one of the most promising churches in the brotherhood. If all the groups will get together in cooperation they can go on from victory to victory, building up a real Brethren church in the city of Muncie. We are praying that the right pastor may be secured and many souls won for our Christ.

At present we are engaged in special revival services in the Clayton church. The Holy Spirit is working and good results are being obtained. The pastor is the evangelist and so far there have been 17 reconsecrations to the Lord and his service and 4 who have accepted Christ for the first time. These meetings will continue until Sunday night and perhaps longer.

Pray for us Brethren, that the Lord may be honored and his Kingdom built up in this part of the great Miami Valley.

M. L. SANDS, Pastor.

BRETHREN DAY

On September 10th, some of the Brethren had a most glorious day at Mt. Tabor Park, Rocky Ridge, Maryland.

The renewal of this day was from a suggestion brought about through a "get-together meeting" when a large delegation from Washington, D. C. church came to Linwood to enjoy an evening's service during the revival services conducted by Rev. R. Paul Miller. These good people had a long drive before them, so the members of the church here served them some refreshments to carry them over the way. During the social side of the event Brother J. M. Stillwell remarked to Mrs. J. E. Drach (in whose home our good friends were served) how good it was for Brethren to get together. Mrs. Drach then stated that several years ago it was customary to celebrate what was known as the Brethren Reunion at Pen Mar, Maryland. The thought was given our good pastor, Rev. J. L. Bowman, and through his efforts Brethren Day was again alive.

It was a wonderful success but you who know Rev. Bowman realize that he knows just how. The date of September 10th was the most suitable for the congregations interested. Even though it was rather late for picnic events the day was ideal. A central place suitable for such gatherings was well known to Rev. Bowman, as Brother W. I. Renner of Rocky Ridge, one of the Park Board of Directors of Mt. Tabor Park, is a member of the Linwood congregation. I am sure everyone who was present on Brethren Day will say that Mt. Tabor Park is the place for a good time. By noon all had arrived. What a wonderful lunch we had. There were Brethren from Winchester, Virginia, Washington, D. C., Hagerstown, Maryland, St. James, Maryland, Waynesboro, Pennsylvania and Linwood, Maryland. Maurertown, Virginia, and Cumberland, Maryland had been invited to join us and both churches had a place on the program but something kept them from coming.

At about 2 o'clock we gathered in the pavilion for our program. Rev. J. L. Bowman presided over the meeting. Brother Hartman of Washington, D. C., had charge of the music. "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was sung in opening. Rev. Kent conducted the devotions.

Hymn "Blessed Assurance" was sung. Special Music, "It Is Well with My Soul," sung by Brother and Sister Hartman was very impressive.

It was thought necessary to elect officers to carry this event through so at this time we had an election. Rev. J. L. Bowman was elected President; Rev. F. G. Coleman,

Vice-President; Brother Donaldson, Treasurer and Bertha Drach, Secretary.

At this time we were greatly favored by a special musical number by the Hagerstown Quartette.

Rev. W. C. Benshoff delivered the address of welcome. You all know Rev. Benshoff and you all know his ability. Well, this was just a little more than the usual. Then Rev. Bowman's response was equally as good.

Rev. Rohart of Winchester gave some extra special music in song.

Rev. F. G. Coleman gave us "Fifty Years of Brethren History." This was very interesting and quite worthwhile. He said, "We have had the Whole Gospel to back us for fifty years. Will we be remembered fifty years from now as having put our very best forward?"

We were very lucky to have with us Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Bell. Dr. Bell gave us the history of Ashland College, also gave us an insight on the Brethren work in general. As Brother Bell has visited every church and every mission point in the brotherhood, he knows the progress that has been and is being made. It is good to know what our church has for us to live for. For special music, Brother Hartman sang "Calvary."

Every one enjoyed Brother Rohart in the song, "Give Me the Roses While I Live."

"They Do Say—How Gossip Begins," a playlet of six scenes was very well rendered by the St. James Sisterhood of Mary and Martha.

An offering was taken to take care of some expenses. Everyone responded very well as the offering amounted to $10.86.

It was suggested and voted upon to continue Brethren Day at Mt. Tabor Park, the day to be July 27th, 1933.

"You Can Smile" was sung in chorus led by Brother Hartman.

We were led in prayer and dismissed by Rev. Baker.

After this most enjoyable day we had to leave for our homes, hoping to meet again next summer for a similar event.

BERTHA DRACH, Secretary,
Linwood, Maryland.

WASHINGTON, D. C. REVIVAL

On Sunday night, November 20th, the Washington church brought to a close its revival. The meeting began on Sunday, November 6th, thus it covered a period of two weeks, including three Sundays. However, that which contributed very largely to the success of the meetings was a week just preceding the meetings devoted to personal visitation evangelism. During this week nine or ten teams were kept busy under the direction of the pastor, visiting the prospect list and presenting the claims of Christ upon their lives. The results of the efforts of this personal workers' band could readily be seen all during the meetings. More strangers and prospects than we usually have had during similar meetings were on hand. Many remarked about the splendid attendance all through the meetings. And if there were no other fruits, the joy that the workers received in this personal work was well worth all the efforts expended. They received a real taste of the joy of doing the thing that our Lord is expecting all of his followers to do, namely, personal witnessing for him. They are determined that such work shall not cease but shall go on all through the year. Such an attitude ought to make any pastor's heart glad.

During the meetings at the request of the church this pastor did the preaching. He was ably assisted by the services of Rev. Emerson J. Rohart, pastor of the Brethren church at Winchester, Virginia, who had charge of the song leading and children's work and assisted in personal work. The writer thoroughly enjoyed his fellowship with this brother pastor and cannot speak too highly of his earnestness, consecration and ability as a personal worker. He also has a great ministry among the children who loyally supported with their presence and group singing the entire period of the meetings. Brother Rohart has many friends in Washington as he formerly lived here and attended school in the city. He also had charge of the Washington pastorate one summer prior to our coming here. We appreciate your services, Brother Rohart, and will welcome you back any time. We neglected to say that in addition to his other work, Brother Rohart preached for us a most helpful sermon on one of the Sunday mornings of the meetings. We enjoyed having a delegation from Brother Rohart's church one rainy night during the two weeks.

During the progress of the meetings a total of thirty-one souls came forward for profession of faith, church membership, or renewal. We are now in the process of baptizing these, waiting for reception of letters from churches outside the city, and working to win those whom the meeting touched but did not succeed in winning. It is, of course, impossible to evaluate the benefits of a meeting such as this because some of the most worthwhile benefits are not visible at all. But we are sure that a blessing came from the Lord to our church and to our own souls, and we are willing to leave the results with him.

HOMER A. KENT.

MY TWO WEEKS AT PITTSBURGH

First, they were a pleasant anticipation. Now they are a happy memory. On Monday, November 7th we began. On the night of November 20th we closed, and took the train for home.

In going to Pittsburgh I knew that I would have a privilege I had not had before, viz., to become acquainted with the Studebakers. I also looked forward to meeting many of the Pittsburgh Brethren for whose loyalty and devotion I had formed a high regard back in the days when I was promoting the endowment campaign—back during the pastorate of H. M. Harley. Among the number is John Rishel—one of my boys of the Summit Mills church, when I was pastor of the Meyersdale circuit. John did a bright thing when he married Irene Wilcox. He knows it. I was also happy to see again other members of that circuit including the Hoover sisters. And my good friend, Jacob Musser, dropped in on us one night, from Berlin, Pennsylvania. That too was a delight. And then, it was mighty good to see once more my good friends of many years, M. S. Kimmel and wife, and their family. With these angles and others I could mention, my stay in Pittsburgh could not be other than interesting and agreeable. It was both.

My home was with the Studebakers. Those who have been in that home will understand well enough when I say that from the point of genuine hospitality, fellowship, and kindly consideration nothing was lacking. It seemed to me that parents and Candace, and Leland and Ward vied with each other in their desire to make me comfortable and happy. They succeeded. Sister Studebaker fills with splendid grace and dignity the place of "lady of the manse." Thanks again and again to them all for their many kindnesses.

I love Studebaker. I told him so. He did not object. So that's the way the matter stands. He is a great pastor and a tireless worker. He is spiritual father in many a home in his part of the city which is not definitely connected with the church. Folks love to see him come. Doors are wide open to him. His own people love him and have implicit confidence in his life and leadership.

I have never heard Studebaker preach. I am looking forward. It is said he is a fine preacher. I can easily believe it. A man decent in every way, sensible, fair, sympathetic, studious, spiritual—of course he can preach. And when he comes to Gratis later in the winter I expect to sit back and treat myself to two weeks of good, helpful, uplifting preaching. What a delightful prospect!

Two happy weeks among sympathetic, loyal people. I would like to name a lot of them, but I might overlook some that should be on the list, so I shall refrain. We were in many homes. It was always the same—genuine, Christian hospitality. May God continue to richly bless and use this flock, and pastor and family. I leave it to Brother Studebaker to report whatever he may see fit relative to the meeting.

WM. H. BEACHLER.

"WHY THAT BLOW?"

By Victor B. Chicoine

I

So the High Priest questioned Jesus about his disciples and his teaching.

"I," replied Jesus, "have spoken openly to the world. I have continually taught in some synagogue or in the Temple where all the Jews are wont to assemble, and I have said nothing in secret. Why do you question me? Question those who heard what it was I said to them: these witnesses here know what I said."

Upon his saying this, one of the officers standing by struck him with his open hand, asking him as he did so,

"Is that the way you answer the High Priest?"

"If I have spoken wrongly," replied Jesus, "bear witness to the wrong; but if rightly, why that blow?" John 18:19-23. Weymouth Translation.

II

(It is the afternoon of the same day on which Jesus was arrested. The guard has been changed. The two men, Baruch and Nathan, who had stood on the left and right of Jesus as he faced Caiaphas have just entered their respective homes.)

Scene in Baruch's Home

Wife: "Why did ye strike the Nazarene today? I heard that Nathan never stirred."

Man: "Were ye not told how he insulted the High Priest?"

Wife (with a sidelong glance): "I heard that he spoke what we all know to be the truth. And I know that ye would never strike him for that. Tell me why ye did."

Man: "I held nothing against the Man. But ye know well that Annas hates him. And I would have Annas think well of me. But mostly I struck him because I knew that the High Priest would be pleased. That blow—it was not very hard: it was with my open hand—will make my work more often and sure with the Temple officers. One must think of the future. Many are out of work. I was thinking of how we would feed the children, and of promotion, too."

Wife: "I thought so. I am glad!"

Scene in Nathan's Home

Wife: "I heard that ye did not strike the Nazarene today when Baruch struck him. Why did ye not?"

Man: "Did ye not hear about his words of truth?"

Wife: "Aye! We have all heard how he answered the High Priest bravely!"

Man: "That is why I did not strike him! I knew that both Annas and Caiaphas hated him. I knew that Annas was angry with me for bathing his face and giving him water to drink. I know, wife, that because I did not strike, as Baruch did, even a gentle blow, that I have endangered my office. But he was so noble, his countenance so regal, that I felt that we all should have been standing before him! And I was thinking of you, and of our children, and of myself as a man!"

Wife: "I thought so. I am glad!"—The Congregationalist.

A CHOICE CHURCH JOB

Even the apostles, walking with Christ every day as they did, wanted the best place in the Kingdom. They are not to be condemned for this—but they did not, according to Christ, make the wisest choice. In fact they sought a position rather than a job. They wanted honor—they should have sought service.

One of the very best jobs in the church, if not the very best, it to be teacher of a Sunday school class. There one may draw the minds of a number of young people or

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

BRETHREN'S HOME RECEIPTS SINCE NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Signal Lights, Peru, Ind. ....	$ 1.50
California .....	2.00
Nebraska .....	1.00
Muncie, Ind. ....	2.00
Nappanee, Ind. ....	5.00
New Lebanon, Ohio .....	1.00
Mexico, Ind. ....	.50
Unknown .....	1.00
For meals served during conference	7.35
Toledo, Ohio .....	2.00
Smithville, Ohio .....	13.95
Kansas .....	4.00
Marion, Ind. ....	1.00
Philadelphia, Pa. ....	5.00
Missouri .....	1.00

$48.30

I also received flour, sugar, canned goods, breakfast food, vegetables and pears. Also, prints for two dresses, towels, bath towels, napkins and pillow cases.

These came from Warsaw, Milford, Nappanee, Mexico, Denver and Roann, Ind.

MRS. CYRUS MEYER, Matron,
November 11, 1932      Flora, Indiana.

old people to the mind of Christ and the will of God.

But this class must be the real thing and not just a cluster of people who are philosophizing and speculating about all sorts and conditions of things. We do not deny the value of such groups, excepting that we deny their efficiency as a Sunday school. It is nothing but a group on the porch with a leader, who is generally not equipped even with definite notions of anything in particular. A real Sunday school class draws its lessons from the Bible: studies, prays, thinks, to find the deep things there. There is no job in the church greater or better than teaching a Sunday school class of that type.—Christian-Evangelist.

IN THE SHADOW

ACTON-BOTT—William P. Acton, of Washington, D. C., and Marion B. Bott, also of Washington, were united in marriage at the home of the undersigned, November 26, 1932. The bride is a member of the Brethren Church of Washington while the groom is a member of the Episcopal church. The happy couple will make their home in Washington. Their friends all wish them much happiness and success in their pathway of life. Ceremony by the writer.

HOMER A. KENT.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

COOK—Samuel Alexander Cook was born in Butler County, Ohio, June 5, 1854, and was the son of Jesse and Susan Cook. He passed away suddenly at his home just north of Burlington, Indiana, November 25, 1932, aged 76 years, 5 months and 11 days. When a child his parents moved to Indiana. November 1, 1879 he was united in marriage to Anna Florence Bell who preceded him in death October 17, 1916. To this union were born four children all of whom survive him. They are as follows: Mrs. Iva Kite, Burlington; Jesse Cook of Townsend, Montana; Dr. Fern Cook of Deer Creek, and Mrs. Beulah Aldrich of Frankfort. He is also survived by two brothers—Dr. A. J. Cook of Flora and Monroe Cook of near Burlington. He was a charter member of the old Darwin Brethren church. Services were held at the home on Sunday afternoon before a large number of friends and relatives. Burial was in Mount Cemetery. Services by the writer.

FREEMAN ANKNUM.

GIBSON—Mrs. Effie Gibson was born in Hart County, Kentucky, September 13, 1840, and died October 29, 1932, at Woodland, Calif. She removed with her parents at an early age to Illinois, where she received her schooling. She taught school for a number of years. In 1884 she was married to I. M. Gibson, and to this union two children were born—Mrs. W. M. A. Echart of Woodland, and Paul F. Gibson of Turlock, Calif. In 1909 she moved to Turlock, Calif., where she lived until a year ago, when she went to Woodland to live with her daughter, and where she went home to be with her Lord. The two children loved their mother and did what they could to comfort her during her many long days of suffering.

Sister Gibson joined the Brethren Church in early life, she loved her church and was a faithful worker in it as long as her frail body served to attend.

Sister Gibson loved her Bible and knew her Bible. She kept posted along all lines and was an interesting woman to fellowship with.

Funeral services took place in the Turlock Brethren church by the pastor, N. W. Jennings, and assisted by Brother John Wesley Platt of Manteca.

Good night, Sister Gibson, for a little while; we will see you in the morning. N. W. JENNINGS.

ZOOK—Jacob E. Zook, son of Samuel and Barbara Zook, was born in Ohio on January 22, 1850 and departed this life November 24, 1932, aged 82 years, 10 months and 2 days.

On May 27, 1875 he was united in marriage to Eliza Ekekelbarger and to this union were born two sons—Dorcia W., of Converse, and Ora W., who died in infancy.

Practically his entire life has been spent near Somerset. He was a member of the Progressive Dunkard church at College Corner and ever strived to live a good consecrated Christian life. On the day of his death he read a passage of Scripture to his wife and commented on same, after which he prayed.

He was a kind and devoted husband and father and a loyal friend to all who knew him. He is survived by his wife, his son, two grandchildren, three great-grandchildren; a foster son, Harry Prickett and family; three sisters.—Mrs. Lucinda Fallis of Converse; Mrs. Lavania Clingenpeel of Greentown; Sarah Zook of Huntington, W. Va., and a number of other relatives.

(No signature attached—Editor.)

ANNOUNCEMENTS

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

Before many read this notice, they will have received enclosed in an envelope, a copy of the new Boys' and Girls' Quarterly. Some also will receive the Youth's Quarterly. This is intended to be brought to the notice of the right person for full investigation with the prospect of changing to this new and interesting output. They are for the youth of age from 9-12 and 13-18 respectively, or older—25 for that matter.

Both these quarterlies have been improved so that we can see no excuse for any of our schools not using them. I trust and believe that they will create a sensation both pleasing to the scholars and satisfying to the teachers.

If these samples do not bring us a fine influx of orders, there is something wrong, somewhere. When we tell our patrons—Brethren—that we can not do without orders, we tell a humiliating truth. If you reply that you have found better lessons, we rise to challenge the statement. I need not tell you that the only encouragement that will satisfy is ORDERS.

CHARLES A. BAME,
Editor S. S. Literature.

Make your friends and yourself

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

throughout the year by a Subscription to your church paper

No better offer was ever made for placing
The Brethren Evangelist
in every home of every congregation, large or small

Begin now to get a Christmas Club of New Subscribers

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN RATES

for Cash Subscriptions to the Evangelist

(Good for 60 days only)

$1.25 each for club of 5 or more NEW Subscriptions. $1.50 each for club of 10 or more renewal subscrip-

$1.35 for single new Subscriptions, or for Honor tions

Church now renewing its list

$1.75 each for single renewal Subscriptions

(Note—A new Subscriber is one not now getting the paper.)

VOL. LIV
Number 49

December 17
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

The Sunday School making contact with the home

---

The teacher is the key to the extension of the local school

and

the White Gift Offering makes possible the outreach of the National Sunday School Association

---

White Gifts for the King

Signs of the Times

by
Alva J. McClain

THE Converted African Outlaw

"Alone in the mountain fastnesses the young Boufi had come to an end of himself. ... One last hope of earthly life remained to him, the clemency of the man who had so loved and trusted him, and whom he had so bitterly wronged. But he dared not approach the station. Standing moodily on an eminence of the large bare rock which towers above Bassai Station, unreachable by man, he could yet communicate with the missionaries. A boy appeared near the house of Mr. Jobson, which was situated nearer than the other house to the base of the rock. The young Boufi called in that clear, far-reaching manner in which the African native is so skillful. "Tell BOMBO (Mr. Gribble) that I want to see him." The boy delivered the message. The little group of missionaries had been praying that the outlaw would deliver himself to the officers. Together again they prayed for guidance. James Gribble arose from his knees, saying simply, "I will go." The others said nothing, but continued to offer fervent prayer for his protection. Alone, unarmed, he went forth upon the rock. The outlaw stood above. His knife and spear were yet in his hands ..."

If you want to know how the story ends, and how the outlaw finally became a deacon and evangelist of the Yaloke Church, buy a copy of Dr. Gribble's book "Undaunted Hope" and read the remarkable account of James Gribble's adventures for God. There are still some copies to be had at the cost price of $1.65 each.

BLIND Fiddlers or Preachers?

Charles Haddon Spurgeon, greatest preacher of his century, once said from his pulpit in London, "Oh, I do love to preach the old Gospel of my Lord and Savior. The committee on reform movements came to see me to ask if I would speak at Exeter Hall, but I replied that I would not do it. I am a preacher of the unsearchable riches of Christ. Any blind fiddler could do that kind of work, but I am a preacher."

Much of the weakness of the modern pulpit has come from the tendency of preachers to turn aside from their high calling to the patch-work of reform. Not that reform movements have no value. Many are highly worthwhile. But it is the business of the preacher to produce, by preaching, the stuff out of which reform movements rise and without which they cannot permanently exist—MEN THAT ARE BORN OF GOD.

There is no surer way to bring about the doom of all moral reform than for the Christian preachers to turn aside from their high ministry to the business of reform. this is the fatal blunder of Modernism.

THE Failure of the Experts

Yesterday I read the solemn opinions of two acknowledged experts in the field of government and economics. One said that the present depression cannot be ended until the war debts are cancelled. The other expert argued just as dogmatically that cancellation would only make the depression worse.

Little wonder that such a brilliant mind as that of Prof. Charles Beard suggests that modern civilization is becoming too complex for any human mind to understand. When two experts starting with the same set of facts reach diametrically opposed conclusions, what is the ordinary mortal to do when asked to pass judgment upon such complicated matters by means of the ballot?

Perhaps there is a measure of truth in the cynical remark that "an expert is a man far from home telling other people how to do what he himself cannot do."

Of course, we dare not give up the search for solutions. But as the world muddles along, the Christian will thank God for the hope that some day there will be a genuine MASTER-MIND in control. Come, Lord Jesus.

OUR Perilous Times

Immediately following the World War, Howard Scott, engineering technician for the great Muscle Shoals project, gathered together a group of research engineers for the purpose of making an exhaustive study of the American industrial system and the effect of this age of machinery and technical methods. This group has recently made a report which has startled the country.

The cold and mathematical conclusion of these engineers is that our power to produce has now so far surpassed our ability to distribute wisely and equitably the fruits of production that we are on the border-line of chaos. The whole problem is set forth in one rather simple proposition: One man has now three times the productive power that he had in 1914. But due to maladjustment in distribution of wealth the same man has only one-third the consuming or buying power he had in 1914.

The New Outlook sums up the matter with these words: "It is after sober, scientific review of such facts that our engineers report that we are faced with the threat of national bankruptcy and perhaps general chaos within eighteen months. ... We have reached the end of an era."

It may be so. At any rate, the Christian should not be surprised, if he has been reading his Bible. James seems to have foretold something like this. Read 5:1-6. But do not stop until you have read verses 7 and 8, for they provide the final solution.

FIRST Effect of the Election

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet testifies to the Congressional appropriation committee that "The first effect of the national election has undoubtedly caused a resumption of smuggling activity on a far greater scale than has been attempted in the past few years. ... Authorization of the sale of beer with a low alcoholic content will have no effect whatever on smuggling. There is no smuggling of beer. ... This market for distilled spirits will continue."

The problem of the bootlegger was not solved by the 18th Amendment. Neither will it be solved by the repeal of the 18th Amendment. A national police force, properly disciplined, free from the curse of local politics, could solve the problem in six months; and at the same time solve the general problem of crime. Bootlegging is, after all, not an isolated phenomenon, but is a part of a much larger problem. To think, as some of the wets have argued, that bootlegging is the cause of the larger problem of crime is as silly as the superstition of "astrology." Even if the country were flooded with liquor, without restriction to make the work of the bootlegger unnecessary, the problem of crime would still remain. And as long as the criminal himself is not dealt with, he will continue to find profitable avenues of activity.

Already we hear that the bootlegging syndicates of the larger cities are planning to take control of the liquor distribution once it is made legal.

The problem of crime is not a problem of law-making, but a problem of enforcement. What this country needs is more of the "iron fist." The criminal cares nothing for laws; FORCE is the only thing he recognizes, and fears.

WHEN I consider Thy Heavens

If you want to know how small and insignificant you are, take up the study of astronomy. When man's ingenuity enlarges and improves the telescope, its only effect is to make the inventor smaller. The telescope thus becomes an instrument in teaching the lesson of humility.

During the past year, the Mount Wilson Observatory announces, 6000 new "universes" have been discovered with the aid of their 100-inch telescope. Each one of these "universes" is countless billions of miles distant and contains billions of stars. It is believed that beyond these are millions more of these amazing "universes."

"What is man, that thou art mindful of him?"

Yet it is the glory of the revelation of God in Christ that we are told that one human soul, no matter how sinful and ignorant, is of more value than the entire world with all its billions of universes. "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul."

Education should aid in uniting all parts of the character of the individual into a noble harmony. National education should achieve a similar result for the nation.—Charles F. Thwing.

IN THIS NUMBER

Christian Standards of Life—Editor,	3
Editorial Review, .....	3
Gifts for the King—S. M. Whetstone,	5
The Necessity of Educational Work in Missions—Miles Taber, .....	5
Some Benefits of a Teacher Training Course—H. A. Kent, .....	6
The White Gift of Youth—G. H. Jones, .....	7
Our White Gift and Our Seminary— K. M. Monroe, .....	8
Christian Endeavorers and Shipshe- wana Camp—E. M. Riddle, .....	9
His Story, the Same Yesterday, To- day and Forever—Hazel Keiser,...	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson— T. C. Lyon, .....	11
December—"Service for Others"—C. D. Whitmer, .....	11
The Cobbler Who Became an Amba- sador—W. O. Klopfenstein, .....	12
News from the Field, .....	13, 14
Our Little Readers, .....	15
Announcements, .....	15

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE

BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

Christian Standards of Life

Profession is easier than practice, but practice cannot be omitted because it is hard. No profession of faith—however complete the faith or strongly held—is of any real worth unless it is accompanied by sincere effort to carry out in life the ideals and teachings to which the mind has given assent. One of the unique characteristics of the Christian profession is that it involves a new and distinct standard of conduct. That is at once its strength and its difficulty, or possibly we should say, its challenge. It is comparatively easy to get people to accept abstract truths and tenets of faith, but to get them to live out in life the practical requirements of that faith is by no means an easy matter.

We have been reminded through the Sunday school lessons during the last three months of certain of the practical requirements of the Christian faith, and such a refreshing of the mind and reviving of the conscience is needed ever and anon. We sometimes lose sight of our ordinary duties and need to be brought face to face with them anew. That is what has transpired during these weeks, unless the effort has been in vain. If the Christian has not been challenged afresh by the standards of life set forth in the Scriptures studied, then he has missed the purpose of the lessons and has lost a great opportunity of bearing witness to the power of God's word in the life of a man, a power which that Word invariably exercises on all who sincerely seek its truth. But many, we trust, have thus been challenged and have profited by this review of some of our very common Christian standards.

We were challenged by the necessity of maintaining a personal contact with the Lord Jesus Christ, that we might grow in grace and strength. The devotional life is not optional to the Christian who would get on in the Christian life; it is a requirement. Daily Bible reading and prayer is not a practice that one may follow or not as fancy or convenience may dictate: it is essential to successful Christian living. The worshipful mood and the knowledge of the will of God are necessary to the serious evaluation and the rightful choices of the varied and multiplied interests of life. Dr. Frederick J. Powicke has said in his book, The Cambridge Platonists, "Man's grandest privilege and most serious duty is to escape the mere shows of life." And he is right, but how is a man to do that thing unless he is both religiously intelligent and spiritual? If life is to become really worthy, if it is to grow increasingly strong in those things that abide and more and more free of those that are superficial and trivial, the soul must know God and be devoted to his will. His life will be poor and he will be only nominally Christian, who is ignorant of the word of God and unfamiliar with his Presence. The devotional life must be maintained. Daily meditation on the Word of God and daily communion with him in prayer are as essential to Christian vigor as bread and water are to the body; they are as vital to life as breathing.

Christian love and ideals must prevail in the home life. The family is not complete without Christ and cannot succeed apart from his will and way. The sincere and undivided loyalty of all its members to the teachings of Jesus and the spirit of his life will bring solution to every home problem, but where these are neglected or ignored nothing is safe or secure. The Home is where children grow up; it is the center of their culture and schooling. The moral and spiritual atmosphere in which the child dwells has more to do with his character and training than all other influences combined. Moreover, home is where life's sweetest companionships are developed, where love and unselfishness are shared to most unmeasured lengths and where life is inspired to the highest and finest ambitions and undertakings. Or on the other hand it is the place of the most complete unhappiness, the most harmful influences, the cruellest selfishness and the basest ingratitude. There is no place on earth quite so strategic for the setting up of Christian standards, and very often there is no place that furnishes quite so severe a test of the genuineness of a Christian profession as the home.

The Christian profession requires obedience to civil law and respect for those in authority. Christ himself set the example and his followers are to follow in his steps. The Christian way is not to fear nor to ignore the law, but to live on such a high plane as to have no need of the law, even as a perfectly healthy man has no need of a doctor.

The Christian standard is one of peace. Strife and conflict, hatred and quarrelling, war and fighting and retaliation are forbidden by the Gospel principles of love and brotherly kindness, forbearance and forgiveness. Race and national prejudices are done away in him who "is our peace" and who came to preach peace to them "that were far off and peace to them that were nigh."

The Christian profession involves a vast stewardship—the stewardship of life and all that gives it value. Life and its talents, however humble, are sacred unto the Lord, and to him an accounting must be given. Time itself is a gift and we shall be held responsible for the way in which we spend even our leisure. No man is to exploit his fellowmen, but each is to treat his neighbor as a brother. Nor should men become grasping and forgetful of God. "But," as the Scripture says, "thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth."

In these and in many other phases of life's conduct the spirit and teaching of Christ must be thrust by those who are his professed followers, if the Christian profession is not to suffer discount because of them. May God give us the courage to accept the challenge of the Christian standards of life.

The Times Call for Sacrifice

One of two things is certain—either the Lord's work must be sacrificed or the Lord's people must sacrifice. People cannot be asked to give out of their abundance, because they do not have an abundance. They dare not be asked to give what they can afford to give, for all too many of them cannot really "afford" to give anything, and none of them can "afford" much. That kind of giving would soon bring the work of the church to grief. The plain fact is that the people cannot "afford", judging from every human angle, to give what the church needs and must have, in order that the Lord's work may not suffer. That is about as much as we ever have given—what we could handily afford. Seldom have we given until it hurt. A few have made sacrifices, but they were indeed comparatively few.

But the time has come when we must go deeper. We cannot stop with a mere convenient gift, or what we can really afford. We do not have enough money to supply our own every need and at the same time provide in the usual manner for the needs of the church of Christ. Either the church must be sacrificed or we must deny ourselves of many things and at the same time give to the point of sacrifice. There is no other alternative. The question for us to decide is, Where the sacrifice shall be made. And a good time to begin is at the Christmas season when we are being asked to give to the support of the work of the National Sunday School Association. We are being asked for "White Gifts," but a gift that costs nothing is not "white." This is especially true at this time. If our gifts are to be of the kind that the Great King will regard with love, they must be gifts of sacrifice. Only such gifts will be an honor to him on his birthday, and only such will meet the needs of the hour. The times call for sacrifice.

Fifty numbers of "The Evangelist" are published each year. Next week's issue being number fifty, we will not publish a paper on December 31st. Our next issue will be on January 7, 1933.

A recent communication from Brother A. L. Lynn carries the information that his work at the LaVerne, California, church continues to go strong. Every department of the church is active and faithful. A more detailed report is promised soon. We rejoice in Mrs. Lynn's improvement in health as reported last week.

Dr. J. Allen Miller has a word this week in the Brethren's Home Corner, and he re-echoes not merely the appeal of the need of that one institution, but of every general interest of the brotherhood. Those who are able should do their best to save the general institutions of the church, of which the Home at Flora is one that is in special need.

Brother C. D. Whitmer reminds Christian Endeavorers that December is "Service for Others" month. He makes a suggestion or two, and the president of the Endeavor Union, Brother Riddle, calls upon Endeavorers to cooperate in "White Gifts for the King" movement and thus promote the Young People's Training Camp at Shipshewana, where Christian Endeavor instruction has a prominent part.

Brother E. J. Rohart of Winchester, Virginia, writes of the Washington, D. C., revival in which he gave assistance as song leader and personal worker, and concerning which the pastor, Brother H. A. Kent, made report in last week's paper. Brother Rohart bears witness to the fine work being done in Washington by pastor and people, and it is evident that his experiences among them were very enjoyable.

A revival meeting was enjoyed at Mexico, Indiana, under the leadership of Brother George C. Pontius of West Alexandria, Ohio. The pastor of this church is Brother Mark B. Spacht, who reports two confessions of faith and two additions to the church by letter. He also says the membership was greatly strengthened and the community received a spiritual blessing through the ministry of Brother Pontius. Snow-blocked roads interfered with the attendance part of the time but the members were faithful. The various auxiliaries of the church are doing good work. This was an exchange meeting and at a later time Brother Spacht is to go to West Alexandria to lead the church there in a campaign.

Brother C. A. Stewart reports a successful evangelistic campaign in his church at Bryan, Ohio, with himself doing the preaching and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Richer leading the singing. Eighteen confessions of faith were received. It is thought all but one will unite with the church. Great interest developed in the meetings, as is evidenced by the fact that the attendance continued good even when heavy snow made going difficult. The meetings were preceded by much prayer. That is always to be found the key that unlocks the power of God. Also the pastor remarks about the co-operation and harmony that prevails in the church. God can honor a people with such a spirit.

In the Goshen, Indiana, church calendar we read, "Our Bible school is showing a decided average increase in every way." We also notice that their Laymen's Organization recently had charge of the evening church service. It appears that these good Brethren are not only maintaining their religious activity unabated in these trying times, but are also taking care of their financial responsibilities, particularly, we notice, with regard to their building indebtedness. God will bless the churches that take courage, do their best and trust in God. No one is in so bad a plight as he who has lost courage and no longer has any enthusiasm for his task. May all the churches be kept from such a situation.

Brother Norman H. Uphouse, student pastor of the church at Glenford, Ohio, writes an interesting letter concerning the Lord's work at that place, and out of discouragement and inactivity there has sprung up under his leadership activity and hope. He is giving special attention to the development of the young people through Christian Endeavor. The Sunday school work is also increasing. Some special events have added interest to the work; among these were the services of Dean Miller on one Sunday and later a brief series of evangelistic meetings by an Ashland Gospel Team. As a result of these meetings four accepted Christ as their Savior.

"Undaunted Hope", the new missionary book written by Dr. Florence Newberry Gribble, should be in every Brethren home and may be had for $1.65, the bare cost of publication. Send your order to Dr. Louis S. Bauman, 1925 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California. A goodly number of books have already been mailed. While the book deals with the beginnings of the Brethren mission in Africa, yet it is primarily the life story of the late Brother James S. Gribble and that will be found interesting to all missionary-minded people, whether Brethren or not. So the field for the distribution of the book ought to be much larger than the membership of the Brethren church. Any readers of the Evangelist will be justified, therefore, in seeking to interest their Christian friends of other churches in Dr. Gribble's book.

Brother J. Milton Bowman pastor of the Calvary church in New Jersey, writes that they did not find events and spirit of the recent political campaign conducive to successful revival effort, nevertheless evangelistic meetings under the leadership of his father, Brother I. D. Bowman, resulted in eleven confessions, ten of which persons were received into the church by baptism. This is counted a real victory for the Calvary field. He states also that during the meetings his ordination to the ministry took place. We congratulate our young Brother Bowman on having been honored of the Lord with the high privilege of preaching and on having been ordained by the hands of men to that sacred calling. We bespeak his welcome by the Evangelist family to our ministerial ranks, and pray that he may be inspired by the noble example of his worthy father, who has preached the Gospel with such fidelity and sacrifice for more than fifty years.

We want to re-echo the appeal of the secretary-treasurer of the National Home Mission Board to all churches making contributions, to send their offerings in as promptly as possible. The Sunday before Thanksgiving was the time set for the lifting of an offering for National Home Missions. In case that Sunday did not suit local conveniences, the Sunday following, or as soon as possible thereafter, the churches were asked to make their offerings. Very likely some churches have not yet taken their offerings, but this duty should be taken care of as soon as possible, and the money sent promptly to Brother R. Paul Miller, Berne, Indiana. No church should take a cash offering for Home Missions, or for any other specific purpose and keep the money in the local treasury for several weeks, thereby running the risk of its being used for some other purpose. Churches have been known to fall into such a misappropriation of funds inadvertently. The proper thing is to make remittances promptly.

GREATER VALUE FOR NEXT YEAR

The first of the new year, according to an announcement made some time ago, we are counting on beginning a series of articles in the Bible Study Department by Dr. L. S. Bauman on the general theme: "Spirits and the Spirit World." It will be a real addition to the present strength of the Evangelist's weekly message and will warrant our friends in putting forth still stronger effort to extend the circulation of our church paper. Considerable interest is being displayed in anticipation of the "Ministers' Editorial Page", not a substitute for the Editor's department, but a new addition. Also Mr. Robert Kline, organist of the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, and of our Dayton Brethren church, has promised a series of articles on Music and some of the Grand Old Hymns of the Church. Prof. Stuckey will continue his "Miniature Studies in the Divine Library", and Prof. McClain will continue his popular "Signs of the Times." You cannot afford to permit your friends to be without The Brethren Evangelist. And we have not told half the story of the good things to come. Many other leaders in the brotherhood will cooperate in an endeavor to add to the value of the paper. We shall be glad to cooperate with any one who contemplates making a canvass for either new or renewal subscriptions, by sending sample copies for free distribution. New subscribers in clubs of 5 or more, $1.25 each, cash. You can renew your Honor Roll now at $1.35 each, cash with order. These are the lowest prices ever offered, and they are good only till the last of January, 1933.

Gifts for the King

By Rev. S. M. Whetstone, Administration Division Sup't.

As we approach the Christmas season it is quite natural that we think of giving our gifts, for it has long been a great season of joy and gladness. It is a day that is long looked for. Great plans are made for its celebration. A vast sum of money is spent each year in an attempt to bring "good cheer" to many. I would be the last one to seek to rob the day of any of its joy and happiness. Yet, some questions come before me regarding the season—as we keep it. Has not the Christmas very largely lost its real meaning? Is there not something wrong about our way of celebrating Christmas? Keep these questions before you as we consider together the gospel record of that first Christmas. Matthew and Luke are the two gospel writers who give us in detail this first Christmas long, long ago. Of these two, it is Matthew who tells us the story of the wisemen from the east who followed the star that led them to the infant Christ. Matthew says, "when they found him, they gave him gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh."

This Christmas season is a good time to refresh our minds in matters which are important. As we face the original Christmas we must admit that we have lost sight of the ideals of the day as it relates to Christian people. These wise-men have left us an example which should prompt us in the matter of giving gifts. Here it is: "they gave HIM gifts." Perhaps their giving was prompted by two motives: It was a recognition of ROYALTY. In the Orient, no one approaches a king without a gift. It was a tribute royalty expected. Giving their gifts was an ACT OF WORSHIP. They stood before a Divine King. Real worship includes giving. The Psalmist recognized this: "Bring an offering, and come into his courts." Any worship of God which does not include sacrificial giving is an imperfect worship. Is it not a fact that too often we have made Christmas a season of LAVISH EXPENDITURE, and of wholesale GIVING and GETTING? To much we have worshipped "The Happy St. Nicholas." Too little we have bowed in adoration before the King. Too often we have made Christmas a season of "giving" with the definite expectation of "getting" in return.

Our Lord has asked this question, "And if you do good to them that do good to you, what thank have you? Even sinners, give to sinners, to receive again as much." Yet is it not that very spirit that prompts much of our "giving" each Christmas? What a pity that we should commercialize our Lord's birthday. It is too bad that with the tremendous sum of money spent for Christmas that so little of it is given to Christ, whose birthday it is. Notice the Wise-men as they bring their gifts to the King: First, they gave gifts TO CHRIST. Second, they expected no gift in return. Third, they gave because of LOVE, LOYALTY and DEVOTION. Let us follow closely as they bring their gifts and see what we can learn.

1.

THE GIFT OF SUBSTANCE. "And they offered unto him . . . GOLD." It was a necessary gift. Joseph and Mary were poor humble parents who were entrusted with the safety and rearing of the divine child. Herod will soon make his evil power felt and the flight into Egypt will be necessary. This would entail expense and the gold was imperative. Here we have illustrated before us the necessity of giving to the Lord's cause today. It is entirely in line with God's method of working. Of course he could have performed a miracle and produced any amount of gold for the comfort of his own Son, but God does not do things that way. He chooses to use man's help. Our Lord needs money today for his work, and that money must come from those who worship him "in spirit and in truth." The far reaching work of the Church depends absolutely upon the gifts of gold from its members. That this work is important, no one will deny. This is the one cause that can save this world, the Church of Jesus Christ. It is the one cause that deserves the most, yet gets the least.

2.

THE GIFT OF SERVICE. Valuable as is the gift of substance, the gift of service is even more so. Frankincense stands for service; used on the altar as a symbol of willingness to serve. If there was ever a time when Christian people should bring to the altar their lives in service, that time is now. What a day to let your light shine! What a time to dedicate your talents to God! What a challenge world conditions offer the real man of God!

Our Church will be tremendously handicapped unless you offer your gift of SERVICE this Christmas.

3.

THE GIFT OF SELF. Myrrh represents ENTIRE DEVOTION. The gift of self is greatest of all, for it is fundamental. Without giving their whole-hearted allegiance, they never would have given their gold and frankincense. Can it be that we do not give our substance and service because we have not given ourselves FULLY?

As we, at this Christmas, stand at the cradle of the new-born Babe, may it be a time of profound heart-searching. May we look within our own hearts and make an honest examination. What did I really give Christ when I made that vow and united with his Church? What did it all amount to? Hear the words of our Lord, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." That is the kind of a gift we need to make this Christmas. This first Christmas was a GIVING, not a "getting" Christmas. It was a perfect celebration.

Your National Sunday School Association comes to you at this season with just that very kind of an appeal: the gift of SELF, SUBSTANCE and SERVICE. We appeal to you to be mindful of whose birthday it is and remember him in your gifts. Your material gifts are needed to help us in continuing our program of work. Your gift of service is needed, oh so badly. Your gift of self is the greatest need before you. Make this a worthwhile Christmas by bringing your gifts to the King.

Goshen, Indiana.

---

Make your Christmas Gift a worthy expression of your love for the King.

---

The Necessity of Educational Work in Missions

By Miles Taber

As Matthew closes his account of the earthly life of our Lord, he leaves ringing in our ears a command which, because of its importance, has been called "the great commission." In it we are reminded that it is not enough to worship the Babe of Bethlehem; we must also obey the risen Master of Galilee. When this command was given the disciples were worshipping Jesus, but he said "All authority hath been given unto me ... go ... make disciples ... baptizing ... teaching." Long before this Saul had lost a great kingdom—and more—because he failed to realize that "to obey is better than sacrifice." We miss the spirit of Christmas if we worship, but do not obey. On the first Christmas day the angels announced the new-born babe as "Lord." If Jesus is worthy of our adoration, he has a right to demand our obedience. God wants "doers of the Word."

In this command of Jesus I find the only reason we need for educational work in missions. There are other reasons, of course. Churches without an educational program die. Missions which do not train young native workers to lead the church in the next generation must repeat the work themselves for each generation. But why seek for reasons to justify this educational work when we have a command from one who has "all authority?" We have no choice in the matter: we have only to obey.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!

Was there a man dismayed?

Not though the soldier knew

Some one had blundered:

Theirs not to make reply,

Theirs not to reason why.

Theirs but to do and die:

Into the valley of Death

Rode the six hundred."

Thus Tennyson vividly describes the characteristic loyalty of the soldier to his commander, even when the latter has blundered. Our Captain has not blundered; but he has commanded. Who will obey?

Many missionary enthusiasts apparently do not read all of their orders. I find four distinct commands in this commission: "Go ... make disciples ... baptizing ... teaching." As to which of these is more important, there is no need to argue. Each of them is a part of the command. To go, disciple and baptize is not to obey the orders. Evangelism is not the sole work of missions either at home or abroad. Altogether too many "converts" have been lost simply because they have been converted (apparently) and baptized, but have been left untaught. The church neglects her teaching task to her own peril, and no one understood this better than Jesus. He realized its importance, so he commanded that it should be done. Whether we are all so fully convinced of its importance or not, we must keep his commandments.

Of course the teaching that Jesus commanded is not the mere imparting of knowledge, it is "teaching them to observe." It is not teaching them to know something, but to do something. It is not the training of intellect alone, but a training of behavior. Certainly men must know the commandments before they can observe them, but the ultimate aim of this teaching program must always be obedience. We have failed too often on this point. Children are taught Bible stories, but their lives are unchanged. I have known people who have had an unusual speculative interest in the subject of prophecy, an interest prompted by curiosity and a desire to hear some new thing, and yet they knew nothing of a purifying hope. "If ye know these things, blessed are ye if ye do them." The blessing comes only in the doing. The necessity of this kind of a teaching program in missionary work can not be questioned. Jesus commanded it. Your National Sunday School Association exists as a channel through which you may do it.

This task is world-wide in its scope: it includes "all the nations." We cannot confine our efforts to our own Sunday school, our own church, or our own nation. The command is not modified by circumstances. The work of teaching all the nations, even in this year of depression, is ours. That is why the Sunday school officers, though forced to reduce the budget for this year, could not omit the teaching of those outside our own nation. And you, Christian readers, are under the same marching orders. The largest item in this year's budget is for Ashland Seminary where most of our teaching missionaries are trained. Of the remaining portion of the budget, more than 25% is placed in the hands of the Foreign Mission Board for strictly educational work in Africa and South America. Thus we are endeavoring to teach all the nations.

This task is comprehensive: it includes "all things whatsoever I commanded you." This fact presents a tremendous challenge to the Brethren Church. I am narrow enough to believe that if this part of the commission is to be fulfilled, the Brethren Church must fulfill it. We cannot expect our distinctive doctrines and ordinances to be taught by those who do not believe in them. To put it briefly, but plainly, it is a question as to whether the converts in the mission fields are to be taught to observe all things that Jesus commanded, or only part of them. And the Brethren Church alone must answer that question.

This task continues as an obligation upon us throughout this present age. For, to the consummation of the age, the presence of Jesus Christ is promised to us only when we are obeying this commission. Even in the last dark hour of this age, he will still be with us "all the days" in this teaching work. We are not asked to work alone: the great Teacher is with us.

The word "all" occurs four times in this short commission. It summarizes for us this command to teach: (1) All authority, our reason for teaching; (2) All the nations, the people to be taught; (3) All things whatsoever I commanded you, the subject to be taught; (4) All the days, the time in which to teach, if we would enjoy the Savior's presence. Brethren, these are our orders, and it remains for us to add a fifth "all"—that we all shall obey.

Leon, Iowa.

---

Not amount but devotion determines the whiteness of your gift

---

Some Benefits of a Teacher Training Course in a Brethren Sunday School

By Rev. Homer A. Kent, Home Department Sup't.

One of the most important duties of every church and church school is the duty of training the teachers who are to compose the teaching staff of the school. The person who offers to teach in the Sunday school faces the most important work in the world, namely, that of instructing immortal souls in respect to their relationship with God. Thus the office of the teacher cannot be overestimated. If this is so it appeals to us by every reason that the teacher should have the best possible preparation for such an important calling.

But where are these teachers to receive this preparation? Most of them have not had the advantages of Seminary or Bible Institute training, nor is it possible for them to get such training. About the only satisfactory place for them to get it is in the church itself under the supervision of the best possible leadership. The teacher training class, therefore, has come to be the answer to the need for better trained teachers in our Sunday schools. Surely it should be the goal of every Sunday school to make provision in some adequate way for the training of its teaching force. Only by so doing shall we most efficiently discharge the task resting upon our schools.

Many benefits suggest themselves as coming from Teacher-Training. For one thing, it gives the school in a very definite sense the control of the type of teaching that shall be taught in the school. Every school ought to be vitally interested at this point. It ought to be known what sort of teaching the scholars are receiving from Sunday to Sunday. The training class, if it is of the right sort, will end to eliminate faulty teaching. It will raise the standard of teaching and make the school a better school.

Such a class will help the prospective teachers to gain a more comprehensive view of their task, or better, their calling. It will help them to see what the Sunday school is for, and what the teacher is for, and knowing these things they shall the better be able to relate themselves to the great work that is before them. It is tragic how limited is the view of many of those who are attempting to teach in many of our schools today. There is no true conception of the calling and work of a teacher. The church and its school should seek to overcome this lack. It can be done in a large measure by carefully supervised Teacher-Training.

Teacher-Training enables the prospective teacher to know what to teach. Some have thought that consecration or willingness is all that is necessary to make a good teacher. Certainly, that is necessary. Without it the teacher will fail. But some very consecrated folks have made very poor teachers, because they did not know their Bibles or the simplest principles of effective teaching. The ideal is consecration plus preparation. The Training class in the school proposes to provide, in a measure at least, the knowledge of what to teach. It aims to give a working knowledge of the Bible so that the teacher can explain God's plan for men today and stand before his or her class with a "Thus saith the Lord." Obtaining such knowledge requires study and the quickest and easiest way to be sure that the whole teaching force of the school has this knowledge is to provide a class which has for its purpose the giving of this knowledge.

Not only does such a class help the teacher to know what to teach; it also enables him or her to know how to teach. Just as well not teach at all if we cannot get our message home. There are certain principles in teaching which if they were recognized would aid greatly in making the ministry of the teacher far more effective. These principles are employed in public school teaching. Jesus employed them in his teaching. Using them makes teaching interesting, and not drudgery as too often it has become in our Sunday school work. Teacher-Training seeks to point out these principles and thus to show how teachers can get their message into the hearts of those whom they teach.

Furthermore, Teacher-Training tends to exalt the office of the teacher in the eyes of the scholars of the school. The position of the teacher assumes more honor and dignity when it becomes known that he or she has given special attention to the matter of preparing to be a teacher. If the public school teacher must have some definite preparation for teaching secular things, should it not be expected that there shall be some equally definite preparation for the teaching of the things of God and of the soul. It is the aim of Teacher-Training to provide such training. Many thinking people these days are not sending their children to the nearest Sunday school in the community nor going there themselves. They are seeking out the Sunday school where they can receive the best Biblical teaching. Brethren schools will want to be of the latter sort.

Finally, Teacher-Training will bring about a greater faithfulness on the part of the teaching staff of the school. When teachers have given themselves to preparation for their work, and have come to see the importance of that work, it is sure to result in a fuller devotion and faithfulness. Many other benefits resulting from Teacher-Training in the Sunday school might be mentioned but these suggested will suffice to show its importance. Success will crown the efforts of that school which will give due attention to the training of its teaching staff.

Washington, D. C.

---

The Christian's love for his Savior will halt at no sacrifice

---

The White Gift of Youth

By George H. Jones, Pastor Second Johnstown Church

Almost a generation ago a noted bishop called the attention of the church to what he termed, "the most alarming sign of decadence in the Protestant world." It was the two streams of humanity entering and leaving the church at the close of the Sunday school session. The one stream was the youth, with a liberal sprinkling of adults, leaving the church after the Sunday school lesson, and the other, a much smaller stream, of adults entering the church for the preaching services. The departing stream of youth has now matured into the present generation, and many of the churches are showing the effects of the drain. The great pity is in the fact that we failed to devise a method of obstructing the stream and constructing a dam to hold the flood. Only one out of three, of that stream of youth, is related to the church today.

Children gladly come to Sunday school with but little encouragement. Youth has a thousand attractions to keep it away. Organized and commercialized recreation provides games, pleasures and pastimes beyond comprehension, to enlist increasing numbers of young men and women. Leisure time is increasing for workers in all trades, the church needs no excuse to make additional demands, when the world is bidding for this leisure. It may with grace ask for more time than it has been getting. The gift of time is within the range of all, great or small, young or old.

The White Gift of a life is the day of its childhood. The greatest offering a church can receive is the consecration and dedication of her children. The parents may be prevailed upon to make the one; the child must be encouraged to make the other. No better White Gift could grace a church service than this. White Gifts are the only kind that prosper the Cause. Just as the early church spread abroad in power, due to the wonderful spirit of giving, so the Kingdom waits in power for the giving that measures up to apostolic standards. The gift of a life is the greatest gift of all. The gift of money that has no taint of selfishness, is a timely investment, the need is pressing, the opportunity passing, but the gift that made the angels sing, was the gift that the Heavenly Father gave on the first Christmas night so long ago. That gift was so unselfish, that the whiteness of its purity has never been questioned.

The White Gifts we consider today are possible in terms of Time, Money and Life. Jesus gave many gifts to men. Without exception the spirit determined the character of the gift. They were given for various purposes, each in its turn the needful one of the moment and in the eyes of the Master, the best for the recipient. If we had his wisdom, we would make no mistakes, but being human—and sinful,—our mistakes are many. We are permitted to make some comparisons, with the thought of choosing the best and with this in mind let us not forget the best.

White Gifts are such only as the life sanctifies the gift. The spirit determines the nature of the gift. Illustrations of this fact are the treasured traditions of the church. The Old and New Testaments abound in instances. It is a common mistake to take credit for service and substance, when after all so much self-interest actuated us that to every one but ourselves, such giving was obvious. How often a liberal soul so-called is only a shrewd Jacob, functioning in modern life. There can be no liberal giving of substance, acceptable with God, without intelligent understanding of the need of the gift. Nor can there be acceptable giving in the Kingdom with sordid spirit of exchange. This principle is just as true as that long-contended one, "To obey is better than sacrifice."

White Gifts are those without taint. No story better illustrates this fact than the old German fairy story of the Key Flower. The story is familiar to all who have read the folk tales of Germany. The shepherd boy has discovered the long dreamed of Key Flower. A flower, so the legend ran, that when found, would open the cave chamber where treasures beyond the dreams of a king were gathered. He found a modest little flower, strange of shape and color, but one which when plucked opened for the finder a door to this enchanted cave. The door was there, in the hillside, before his very eyes. The open door discovered the aged guardian, patriarchal and kindly, beckoning and inviting the intruder to take freely, but, DO NOT FORGET THE BEST. In the greed for more, and yet more, the flower, with its power, was laid carefully upon the table in front of the aged keeper, whose monotonous sentence kept stirring the shepherd boy into greater exertions to carry away the best. With the voice of the keeper still ringing in his ears with its warning note, he staggered out into the open air, only to find his treasure and even the very door and cave vanish from sight, as he crossed the threshold. He had forgotten the best. The Key Flower was still on the table.

In the White Gift of Youth with its fragrance of childhood and its potential force a problem, the Church has forgotten the best. The vanishing youth has too often carried away the dynamic energy and enthusiasm that belong to youth, and other institutions and organizations have been the benefactors. How shall we restore the lost dynamic? We had the interest of the child, how did we lose him? There is a gap between the eager spirit of the child and the mature interest of the adult that the church has failed to bridge. The stream flows on and the exits to the Sunday school rooms are still sending out their streams of youth to a world that needs the White Gift of Youth to solve its problems and purify its waters of iniquity. But the Church must purify its spirit.

How splendid are the achievements of youth in the Kingdom fields of service. The fervor and abandon, the will to go anywhere and sacrifice anything, is more the offering of youth than of age. Stagnation is often the penalty where youth has been neglected. The doubts that assail them, the questions that confront them, the temptations that beset them, the misunderstandings that thwart them, the emotional upheavals that they grow into, the daring that belongs to their age, what a field of future power is open to the idealist who follows Jesus. The Church is waiting and waiting to conquer when provision is made to cultivate these fields of rich spiritual possibilities.

Difficulties are there, but what conquests await the explorer. The Sunday school and the Church have been jockeyed into a false position by public schools having social habits objectionable to Christian teaching; the movies with their owners mostly Jew and Catholic; worldly-minded men and women having an antipathy toward genuine Christianity; and by those whose appetites must be satisfied, whether it be of a fleshly nature or financial. Ridicule, misrepresentation, falsehood and sarcasm are aimed at the clean habits and ideals of the follower of Christ, until many, if not most, young people of the church have to apologize for self-restraint.

May we regain our lost dynamic? Shall we teach our youth to proudly claim membership in a Sunday school? To militantly answer a sneer, that cigarette smoking is a sign of silliness? To honestly pity, with no attempt to hide, their scorn for the roadhouse habit? To refrain from vulgar playhouses, with an honest attitude of fear of the filth displayed by degenerate movie stars? To face the doubtful things of today with the old crusading spirit of Jesus? There will be no conquests of permanent worth without his presence; no progress, without his leadership; no higher levels of living, without his standards; and no stability, without his teaching. Chaos will always come where there is no Christ. We have been long in learning this, but as the world has tried every nostrum of political expedient, we may be approaching the time when a better hearing may be given to the Church.

Our White Gifts of 1932 may surpass those of other years, if more of the spirit of the first earthly Christmas is permitted to permeate the Church of Christ. This is not only a matter of our Heavenly Father's desire, this has always been so, but is altogether a matter of personal choice on the part of individual believers, among whom are those of us who read this message. A great crisis calls for great sacrifices. This is the time; may it bring great response. Greater numbers of youth than ever before are loyally meeting the challenge of the day; may this challenge of our Board be met in the spirit in which it is issued and may our youth as never before rise to the occasion so urgently presented.

Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

---

Honor the King by a Gift to his work.

---

Our White Gift and Our Seminary

By Dr. K. M. Monroe

This year the National Sunday School Association gives twenty-one hundred dollars toward the upkeep of our Seminary. Two thousand is used to maintain the Chair of Christian Education, occupied by Professor M. A. Stuckey, and one hundred dollars is contributed to the seminary library fund. Do the accomplishments of the seminary justify these budget items? Should they be inserted in next year's budget? Every reader of the Evangelist has a right to form his own opinion, if enlightened by the facts, and give accordingly. Let us consider some things our seminary is doing.

At present we have eighteen young men in our graduate school studying for the ministry or the mission field. These men already have their college work but, being "ambitious for Christ" and our Church, they are glad to give three more years of their lives to definite study of the Word. Also we have seven special students, including several wives of our graduate men.

Most of our seminary men are holding regular charges and the faculty receives abundant testimony to their ability in the pulpit, in pastoral visitation, and in conducting the affairs of their churches. We are glad to report a deepening of spiritual life, an increased passion for souls, a lack of professionalism, and a sincerity of purpose on the part of the seminary students this year.

The tools of the theolog are books and, although all agree with the author of Ecclesiastes when he says "much study is a weariness of the flesh," there is a joy and inspiration in reading after those who love and honor the Word and seek to discern its meaning. Although our seminary library accession number is above thirty-three hundred there are many books which, if we could procure them, would be exceedingly valuable in theological discipline.

The members of the seminary faculty have been called upon for Bible Conference, Sunday School Institute, and special day work. Professor Stuckey was called this fall to represent the Sunday School Board at the Mid-West Conference and to Philadelphia for Institute work. The first week in January he is to deliver the messages for our Ashland week of prayer, which is to be a united effort on the part of all the churches of the city. The messages will be delivered in one of the down town churches. Dr. Miller has been called on several times for special services. Dean Miller gave the Homecoming address at Rittman and Glenford and preached at Smithville. Now he teaches a Wednesday-evening Bible class on the "Life of Christ." Six Church of the Brethren churches have united for this school and about seventy-five persons are attending. Professor McClain spoke at the Pennsylvania Conference, and recently was the main speaker in a week end Bible Conference held in the Calvary Baptist church of Sandusky, Ohio. The pastor of the church was a student of Brother McClain in the Philadelphia Bible School. Your writer represented the National Sunday School Association at the Indiana Conference and conducted a Bible Conference Week in our Dayton church, delivering ten lectures on the Epistle to the Hebrews.

The seminary fosters in the college a men's and a girls' gospel team. Mr. J. P. Dowdy is president of one, and Miss Ruth Snyder of the other. Sixteen men are active and twenty-eight girls. The men sent teams to Danville, Hayesville, Shelby and Glenford, Ohio; held a week's meeting at Rome, Ohio, and sent a team Thanksgiving vacation to Berne, Indiana. The girls have sent teams to Mt. Gilead, Reedsburg, and Fairhaven, Ohio. A girls' team composed of R. Snyder, L. Carter, F. Cobaugh, M. Ashman, V. Smith and C. Robertson will conduct seven meetings in Johnstown the week between Christmas and New Year's; first church, two meetings; third church, three, one at Conemaugh and one at Vinco.

Mr. Carl Garling and Mr. James Sutherland, both members of the Boys' Gospel Team, have rendered a particular service for our Mt. Zion, Ohio, church which had been boarded up for three years. These young men drive over two hundred miles to conduct services there every other Sunday, with Mr. Garling preaching and Mr. Sutherland taking care of the music. Recently an organization has been effected. The morning attendance ranges around thirty and the evening over fifty.

The California Quartet composed of three seminary men, P. Bauman, D. Carter, E. Pine, and one college man, E. Colburn, sang at our National Conference, conducted a Sunday evening service at our Dayton church recently, and now are planning for two weeks of evangelistic services at Leon, Iowa, beginning Christmas. They will have charge of both singing and preaching in Brother Miles Taber's church.

Though we might go on to delineate other extra-curricular activities of our seminary we shall cease and again ask you, "Is the work worth while?" Knowing you will answer in the affirmative, we ask you to do your part in making possible the National Sunday School contribution of twenty-one hundred dollars to the cause, by putting all you can in the White Gift Offering Envelope Christmas day.

---

Will you venture to give according to the measure of God's Gifts?

---

Christian Endeavorers and the Shipshewana Camp

By Rev. E. M. Riddle, National C. E. President

The training of our young people for Christian work is one of our very great privileges as a church. They have been entrusted to our care and direction. Whether they will be able to enlist their life in service at more than 30 or 60 percent, depends much upon how they are trained. No other organization apart from us is training Brethren young people, no other church is doing it, neither can we expect them to do so, it is our task to teach them to serve in our church groups.

The Shipshewana camp is a strong feature in our summer Sunday school program. The small investment made each year by the National Sunday School Association to touch so many lives, is mightily worth while. The Endeavor leaders have appreciated so much the opportunity to bring into the camp the Leadership Training Course.

The writer has been the instructor in this camp for the Leadership Training Course for six years. These classes have varied from 30 to 106 enrollment. It is truly a preparation for action and expression in the local church. Salesmen specialize in their field, with a course that reveals the HOW of their business. Every tradesman learns his job. Why should not a Christian worker become acquainted with his task? What church in our brotherhood could not use a few more trained workers? This is the very problem that Shipshewana camp seeks to solve.

We have noted already some positive evidence of the returns from such training. Some who entered this course three and four years ago are now serving their own society as officers and in a few cases these young folks are serving as officers in the church. The returns to the local church can hardly be otherwise than gratifying.

Our course requires three years, (one week in each year) to become an Expert Endeavorer). A card of recognition is granted each year, if satisfactory work is done. When three cards have been earned, then the names are sent to the International Society of Christian Endeavor and they forward the C. E. Expert card, granting the holder the right to wear an Expert pin.

I should like to recommend that every Endeavorer in the Brethren Church have some part in the White Gift offering this year, knowing that some part of the gift is used to assist the Summer Young People's Camp.

Waterloo, Iowa.

---

The Christian's love for his Savior will halt at no sacrifice

---

W. I. OUKER,
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N

-MAGAZINE SECTION-

M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR,
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN,
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH,
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

His Story, The Same Yesterday, Today and Forever

By Miss Hazel Keiser, Children's Div. Sup't.

In Bethel's lowly manger
A Baby once was born:
To some he was a stranger,
They had not watched that morn.

But some had watched the starlight,
An angel had told;
"The Baby came at midnight,
As prophesied of old."

He was no common baby,
He for world's sins was sent,
His life endangered maybe,
But he on goodness bent.

No kind deeds were slow-coming,
All of his life he gave.
Each act for others num'ring,
That sinners he might save.

His years, just three and thirty
Were filled with service grand;
The "Son of Man" was worthy
Of praise from every land.

The Father called him upward.
But just before he went,
His final "go ye" uttered,
Disciples forth he sent.

And to us all who follow,
This order did he give,
To take his message always,
That everyone may live.

This is Redemption's story—
For them who will obey.
"A perfect home in Glory,
Eternal life for aye."

How dare we fail to render
This service grand and true;
We have this work to tender—
We have this work to do.

For those who need the message
We must the teachers send,
For this is not mere adage,
It is true Life we lend.

A glorious crown is waiting—
A lasting crown, and more,
For us who put high rating,
And go as those of yore.

E'en though our load be heavy,
E'en though the duties sore,
E'en though the tasks are plenty,
Neglect will doom a score.

These days seem full of sorrow,
These days seem weighted down,
E'en thoughts of coming morrow
So often bring a frown.

But why look to the earthy?
There's greater outlook, child.
For every one who's worthy
His name's in Heaven filed.

So give until your giving
Hurts you, repeat it o'er;
That's all there is in living,—
Make Christmas felt by more.

For Christmas, time of giving,
Originally came through him.
There's only once for living,
Go, ere life's light grows dim!

Jesus,—the same yesterday, today and forever! Salvation's Story,—the same yesterday, today and forever.

One act guaranteed the whole plan of God. Once upon a time Heaven came down to earth. Perfection came, in definite contact with imperfection. The Son of God entered earth's sphere in humiliation as the Son of Man. The heavenly was put off for the carnal. The whole sacrifice was made willingly by act of God, for weak humanity of that generation and all generations which were to follow. Yes, this sacrifice of Heaven was performed for you and me and all of this present age. Heaven's loss was not enough. Satan's dominion over earth and heaven was allowed that the conquering power of God might be shown up the greater.

A crucial time had come. Jesus, the Son from Heaven, was called upon to kneel to the demands of righteousness because of Satan and sin. The sin of the whole world demanded of him his life. God knew that was the only hope for the world, so he allowed it. But he allowed it only with the assurance of receiving Christ back to him and heaven again. Jesus had prayed, "Father, if it please thee, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless, not my will but thine be done." So God willed that Innocence should take on the sin of death. That, however, did not end all.

Again Heaven opened, but this time not to empty itself. It now claimed for itself more than it had sacrificed; it claimed Jesus home again, the redeemed saints who were to follow, and the glorious victory over Satan and his cohorts. Only the Spirit, himself, was missing from Heaven. This God understood. Christ had called disciples, before returning to the Father, sending them out to preach and teach "after that the Holy Spirit had come upon them" and filled them. He, the Holy Spirit, would lead them out to spread the "Good News", first in Jerusalem, then in Judea, and finally into the uttermost parts of the world. This same Jesus knew the vastness of God's great plan, therefore he demanded them to disciple all nations—to teach, preach and heal. In entirety, they were to fulfill the every need of humanity.

Each demand Christ followed with such promises as "and lo I am with you always"; "be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life", and "in my Father's house are many mansions, I go to prepare a place for you . . . and I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

With the reality of Christ's victory over Satan, and looking forward to the promised return, the disciples went forth with the "good news" and glad message of the return—"and this same Jesus shall come again" and "that where he is we may be also."

Since that day, millions have heeded the call and have passed on and are now awaiting the great resurrection day with the promises soon to be realized. But these did not sail through life on flowery beds of ease. Their faith enabled them to bear severe persecutions, in some cases to suffer death, in other cases to leave possessions and home and friends and seek for a place of freedom of worship. Such was the case of the Puritans, who, traveling in search of a land of freedom of worship, settled in our own fair country. A new country and a new people were called forth to the service of the Master. Christ's promises extended on across the waters to us. In all the ages while new lands have been enlightened, old lands have been neglected, until at present America stands foremost among enlightened nations. We were being enlightened while workers for Christ in olden countries were being killed, or driven away by Satan's powers. But meanwhile, God's light has lived on, and his light has gleamed forth into the midst of the wickedness and superstitions of the world. To the few faithful who have gone out to fight these heathen superstitions, shall we not stand true? Or shall we let them fight alone for God and the right, and just be satisfied that we ourselves know Christ? Shall we leave them to fight alone until through weakness of the flesh they too will faint along the way? Our nation has been Christianized. Shall we be satisfied and let other nations die in sin? You may say, "There is plenty to do at home, why bother with them until all here are saved?" Christ says if you preach and they hear not the gospel, shake the dust from off your feet and take the message of salvation on to others. He also said it is not enough until all have heard his message—out to the uttermost parts of the earth. Some others may be saying, "But during these times of depression, finances will not allow the sending of so many teachers at so great expense." To this Christ replies that we must seek first the kingdom and all other things will be added unto us. He also warns us that as his followers we should take no thought for the morrow, what we shall wear or what we shall eat, since all that is in his hands.

His final promise safeguards everything.—"lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Considering this, with his assurance that all things are possible to them that believe, we should send out missionaries with more anxiety than ever. For the testings of the hardest times will most fully prove the certainty of Christ our Redeemer as victor. Let us take courage in this depression year, and go out to the far corners and prove our Christ and his power over the Satanic forces of the earth. Probably God has allowed such a year as 1932-33 to more fully demonstrate his power and prove the faithfulness of his so-called followers. Probably this is the testing time for the gleaming of true from false followers. There sometimes seems to be no way for the world to know who is serious and who is a sham. Probably it is God's testing time.

God is the same yesterday, today and forever; all things are still possible even though the depression is on. Depression is never on with God. May we not prove God's ability over our own inability, by putting ourselves to the real test? For lo, the harvest is at hand, the fields are ripe but the laborers are few. Send ye forth laborers.

Bryan, Ohio.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

at the
Family Altar
with
Thoburn C. Lyon

GOD'S GIFT TO MAN—CHRISTMAS LESSON

(Lesson for December 25)

Lesson Text: Luke 2:8-20; Golden Text: John 3:16

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

God's Gift Given. Luke 2:1-7

The story that never grows old. A story so simple that it scarcely seems possible that around it have centered the highest thoughts and noblest endeavors of the human race. These were but peasant folks, enduring a journey of hardship by command of a Roman emperor, yet the holy child that was born of this virgin today wields wider sway than Augustus ever dreamed of, and shall yet be known as King of kings and Lord of lords. So was God's gift given, and today we love him because he first loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Let us praise him for his unspeakable gift!

TUESDAY

God's Gift Described. Luke 2:8-14

Just a babe lying in a manger, yet God in the flesh! There are some who object to speaking of our Lord by the name of Jesus alone, saying that it was merely his earthly name, and that we should speak of him rather as "Jesus, the Christ." But these forget that Jesus was no earthly name, for it was the angel who said: "And thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." He was born our Savior, the Christ of God. The angels could not understand this (1 Pet. 1:12), yet they sang praises unto him on the night of his birth. May the song of the angels re-echo in our hearts today!

WEDNESDAY

God's Gift Proclaimed. Luke 2:15-20

Well might we learn a lesson from those Bethlehem shepherds! Nothing doubting, they at once went to see this great thing which had come to pass. And when they had seen it, had come in direct contact with the Savior, they made known abroad the "good news," glorifying and praising God as they returned. Their daily duties thereafter may have been as prosaic as ever, but there must have been a joy in their hearts that they had not known before. May our hearts likewise be filled with the joy that comes from a personal knowledge of the Savior, for it is out of the abundance of the heart that the mouth speaketh.

THURSDAY

God's Gift Rejected. Luke 23:13-21

Words simply cannot express the tragedy of these few simple sentences. He came unto his own, the beings he had himself created, and his own received him not. Light was come into the world, but men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. God help us to realize the exceeding sinfulness of rejecting God's great gift! But the greatest wonder of all is that God, knowing that his gift would be rejected, yet loved sinful men so that he would send his Son to die for us, that we might have life! "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing."

FRIDAY

God's Gift Received. John 6:66-71

Although Jesus was rejected by his own nation, and is still rejected by the world at large, in every age there have been those that have received him, and have been given power to become the sons of God. True, they have been persecuted even as Christ was persecuted, but they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb; and the Lamb shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters. Read all of this blessed promise in Rev. 7:9-17.

SATURDAY

God's Gift to All. John 3:16-21

It seems needless to remind ourselves that God's gift was not for a favored few alone, but was intended for all; that it was his plan that we should bear the good news of his great gift to every land and nation. Yet it is well to remember this at Christmas. May we dedicate ourselves anew to this great labor of love for which he himself commissioned us!

SUNDAY

God's Gift, the Prince of Peace. Isa. 9:6, 7

Since the world rejected Jesus the world has known no peace. Today men's hearts are failing them for fear of conditions throughout the earth, and our only hope is in the coming again of the Prince of Peace. What comfort in the knowledge that the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this! Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. Lord, haste the day!

E. M. RIDDLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. G. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio
---	--	--

C. D. WHITMER, 217 E. Duell Ave., South Bend, Ind.

December—"Service for Others"

Plan Christmas Service.
Visitation Campaign.
Gifts of clothing or toys for orphanage or mission school.
Care for needy in your local community.
Fight tobacco and alcohol habits and evils.
Let us do everything we can this Christmas season to make others happy, and remind them of the service of our Great Master for us.
C. D. WHITMER.

PRAYER MEETING COMMITTEE RESPONSIBILITIES

By Inez Ludy

The plan of a Christian Endeavor society is to create Christian fellowship by playing together, working together, and worshipping together. The prayer meeting committee has a huge job before it in planning the majority of the gatherings of this group, the weekly prayer meetings.

This committee has the responsibility for appointing leaders for the meetings, selecting them a considerable length of time in advance. The committee should meet with the leaders of the month, some time ahead, to present to them the general outline of a meeting and to create the best spirit of worship and creative discussion.

The committee should be on the lookout for all forms of variety which might be included in the meeting to further the topic. Show appreciation for what is done by the leaders and by all the members of the society, be it ever so slight or so important a contribution.

It is the committee's responsibility to do all in its power to get others to take part in the meetings and to develop them from offering little additions to the place where they can take care of the most important details. Try to make each one, experienced or inexperienced, feel that he really belongs to the group and that a society feels the loss when he is not present.

The committee should promote attendance at the consecration meeting each month, and should work with the missionary committee to plan special meetings.—C. E. World.

Tucson, Arizona.

SCRIPTURE BACKGROUND FOR THE PLEDGE

By Wilma J. Thompson

For your consecration meeting give one of the key words or phrases of the pledge to each of the younger members. Ask them to quote the part of the pledge assigned to them, with a Scripture verse related to that part.

Some familiar verses that may be used are the following:

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength," Phil. 4:13.

"I promise," Ps. 61:8.

"Strive," Phil. 3:14.

"Whatever," John 15:14.

"To pray," Matt. 6:6.

"Read the Bible," Ps. 119:105.

"Support . . . my church," Ps. 100:2.

"As an active member," 2 Tim. 2:15.

"To lead a Christian life," Prov. 3:6.

Stuebenville, Ohio—C. E. World.

Get into sympathy with Jesus. Seek his presence, seek his help. And walking through the world in his company, you will be as balm in the bleakest weather, a benediction in the wildest scene.—James Hamilton.

If Christians are to live together, they will pray together; and united prayer is necessarily of an intercessory character, as being offered for each other and for the whole, and for self as one of the whole.—J. H. Newman.

Send Foreign Mission Funds to
LOUIS S. BAUMAN
 Financial Secretary Foreign Board
 1925 East 5th St.,
 Long Beach, California

MISSIONS

Send Home Missionary Funds to
R. PAUL MILLER
 Home Missionary Secretary
 Genee, Indiana

The Cobbler Who Became an Ambassador. I Cor. 1:27, 28

By W. O. Klopfenstein

(Continued from last week)

Desiring to utilize the advantages of his Fort Williams professorship as a means to the realization of his missionary vision, he announced to Marchman and Ward his intention to translate the Bible in all the chief languages of India. They entered into this plan most heartily, realizing that such advantages might never occur again. For this stupendous task Carey was peculiarly fitted both by natural endowment and providential training. In the course of the thirty years that followed more than 212,000 volumes of the sacred Scriptures in some thirty different languages came from the Mission press—Carey, the translator, and Ward, the printer. And, to lighten the labors of his successors, he prepared a number of grammars and dictionaries. He wrote grammars in Bengali, Marathi, Sanskrit, Panjabi, Telegu, and Kanarese. He compiled dictionaries in Bengali, Marathi, and Sanskrit, the former containing eighty thousand words and representing the labor of thirty years. Let it be remembered also, that in addition to these almost superhuman labors, Carey preached regularly and had a part in opening and maintaining some twenty stations in connection with the Mission. Then his wife, for five years helpless, died in 1809. His frequent letters to his three sons betray the jealous interest of a tender-hearted father. One son Felix though unusually gifted, was as unstable as water. Once a promising missionary, he accepted the position as Burmah's ambassador to Calcutta. His devoted father was horrified as though he had committed some crime and exclaimed, "Felix is shrivelled from a missionary into an ambassador."

On March 11, 1812, during Carey's absence, the Mission printing house was destroyed by fire. Many of his manuscripts and some of his completed translations were lost, though some of the presses were salvaged from the ruins. Their material loss alone was estimated at nearly $50,000. Friends in England repaired the loss in two months. Carey and his assistants set themselves to the task of reproducing the lost manuscripts, the translations improving by a second rendering.

Let it not be thought, however, that those immense labors were performed without opposition. The Serampore Mission was at first under the Danish flag. When later, the territory passed under British control, its very existence was threatened. The East India Company enjoyed a monopoly of control, and did not or could not, for political reasons, favor missionary effort. It was only after a long and heated battle in the British Parliament on the occasion of the renewal of the Company's charter, and through the untiring exertions of Andrew Fuller at the home base and the influence of the great Wilberforce in the House of Commons, that the situation was saved.

Convinced after twenty-five years in India that the task of evangelism must eventually fall upon trained native workers, Carey and his associates opened the Serampore College. Their curriculum was not limited to theology, but included related subjects, the knowledge of which they regarded as essential to an intelligent presentation of the Gospel.

But the marches of time are often cruel. In 1815, Andrew Fuller, the strong man who held the ropes at home, passed to his reward and new and younger hands eagerly grasped the reigns of administration to the unspeakable sorrow of the senior missionaries on the field. Moreover, the missionaries who had been sent out by the Society in recent years were imbued with the same spirit and chafed under the principles of self-denial to which Carey, Marshman, and Ward had voluntarily committed themselves. The home committee assumed dictatorial airs and endeavored to gain control of the Serampore properties. It was even insinuated that the three men were feathering nests for themselves and their families. Yet nothing could have been farther from the truth. Careys' professorship, Marshman's boarding schools, and Ward's printing business had contributed to the Mission during their incumbency the almost unbelievable sum of £68,000 ($340,000). Those misunderstandings cut deeply into the hearts of the three veterans. Considering that from the day of his appointment in 1793 to the day of his death, Carey did not receive more than $3,000 from the home committee, that he earned his own living as well as that of his family, and contributed something like $200,000 to the work in India, one's heart is touched when he replies to the cruel accusations by saying that after those many years of service he had not even laid aside a sum for his own burial!

It remains for us now to summarize briefly the events of his later years. During his long residence of forty years in India he never took a single furlough in England. At the age of seventy he was cheerful and happy, though emaciated by frequent fevers. He still continued his translation work, gave three lectures weekly at the College, and took his turn at preaching. His interest in India's welfare continued to the end of his life. Through his influence at least two infamous practices were stopped, namely, the casting of infants into the Ganges as an offering to the crocodiles, and the burning of widows with the bodies of their husbands. Shortly after his arrival in India he witnessed the burning of a widow; he then and there dedicated himself to the task of abolishing that gross evil.

It is in the field of Biblical translation that Carey made his greatest contribution to missions, for to him had been entrusted as to few men before or since, the gift of tongues. He translated the whole Bible into Bengali, Oriya, Hindi, Marathi, Assamese and Sanskrit, and the New Testament into many more. When asked how he managed to acquire so many languages, he replied that "None knew what they could do, till they tried; and that, having once thoroughly mastered Bengali, Hindi, Sanskrit, Persian, Panjabi, and Dravidian Telegu, all else was simple!"

A few short months remained. On the morning of June 9, 1834, he passed through the portals to a glorious reward. Truly, the ways of God are past human understanding! Passing by the great men of his day, God chose this obscure cobbler to be his ambassador to the East. Carey demonstrated for all time what can be done by hard work by a life that was wholly consecrated to God. Dr. A. T. Pierson has said, "With little teaching, he became learned; poor himself, he made millions rich; by birth obscure, he rose to unsought eminence; and seeking only to follow the Lord's leading, he led forward the Lord's host."—The Missionary Worker.

One Hundred Dollars for Flowers--But

By Robert E. Speer*

The Rev. William Sidebotham, who died in Bay City, Michigan, on February 6, 1931, was for over half a century a most faithful, self-sacrificing and devoted Presbyterian minister. He had five children, and although he never lived where there was a high school until all of the children had passed high school age, every one of them went to college. Three sons became Presbyterian ministers; one daughter a successful home missionary teacher, and the other a public school teacher. One of the sons went as a missionary to Korea.

When Mrs. Sidebotham died in 1929 her husband wrote to the Board of Foreign Missions:

"My wonderful wife died last night. The funeral arrangements are all made. For some years the money to cover expenses of funeral has been ready. Many times she has said: 'Don't spend a cent for flowers when I die. Give it to Foreign Missions.' Accordingly I enclose $100 from her for the field in Taiku, in memory of our son. She has often wished she was rich, but never that she might have a better wardrobe, etc., but that she might help the poor and help foreign missions. My salary was never more than $700 and manse (often less) till I was sixty-four; never more than $800 and manse till I was over seventy, in 1918, never more than $1,200 and manse till I retired, and began to get $50 a month from the Board of Relief. Yet she uncomplainingly gave her children and rejoiced in our tithing until the end. I am,

"Your brother in the work,
 (Signed) "William Sidebotham."

It is such a gift as this and such gifts as Mr. and Mrs. Sidebotham have made all their lives in their children and in their prayers which, under God, give to the missionary cause its glory and bring down upon it the blessing of him who loved us and gave himself for us.

Now Mr. Sidebotham himself has passed on, and shortly after his death his daughter, Miss Emily Sidebotham, wrote to the Board in part as follows:

"When we opened my father's will we found a sheet of instructions. Among them was the following:

*Condensed from The Presbyterian, by "The Missionary Review of the World."

"After my funeral expenses are all paid, take $100 for flowers. Do not buy flowers, but send it to Dr. Speer, asking him to see that it is used for work in Korea in memory of my son Richard."

"So I am enclosing a check for that amount. I am glad father was able to do this, and that he commissioned me to carry out this wish."

"During the last eight and a half years that I have been at home caring for my parents, I have realized how dear the work of his Kingdom was to their hearts. I have appreciated more than ever before the sacrifices they made in their earlier years, that we might be educated, and I have come to understand a little more fully the joy they had when we all entered Christian work. I feel as though we had been left a great heritage, something that will be an inspiration to us all our lives."

These letters illustrate the true basis on which the missionary enterprise rests, first, in the purpose of God with regard to his only Son, the Savior of the world, and second, in the pure love and sacrifice due to Christian spirit in such true and simple lives as this.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

NEWS CONCERNING WASHINGTON, D. C. CHURCH, FROM WINCHESTER

It gives me great pleasure to say a few words concerning the fine work that our Brethren are doing for God in the Nation's capital city. Their pastor, Brother Homer Kent, can surely feel elated to have such a loyal spirit-filled group to work with and these cooperating Brethren consider themselves not only fortunate but are rejoicing that God has given them a real man of God to be their shepherd. During my two weeks' labor there I have discovered abundant proof that our church under Brother Kent's leadership is going forward in showing by precept and example that she is a mighty fortress for our God. Her influence is felt not only in the immediate neighborhood but also throughout the city. Her testimony is not hidden under the bushel but is being reflected daily in lives that are not ashamed to witness for Christ during the week. Thank God that we have in our own Nations' Capital city a church, whose members are showing to the world just exactly what our Christ bade them do. "Be salt that has not lost its savor neither its preserving quality." I bless God for not only the preserving and savor of life that I received through their fellowship but also for the added beauty that came to me as a result of slumbering on a "Beauty Rest Mattress." All through the kindness and hospitality of Brother and Sister Richard MacLennon and Brother and Sister Richard Saunders. They sacrificed the use of their comfortable room for a poor, unworthy preacher. Thanks to you, Brother and Sister Saunders, you've helped an ugly looking preacher to be a little more beautiful in spirit. Also, thank you, Brother and Sister MacLennon, for your appetizing breakfasts, and to all the other sisters for opening their homes with delicious and well-planned meals. I want to extend my gratitude and appreciation. My fellowship with Brother Kent was surely enjoyed. It was profitable, edifying and instructive. His gospel messages together with his leadership in this meeting has surely proven his ability as an evangelist. And I commend him as such to the brotherhood. What he termed as a trial or experiment, proved to be a real success, shown by at least these four factors which entered the meeting—large attendance, fine interest, goodly response and loyal support.

The self-sacrificing brothers and sisters are to be commended for their launching forth to build in the spring, God willing. They are surely handicapped for want of room and certainly deserving of any financial means that any one able in the brotherhood could give to help erect the second story. May God speak to those having bank accounts that serve no one but themselves. God give the Brethren Church more converted pocketbooks. God bless Washington church and make you to increase and abound in his Grace. E. J. ROHART.

NEWS FROM GLENFORD, OHIO

The end of this month marks the first year's work for the new pastor at Glenford, Ohio. As I look back over the good year I can see some of the most interesting events and high lights, of which I desire to write to any in the brotherhood interested.

The situation within the church has been unfavorable. I believe the members have really gone through some trying times. Since they were hampered with a small membership and a lack of funds, there was no program contemplated and no pastor employed. Slowly throughout the year we have seen old members returning and taking up their work as well as some new ones making their first stand for Christ and the church. New interests have been aroused, preaching services held on alternate Sundays, and all current expenses absolved.

The pastor has not been in position to do adequate church visitation, as he is there only twice a month and that over the week end. Moreover, the active membership is widely scattered. During a recent survey it was discovered that some families live approximately twenty to twenty-five miles apart. For one to make several visits to each family in one year means quite an accumulation of mileage.

We have attempted a Christian Endeavor Society, which died once and was resurrected once. The members are of the early intermediate age and without much experience in Christian Endeavor work. Nevertheless they appear as promising leaders and the future prospects for Christian Endeavor are bright. Last summer they held an ice cream festival on the church lawn which was a huge success. In addition to a splendid turnout of Glenford people, there was a large delegation from the Mt. Zion Brethren church, below Bremen, Ohio, representing their Christian Endeavor there.

This was one of the evidences of the work Brother Karl Garling is doing at a place that was padlocked for years. As a result of the festival the Christian Endeavor treasury was fifteen dollars ahead.

The W. M. S. is active and more than once the members answer an S. O. S. call for immediate assistance in church work. Recently they fell in line with the Red Cross sewing, thus expressing themselves in a real way, that the poor should be helped.

The Sunday school is well organized and graded for a small school. Our Superintendent, Mr. O. L. Helser, is very faithful, and on the job every Sunday ready to start promptly. His outstanding feature is the illustrated chalk talk bearing upon some phase of the lesson studied. The attendance varies from the twenties to fifties.

On October sixteenth, we held our fall communion service, this was the mountain top experience of the year. On November thirteenth, Dr. J. Allen Miller, a former pastor, was with us. In the morning he preached an excellent sermon, which found its way into many hearts. In the afternoon he spoke of his trip to Palestine and other countries he visited. Many of the friends from the Church of the Brethren found their way down to hear him. The whole group was delighted with his presence and messages.

For several months we anticipated a Gospel Team from the College and were not disappointed in the team composed of Kenneth Hulit, Ashland, Ohio; J. Garber Drushal, Lost Creek, Kentucky; and Tom Hammers, Johnstown, Pennsylvania. They made excellent workers, and all had opportunities for preaching. Brother Drushal was in great demand at the piano, playing solos and striking out chorus tunes. The people enjoyed their gospel sermons and the fine Christian joy they brought along. Sunday morning was decision day, at which time four young people made a definite decision for Jesus as Savior.

As we enter another year, we count on big things and better achievements than those before, also a happy time in fellowship with Jesus our Lord.

NORMAN UPHOUSE, Student Pastor.

REVIVAL AT MEXICO, INDIANA

It was indeed a privilege to be invited to hold a revival meeting in this church, one of the oldest in the brotherhood. From this church have gone those who have been instrumental in the organizing of other churches in this part of the state. From the beginning of the meetings I realized that I would have a group of loyal, faithful workers lending their every effort toward the work of winning men and women for Christ.

Our meeting with these good people began on November 13th and closed November 27th. As often happens man is not always able to pick out ideal weather and during the first week we found ourselves in the midst of some real winter weather. Because of the heavy snow, roads were blocked; schools were closed and some of the members found it impossible to attend services. However, this condition did not affect to any great extent the membership of the church, who proved most faithful during the entire meetings. It did however provide an excuse for the many that we were trying to reach with the message of Life.

Words cannot express our pleasure in working with Brother Spacht and in visiting in their home. According to present plans Brother Spacht will be with me in a meeting some time in the near future. Our fellowship with Brother and Sister Spacht and our visits with them in the homes of the members will long be remembered. Many visits were made. not only in the homes of members, but others as well.

Plans to hold cottage prayer services were necessarily changed because of the heavy snow but prayer for the meetings was made during a fifteen minute service prior to the evening message. This was a great source of inspiration and strength to the speaker to meet each evening with this group and unite with them as they earnestly prayed that God would give us victory and that the Holy Spirit might lead many to accept Christ as their Savior.

Coming among these people almost as a stranger, I could not have expected a finer welcome than was extended me. The fine fellowship and their wonderful hospitality could not be surpassed. Were I to try to name the friends that I made or to name the ones whose hospitality I so greatly appreciated, I would not know where to stop, so I can only say "Thank You" to all in a general way. My home while there was with Brother and Sister Kyle Neuman who did all that was within their power to provide for my comfort and to make me feel at home.

We have greatly enjoyed this service and feel that besides the actual results of the meeting, there has been a general strengthening of the church. With the leadership that they have; with the talent available, and with the faithfulness of its members we can expect to hear a great deal from this church. Two weeks is pretty short to accomplish much and we were loath to close but we pray that the revival may continue and that many who for so long have been saying "NO," will finally yield to the pleading of the Holy Spirit.

GEORGE C. PONTIUS,
West Alexandria, Ohio.

MEXICO, INDIANA, BRETHREN CHURCH

Sunday evening, November 27th, we closed a two weeks' revival meeting under the leadership of Brother George C. Pontius, pastor of the Brethren church at West Alexandria, Ohio.

The meetings began under adverse weather conditions as a snow storm hit us Tuesday of the first week and some of our most faithful members were unable to attend until the week was nearly gone. However, we have no alibi to offer as the meeting was a very successful one. We feel that the church was spiritually strengthened and brought to a clearer sense of its obligations in its ministry in the community, especially to the unsaved. Brother Pontius' messages were plain, clear-cut, upheld continuously by the word of God, and the leadership of the Holy Spirit was felt in every meeting. One special avenue of blessing in the meetings was the prayer service conducted by the evangelist preceding the preaching hour. Those who attended these prayer meetings, and they were many, availed themselves of additional spiritual blessing. Those who did not attend all that we can say is, they lost to some degree the greater blessings of the revival.

On the last Sunday at the Sunday school hour Decision Day was observed and two fine young girls gave their lives to Christ.

Two other persons, members of a distant Brethren church, will be received by letter.

Just a word about the evangelist. I found Brother Pontius to be a very loyal and zealous servant of Christ, cooperating in every way that the meetings might be of the greatest possible benefit to the cause of Christ. He was untiring in his efforts with us and made many friends by his pleasing personality and effective approach. I received many words of praise concerning his methods and messages. May the Lord richly bless his efforts in his field of labor.

I would like to say a few words about the work in general in this portion of the Lord's vineyard. The Sunday school under the leadership of Brother Elmer Neff is very active and efficient. Much interest is being maintained and the attendance is well over that of last year. The attendance during the revival was 97 the first Sunday, 100 the second, and 105 the third.

The W. M. S. with Sister Chas. Black as president, is quite active and doing a fine piece of work for the church and community.

Last, but not least, the Christian Endeavor Society, under the leadership of Miss Ellen Ault, has been re-organized and meetings held regularly. Much interest is being manifested. There is a splendid group of young people here and we are planning and praying for a larger membership and a greater participation in this branch of Christ's service. Reader, may we not have your prayers in behalf of the Lord's work at Mexico?

MARK B. SPACHT, Pastor.

BRYAN, OHIO

The readers of the Evangelist are no doubt interested in our meetings at Bryan, just as we are interested in the rest of the brotherhood, and would like to know some thing about them. On November 13th we started our revival efforts, with Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Richer in charge of the music and the writer doing the preaching. We had planned for this meeting for some weeks and had prayed very definitely for the success of this meeting. We made these services the object of our efforts in our prayer services. The first service was well attended and the house was full, then there came some bad weather and a deep snow which cut down our attendance, for those from the rural districts could not drive their cars for a few days and only those who were close to the church could get there. But in spite of that the attendance was good. We were not able to seat all that came and some were turned away on the second Sunday evening. We had the finest spirit of cooperation on the part of Christian people of other churches in the town.

We tried to preach the Gospel pure and simple as best we could in our weak way, and every song that the Richers brought to us was a sermon, and true to the Word of God. These all found their way into the hearts of the people and many that had resisted God for years were moved and yielded to his call. One of the outstanding features of this meeting was the elderly people that came to Christ and accepted him as their personal Savior. This we believe was the result of earnest prayer for these people, by those who were interested in them. The visible results of the meetings, were eighteen confessions. Four were children, and the rest were adults, four of them were well past the fifty mark—two of them, sisters, one almost seventy years old, and the other past seventy. Fourteen have been baptized and twelve received into the church. Two are not certain where they will place their membership, and four are to be baptized. We think all will unite with the church with the exception of one who found opposition on the part of parents. We are hoping that God will break down that opposition. There has been a wonderful spirit of cooperation and fellowship on the part of all the members of the church. A church working in harmony for God can do mighty works for him. We are praying that God will see fit to continue to use us to glorify his name, and ask an interest in all your prayers.

C. A. STEWART.

CALVARY CHURCH, NEW JERSEY

After much prayer and preparation we decided to put on a three weeks' revival meeting in November. Everything seemed to go against the meeting. During the first week, political speeches and general election were a real distraction. The second week, we had hard rains for five days and since most of the people live on dirt backroads, it was almost an impossibility to come. During the last week, the crowds came. We had delegations from many places. Brother Steffler and some friends from Third church, Philadelphia, were there one night. He brought the Adams Trio with him. We wish to express our thanks for their kind cooperation.

On Sunday morning, December 4th, 10 were baptized and in the evening, they were taken into the Calvary church. There were 11 all told but one is going to join the Methodist church.

The Calvary field is very difficult. Two previous revivals produced practically no visible results to the church. Ten additions with new interest and new families reached, not only means a 25% increase in the Calvary membership but the prospects for the future are very bright. My father, I. D. Bowman, was the evangelist. We praise our Heavenly Father from the depths of our hearts for souls won into his kingdom.

In conjunction with the baptismal service, my ordination into the Brethren ministry took place. Rev. S. E. Christiansen of Alentown gave an exceptional address upon the duties of the minister and the church to each other. A very unique and unexpected event in the ordination service was the appearance of twelve former members of the Whole Gospel Mission of South Philadelphia, which is not now in existence. There were three ministers in this group of twelve, one of whom was Rev. Osmer Tressler, a noted welfare worker connected with the Seaman's Institute of Philadelphia.

Our prayer is that God may keep us worthy of the high calling.

Yours in Christian Service,
J. MILTON BOWMAN.

PICKING A PRIZE PREACHER

Candidating is a disgrace to the house of God. Who thinks of God when a candidate is preaching? Not the preacher, because he is thinking of the people; not the people, because they are dissecting the preacher. Nothing is so demoralizing to a Christian church as candidating. It converts public worship into a farce. Moreover, it is humiliating to the preacher. To be inspected like a pumpkin at a fair, to be put through the paces like a horse at a race, to be judged by a miscellaneous assembly, many of whom do not know what a good sermon is, is an outrage upon ministers which ought to be abolished forthwith. The best advice to a church is, candidate not at all. It is a useless piece of business at the best. What can you tell from one sermon? A shallow man, confident and magnetic, may please you at first hearing, while a worthy man, from humility or physical trepidation, may disappoint you. You must hear a man preach a year before you have a right to judge him. Good preachers are better in their twentieth sermon than in their first. Candidating does not tell you enough. A minister is more than a preacher. He does various kinds of work. Fidelity in these other labors is as important as ability in pulpit ministrations. Manhood is a supreme qualification, and you cannot judge of manhood in one sermon.—Exchange.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE SHARING SLED

By Ethelyn Andrews

Ever since the first snow fell, Harry had wished for a sled, a red sled, an old sled, or a new sled; any sled, just so it was a sled.

"If I had a sled, I'd share it with others," Harry said to himself. But no sled came.

Day by day Harry watched the other boys drag their sleds to the top of the hill beyond and listened to their happy laughter as they coasted down. He knew that his mother and father could not afford to buy him a sled; so he fought his disappointment all alone. But one day an idea came to him.

"I'm going to use that old wash tub for a sled!" he fairly shouted in his enthusiasm. "It's better than no sled at all."

"That's a capital idea," father agreed. "With some paint and runners it will—"

"Do you really mean it?" Harry interrupted, his eyes brighter than they had been since he began wishing for a sled.

It was evident Harry's father was in earnest, for he already had a paint can down and was opening the tool chest. The evenings that followed, were filled with hammering and pounding. Harry helped as much as he could, but when his eyes grew tired and sleepy, he crept off to bed. The tub no longer looked like an old discarded wash tub. It was painted a bright red and had wide smooth runners.

At last came the eventful day when it was finished. Harry pulled his cap down over his ears, and dragging the sled after him started off down the street toward the hill. He had not gone far, however, when he met Mrs. Morton with her arms full of bundles. Instantly Harry thought of his promise to himself of sharing.

"Mrs. Morton," he said, stopping suddenly, "let me take those packages home for you. They must be heavy, and you have so far to go."

Very gratefully, Mrs. Morton put her packages into the tub. "What a beautiful sled!" she exclaimed, "and just the very thing to carry packages in, for they can't fall out."

When they reached the Morton home, there was chubby three year old Carl waving his hands at the window. At the sight of the bright red tub, he set up a wild cry, "Me ride too," and looked so pleading that Harry thought of his promise to share. So he asked Mrs. Morton's permission to take Carl coasting.

Down they went and back up they climbed, over and over again until Carl's cheeks were rosy red with the cold wind. But Carl did not have all the rides. Oh, no! Harry explained to the little fellow that he had promised himself if he ever got a sled that he would share it. So when the Henderson boys came along Carl waited at the top of the hill while they took two coats apiece. So it was, day after day. After his errands were done at home, Harry was always to be found on the hill, enjoying the red tub. And nearly always Carl was there too, for that was part of the promise of sharing. And then one day something happened. Harry and Carl were coasting down the hill to meet Mrs. Morton who was approaching with her arms full of bundles, when without warning, the bottom ripped out of the tub and sent Harry and Carl tumbling in the snow.

But despite the sorrow that immediately pulled at his heart, Harry struggled to his feet. "Well, I can mend it well enough to get your groceries home," he said to Mrs. Morton. And sure enough he did.

"Maybe Santa Claus will bring you another one," sympathized Mrs. Morton.

"I'd rather he wouldn't," promptly answered Harry. "The baby needs a warm coat and mother needs a new dress. I guess I can get along without a sled."

But no one knew how Harry missed the red tub. It was Christmas week and sleds of all kinds and colors dotted the hillside. "It was a faithful little sled while it lasted," he mused, sadly, thinking of the little red tub, "and I guess it's happy even if it can't run any more, because it made others so happy."

Just then there was a knock at the door and Harry ran to answer it. A tall man stood there with a package almost as big as himself. This he thrust into the room and walked away.

"What can it be?" Harry exclaimed and then he pulled back the wrapping paper and saw. It was a fine big sled, painted red, white and blue, and the seat was wide enough for two. There were pockets on either side to hold tools and small packages, and a strong rope that snapped on when needed.

"Oh, oh, oh!" shouted Harry. "Isn't it lovely. But surely there is some mistake. It can't be for me." And then he saw a tiny card dangling from a runner. He took it and read:

"To the boy who shares his pleasures, From those with whom he shared them."

"Oh, it's from the Mortons!" cried Harry. And then he couldn't say another word, for his throat filled up and his eyes got misty. But though he couldn't talk out loud, he could say something to himself and that he did. And what he said was something like this, "I'll share my sled, and with it try to make others happy. And I shall call it the 'sharing sled'!"—Children at Work.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

AWAKE! AWAKE!

The greatest need of the hour is a spiritual awakening. Serious evils threaten both church and state. Millions are groping in darkness trying to find a way out of present distress. Many are dying without God and without hope. The need is tremendous. The opportunity is appealing. The responsibility is urging. Every Christian should be alert and active. Every church should have a spiritual revival. The writer is available for assistance in such service with gospel sermon and Bible study. Finances need not worry. We want souls rather than money. Your freewill offering will be sufficient. Write at once for date for either winter or spring. H. M. OBERHOLTZER, Sidney, Indiana.

NOTICE

During the past week the White Gift envelopes were mailed to the pastors of the churches of the brotherhood or to responsible parties in those churches which are now without a regular minister in charge.

In case your packet of envelopes is lost or unduly delayed in the mails, or a larger supply is needed, kindly write to the undersigned at Ashland and you will be supplied.

M. A. STUCKEY.

NOTICE TO ALL PASTORS AND TREASURERS

We have greatly appreciated the fine spirit of co-operation manifested in the past by the majority of church officers in the promptness with which they have sent in their Thanksgiving Offerings. This is the hardest time of the year for our work. Our funds are at the lowest ebb. We are earnestly praying that we will receive enough early offerings to care for the December allowances to the Mission Pastors. Things are hard enough for them without having to write them that we cannot pay them at Christmas time. YOU HAVE ALWAYS HELPED US! HELP US NOW! THE LORD WILL HELP YOU DO IT!

R. Paul Miller.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

SAVE

Can the Brethren Church save her vested Interests and Properties?

These Properties involve the sacrificial efforts of years. They are: Our Mission Properties and Interests, Our Publishing House, Our College, Our BRETHREN HOME?

When we appeal weekly to the Church to give us the needed help to maintain the BRETHREN HOME we are really PLEADING THE CASE OF ALL BRETHREN INTERESTS.

Prayer and offerings of money and materials alone can help us over the crisis of the present time.

Send your gifts and offering to The Brethren Home, Flora, Indiana.

WILL YOU REMEMBER

TO BRING A

WHITE GIFT

FOR YOUR KING

In Remembrance of His First Birthday

A GIFT OF SELF - SERVICE - SUBSTANCE

December 25 is White Gift Sunday

The National Sunday School Association Calls You to SUPPORT THE TEACHING MINISTRY OF THE CHURCH
In South America, Africa, Ashland College, Camp Shiphewana and Every Church School in the Brotherhood

THE FIRST WHITE GIFT FOR 1932

Has Been Received!

For years a good sister has been the first to respond and always with five dollars. This year she writes,

"Here is a 'WHITE GIFT' offering—some might say a 'Red Gift' did they know the circumstances. . . . May the Lord bless it . . . as He did the loaves and fishes."

That "White Gift" is indeed a "Red Gift" of sacrifice this year. It is a challenge to us all.

REMEMBER

YOU SHOW YOUR CHRISTMAS SPIRIT BY YOUR GIFT

1928
$4420.85

1929
$3839.68

1930
$3508.03

1931
$2186.13

Send all gifts of money to
M. P. PUTERBAUGH, Treasurer,
402 W. Main St.
Ashland, Ohio

1932
?

This White Gift Offering is taken and distributed by the National Sunday School Association of the Brethren Church.

VOL. LIV
Number 50

December 24
1932

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

The Holy Family

"Sing, O heavens! Ring out, O Earth, Carols of the Savior's birth."

Signs of the Times

By Alva J. McClain

THE Devil's Christmas

At this season, Christians throughout the world are celebrating the coming of the Christ of God. Nineteen centuries ago he left his throne in glory to enter human life by virgin-birth. It is a time for rejoicing and thanksgiving as we remember the Grace of our Lord. Yet across the sunshine of Christian joy there falls a sombre shadow as we perceive that millions join in celebrating the season without bowing the knee in worship to its Christ. They will admire him, but will not confess him.

For such as these, Satan is preparing a Christ of his own. One of these days, immediately following the translation of the true Church, there will be ushered into the stage of human life a Satanic Christ, a counterfeit Messiah, whose appearance will mark the Devil's Christmas. If this should seem incredible, remember that the same Book which prophesied the coming of God's Christ also predicts the coming of the Devil's Christ. And if the one prophecy has been fulfilled, so will the other.

THE Contrast between the True and the False

The Christ of God was "from above" (Jn. 8:23). The Devil's Christ shall "ascend out of the bottomless pit" (Rev. 17:8).

The Christ of God is pictured as a "Lamb" (Rev. 5:6). The Devil's Christ is pictured as a "Beast" (Rev. 13:1).

The true Christ came as the "Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6). The false Christ will come as a man of war (Rev. 13:4).

Of the Christ of God it was said, "Grace is poured into thy lips" (Psa. 45:2). Of Satan's Christ it is said, "He opened his mouth in blasphemy against God" (Rev. 13:6).

The Christ of God is called "the Truth" (Jn. 14:6). The Christ of Satan is called "the Lie" (2 Thess. 2:11 Greek).

The true Christ is called "a Man approved of God" (Acts 2:22). The false Christ is called "the man of sin" (2 Thess. 2:3).

The Christ of God is called "the Son of the Highest" (Luke 1:32). The Devil's Christ is called "the son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:3).

The true Christ comes as the Servant of God (Isa. 42:1). The false Christ shall "magnify himself above every god" (Dan. 11:36).

The true Christ came quietly and humbly (Isa. 42:2). The false Christ will come with the applause of the world and great acclaim (Rev. 13:4).

God's Christ came with no worldly political power (John 18:36). Satan's Christ will concentrate in himself all worldly political power (Rev. 13:7).

The true Christ receives his authority from God (Matt. 28:18). The false Christ receives his authority from "the Dragon" (Rev. 13:2).

The true Christ was "the Image of God" (Col. 1:15). The false Christ sets up an image of himself (Rev. 13:14).

The Christ of God did not interfere with the economic affairs of men (Luke 12:13-14) but created bread to feed the hungry. The Christ of Satan will take control of the economic system of the world and withhold its benefits from those who do not acknowledge him (Rev. 13:16-17).

When the Christ of God came into the world it was said that "there is no beauty that we should desire him" (Isa. 53:2), meaning that there was missing the human glory for which the Jews looked. But when Satan's Christ comes he will be the wonder of the whole world (Rev. 13:3).

The throne and Kingdom of God's Christ will be forever and ever (Heb. 1:8). The throne of Satan's Christ in fullness of worldly power will last for the brief season of "forty and two months" (Rev. 13:5).

The Christ of God is the "good Shepherd" (John 10:11). The Christ of Satan will be a "worthless shepherd" (Zech. 11:17 ARV). The true Christ came in the "Father's Name," but the false Christ will come in his own name (John 5:43).

The Christ of God is witnessed and glorified by the "Spirit of Truth" (John 16:13-14). But the Christ of Satan will be glorified by the "false prophet" (Rev. 13:11-14, 19:20).

Those who accept and worship the Christ of God shall "reign forever and ever" (Rev. 22:5). Those who accept and worship the Christ of Satan shall be tormented forever and ever (Rev. 14:11).

THE true and False Christmas Spirit

There are many other contrasts which the careful and industrious Bible student may find between the Christ of God and the Devil's Christ. But there is one startling contrast which ought to be mentioned at the present season. When the Christ of God came into the world, we read that the wise men brought gifts to him (Matt. 2:11). But when the false Christ appears on earth and reaches the fullness of his power in opposition to God, we read that men rejoice and "send gifts to one another" (Rev. 11:7-10).

This is not written to utterly condemn the giving of gifts to loved ones, friends and the needy. But let us beware of reversing the order of God in making ourselves the central object of Christmas giving and forget the Christ of God. And if we give to one another, let it be in his Name.

ONE of the Strange Things

Quite often you will hear of a meeting being held somewhere in which representatives of the various great religious divisions are invited to participate as follows: Roman Catholic, Jew, and Protestant. Or if it is a public forum for the discussion of some religious question, you will find a priest, a rabbi, a Protestant preacher, and an unbeliever (generally Clarence Darrow).

Now the strange thing is that the preacher chosen will always be Modernist, yet the authorities who call the meeting seem to think that by such a choice Protestantism has been given due representation.

The truth of the matter is that in such meetings Protestantism has had no representation at all, while Judaism has had two representatives—the rabbi and the Modernist. For, essentially Modernism and liberal Judaism are one and the same thing. There is hundred times more difference between a true Protestant and a Modernist who calls himself Protestant than there is between the Modernist preacher and the Jewish Rabbi.

Dr. Harold Paul Sloan, Methodist champion of the Faith, has put the matter clearly: "It ought to be perfectly evident, even to a dull understanding, that Professor Fosdick has completely separated from Christianity. He has no more in common with historic Christianity than Buddhism or Mohammedanism has. He is a refined gentleman who accepts the ethics of Jesus with more or less fullness; but he is not in any sense a Christian thinker."

If the public wishes to be fair, it ought to give the Protestants two speakers in any public forum of religion, and one of them ought to know what Protestant Christianity is, and believe it.

The more sensible way would be to have one Protestant speaker, a real one, and leave the Modernist out altogether. He can have nothing to say that a Jewish rabbi could not say. And the latter would have the immense advantage of sailing under his own colors. Such a method would contribute greatly in the direction of intellectual honesty, and would help to prevent confusion in the public mind.

WHAT has Your Church Done?

Brother Raymond Gingrich, pastor of the Fairhaven Brethren church near Ashland, came in the other day and took out with him ten copies of Dr. Gribble's book. I asked him what he intended doing with them. He answered that he had sold them in his congregation, and that perhaps he would be back for more.

For those who may not know, it should be said that the Fairhaven congregation is one of our smaller country churches. I do not know what the membership is, but suppose it is around one hundred. (If this is wrong, Brother Gingrich can correct me.) But the church is alive. You have only to visit it to feel this instantly.

After Brother Gingrich left with his ten books, I did a bit of figuring with the following result: I found that if all our churches did as well, the first edition would now be sold out, and we would need to print a second edition larger than the first.

Don't delay getting your copy, for the first edition will be sold before you realize it. Send $1.65 to Brother Bauman, 1925 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California.

IN THIS NUMBER

The Son of God the Savior of Men—
Editor, .....	3
Editorial Review, .....	4
Christmas, 1932—J. Allen Miller, ..	5
The Incarnation—F. G. Coleman, ..	6
The Son of God is Virgin Born—
Freeman Ankrum, .....	7
Significant News and Views, .....	8
Miniature Studies in the Divine Library—M. A. Stuckey, .....	9
Strengthening the Sunday School—C. E. Benson, .....	10
Studying the Sunday School Lesson—T. C. Lyon, .....	11
Attention Endeavorers—Gladys Spice, ..	11
News from the Field, .....	12-15
The Brethren's Home Corner—M. M. Shively, .....	15
Our Little Readers, .....	16

GEORGE S. BAER
Editor

R. R. TEETER
Business Manager

Send all moneys to the
Business Manager

THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST

Official Organ of the Brethren Church

Entered as second class
matter at Ashland, Ohio

$2.00 a year in advance

Acceptance, special rate, section
1103, Act of Oct. 3, 1917
Authorized Sept. 3, 1928

The Son of God the Savior of Men

Christmas is the supremely joyous season of the year. And it is so primarily for one reason—it celebrates the coming of a Savior. Bethlehem's manger is significant because it cradled a Redeemer. The star from the east became immortal because he to whom it led eventually made his way to the cross. The message of Christmas is completed at Easter. Jesus was born that he might die and become the Savior of the world. The angel's words to Joseph give us the key to the purpose of the incarnation—"thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins."

Need of a Savior

Men were, and are, greatly in need of a Savior, some one to save them from their sins. They had no need so great as that, as the Father knew. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually" (Gen. 6:5; 8:21). "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it? I the Lord search the heart" (Jer. 17:9, 10; 18:12). "They are corrupt; they have done abominable works; there is none that doeth good; the Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that would understand, and seek God. They were all gone aside, they were altogether become filthy, there is none that doeth good, no not one" (Psa. 14:1-3). "What then? are we better than they? for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin; as it is written, There is none righteous, no not one. There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are altogether become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no not one. ... Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight for by the law is the knowledge of sin. But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which is by faith in Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference: for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:9-12, 20-23). Only God Can Save

A Savior able to save such a sin-cursed world and to redeem wicked men must be from heaven. Only God could meet such a need. And God in Christ laid aside his heavenly glory and voluntarily humbled himself and took upon himself the humanity of man that he might redeem him. Paul tells us that Christ "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross" (Phil. 2:7, 8). It was this humiliation, this taking on of the form of man, that transpired in Bethlehem and which we celebrate at this Christmas season. Hear again both the prophecy and the record: "Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (Isa. 7:14). "Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us" (Matt. 1:22, 23). "And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be borne in thee shall be called the Son of God" (Luke 1:30-35). "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us" (John 1:14). "Forasmuch then, as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who, through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage. For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham" (Heb. 2:14-16).

Incarnation Real and Complete

Not only can we identify the one who became incarnate at the first Christmas as the Son of God, the second Person of the Trinity, but we may be sure that incarnation was real and complete. "He was born with 'a body' which was prepared for him (Heb. 10:5), of the same appearance with those of other infants; he grew up by degrees, and was so far from being sustained without the accustomed nutrition of our bodies, that he was observed even by his enemies to 'come eating and drinking' (Matt. 11:19); and when he did not so, he suffered hunger and thirst. The thorns, ... the nails, ... the spear, ... give sufficient testimony of the natural tenderness and frailty of his flesh. And lest his fasting forty days, ... lest his walking on the waters, ... lest his sudden standing in the midst of his disciples when the doors were shut (especially after he had been dead and buried) should raise an opinion that his body was not true and proper flesh, he confirmed first his own disciples: 'Feel and see' that 'a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have' (Luke 24:39). As therefore we believe the coming of Christ, so we must confess him to have come in the verity of our human nature, even in true and proper flesh; for 'every spirit that confesseth Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God' (1 John 4:2, 3). ... And certainly if the Son of God would vouchsafe to take the frailty of our flesh, he would not omit the nobler part, our soul, without which he could not be man. For 'Jesus increased in wisdom and stature' (Luke 2:52), one in respect of his body, the other of his soul. Wisdom belongeth not to the flesh, nor can the knowledge of God, which is infinite, increase; he then, whose knowledge did improve together with his years, must have a human soul. This was the seat of his finite understanding and directed will, distinct from the will of the Father, and consequently (distinct from the will) of his divine nature, as appeareth by that well known submission, 'Not my will, but thine be done' (Luke 22:42); this was the subject of those affections and passions which so manifestly appeared in him: 'My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death' (Matt. 24:38). ... Thus the whole perfect and complete nature of man was assumed by 'the Word', by him who was conceived and 'born of a woman', and so made." (Pearson on "The Creed.")

He Became the Savior

And Christ actually became the Savior of men, their Redeemer, and took upon himself our sins. "For hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, ... who when he was reviled, reviled not again: when he suffered, he threatened not; ... who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Peter 2:21-25). "For Christ also hath once suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit" (1 Peter 3:18; 4:1). "... and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). "And he is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world" (1 John 2:2, 3).

By the Will of God, and All-Sufficient

This redemptive process was accomplished by the will of God, and was all-sufficient. "In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved him, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins" (1 John 4:9, 10). "Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: whom God hath sent forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood" (Rom. 3:24, 25). "For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us" (1 Thess. 5:9, 10).

That was the purpose of his coming into the world—that he might redeem us from sin and from the power of the Evil One. That achievement was in prospect as the star shone over Bethlehem's manger, and it is because of that, more than any other one thing, that we rejoice because of his coming.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

There will be no paper next week. This issue completes the fifty numbers which we customarily publish during a year. Our next publication date will be January 7, 1933.

Push that Evangelist subscription campaign in your church. The special rates are no good after the close of January. This is your opportunity.

Brother George C. Pontius says his arrangement with his church at West Alexandria will permit him to conduct one or two more revivals during the year. Write him at West Alexandria, Ohio.

Dr. Martin Shively has another fitting word about the Brethren's Home of Flora, Indiana and its needs. Brother Shively's heart is in the cause, and it must needs be that others shall catch some of his enthusiasm—it is worthy and greatly in need.

Brother W. R. Deeter of Carleton, Nebraska, says Sunday school is going strong, a recent attendance being 100 and the church attendance was 150. The men of his church recently had a "wood Chopping Bee" and cut enough wood to supply both church and parsonage for the winter.

Have you got your copy of Dr. Gribble's book, "UNDAUNTED HOPE". It is only $1.65 and at that price you cannot afford to do without it. Send order and money to Dr. Louis S. Bauman, 1925 East Fifth Street, Long Beach, California. A majority of the first edition is gone already. The next edition will cost more.

A good brother from Hagerstown, Maryland, tells us of a promising young preacher doing service for the Lord in a mission in that city. God has called him and he has answered and gone to work at once, contemplating, quite properly, as soon as out of high school to come to Ashland to prepare himself for the ministry. May God keep the evangelistic fire burning.

It is a most interesting report that Dr. Florence N. Gribble writes of the experience in France and on the journey to Africa of the three missionaries—Miss Crawford, Miss Myers and the doctor herself. We would not attempt to summarize the events. Suffice it to say that it was a journey full of interest, and Dr. Gribble's letter, as usual, is challenging alike to our consecration and our faith.

Christian Endeavorers of Rittman, Ohio, won the honor of producing the best C. E. slogan in the contest and Miss Spice, the General Secretary, has it published on the young people's page this week. It is worthy of being made the slogan for all the societies, for it stresses the supreme mission of the church—"evangelism." Other societies are also given honorable mention for the good slogans offered.

Dr. Charles A. Bame, as moderator of Ohio Conference and chairman of the Board of District Evangelists, was called upon to render a most difficult service for the Middlebranch, Ohio, church, and he did it with tact and Christian consideration for the rights of all concerned. May the splendid people of that congregation know the ever-present help of the Holy Spirit, to give them wisdom and courage in dealing with their problems and perseverance in loyalty to the Brethren church and Brethren institutions.

A successful evangelistic campaign was recently experienced by the church at Spokane, Washington, under the leadership of Brother R. Paul Miller and the pastor, Brother Albert L. Lantz. Seventy souls are reported to have stepped forward to confess Christ, either for the first time or in reconsecration. These two earnest souls evidently made a good team and the Lord blessed their efforts. The prospect of the Spokane church has greatly improved under Brother Lantz's pastorate, and this recent victory has supplied much additional strength to the congregation.

Dr. G. C. Carpenter writes of the work of the Smithville-Sterling congregation, which maintains two separate places of worship. The Sunday school at Smithville has grown from an average attendance of 91 last year to an average of 128 for the year just coming to a close. Other departments of the church are also making splendid progress. These are a substantial, consecrated group of people ready to continue to press forward under the capable leadership of their pastor. Sterling also has some fine people and are ambitious for progress.

The work at Kittanning, Pennsylvania is moving forward encouragingly under the leadership of Brother Robert D. Crees, thirty-one new members having been added during the present calendar year and other persons are awaiting baptism. One noteworthy feature, aside from the large enrollment of the Summer Bible School, was decision day when 14 boys and girls made the decision for Christ. Christian Endeavor has been reorganized for more effective service and the men and boys of the church have been organized into a Brotherhood of Alexander Mack. Their purposes seem to be as good as their name; they are organized for service and good service they are rendering. Harvest Home observance was extended over an entire week and eleven confessions of Christ were received as a result of the services.

A "diamond jubilee" celebration is a very unusual occasion in our church, but we have a report of one such in this issue of The Evangelist. Lathrop, California, marked seventy-five years of service in the twenty-fifth of October. The church was founded by Elder George Wolfe, who was the pioneer Brethren minister in those parts. Elder John Wolfe, his son, was also honored. Elder George Wolfe's grandson, Brother J. Milo Wolfe, was present to share in the joy of the occasion. A number of ministers shared in the festivities. Elder George Ronk bringing the main address and Elder J. Wesley Platt serving as moderator for the day. Elder N. W. Jennings is the present pastor. We extend in behalf of the Evangelist family most hearty congratulations to the Lathrop Brethren and pray that God may grant them yet many years of service.

We believe we are right in saying that the Second church of Long Beach California, is one of the most rapidly growing congregations in the brotherhood. It is under the pastoral leadership of Brother John Lienhard. The Sunday school has reached the high average attendance of 500, their highest record being 555. It is not surprising that they grow when one considers the effort being put forth to get in touch with new prospects, and also the emphasis being placed on prayer. Church attendance is also good and finances are being laid upon the altar so that the Lord's work need not lag. The communion attendance reveals a fine appreciation of the ordinances of God's house. Twelve persons have been baptized and eleven received into the membership of the church during the quarter now closing.

Dr. R. Allen Miller gives us a much appreciated report of the recent revival conducted by Dr. W. S. Bell in the Ashland, Ohio, church. Brother Bell rendered a splendid service here and he was widely appreciated. Dr. Bame demonstrated his ability as an effective evangelistic song leader. Brother Dyoil Belote, the pastor, was always on the job and gave himself faithfully to the promotion of the campaign. Thirteen people took their stand for Christ during the meetings. The Ashland field is not the easiest one in the brotherhood, but progress is being realized under Brother Belote's leadership. Worthy of mention is the work with the Junior and Intermediate Endeavorers, for which he has succeeded in securing leadership from among the talented workers of the Ashland church. A splendid orchestra is also being maintained among the young people.

PRAYER REQUEST FOR THIS WEEK—

Pray for the revival to begin at South Bend, Indiana, January 1, with the pastor, Rev. R. F. Porte, doing the preaching.

Christmas 1932

By Dean J. Allen Miller, D.D.

Greetings to all readers of the Evangelist on the return of the best of all Holidays! Christmas is decidedly the children's most happy festal day. There are reasons, too, why it ought to be a good day for the Older Folk. I am not given to sentiment, nor to the "observance of days" as such. I do however hold that it is quite within a Christian's privilege to meditate upon the meanings and values of, or if you prefer, the blessings which have accrued to mankind through, the one most meaningful Birth earth ever saw.

The Shepherds in the Fields

It was not to Augustus the master of the Roman World, the then known and civilized world, that the announcement of the Birth which was to make and unmake Emperors and Kings was made. Far less was it even thinkable that it could have been made to a Herod, though he reigned in Jerusalem only six or seven miles away! It was not within the purposes of God to show this thing to the Ministers and Priests of the worship which he had himself established centering in this same Jerusalem. The wise and the understanding, the rulers and the rich, the renowned and the formally religious were all passed by. God hid it from these. Since the word must be given to some one, or more, and through such divinely chosen messengers, to others, until the news shall have spread over the earth,—who were more truly representative than the SHEPHERDS OF THE FIELDS? So it was to a company of lowly shepherds at their humble tasks that God sent the first word of the wondrous Birth that had just taken place a little distance away in a stable. I think it was most truly divine that the Angelic Announcement should be made to men so truly representative of the whole race of men. So it came upon a midnight clear that a Voice rang out piercing the sky above their heads. And this is what they heard: "Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people: for there is born to you this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord."

The Gloria

It must have been a dreadful sight that suddenly burst upon their view as they saw the Angel standing by them and the glory of the Lord shining round about them. But the Angel's reassurance instantly quieted their minds and then the hitherto unseen choir of Angels burst upon their ears with the music of heaven in the matchless words of the Gloria:

"Glory to God in the highest,

And on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased."

The words of the song died out and the vision faded. The shepherds went quickly to the nearby village and found it all as they had been told. Does any one think that these men ever forgot the happenings of that glorious night?

The Birth that was Different

Why this demonstration from Heaven at what men call so lowly a Birth? Well, it was a lowly birth in only one sense, that is, in virtue of its surroundings. In every other aspect it was most extraordinary. View it as you will, it was an exceeding great Wonder. No other was ever like it. Every human conception and its subsequent issue in a birth is the beginning of a new individual, a new personality. Not so here. This Birth was an Advent. It was a breaking into humanity of One who had been eternally with the Father in Heaven. It was the Incarnation of the Son of God. He who had lived (I am attempting to be true to this difficult word in Phil. 2:6) as God lives empties himself and takes a human body in order to live as a man lives. Though truly divine by nature he deigned to take human form. Before his Advent into the earth he dwelt in closest communion with God the Father. All the essential considerations associated with this Birth require every miraculous element to complete it. A Virgin mother, the utter overwhelming of Mary by the Holy Ghost, the genesis and development of that Holy Thing—the Body,—to name the most outstanding characteristics. Mysterious and inexplicable, you say? Yes, truly so. David Smith says the Virgin Birth is indeed a mystery, but so is every birth.

Christ the Savior

There is room only to reach a climax in a simple statement. The One whose Birth Angels heralded and Who ever since then has himself been preached among men is none other than Christ the Lord and the Savior of men. Did men then need a Savior? Do men even yet need the same Savior? To ask the questions in the light of history and human experience is to answer them. Perhaps the weight of men's hopelessness in view of his helplessness is keener now than for a long, long time. For that very reason it would be the part of wisdom for men to reappraise the meaning of Christ's Birth. To evaluate once again the contributions he made to the sum total of human welfare in his Advent would certainly sober men and make them truly grateful. As for us who know him as both Savior and Christ the Lord may we continue to ren-

Christmas Bells

*When the Christmas joy-bells ring for you,
What tidings will they bring to you?*

*Will they ring you joy because you share
The burdens other people bear?*

*Will they ring you cheer because you heed
Another fellow's greater need?*

*Will they ring you peace because you give
That those less fortunate may live?*

*Oh, sweet the tidings of the bells
To hearts where lovingkindness dwells!
—Exchange.*

der that faithful and efficient service which he has every right to claim at our hands.

The Christmas Joy of 1932

Is not this the time for us to emancipate ourselves more radically and completely from the world and its allurements by a new declaration of loyalty and surrender of life to Christ the Lord? Is it not the time to declare ourselves as more fully dependent upon God and his Grace than we have hitherto been willing to confess? It is surely a time for God's children to take a bold stand on the firm foundation of Christ's finished work. This may be a new found Christmas Joy.

The quieting and peace-giving sense of acceptance with God is the most priceless of human blessings. The unutterable joy which a child of God may have as a unique and incomparable gift of Christ belongs to us. And dearly beloved in the Lord, for one to have this quiet, joyful and abiding sense of full security passes all understanding. This blessing one finds only in Christ the Savior and Lord. So to all God's faithful Children, whose eyes may fall upon these words, may there come the genuine Christmas joys.

Ashland, Ohio.

The Incarnation

By Frank G. Coleman

The most stupendous fact of all time and eternity is "The Incarnation." That is, that God actually clothed himself in human form and dwelt among the people. "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). Men touched him and looked into his eyes, spoke to him, and heard him speak. Walked with him beside the Sea of Galilee, saw its storm-tossed, mad, white capped waves stilled by his word of command, at once to become as placid as the murmuring brook or the laughing rill. God, the Creator, Builder and Moulder of all that is, coming into our little world in human form, to become of no reputation and to bear the sins of the whole world at Calvary. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus: Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross" (Phil. 2:5-8).

Do not ask me to explain the Incarnation—I cannot do so. I can and do believe it, but I cannot explain, perhaps to your satisfaction, how God could be at the head of his universe and at the same time "in Christ on the Cross reconciling the world unto himself." Perhaps I cannot explain it to your understanding, but God can, and he will reveal (for it is a revelation) it to you if you earnestly seek such knowledge.

The fact of the Incarnation transcends every other fact of history. It rises to the very throne room of God. It descends with sin killing effect. If it is a fact it answers every question, it untangles every knotty problem; the crooked places are made straight; the desolate places bloom as the rose. If it is true that Christ was "God of very God," come down to live a human life for 30 odd years, then every creature has a right to know that fact. Furthermore, if it is a fact, there is, in God's universe, sufficient and convincing evidence to that effect, or God is guilty of gross neglect.

Where shall we look for these evidences? Shall we go to the scholarship of the world? That might be helpful, but all people do not have access to such training. Shall we turn to a rich traditional past? But what of those who have no Christian past? No, the evidence that such a God would offer would be accessible to all peoples. God has revealed himself in the past in three different ways. First: by "the things which he has created." Second: by the written Word—the Inspired Scriptures. Third: In the Incarnation of his Son.

I: In the Created World

It is declared in the infallible Word of God that when men had no other means of knowing God than the created things about them, i. e., the earth they trod; the things of nature which they beheld; the stars that kept vigil over their heathenish dances, were sufficient to enable one to reason himself into a knowledge of God. They, therefore, "were without excuse" (Rom. 1:19).

In that far off day men were held inexcusable for being insensible to the call of God through the things he had created. David is led by the Spirit to sing, "The heavens declare the Glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world" (Psa. 19).

Man is endowed with capabilities to think and reason himself from the design to the designer, from effects back to causes, from things created to the Creator. In fact, God is not far from us at any time, but is closer than our hands and our feet. And he holds man responsible for knowing him. Why not? Can anyone who takes time to walk afield in the springtime and views an awaking nature fail to reach out, and up, and beyond to that divine,—call it Force, Power, Intelligence, or what have you? At least it was a step in the right direction which ultimately must bring this honest seeker face to face with God, and to an intelligent and appreciative understanding and love for him.

II: In the Holy Scriptures

In the fulness of God's own purpose he came close to the children of men. From his Heavenly Throne he sent a Holy Inspired written message, which was to make them wise unto salvation. (2 Tim. 3:15). Peter reminds us that, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts" (2 Peter 1:19).

The written message was a further unveiling of God. An attempt upon the part of God to reveal himself and purpose in a more intimate and loving relationship. "The light" of the Sacred Word has been shining in a dark place. How dark the place is into which God sent his Word is known only to him. We see it shine forth in the beginning through a few simple statutes and promises, increasing more and more as the need arose, finally blazing forth in the manifestation of God in human form to live, for a time at least, among men. "And we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth" (Jno. 1:14).

III. In His Own Beloved Son

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds (ages); who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high" (Heb. 1:1-3).

The "Incarnation" found men lost in sin, bewildered in their attempts to live without God. They had seen their civilization swept away by a flood; their attempts to thwart judgment ended in confusion, and inability to understand each other; a group had been given special advantages, but their weakness of flesh, and an "evil heart of unbelief" drove them into bondages and captivities with attendant hardships and sorrows. Indeed, man had failed, "Having no hope and without God." Every access to God closed by his own rebellion. For 437 years God had not given a prophecy; for 437 years the silence of the heavens had remained unbroken; men may have beaten their breasts and shouted themselves hoarse, but the echo of their own voices was the only sound to come back to them. "They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them" (Luke 16:29).

Has God forgotten his promises? No! He is about to do a new and wonderful thing. The cry of Job in his far off day, "Neither is there any daysman (middleman) betwixt us" (Job 9:33) is heard again, and God is now to send "his Daysman." Whom shall he send? There is none worthy or capable to mediate the difference between God and man. Only God could do that; therefore, he clothed himself in human form; came to earth in the person of Christ, put one arm about the Father and the other about the drooping shoulders of man, and bridged the impassable gulf. The Lord Jesus Christ bore our sin to Calvary and washed it away in his shed blood—praise his Name.

How tremendously important this Christian life of ours becomes when viewed in the light of the Incarnation. The Word declares, "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, AND HATH GIVEN TO US the ministry of reconciliation" (2 Cor. 5:18).

When the world of men least expected him he came. When the world was the least prepared for his reception he came. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, the angels announced his birth. It was a literal fulfilment of all the promises of his first advent and some day he is coming again just as literal as at first. Will you be ready, watching? Will you be busy about your ministry of reconciliation?

Hagerstown, Maryland.

The Son of God is Virgin Born

By Freeman Ankrum

In the fourteenth verse of the first chapter of the wonderful Gospel of the Apostle John, we find these words, And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. Herein we are told through the inspired writer that the Word, Jesus Christ, became flesh, became physical and took upon himself the form of man. Over seven hundred years before he saw the light of day in Bethlehem, Isaiah predicted the peculiarity of his birth. Isaiah 7:14. The fact of his birth is questioned by none. Written upon the pages of history and in the acts of the nations can be found indisputable proof that Jesus Christ existed as man. Matthew and Luke in the beginning of their Gospels tells us of his Virgin birth. This we find at times covered with veils of suspicion in a modern scoffing age. Micah tells us seven centuries before the birth of Jesus just what town should be honored by being his birthplace." But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old from everlasting" (Micah 5:2). A prophet can easily make predictions in general, but when they are specific in regard to manner and place of birth of one who was to change the date lines and the thinking of the world, the prediction must be inspired. Who is there among us today that would contend that when the messages of the Prophets were inspired that the truth of their messages would not thereby be guaranteed.

There are those who say, "What difference does it make whether Jesus Christ was Virgin born or of natural birth? He was a great teacher. He gave us many new truths, and was a contemporary of many Greek philosophers of an ancient day." These and other statements are indeed all too common. Yet it makes all the difference in the world whether he was Virgin-born or of other birth. If he was not of Virgin birth then Isaiah and Micah were mistaken, in their prophecies. If they were mistaken in regard to the statements regarding Christ, then all the rest of their works are of no value for the shadow of suspicion rests upon all. Using the same manner of elimination, we would have to decide that Matthew was likewise guilty of writing that which was not true and the investigations of Dr. Luke were faulty. Both the Old Testament and the New Testament would be unworthy of belief. If they are wrong in such outstanding statements they would not be reliable in any other that they might make. The early Jews did not attack the birth of our Lord as has been done in these modern days.

The vulgar and blasphemous accounts of the birth of our Lord came many years after his crucifixion on Calvary's summit. It was through this Virgin birth that the Word, Jesus Christ, became man, a true human being yet Holy and absolutely without sin. If the predictions of the prophets are true, and he who claims to be Christ was not Virgin born, then he is yet to come. This idea of course many of the Jews take today who refused to accept him as the Christ and are still looking for their Messiah. FOR THERE WILL BE NO CHRIST UNLESS HE IS VIRGIN BORN.

The many things that Mary pondered over and kept in her heart were not untruths, or mere suspicions but spirit-revealed facts, in which things she had a part. The student of the word does not deny that there are mysteries connected with the manifestation of God in the flesh. If the entire Bible could be reduced to a mathematical formula, then there would be no need of faith. God would have lowered himself to the level of man and man would have had no ideal before him and would have lacked a Savior. God in his own time shall reveal the mysteries. We are told that as man, Jesus Christ was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners. The union of the two natures in the person of Christ were necessary in order that he might be fitted for a successful Mediator. It was possible for him to die for our sins. He could be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, for had he not walked the ways of man and was he not akin to human misery and suffering? He also left us an example. By Incarnation we do not understand that God came down and dwelt in a man, occupying a part of him, but GOD ACTUALLY BECAME MAN. He became what he was not previously. Paul writes to Timothy in the sixteenth verse of the third chapter in the first letter, "God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory." If Paul the one who "was born out of due time," was mistaken in his message then there is nothing left for us. If Jesus Christ was not Virgin born, he was the greatest imposter that has ever been foisted upon the world. For thousands of years the leading and preserved thought of the nation and their leaders was how this great imposition should be put forth at the most auspicious time.

Surely there is no better time to think again of our Lord's Virgin birth and Deity than at this period which all the world to some extent observes even though it may know little of the One who made the season possible.

At Christmas time men's hearts ought to be softened to an extent at least that they might be willing to give him entrance to their minds and hearts. The spirit of the season should make an impression upon them. Yet sad to say the average child seems to think that this marks the day when Santa Claus was born, and the grown-ups look upon it as a mere time for the receiving of gifts, and so the season is ruined by the commercialism of the day. There is feasting instead of fasting. Christ is shoved into the background and for the time being his birth is of little import to us. Jesus Christ was real to Mary. He was real to many with whom he came in contact. He has been real to the countless thousands that have been blessed by giving him entrance to their hearts and have made him their Lord and Master. This Virgin born Christ who pitched his tent among us for thirty-three years will soon return. Then those who pierced that tent, shall look upon him. Those who have classed him as "just another teacher," and those who have cast the black cloud of suspicion upon his birth, dragging his name deep in the mire of sin, shall realize their awful mistake. Yes, it is a matter of life or death whether Christ was Virgin born. It is a matter of Heaven or an eternal Hell, a Savior or a world without hope of a Savior. TRULY THE SON OF GOD WAS VIRGIN BORN.

Flora, Indiana.

SIGNIFICANT NEWS AND VIEWS

THE EVIL OF THEIR DEEDS SURVIVES

The Anti-Semitism of the Hitlerites in Germany becomes unjust when it is individualized, but the results of profiteering in that now unhappy nation are not imaginary. They are of the sort to impress the minds of the younger groups of voters because upon this portion of the citizenry the effects of post-World War poverty have fallen without the enthusiasm that moved their parents to enormous personal sacrifices during the conflict.

The German word Schieber is applied to a class of persons who took advantage of the conditions in their country after the treaty of Versailles to enrich themselves. Our term "profiteer" does not adequately translate the term, which means basically a shover. The Schieber, who was able to do so, that is, if he were a "capitalist," took advantage of his employees, deposited his money in foreign banks and stimulated the inflation of the mark. He foreclosed mortgages ruthlessly, bought up property, furnishings, art treasures and the like at cut-throat prices and was economically merciless at a time of unparalleled financial stringency. While not all Jews were "shiebers" and not all "shiebers" were Jews, the percentage of those who were and the prominence of many of them were sufficiently obvious to enable Hitler to make Anti-Semitism a party slogan for the National Socialists (Nazis).—The Lutheran.

RELIGION VS. GOD

"UNIVERSITY TO TEACH RELIGION IN EFFORT TO COMBAT CRIME." The foregoing newspaper headline attracted our attention very naturally. "Here is something in the right line," we said to ourselves, till we began to read what followed. And then we thought of what Professor Machen said recently, that "men have become interested today in religion because they have ceased to believe in God."

It was a report of an address by a university president consisting of about a thousand words, wherein the name of God was not mentioned nor that of Christ or the Bible, except in the statement that faith should be implanted in children by presenting "imaginatively the life and character of Christ as set forth in the New Testament." Then it would be up to the colleges and universities, the speaker said, to keep this faith strong.

How keep it strong? By giving the student a chance to acquaint himself with "the best religious thinking of our time," he declared. And what is that? "The intellectual elements which reinforce man's intuitive outreach toward the spiritual world." As if the natural man's "intuitive outreach" would ever touch Christ!—Moody Monthly.

THE END OF A CATHEDRAL

Shows will soon take the place of sermons in the great cathedral of St. Isaac in Leningrad.

Once one of the most fashionable and luxurious of all Russian churches, it is to be a playhouse for the irreligious, and its first production will be "The Cathedral of St. Isaac," a satire on the life of the saint after whom the basilica is named.

The announcement of the change is made by Pravda. It will be the first time in Soviet history, we are told, that a church has been converted into an atheist theater.

The great cathedral was designed by a French architect, Richard de Montferrand, and was finished in 1858, after thirty-nine years of labor, Ralph W. Barnes, Moscow correspondent, tells us in the New York Herald Tribune. Built in the shape of a huge cross, and crowned by an enormous gilded dome 330 feet high, it is made chiefly of Finnish red granite and marble. The main entrances form four porticos modeled on the Pantheon at Rome.

The church cost $12,000,000, and is famous both for its rich interior decorations and for its impressive facade.

A large number of churches have been transformed into libraries, hospitals, warehouses, schools, garages, and museums, and the conversion of St. Isaac's into an atheist theater, says Mr. Barnes, "signalizes a further rapid decay of religion in the Soviet Union."—Literary Digest.

THE FIRST VOTE ON REPEAL

On the first day of Congress Speaker Garner forced a vote on the question of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The motion was lost by six votes. It was a great surprise and a big knock to the prestige of the Speaker. Some of the wet press have published bitter editorials against the members who voted against repeal and written contemptuously and contemptibly about the "lame duck" vote. But if those same men had voted for repeal, lame duck or not these blind critics would have hailed them as patriots.

From the highest standpoint known they showed more patriotism than their colleagues who voted for repeal. They are still members of Congress until March 4, and therefore it was and is their duty to vote according to promises to their constituents.

The indecent haste to override the obligations of the Constitution, where it clashes with the wets, has no good in it. I hope the proposed amendment abolishing the short session will not prevail. We do not want a pell-mell government. Thoughtful orderliness is the only safety for a democracy. Unless the people are led to honor and obey the Constitution there is no hope for the country. The people who blather against it are advocating the methods of the mob.—The Christian-Evangelist.

A PROFITABLE INDUSTRY

Speaking before the Police Chief's Association of New Jersey, Dr. Carleton Simon, a former deputy police commissioner of New York City, said: "Crime is no longer an escapee; it is no longer a profession; it is an industry." This statement by one who has had opportunity to know whereof he speaks is a challenge to the courts of our land and to the law-abiding citizenship of America.

It is true that always crime has been an industry. Criminals of many kinds have plied their trade not primarily because they were defiant of law, or because their criminal acts were expressions of criminal instincts. These motives, or purposes, certainly entered into the case, but in the larger number of instances it was because crime offered financial returns to the criminal. But, like all other "industries," crime has become better organized, more efficient and more remunerative. It is, therefore, a more serious problem than in former days.—The Christian Advocate (Nashville).

JEW'S TURNING TO CHRIST

From an editorial note in The Methodist we take the following interesting statement concerning the present-day response of the Jews to the appeal of Christ.

"The Jewish people, old and young, are willing to listen to the gospel. Many are reading the New Testament and other Christian literature. There is a real hungering and thirsting on the part of the Jews for the things that pertain to Jesus of Nazareth, the Messiah. The eyes of the Jews are turning upon Jesus. Since the war thousands of Jews have accepted Jesus as their Savior. In Hungary alone about 97,000 Jews have accepted Jesus as their Messiah; in Austria about 20,000; in Germany about 30,000; in Russia about 150,000; in Poland about 80,000, and in America about 100,000 Jews found in Jesus the Messiah and Savior. Now, we have over one million Jews throughout the world who worship Jesus."—The Evangelical-Messenger.

OUR BIBLE STUDY DEPARTMENT

Miniature Studies in the Divine Library

By Prof. M. A. Stuckey

Habakkuk

"The JUST shall LIVE BY FAITH"

Here is a text that has shaken the rafters of the centuries. It was born in heaven, transferred to the mind and spirit of Habakkuk and then passed on to mankind. Little did this prophet realize that he would become the spiritual Father of the Apostle Paul or the spiritual Grandfather of the mighty Luther. Truly, when Habakkuk, Paul and Luther join hands and hearts, they form an enviable triumvirate greater than that of Washington, Lincoln, and Wilson.

Carlyle on Luther

"I call this Luther a Great Man," exclaims the blunt speaking literary genius. "He is great in intellect, great in courage, great in affection and integrity; one of our most lovable and gracious men. He is great, not as a hewn obelisk is great, but as an Alpine mountain is great; so simple, honest, spontaneous; not setting himself up to be great, but there for quite another purpose than the purpose of being great!" What was it that made him great? His ancestry, his Augustinian monarchy training, his advanced learning in the classics? Nay, a thousand times nay! It was Paul's and Habakkuk's text that moulded him like the granite of the rock and the cedar of plains.

Evidence from the Pen of His Son

In a letter, now reposing in the library of Rudolstadt, written by Dr. Paul Luther, the Reformer's son, these highly revelatory lines are exposed to the observation of the interested traveler: "In the year of 1544 my late dearest father, in the presence of us all, narrated the whole story of his journey to Rome. He acknowledged with great joy that, in that city, through the Spirit of Jesus Christ, he had come to the knowledge of the truth of the everlasting gospel. It happened in this way. As he repeated his prayers on the Lateran staircase, the words of the Prophet Habakkuk came to his mind: 'The just shall live by faith.' Thereupon he ceased his prayers, returned to Wittenberg, and took this as the chief foundation of all his doctrine." This is real evidence.

Continuing, let us hear the sober Merle D'Aubigne: "This powerful text had a mysterious influence on the life of Luther. It was a creative sentence, both for the Reformer and for the Reformation. It was in these words that God then said, 'Let there be light!' and there was light." Here is more light! God spoke to Luther! And he also spoke to Paul. Read Rom. 1:17; Gal. 3:2; Heb. 10:38.

Luther's Personal Testimony

"Before those words broke upon my mind," the Reformer urges, "I hated God and was angry with him because, not content with frightening us sinners by the law and by the miseries of life, he still further increased our torture by the gospel. But when, by the Spirit of God, I understood these words—'The just shall live by faith'—then I felt born again like a new man; I entered through the open doors into the very Paradise of God."

"Henceforward," he again reiterates, "I saw the beloved holy Scriptures with other eyes. The words that I had previously detested, I began from that hour to value and to love as the sweetest and most consoling words in the Bible. In very truth, this text was to me the true gate of Paradise."

In this text Habakkuk saw the face of God; Paul found the heart and essence of the Gospel; and Luther the gate of life opening to the ivory palaces. These three men were righteous; they lived; they were faith exemplified. O that we moderns who know so little about Habakkuk could catch his vision and experience the "hush" of God! Was it not Benjamin Franklin who read Habakkuk to a literary circle in Paris and won their unanimous approval and praise for an author of whom not one of them ever heard before? Poor, poor mortals!

I THE HISTORY OF THE BOOK

1. Author. Habakkuk. A Prophet and a Levite.
2. When and Where Written? Before 606 B. C. in Palestine.
3. To Whom Written? To Israel primarily.
4. Why Written? To Predict the Invasion of the Chaldeans and Evince God's Consistency with himself in View of Permitted Evil, etc.
5. Authenticity. The Prophecy was given During the Latter-Days of King Josiah.

II THE OUTLINE OF THE BOOK

1. The Perplexity of Habakkuk. Chap. 1.
2. The Answer of Jehovah. Chap. 2.
3. The Song of Assurance. Chap. 3.

III THE NATURE OF THE BOOK

Habakkuk was perplexed with the silence and forbearance of God in the midst of permitted evil. He prayed for help and received an answer to the effect that Jehovah's silence did not indicate ignorance or indifference, but only delayed judgment.

The reply, however, raised another difficulty. Why should God allow wicked Chaldea to destroy a less wicked Israel? He is assured in answer that Chaldea's evil will not be overlooked, but punished sorely eventually.

With his "why's" answered, Habakkuk breaks forth in a melodious strain which only the just who live by faith know. It is a song of thanksgiving and praise to God. From henceforth Habakkuk will joy in him.

IV THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE BOOK

1. Key Words. "Why?" "Faith."
2. Key Verses. 2:4; 1:2, 3; 3:2; 3:17-19.
3. Key Chapters. 3 and 2.
4. Key Ideas. The Problems of Faith and the Song of Faith.

V THE VALUE OF THE BOOK

While the prophecy of Habakkuk is lofty and superb, while its words are full of literary beauty, while it is strongly lyrical in character, yet it is more valuable for its message, namely, that God is working a work in the midst of the encircling gloom and the hopeless despair of the nation. Though his Hand is dimly seen, man's part is to pray, watch and wait, then to sing. Jehovah reigns! Faith triumphs!

VI THE CHRIST OF THE BOOK

Habakkuk is a prophet of faith and Christ is the subject of faith and the object of faith. Christ is just and justifier of the just. He is Habakkuk's "Holy One," and Paul's "Lord Jesus Christ." Christ is the Author of redemption and the goal of prophecy. He is the Alpha and Omega of all things in general and everything in particular.

VII THE MESSAGE OF THE BOOK

1. "The JUST": this word is emphasized in Romans 1:17.
2. "Shall LIVE": this word is stressed in Hebrews 10:38.
3. "By FAITH": this word is foremost in Galatians 3:11.

W. I. DUKER.
President
Elkhart, Indiana

E. L. MILLER
Vice-President
Maurertown, Virginia

NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSN

MAGAZINE SECTION
M. A. STUCKEY, EDITOR.
ASHLAND, OHIO

N. V. LEATHERMAN.
General Secretary
Berlin, Pennsylvania

M. P. PUTERBAUGH.
Treasurer
Ashland, Ohio

Strengthening the Sunday School by Careful Records

By Clarence E. Benson, Director, Christian Education Course of the Moody Bible Institute, and Secretary, Evangelical Teacher Training Association

Within the past decade no single feature of the Sunday school has arisen from apparent obscurity, and forged to the front with greater rapidity, than the matter of determining an adequate method for measuring the pupil's accomplishments. The Six Point Record System has all but revolutionized the Sunday school along this line. Since it has come to be generally accepted as a standard in schools that are worthy of the name, and its requirements are so easily within the reach of every Sunday school, it is well to concentrate our attention upon this plan.

I. The Six Point Record System

The basis of this system is the theory that every pupil may reasonably be expected to be present, to be punctual, and to provide an offering, as well as prepare his lesson and bring his Bible to each session. In addition, the vital relationship between church and Sunday school should also be recognized by requiring attendance at one service of worship at least.

All these requirements seem reasonable under ordinary circumstances, and a little study of the far-reaching value of each should convince every one of their importance. All of these points, however, should not be given equal value. Attendance, for instance, should be given a larger per cent than punctuality, Bible, or offering, since the latter are dependent upon the pupil's being present. A suggested scale of the relative importance of each requirement is as follows:

Attendance .....	30%
Lesson .....	30%
Punctuality .....	10%
Bible .....	10%
Offering .....	10%
Church .....	10%
	100%

Next to attendance, the preparation of the lesson is stressed, since this must determine the scholastic progress of the pupil and can also be accepted as partial credit in case of unavoidable absence.

The Six Point Record System is simple and sane enough to be applied to every Sunday school. It is important, however, that it be stripped of the innumerable blanks that are recommended especially for large schools, and reduced to its simplest requirements. It is also necessary that caution be exercised to keep the mechanics of the plan from interfering with the more important work of instruction. Many teachers have complained that the laborious keeping of records has interfered with the lesson, and for that reason have not become more interested or enthusiastic over the plan. Success can be assured for every school regardless of size or location when the following essentials are recognized as minimum requirements:

1. Essential materials.—While it is possible to get twenty and thirty different blanks for this work, only four are absolutely essential:

(1) Enrollment-record card.—The enrollment card used by the registrar for tabulating the personal information and assignment of each pupil can also be used for recording his grades. This is done on the reverse side of the card, on which there should be blank spaces for every month covering a period of ten years. A single card thus contains all the necessary information about a pupil from the time he enters the Sunday school.

(2) Individual record envelope.—These envelopes serve a double purpose, they not only furnish the pupil with a convenient place for his offering, but also enable him to make out his own report. These envelopes may be given to the pupil as he enters the department on Sunday morning, and later collected as a part of the regular worship service of the session. The credit for the preparation of the lesson should largely be determined by the home work, which can be written out and handed to the teacher at the beginning of the class. Assignments are generally given in the literature of the graded lessons. When this work is not done by the pupil of course no mark can be recorded.

In the Primary Department it may be necessary for the smaller children to be assisted by the teachers in marking the envelopes, but the envelope plan is the simplest and most expedient for the older pupils.

(3) Department record card.—As the envelopes of the pupils contain the offering and the records, it is possible for a single person to make up the report for each department. This is done upon a card which provides for the individual record of every pupil each Sunday.

(4) Monthly report cards.—From the department record card, at the end of each month, it will be possible to average the reports of each Sunday and thus determine the grade of the pupil for the month. This grade will now be entered on the back of the enrollment record card, and a monthly report card filled out to be sent to the parents. The regular printed form for this purpose carries only the grading scale and the average monthly grade, but it enables both pupil and parents to keep informed as to the progress made. It is upon the basis of these monthly grades that a certificate of promotion is awarded at the end of the year.

2. Essential officers.—Even in the small school, if the teacher is to be liberated from the bookkeeping of the Six Point Record System, two officers are essential:

(1) Registrar.—The registrar is one of the general officers whose specific work is to care for the records of the individual pupils. She will be entrusted not only with the keeping of all the enrollment cards, but also with recording the monthly grades and making out the monthly report cards for each pupil. She will also be responsible for any program of recognition and the following up of absentees.

(2) Department secretary.—Both the teachers and the department superintendent may be relieved of the responsibility of the records by entrusting the secretary with the task of distributing and collecting the individual record envelopes, as well as entering their reports upon the department record card.

3. Essential departments.—While many schools apply the Six Point Record System to all the departments, with varied success, it would seem wise to limit it to the grade and high school groups who are pursuing the twelve year graded course (Primary, Junior, and Intermediate Departments). In both the Beginners and Adult Departments it is more difficult to command regular attendance and punctuality than among the groups that are under the discipline of the public schools. Even in the Primary Department it is generally found advisable to limit the system to four points, omitting Bible and service of worship, and substituting the learning of a memory verse for a prepared lesson.

4. Essential months.—While the Six Point Record System can be carried on throughout the year, in many congregations where a large portion of the members are away for a part if not all of the summer season, serious difficulties are encountered. For this reason it is suggested that the Six Point Record System be operated only during the period of the year that the public school is in session, or, as is the custom in some schools, from Rally Day to Children's Day. It is far better than this plan be carried out successfully for a portion of the year than to have the interest and enthusiasm wane because of the large number of absentees during the summer months.

5. Essential grades.—In putting in the Six Point Record System it is well not to insist upon too high a standard in the beginning. Considering the fact that in so many Sunday schools scholars attend only half the time, and no record is kept of their punctuality or preparation, we must not expect perfection immediately. For that reason it might be well to adopt a passing grade of 60, with the thought of raising it as soon as the school is able to measure up to it. It is generally wise to let each department superintendent determine the grade she desires to recognize as satisfactory, and this passing grade can be changed from year to year. In like manner, higher grades can be indicated for honor pupils, as there are pupils in every Sunday school who are more eager than others to attain a record. If the passing grade is 60, the honor grade should be 85 or above. If the passing grade is 70, honor students should receive a grade of 90 or over. Where a Sunday school is able to have a passing grade of 75, honor students may be limited to those who attain 100, or a perfect grade.

(To be continued)

THE UNKNOWN TEACHER

I sing to the praise of the unknown teacher. Great generals win campaigns, but it is the unknown soldier who wins the war. Famous educators plan new systems of pedagogy, but it is the unknown teacher who delivers and guides the young. For him no trumpets blare, no chariots wait, no golden decorations are decreed. He keeps the watch along the borders of darkness and makes the attack on the trenches of ignorance and folly. Patient in his daily duty, he strives to conquer the evil powers which are the enemies of youth. He awakens sleeping spirits. He quickens the indolent, encourages the eager and steadies the unstable. He communicates his own joy in learning and shares with boys and girls the best treasures of his mind. He lights many candles which, in later years, will shine back to cheer him. This is his reward. Knowledge may be gained from books; but the love of knowledge is transmitted only by personal contact. No one has deserved better of the republic than the unknown teacher.—Dr. Henry van Dyke.

sin of the world"—to the Jews there could have been no more expressive statement of the origin and mission of Jesus. Let us never lose sight of the fact that this was the supreme purpose of Jesus' advent. John had not previously seen Jesus in the flesh, yet he knew that he lived as his Savior, and when he saw him he knew him. How like our own situation: we have not yet seen him in the flesh, yet we know him as our Savior, and when he appears we shall see him and know him and be like him. Let us praise him!

THURSDAY

National Preparation. Jonah 3:1-10

Jonah's mission and preaching was like John's except that it bore immediate results; the people repented and a loving God spared them. God has given us such a beautiful world to live in, and has blessed us so remarkably that men could be living in paradise now, if they would only repent and live according to the laws of God. But degenerate man is unwilling to do this, and must be made regenerate before he would even enjoy it. Let us do our part in the great task of national preparation today.

FRIDAY

Personal Preparation. Ps. 51:1-13

Obviously we must be prepared ourselves if we would prepare others. Consider well the inspired order of verses 10 to 13: Create in me a clean heart; take not thy holy Spirit from me; restore unto me thy salvation; THEN will I teach transgressors thy way and sinners shall be converted. O God, create in me a clean heart, that I may point others to the Lamb of God!

SATURDAY

Thoroughness in Preparation. Luke 19:1-10

O for more men like Zacchaeus! When once he had come face to face with the Lord, no half-way measures would do. He would not even budge toward the home where Jesus had offered to accompany him until he had confessed all, and promised to more than right every wrong he had ever committed, as far as humanly possible. It is the "half-way" Christians who cripple the body of Christ: let us always be willing to right any wrong we may commit ourselves, and let us pray, too, for our weaker brethren.

SUNDAY

A Prophecy Concerning John. Isa. 40:1-11

We know that John was a child of prophecy, and recall the miraculous events surrounding his birth. John himself quoted from this passage in connection with his own ministry. But let us, for this moment, forget the messenger, and give heed to the message. Read it carefully; then let us praise him who is to come and rule.

There is no forgiveness without repentance.

Leisure and work bring different results. If a man wants leisure and gets it, then he has no cause to complain. But he cannot have both leisure and the results of work.—Henry Ford.

STUDYING THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON at the Family Altar With Thoburn C. Lyon

JOHN PREPARES THE WAY FOR JESUS

(Lesson for January 1)

Lesson Text: Mark 1:1-11; Golden Text Mark 1:3

Daily Readings and Suggestions

MONDAY

John Announces Jesus. Mark 1:1-11

Circumstances frequently compel men to extol in another virtues which they know do not exist. John had no such sorry task: next to Mary, the mother of Jesus, his was, perhaps, the most exalted privilege that has ever been given to men. What a privilege to bear witness to the long-promised Messiah, John's own Savior, and to extol his spotless character and virtue! As we bow in worship before this same Jesus today, let us not forget that ours is also the privilege of witnessing for him, of calling others to repentance, and of pointing them to the One who taketh away the sin of the world. Let us pray for courage to fulfill our mission as faithfully as did John!

TUESDAY

John Preaching. Luke 3:7-17

There are times when the servant of God cannot be "diplomatic" although even then he should speak the truth in love, remembering that he is God's "voice." John's preaching was plain, and it was intensely practical: let us be practical as we consider it. Are we sure that there is no need for repentance in our own lives? Are we ready for the coming of the King? Have we ministered to the physical wants of others in these days of awful need (v. 11)? Are we conducting our business, our daily work, in accordance with the principle of v. 13? Are we willing even to give up our occupation if it conflicts with the will of God (for certainly they would be poor soldiers if they kept the advice of v. 14)? Are we pointing others to the One who is coming in judgment? God give us grace to answer these questions aright!

WEDNESDAY

John's Testimony of Jesus. John 1:25-36

"The Lamb of God, which taketh away the

THRILLS

By Ruth Darst Waymire

He thought himself quite clever, smart and wise

His days in hectic madness rushed along
New interests, fresh desires, and pleasures came

As, breathless, feverish, he jointed the throng.

And then he heard the Voice—"Come unto me
And I will give you rest."

He sickened of the tawdry booths of sin.
The cheap, the flaring lights, the voices hoarse.

The tinselled shabby nothings of the world—
The tinkling of a glass, and laughter coarse.

Because his starved soul met Christ
And he beheld the Cross.

The peace that passeth understanding came,
And filled his heart and mind with heavenly calm.

He wandered in green pastures, saw horizons far,
In sacrifice and service found heart balm.

"Tho he were dead yet shall he live again—
Because He lives we too shall live."
Englewood, Ohio.

E. M. RIDDLE, President 1117 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa F. C. VANATOR, Associate Peru, Indiana	CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR AT WORK 	GLADYS M. SPICE, General Secretary and Treasurer 2301 13th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio
---	--	---

C. D. WHITNER, 217 E. Duell Ave., South Bend, Ind.

Attention Endeavorers!

Special recognition is hereby given to the RITTMAN, OHIO, C. E. SOCIETY for the best slogan submitted,—as follows:

Brethren ring
y
Church unconsecrated
Extension vangelism

HONORABLE MENTION is also here given to the Louisville, Ohio society for the slogan "By Christ's Entrance"; and Washington, D. C. for slogan "By combined enthusiasm."

We thank you for your interest and trust that all Endeavorers will now really "endeavor" to live up to this fine slogan of bringing church extension by "consecrated evangelism" by giving their share for the spreading of the Gospel Message in our Mission churches.

WATCH FOR A LETTER FROM YOUR NATIONAL OFFICERS SOON! ONE IS BEING MAILED TO ONE OF YOUR OFFICERS! SEE THAT SAME IS BROUGHT BEFORE YOUR ENTIRE SOCIETY AND ACTED UPON. THANKS!

GLADYS M. SPICE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD

Our Lord's Greatest Apostle
was a great correspondent

THE REVIVAL AT SPOKANE, WASHINGTON

We came to Spokane for the first time in eleven years, this being the period of time that has elapsed since we left this work as pastor. It was our privilege in 1916 to go to Spokane and with a handful of people and God, begin the establishment of our congregation and erection of church building. After five years and three months the congregation numbered 175 and the Sunday school 150. A beautiful brick church building was erected, and nearly paid for and a beautiful parsonage had been erected and financed. At this juncture we felt the call to evangelistic work and resigned. Since that time the work has experienced a varied fortune, sometimes good, sometimes not so good. Of late years the church had been slipping back in every way. However, since the coming of Brother Albert Lantz, former pastor at Berlin, Pennsylvania, to take charge of this work there has been a distinct advance in the work, greater confidence has been built up, the Sunday school is increasing and the church membership is strong again.

When we arrived we found a people that were alive and willing to work. The pastor had well prepared the soil, much prayer had preceded the meetings, good advertising had been done, and the foundation had been laid for a real time of progress. This was not the first meeting that we had been with Brother Lantz. We were with him in a very fine meeting in Berlin, Pennsylvania several years ago, and we knew that he was a good workman that needeth not to be ashamed. He is a man that is faithful in studying his Bible and in personal visitation among the people both inside and outside the church. We worked hard together and God greatly blessed our efforts. We believe the church was greatly blessed within its own life as well as having additions to its membership.

The work at Spokane has a greater field now than when we left there eleven years ago. There is every reason to believe that with strong, consecrated, wise leadership this church shall develop itself in the near future. A great wealth of young people abounds in this church, within seven or eight years this body of young folks will be the backbone of the church. The leaders of the church are wisely planning every effort to teach and strengthen these young folks in the faith.

Our home while in Spokane was with Brother and Sister Lantz and a happy home indeed it was. Every kindness that loving hearts could bestow was granted us and we shall long remember the happy days with them. God will richly bless them for every sacrifice.

In a real sense the working here in this church was like returning home. Many of the dear folks who were now leaders of the church accepted Christ during the years of our ministry and it was a great joy to see them now standing true and loyal to the faith they love. Our prayer is that they shall draw closer and closer to God each day, keeping humble before the Lord, separated from the world and earnestly seeking lost men. We hope that it will soon be our privilege to return again to Spokane and do a greater work in that city. If it be possible we hope to return with our tabernacle and set it up in another part of the city and thus build up and strengthen the work. We hope to be able to do more work in the northwest, for opportunities there are great and progress under good leadership is swift. Every dollar spent there is worth many dollars spent in more conservative communities. The Brethren Church needs to awaken to the great fields that are laying open to our ministry in the west and great northwest. May those who pray for the work pray that doors shall be opened wider and then provision shall be fully made that we may enter.

R. PAUL MILLER.

VICTORIOUS REVIVAL AT SPOKANE

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. (Isa. 55:11).

These words are worth more than a million worlds. Once again we had confirmed to us that the WORD OF GOD faithfully sown will not return void. The power of the gospel has not lost its merit, for Jesus saves and that to the uttermost. We are happy and rejoice in the demonstration of the power of the gospel right here in Spokane, Washington.

On November seventh Brother R. Paul Miller began a three weeks revival with us. He proved himself to be a greater force in the field of evangelism than what he was about four years ago when he so faithfully conducted the Berlin, Pennsylvania, revival, where I then was serving as pastor. No effort was too great or too small for him. No stone was left unturned. No task was left untried. Nor was the Word preached in vain.

Results were obtained. This is always true when the church involved has prepared the soil, and sown the seed, and, GOD'S TRUE CHILDREN HAVE BECOME A PRAYING PEOPLE. Seventy souls both in and out of the church found their way to the foot of the cross. There Christ met them and supplied their needs. Nine have been baptized and received into the church. Others are awaiting baptism. Still others are considering casting their lot with us.

Words cannot express what a joy and thrill it was for the pastor to see nightly, his deacons, deaconesses, Sunday School Superintendent, teachers, fathers, mothers, and young people come down the aisle, and, at the altar openly acknowledge and confess their guilt, and pledge anew their allegiance to Christ and the church. Praise his Holy Name.

It was a real pleasure to once more have the privilege to work with Brother Miller in a revival. Indeed they were happy days. The field was covered. Churchless people were interviewed. We feel that with careful cultivation we will realize a gradual and steady growth in the future.

Needless to say, all problems have not been solved here. There is much soil to be tilled and the seed (THE WORD OF GOD) is still to be sown. We are on our way. A new day has dawned. With the Lord's help, and the prayers of the saints of God, the church at Spokane will go forward upholding the blood-stained banner of the cross in these days of economic strife and apostasy.

We are happy to announce to the brotherhood that a gospel team consisting of seventeen young people has been organized. Under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Lantz, these young people will develop into strong efficient leaders and workers for Christ and the Church. Several of these young people are considering the mission fields at home and abroad. Brethren, they need your prayers. A more splendid group of young people is hard to find. During the meetings they stepped out of the world, into the marvelous light of the gospel. Now they are anxious to work for their Lord and Christ who saved them. Already they have some engagements to fill. As always, THE LORD TAKES CARE OF HIS OWN:

ALBERT L. LANTZ, Pastor.

DR. W. S. BELL AT ASHLAND

On November 13 Dr. William S. Bell came to the Ashland church for a two weeks' revival service. The Ashland church under the leadership of the pastor and its Official Board planned for this meeting early in the fall. We were fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Bell to lead us in this meeting. Dr. Bell has a wide acquaintance in Ashland and is favorably known as a strong preacher. Accordingly we counted it a rare privilege to have him as the preacher for this special service.

Dr. Bell began the meeting on November 13 and continued until Sunday evening, November 27. It is needless to tell the brotherhood that the sermons were of a high spiritual and evangelistic character. There was a special appeal to the students in that Dr. Bell made his presentations clear and reasonable. Among the subjects treated were the great basic teachings of the Scriptures centering especially in the Person and Work of our Lord. There was much food for the souls of God's children and there were loving appeals to the unsaved to surrender to the Lord and accept salvation. There were warnings to all and we were made to see more clearly than ever the futility of all human schemes to save our lost race. Dr. Bell has a pleasing, appealing manner of presenting the claims of Christ upon the souls of men and all who heard him could testify to the uplifting and inspiring messages which he delivered to us so faithfully.

One of the elements that promoted the success of our meetings and gave joy and gladness to all was the inspirational song leadership of Dr. Bame. Always keyed up to the evangelistic appeal and quick always to sense the appropriate song Dr. Bame rendered a great service to the church in his leadership in song. We owe Dr. Bame a debt of gratitude which words are not adequate to express.

Our pastor, Brother Belote, was busy, too, throughout the whole period. He made many calls in company with Dr. Bell and many more, where duty or opportunity opened the way, alone. This is always one of the most direct ways of bringing the message of the Gospel directly to the people. Those who seldom come to the services can oftentimes be reached in this way and influenced. Brother Belote is a tireless worker and we pray God's blessings upon him in his difficult tasks.

At Ashland as in altogether too many places the greatest hindrance to a meeting is the difficulty in getting the unsaved to the services. Our congregations were good. But there were many times scarcely any who were not Christians present. That made the securing of results difficult. However we are glad to report that thirteen people were directly influenced, some to unite with the church, others to reconsecrate themselves or make the confession for the first time. We hope in the end all will find membership in the church. There were among this number the children of some of our members. These will be properly taught and then received in church membership. Altogether we had a good meeting. The members were strengthened and the Lord glorified in the service. Our best wishes and sincere thanks go to Dr. Bell for his faithful service.

J. ALLEN MILLER.

TRAVEL FLASHES

Here and There

It has been a good while since I gave an account of my travels. But nevertheless, I have traveled some. In three years, my speedometer registers more than 56,000 miles, much of it in the work of the Lord. Many of my recent Sundays have been spent in helping to resist the flow of beer. But in spite of all efforts, we are to have something different—again to try to augment tax incomes by ruining character. What folly!

Middle Branch

For some months, as a flare-back from the other troubles of the brotherhood at this small Ohio village, our church has been in the hands of one who has been adverse to all our organizations and institutions, berating them in the pulpit and elsewhere. In a private letter he referred to the college as the "Ashland College Morgue"; said in a sermon when he refused to allow the Moderator of the Ohio Brethren churches to preach, that if a man tried to preach the gospel he was "steam-rollered" out of the church; and held up as one (among others) who would bring the world to Jesus, Rev. "Blank" of Texas, (who shot to death one of his church officers), "Rev. Blank" of Akron (who is on the warpath with his own denomination) and some others whose names he forgot for the moment. In that sermon he made many other ridiculous statements and untrue accusations regarding the "gang" that rules today in the churches.

He Had Been Licensed

The young man had been licensed and was near graduation last summer from the college but seemed suddenly to get a notion that he (and maybe a few others) were to go forth to save to Fundamentalism, as well as all the Brethren institutions and organizations. (A good many good preachers of the gospel have not yet been "steam-rollered" out of churches, according to my way of thinking). He had had many kindnesses and favors shown him and could have done a good work in this church had he remained loyal to those who tried to help him.

Ohio Conference in this Crisis

In this crisis, Ohio was not well set up to cope with the situation. It remained for the Moderator to try to get things set right and again to return to this church to its friends, those whose labors, money and sacrifices had continued its services and worship. Dr. Shively had served them faithfully for many years, driving from Ashland, 60 miles away.

Be it remembered also that these people, the Brethren church there, were anxious for help. It was to their frantic appeal for some sort of relief that we responded to save them and their house of worship from one who was saying things to which they would not listen and making accusations that they believed misrepresentations, and in some cases, members had attended Ashland College and knew better.

Perhaps two months ago (in the absence of any other officer with authority to move in this case) I decided to ask to preach one Sunday morning and then, after the service, to conduct a business meeting. The young man above referred to signified that he had a message and did not invite the Moderator into the pulpit. After the benediction, the Moderator called a business meeting and was elected chairman of the meeting only by the temporary chairman casting a vote to break the tie. Little could be done as the young man would not retract his statements, nor seek reconciliation with those whom he had offended.

Another business meeting was held in the interim and some local arrangements were made by this young man and some half of the membership who attended.

All authorization previously given this young man had been withdrawn and he was so advised. He was advised also that he had no standing in the Brethren ministry, not having been licensed for more than a year, unless and until he proceeded to make right some of his offenses to the college and to some of the members whom he had offended.

In his letter to the Moderator answering this, he advised the Moderator that he was "taking a good deal for granted"; said further, "My advice to you fellows is to leave this little church alone. * * * if you keep on with this unjust interference there is going to be one less church in the brotherhood. * * * "My resignation is already written out and there will be no tears shed, on my part, upon the day when I withdraw from the church." "I have no apology to offer—nor anything to set right."

This outburst was the result of the calling, (by the chairman of the trustees) for a business meeting for December 14th, 1932. (last night). To this meeting I took Dr. Baer, President of the Ohio Mission Board, and Prof. DeLozier, member of the Ohio Board of Evangelists. Two sides had rallied their prospective adherents. A contest was immediately projected by two nominations for chairman of the meeting, the Moderator of the Ohio Conference being elected by a small majority. A trustee was selected after taking a second vote, by a majority of two—38 to 36. Nominations were then asked for pastor for the coming year. Norman Uphouse was nominated. Paul Lorah was also offered as a nominee and it was ruled by the presiding officer that, because he had offended and refused to try to make right, and because he had berated church organization, and many institutions and organizations of the denomination and had "nothing to make right", that he could not be considered as a candidate for the ministry and pastorate of this church. Upon this ruling, Lorah and his following immediately without further words or protestations, arose and left. One sister harked back, "So you rule that Lorah is not Brethren"! I answered "yes"; but immediately said, "I want to correct myself." She replied, "I do not want to argue with you; the church is a sacred place to me." I said, "I rule that he can not be considered as a candidate for this pulpit," but she had gone too far to hear it, as I believe. But Lorah and his group were already well out of the church and I presume I may as well have ruled that "he is not Brethren."

It was pathetic: although the vote was so near a tie all during the evening, Lorah's following was almost entirely the young people under sixteen (mostly girls) whose life was thus brought to a religious crisis, and I regret nothing more than that it should have come to them. Doubtless this group will try to exist separately and thus make two organizations in a town where one small church has had enough of a struggle. Two can not live. On the other hand, the group that stood loyal to the church were a solid constituency who can promote a church and support it. Many Brethren churches are carrying on with fewer people and with smaller possibilities of success than the group that remains here.

This whole procedure has been thus given in detail that there may be no chance of gossip and misrepresentation—no cry of "steam-rolling." Lorah had many good advices and opportunities to choose a different path and make right some of his mistakes. I wanted the Brotherhood to know at first hand and as quickly as may be, that attempts were made to save from division and disruption; but it all seemed futile and could not be less than that under the circumstances. It takes two to make a quarrel and two to make a settlement. When one will not yield, it lacks one of a settlement.

The Brethren church has chosen for their next pastor a young man, Norman Uphouse, a Seminary student who, in the last year has proven his ability to start back to normalcy, two other broken churches. He boldly and in the fear of the Lord accepts the task of healing the broken ties and tuning again the broken music to the harmony of a fine opportunity for the Brethren church. May the members of our brotherhood beware of schism and division and remember that it is better that a millstone be tied about one's neck and he be buried in the depths of the sea than that one of these little ones should perish.

Let the brotherhood beware of a leadership that cares only for its own advancement and glory; discards and disgraces the organizations that are necessary for its growth and strength, and cries "steam-roller" and "gang" to men who have proved their worth in longer and more efficient service than those who try to hide their own selfish aims in hypocrisies, and by accusations and innuendos, publicly parade their own virtues and sacrifices when they should be extolling those of our Lord Jesus Christ.

CHARLES A. BAME.

THE SMITHVILLE-STERLING CHURCH

There has been progress during the past year. The Lord has blessed the labors of pastor and people.

A goodly number of members attended both the general and the district conferences. That is always a good indication.

The annual Wayne County Brethren Day in the fall was a success. It was held at Sterling and Floyd Moine was chairman of the preparation committee. The churches participating were Rittman, Fair Haven and Smithville-Sterling. Both the attendance and program were creditable. The splendid sermons of the day were preached by Rev. Everett Niswonger and Rev. Raymond Gingrich. The Ashland College Male Quartette rendered much appreciated help. An offering amounting to $23 was given for the Ashland Seminary house rent fund. The picnic dinner was served at the High School and words fail to describe adequately the bounteous provision of good things to eat. There was no sign of depression at the noon hour. The Christian fellowship was enjoyed by all.

The Sunday school work during the year has gone forward with unusual strides at Smithville. The average attendance has mounted from 91 in 1931 to 128 in 1932, an increase of 40 percent. This increase has been evident also in the attendance at church worship. Let it be said to the credit of the people here that the Sunday school and church service audiences are practically the same. Dr. J. Allen Miller was the able speaker at our Rally Day. He is always a welcome visitor here. The Rally Day attendance, 193, broke all Rally Day records. Harvey S. Rutt is the aggressive superintendent.

The Sunday school attendance record at Sterling will not show a similar increase in part because of the limitations of that field and also because one family of five regular attendants moved to Nova and another transferred their attendance to Smithville early in the year, and then two of our loyal young ladies entered the state of marriage and flitted to distant parts. Ernest Beery is the earnest superintendent.

There are many loyal and enthusiastic workers in both schools who are doing their best to win victories for Christ and his Church.

The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha girls are a fine body of faithful workers. They were on the "Banner Society" list for the past year. Miss Kathryn Steiner is the new President. The girls have prepared an S. M. M. Cook Book containing nearly 200 wonderful recipes, tested, tried and true, furnished by 50 ladies, all wonderful "Chefs De Cuisine." The cover is hand decorated. The girls will be pleased to send you a copy for 35 cents, postpaid, a depression price. Just address Miss Lois Steiner, Smithville. They guarantee this book to "keep hubby sweet."

The Woman's Missionary Society moves along steadily. A campaign to add new members is now in progress and gains are being registered. The mission study for the year was launched at the December meeting. A pot-luck dinner is one of the enjoyable features at each monthly meeting. The entire day is given by the ladies for work and for the devotional program and mission study. Mrs. David King is the devoted president of this body of loyal workers.

"Over the Top" tells the story of our Thanksgiving Home Mission offering. Another record broken! To Christ be all the glory! May the church in the homeland continue to go forward, and thus help more and more to send the light to the uttermost parts.

This church has rejoiced during the past year in a goodly number of records broken. It is our prayer that all of these records may be broken again in 1933.

Our church sends Christmas Greetings and prayers for success to all our churches and boards. May our whole brotherhood go forward unitedly in 1933 "seeking first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness."

G. C. CARPENTER.

KITTANNING, PENNSYLVANIA

Since our last report was six months ago, we will have to condense the narration of the progress of the West Kittanning Brethren church. The Lord has richly blessed us this year. Just thirty-one members have been received during 1932, and others are awaiting baptism. Last summer we held a Summer Bible School with an enrollment of about 140. Of these 125 graduated and received certificates. A feature of the school was "Decision Day," held Thursday of the last week of school. At this service 14 boys and girls made a decision for Christ. In October we had a fine Rally Day program, 246 being in attendance. A "Year Book and Church Directory" has been published for the church, giving the list of active members, a short history of the denomination, and a review of the doctrines of the church. In the same volume was printed for the first time the new Constitution of the Church, which was adopted in January, 1932.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor has been reorganized to take in young people from 14 to 25, and is now called the "Young People's Society." The two Sisterhoods have been meeting regularly during the year, and in the past few months most of the girls in the Senior and Junior societies that were not Brethren, have made a confession of Christ and united with our church. The Woman's Missionary Society has been growing in interest and attendance despite the depression. They are striving to meet all goals this year.

The men and boys of the church have been organized into the Brotherhood of Alexander Mack. They have monthly meetings, with many outside activities. Just recently they bought roof paint for the church and put it on, the unemployed men of the brotherhood doing most of the work. Occasionally they go out in teams to hold services in schoolhouses. Their most recent activity is in backing a Church Bulletin, two pages of which are devoted to local news, and the other two pages to tithing information.

A Harvest Home Week was planned for November 6 to 13, and it worked out splendidly. One week of evangelistic services were held, with a different local preacher bringing the message each night. There were eleven confessions, and most of these folks have united with the church. Then the meeting closed on Sunday, which was designated as Harvest Home Day. A wonderful Thank Offering was presented to the Lord in the morning service, and in the afternoon, over half the active members answered to their names as the roll was called. The Young People's C. E. presented a play early in the evening, and the meeting closed with the presentation of Pilgrim's Progress, a stereopticon lecture of 24 slides, explained by the pastor.

The Sunday school had a dearth of teachers in the beginning of the year, but the superintendent solved the problem, and now we have a fine group of loyal teachers. Of course, the Sunday school interest and attention is now all centered on the Christmas entertainment to be given the Friday before Christmas. For the second winter, a Teacher Training Class is being held, and its effects are being noticed in the Sunday school.

For four weeks this fall, we held Brethren Institute in connection with the weekly prayer meeting service, explaining Brethren doctrine and especially requesting all new members to attend. This is to become an annual practice. We ask the prayers of the brotherhood on behalf of this growing church. Truly the Lord has been blessing us.

ROBERT D. CREES.

THE LATHROP, CALIFORNIA, DIAMOND JUBILEE CELEBRATION

October twenty-fifth, 1932, was a memorable occasion for the Lathrop, California, church, for then was celebrated the Seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding by Elder George Wolfe.

George Wolfe and family of Illinois, landed in San Francisco in 1856, after a long railroad journey to New York, followed by an arduous voyage from that city by way of the Isthmus of Panama. He settled first on the coast near Watsonville and Gilroy, afterwards moving to the San Joaquin Valley. There he organized a Brethren church. The membership being very scattered, services were held for many years in school houses in communities where the Brethren resided.

At the time of the division, the church, with George Wolfe as elder, almost unanimously, cast in their lot with the Progressive branch. About this time a union church building was erected in the town of Lathrop, which was used, however, almost exclusively by the Brethren. The work during the latter years of Elder George Wolfe's life was carried on by his son, John, whose feeling of responsibility for the spiritual and financial welfare of the church never wavered throughout his life. In recognition of this devotion, when the church building was rebuilt some years ago as a Brethren church, it was dedicated as the John P. Wolfe Memorial.

Here, then, in this building was celebrated the Diamond Jubilee year. A most appropriate program was arranged by J. Milo Wolfe, a grandson of the founder and a nephew of John Wolfe. The moderator for the day was Rev. Wesley Platt, pastor for many years of the Manteca church and at one time of the Lathrop church also. At the morning service George T. Ronk gave an appropriate address. In the afternoon, Mrs. Lois Shank, widow of Jacob Shank, a pioneer preacher, gave an interesting talk on pioneer days and early church life. This was followed by a sermon by Rev. N. W. Jennings, pastor of the Turlock church. Opportunity was then given for words of greeting by visitors, among whom being H. H. Wolford, a former pastor. At the evening service, Mrs. Henry Ronk gave personal recollections of her grandfather, George Wolfe, and her father, John Wolfe. This was followed by a sermon by Roger Darling of San Jose.

Special music by Mrs. Mary Schmidt and Mrs. N. W. Jennings, and the Manteca church orchestra was much appreciated.

The Lathrop church was a most generous and gracious host, serving both dinner and supper to all who came. The church was crowded at every service, many Manteca and Turlock Brethren being present, as well as members and friends of the Lathrop church, who had long since moved to other localities.

All entered into the spirit of the day and the pioneers lived again as the various speakers portrayed the events of early years. A large portrait of George Wolfe on the wall brought him back in memory to the older ones while to the young people and children he became a real person instead of merely a name. Truly it was a most enjoyable and impressive occasion.

Thanks were given publicly to the Lathrop church for their kindly hospitality and especially to J. Milo Wolfe and family who had such a large share in making this celebration possible.

The Brethren people may well be proud of the record of this church which for seventy-five years has rendered continuous service to God, to the Brethren church, and to the community.

MRS. GEORGE T. RONK.

REPORT SECOND BRETHREN CHURCH OF NORTH LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA

It being the editor's request to send in a report three or four times a year, I am respectfully submitting the following report for the third quarter of the activities relative to the work in North Long Beach. We feel we should do our share toward contributing to the "news from the field."

Prayer meetings are held on Tuesday morning and Friday morning and Wednesday night as well as a Saturday night prayer meeting held for men. All these are well attended. It is encouraging to see young converts holding hold on these seasons of prayer.

Two weeks ago our pastor felt led to start a Monday night Home Bible Study Class. These classes are held in homes about the neighborhood. The purpose and plan of these meetings is to study the word of God and bring it and prayer into homes. Also we trust to be able to reach visitors and strangers. God has manifested his blessing upon these classes and the fellowship has indeed been good. The attendance is good and growing steadily. Our pastor, Brother Lienhard, is teaching the Book of Genesis at these Monday night gatherings.

Canvassing for Sunday school children has been completed. Many children were found who were not attending any Sunday school. Our transportation committee is gathering up some of these children and bringing them to Sunday school. There were about 1800 homes called on through the canvass work. Without any special effort we have recently enjoyed a new record attendance of 555. At present our average attendance is 500. Our Sunday school is sadly crowded and we ask the prayers of all of God's faithful ones that the Lord will open a way for added room. We trust in him also for this and nothing is impossible for him.

The Sunday school has opened childrens' Home Bible classes again this year. These classes are held in homes in the neighborhood and are in charge of Miss Hazel Kirby and Mrs. D. Talbot. At present six homes are open to these classes and the average attendance is 80. Many children come to these classes who do not attend any Sunday school. We are glad for the privilege of giving these the Word.

The tract work has been continued through the canvass work and it has been our aim to leave a tract at every home canvassed.

The church attendance has increased greatly of late and we rejoice to have many strangers and visitors attending our services. The average attendance per service is about 250. A loud speaker has been installed in a room especially set aside for mothers with small children who might not otherwise be able to attend the services.

About four months ago the church inaugurated a "non-interest" loan plan in order to help us reduce our building indebtedness more rapidly. It is proving successful. Already $700 has been received through the "Dollar and Dime" booklets plan. The Lord has enabled us to pay off $50.00 per month on the church indebtedness which now is $5,600. God has marvelously blessed us during these hard times and we are giving him the glory for it.

We praise God for the last communion service. We made it a special object of prayer. It was the largest gathering of the kind held this far. It was impossible to seat all. One hundred forty-seven fellowshipped together. Quite a few left because of the crowded condition. In addition it should be stated on account of illness and other obstacles at least 20 of our most faithful ones were not privileged to be with us. The atmosphere of fellowship was indeed sweet and the Lord richly blessed our gathering with a special consciousness of his presence.

We praise God for the souls who have been saved in our Assembly and for the number added to our fellowship. During the third quarter twelve persons were baptized and eleven were added to our fold.

On October 19th our pastor met with volunteer workers and organized visitation work. We are hoping and praying that this work will grow in spirit and interest and that Christ's name will be glorified through it.

We covet your prayers for a continued salvation of souls, not only here but throughout the land.

MRS. SAMUEL KIRBY,
Church Correspondent.

"HI" STUDENT IS PREACHER AT HAGERSTOWN CITY MISSION

One of the youngest preachers ever to be heard in Hagerstown, Maryland, Hiram E. Davis, 17, a student at the High School who has been conducting revival services at the Corbett Street Chapel during the past week, delivered a sermon on his 17th birthday on Thursday, December 8th, to a large congregation. He preaches again at the chapel this Sunday (December 11th), and will continue to preach in Hagerstown until he finishes his high school next year and then he goes to college to study for the ministry.

Davis, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Davis, of St. James, received his inspiration to preach after he had heard a sermon delivered by Rev. Frank G. Coleman, of this city, last year. He was recommended to the trustees of the Union Chapel by Leo Bard, who has left to study for the ministry. He is a grandson of H. N. Cross, of St. James.

Brother Davis is a devoted member of the St. James church and he preached his first sermon in the pulpit of the St. James church, under the direction of Rev. W. S. Baker. He has preached several sermons here to large congregations. He is sincere and conscientious in his preaching, and is natural in the pulpit and talks fluently. After finishing his high school, Davis will enter Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio, to prepare for the ministry.

The Corbett Street Union Chapel is the outgrowth of the Sunday school established by the late Abram Corbett in the old glass works on Pope avenue in 1891.

ROBERT H. LOWREY.

STATISTICS

The Roman Catholic population of the United States in 1931 was 20,236,391, a gain of 21,293 for the preceding year, according to statistics compiled for the 1932 official Catholic Directory. The number of converts to Catholicism during the year was 40,269, a gain of 741 over 1930. The Catholic priesthood increased by 433 during the year, there now being 28,297 priests in the United States, 8,648 of whom are members of religious orders. The clerical census includes 4 cardinals, 17 archbishops (including the cardinals), and 105 bishops. There was one more archbishop than in 1930. Nine new parishes were established, bringing the total to 12,484. Twenty-seven new seminaries were established in 1931, bringing the total to 172, with 19,433 students for the priesthood, an increase of 1,827. The directory lists 7,514 free parochial schools, with an enrollment of 2,277,191, which is an increase of 127 in the number of schools, but a decrease of 6,000 in the enrollment. Three new hospitals were established.—Methodist Protestant.

THE BRETHREN'S HOME EMERGENCY CORNER

WHY THE NEED OF SUPPORT

When the idea of a Home for our aged ministers and laymen was born in the hearts of those most responsible for its present form, there was, perhaps, no detailed plan of its physical structure, nor of the methods to be employed for its support, very definitely associated with it, but only a devout wish that such a place might be provided. As the dream finally materialized, it was realized that some provision must be made for its support, and permission was sought from, and freely approved by, the General Conference of the church, to ask for one offering each year, from the general brotherhood. While that has been done from the first, there has always been the hope in the minds and hearts of its promoters, that the institution might finally be entirely self-supporting. This hope was and is cherished because we who are made responsible for its care, by the church, know that there are other interests, educational, and missionary, whose support depend very largely on a group of Christian people which is not so large, and whose resources are not great. While the writer has never felt that the church ought to be nor would wish to be freed from giving help to a cause so worthy, yet he too has hoped to see a day when such help should be more nominal than basically essential. The plan by which such an end is to be achieved is that of owning and cultivating a sufficient amount of farm land, to produce not only the necessary supplies, but enough more so that the surplus might furnish the things which we could not produce. This accounts for the fact that in addition to the 40 acres directly connected with the Home, we own another 100 acres very near by. The writer believes that even with this amount of land, the Home might be supported if it were not for the fact that this land is not all paid for, and the present cost of our annuity contracts, makes it necessary to ask for real help from those whose hearts God moves. In addition to the real estate already mentioned, we own another quarter section of fine wheat land in a midwestern state, which, under normal conditions would be a real asset. We want to share with you our hopes for this worthy Christian institution, and to ask for it and for us whom you have made responsible for it, a share in your prayers and your gifts. If God moves you to make such a gift, send it to Henry Rinehart, or to The Brethren Home, Florida, Indiana.

MARTIN SHIVELY.

OUR LITTLE READERS

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS TREE

By Maude Wilcox Neidermeyer

MANY, many years ago there lived two little girls, Gretchen and Elsa, who had never seen a Christmas tree. They lived in a far-off country beyond the sea.

One Christmas Eve they stood in one of the windows of their home that looked down the street, and flattened their noses against the glass.

"I don't see him yet," said Gretchen, peering anxiously out into the night.

"Nor I. Oh, dear, why doesn't he come!" complained Elsa, rubbing her nose, for the window pane was frosty. "Christmas will be spoiled if father doesn't come. We have waited for him all evening."

Outside, the world was snowy white and very quiet and peaceful. Inside, the little girls stood waiting patiently, impatiently, and then patiently again just as little girls do now.

And then the father came. They saw his horse first like a prancing charger, sending up snow flurries with his hoofs as he galloped down the street. And then the beloved figure riding him!

"He's here, he's here, Father is home!" they cried together, dancing up and down in their joy.

The servant threw a log on the fire, and mother patted her hair in place, and Gretchen and Elsa flew to the door.

Such a welcome! It seemed as if the children could not tell him enough how glad they were to see him back home.

Now the father of these little girls was Martin Luther, and he had been away on a long, long journey. He stood in the doorway a moment and shook the snow from his shoulders. Then he entered and gathered his family all at once into his arms.

They sat around the fireplace, and the logs sputtered and crackled, and Martin Luther told them of his ride home that night; how the beauty of the snow, and the strange quietness of the country where the only sound was the crunch of his horse's hoofs in the flaky snow, had gripped him; how the starry heavens had held him entranced! Never had he seen such a sky as this Christmas Eve! The stars seemed to speak to him. And then, fearing he had not been able to make them grasp the beauty of it all, he suddenly jumped up, and said:

"Wait here. I will show you what it looked like. Gretchen, fetch a lot of candles, and Elsa, have the taper ready."

He went out into the garden and strode up and down the snowy paths, looking hard at the fir trees and evergreens. At last he found one that suited him. He got a hatchet from the shed, and with mighty strokes he cut down the little fir tree. Then he hoisted one end on his shoulder and dragged it back into the house.

"Father, what are you doing?" cried the children as he came into the living room, the flakes of snow from the little tree falling about him.

"The candles, Gretchen. Hand them to me," said Martin Luther. "And, Elsa, light the taper."

He set the little fir tree up in the room and quickly tied the candles in place. With the taper he touched each one and soon the little tree was glowing with light. It seemed to be bringing a message of joy to them.

"How beautiful, oh, how beautiful!" cried Gretchen, clapping her hands for joy.

But Elsa was still and quiet. She put her head on her father's shoulder, as she whispered:

"It makes me glad, but it makes me sad too. It is such a beautiful tree that I wish every boy and girl in the whole world could see it."

"Let us call it our Christmas Tree," said Martin Luther, patting her head gently. "We will invite all our friends in tomorrow to see it."

When the neighbors saw the gleaming tree on Christmas Day, they, too, cried out with delight. Everybody loved the tree so dearly that the next year many of the neighbors cut down little firs and decked them with candles for their children.

The story of that first Christmas tree spread and spread all over the country until it spread over the sides and came across the sea to us! And that is how the custom of having Christmas trees in our homes came down to us through the years.—Picture Story Paper.

Help Spread The Glad Tidings

The most effective means of spreading the good news of the progress of the Brethren Church and of the world Kingdom is the church's official organ.

Many of our friends—both laymen and ministers—are cooperating in a vigorous campaign for subscriptions to THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST.

We earnestly appeal to every pastor and lay leader, every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor worker, to strive to make every Brethren home a BRETHREN EVANGELIST home.

If every home of every Brethren church is to be truly Brethren, its religious life must be nourished on Brethren ideals and teachings. That makes THE BRETHREN EVANGELIST necessary to every Brethren home.

You should make as great a sacrifice to keep the soul well nourished with the whole-wheat bread of the Word as you do to keep the body properly fed and clothed during these depression times.

Get your new subscriptions at $1.25 in clubs of five or more and renew your Honor Roll at $1.35 per, cash with order, and thus help all Brethren to

Hear The Good News

HECKMAN
BINDERY INC.

OCT 98

Bound-To-Please® N. MANCHESTER,
INDIANA 46962

